Enthusiasm, creativity, and purpose are valuable qualities in any educational experience. Marge Murphy, library teacher at the Deer Hill Elementary School, posesses them all.

Her commitment to her fourth, fifth and sixth grade students exudes from her and quickly becomes contagious. This ability to stimulate the flow of imagination creates a dynamic atmosphere for young minds to grow.

Three years ago, Marge Murphy was asked to fill in a vacant position within the library. While working at Deer Hill, she took a course in children's literature at Bridgewater State College. So inspired by the course, her ideas "snow-balled" into an opportunity to become a library teacher, the first of such positions in Cohasset.

Since then, she has paved the way for a new style in the educational process. "I sell kids on books", she remarked as she described her job. "Restoring, developing, and continuing what the teachers do" reinforces what the students learn and applies their library skills to their other classes.

As library teacher, Marge Murphy's ideas appear limitless. The library, she said, can be made a "very interesting, intriguing place." Every month merit awards are given to one classroom from each grade. The deserved classrooms are those with the most correct answers and best behavior asked of them in the library. While the students learn library and reading skills individually, they must all pull together to win the award. "They love to be praised. They love to be rewarded.", she explained.

Two sixth grade students, Michael Cisneros and Doug Moe, under Ms. Murphy's guidance and enthusiasm, have started a project called the Kid Critics. Because of their advanced reading ability, these students have begun to critique books and assign reading levels to books for all Deer Hill students.

In one of the corridors at the school they have constructed a large rainbow, the colors of which are

Confusion engulfs ambulance

At a meeting this week of the Emergency Medical Services Advisory Committee, members said they were unaware of any request to provide input into the purchase of a new ambulance.

The $50,000 appropriation for the new ambulance has been held in limbo by selectmen until the committee could make recommendations on the bid proposals. Selectmen Chairman Clifford Mitman said last week the bids were forwarded to the advisory committee as a courtesy, so they could make their recommendations to the board.

Meanwhile, the Fire Department's eight-year old ambulance is virtually on its last legs. And according to Chief Martin Dooley, his department made its recommended choice for a new vehicle about six weeks ago.

Emergency services members said they were completely unaware of any task to make bid recommendations, and added they would be unprepared to do so. Upon the advice of several EMT's who attended Tuesday night's session, the advisory group voted to recommend that selectmen choose the lowest bid.

When selectman John DeBassio entered the meeting, he admitted there had been a breakdown in communication between the two boards. He noted it was never his intention to have the advisory committee forward their recommendations to the selectmen.

When asked by one firefighter when the new ambulance could be purchased, DeBassio answered, "I guarantee the subject will be brought up on Monday night's agenda."

Capt. Mark Trask reminded the committee members and selectman DeBassio, "right now we're running on a shoestring. We're trying to keep this ambulance running. The suspension is shot. It's a disgrace."

Other firefighters attending the meeting inquired whether the emergency services committee had any authority over potential health hazards at the fire

Dooley injured

Fire Chief Martin Dooley was injured last week in a fall at the water main construction site, at the corner of Jerusalem Road and Forest Avenue.

The accident occurred last Thursday morning. After being taken by the Hull ambulance to the South Shore Hospital, Chief Dooley was placed on sick leave from the department, with a ripped muscle in his right shoulder, extending to the back of his neck. Doctors told the chief he may be out of action for two days, to three weeks.

According to the chief who is recuperating and is under medication at home, he was inspecting the reconstruction site with members of the Hull Fire Dept. Chief Dooley had previously ordered that temporary fire hydrants be installed in that area during construction, and that the Hull Fire Department provide mutual aid to any calls in that area.

While walking through one of the trenches in the area, Chief Dooley tripped, and was grabbed by the Hull Fire Chief to prevent a fall. It wasn't until he walked back to his car to drive back to the Cohasset station, that he realized he was injured. He had to be assisted by Hull EMT's who were in the vicinity on a detail call.

Chief Dooley said he is in considerable pain with the torn muscles, and does not know how long he will be out of duty with this injury.

Fire captains exam

The examination for the position of Fire Captain in the Cohaset Fire Department will be held Nov. 17.

There is a vacancy for that position in the Fire Department.

Watershed engineering firms

Jeff Bettinger, chairman of the Watershed Protection Area has forwarded a list of engineering firms to be contacted by the Water Commissioners for submittal of proposals defining the Watershed Protection Area.

Three engineering firms have performed work previously in Cohasset: I.E.P. of Northboro, Whitman and Howard of Wellesley, and Geologic Services Corp. of Hudson. In addition, Bettinger included a list of 12 additional companies who submitted proposals for a similar project in Groton.

Bettinger noted that all firms requested to submit proposals will have three to four weeks to respond. Each company to respond to the Water Commissioner's request must make a presentation to the commission and the Watershed Protection Area Committee.

Although two firms, S.E.A. Consultants and Camp, Dresser and McKee have previously written proposals and completed presentations, the commission was undecided about a choice. The selected firm will be paid $20,000 to complete a detailed Watershed Protection District map, and assist in the completion of a town bylaw.

Voter registration

There will be a special voter registration day for the Nov. 19 special Town Meeting.

Residents may register to vote Nov. 9 at the Town Clerk's office at Town Hall. The voter registration will take place there from 8:30 a.m. to 8 p.m. on that day.

Election voter record

Town Clerk Frances Marks reports that a total of 5247 Cohasset voters have registered to cast a ballot in the Nov. 6 election. According to the Town Clerk, that is a new registration record for Cohasset, and about 500 more voters than the September primary election.

The Nov. 6 election will take place at the Town Hall auditorium from 7 a.m. to 8:30 p.m..

Request to stop work

The Supt. of the Cohasset Sewer Dept. has requested that all water main construction on Border Street be immediately halted. Manuel Salvador said that after a recent inspection of the water pipe reconstruction work, he found Geneva Construction was "digging right against the sewer pipe".

Supt. Salvador added, "no attempt was made to shovel gravel under the pipe. No attempt was made to layer the gravel and tamp and water jet so the hollow space would be filled in. The gravel was just dumped in. We request the sewer and water pipe be layed in stone from Hugo's parking lot to the bridge. This has been an area where the Water Dept. and Sewer Dept. have had problems due to tidal action."

Supt. Salvador said he would request a television inspection of the sewer line after 60 days of settling, "for I am sure the sewer pipe is going to crack due to packing under this sewer pipe".

Vandalism rash

Police are investigating at least 26 incidents of vandalism spanning Cohasset and Scituate Wednesday, Oct. 10.

Detective Don Damon said apparently a group of vandals were traveling in a motor vehicle and smashed out car windows which were parked alongside the road.

The vandalism incidents were reported from Border Street, Cohasset to Bulrush Farm Road, Country Way, Tilden Road, the Sand Hill area, Scituate Harbor, Stockbridge Road to Greenbush. Six school bus windows were also smashed.

In addition, Marshfield police reported the same kind of incidents a week before.

Damon said police have no suspects at this time but anyone who heard a suspicious noise between 11 p.m. and 12:38 a.m. Oct. 9-10 should contact police.

In an unrelated incident, police arrested three Scituate men and charged them with malicious destruction of property over $100. Police charge four tires were slashed and two antennas were ripped off a police cruiser outside the Clipper Ship Oct. 6 at 12:34 a.m.

Charged were William J. Knapp, 24, Keith Damon, 23 and Robert Duffey, 19.

Women for Reagan

State Representative Mary Jeanette Murray (R) 3rd Plymouth District and Ann Blackham of Winchester are the Co-Chairmen of Women for Reagan in Massachusetts.

Representative Murray who represents Cohasset, Hingham and Hull is seeking her fifth term, unopposed, in the Massachustts House of Representatives. Murray is a member of the Local Affairs, Counties and Taxation Committees of the House. A Women for Reagan rally was held last Saturday at the Sonesta Hotel in Cambridge.

Representative Murray presented Maureen Reagan with a Wedgewood Dish with a picture of the Old North Church. Murray said, "Your father, the President, came to Cohasset in 1980 through the efforts of my husband. It is a pleasure to have you here in 1984.

Healy speaks

Boston Globe Associate Editor and Washington Bureau Chief Robert L. Healy of Cohasset addressed more than 60 Gallery 360 sales associates at a special awards breakfast held at Bert's in Plymouth. Healy discussed the 1984 Presidential election, tracing the course of this year's contest from the pre-primary campaign through the Democratic and Republican conventions.

COSTA DEL SOL

Among European playgrounds promising fun in the sun, Spain's Costa Del Sol ranks as one of the most enticing. With quiet coves, miles of beaches and some 326 days of sunshine each year, this stretch of the Mediterranean coast supplies abundant pleasures for an outstanding vacation by the sea. But what makes a Costa visit unforgettable is the array of other attractions that await in southern Spain's Andalusian region. These include fishing villages, swank resorts and remnants and ruins from the Moors, who invaded Europe from North Africa 1,000 years ago. A Costa Del Sol visit is not complete without seeing a Flamenco show. Go to a "tablao" (Flamenco caberet), rather than a night club to see the most authentic presentations.

Hanover paved the way for water protection of its water supply, with an eye towards protecting that source for future use.

In 1974 and 1975, the Board of Water Commissioners and the Department of Public Works met jointly with other town committees to discuss the feasibility of creating a construction moratorium in this re-charge area of the ground water supply source. Although engineers could not be specific about what was underground, based on surficial geologic testing, there was an argument for implementing a construction ban in the re-charge area.

"We were blown apart," Beal remembered, but the local DPW was not to be stopped. They took it under their authority to declare a building moratorium in the watershed area while S.E.A. Consultant engineers performed tests to determine the water supply source.

The tests took two and a half years to complete, and the results concluded with a detailed evaluation of the water supply, a report on the ground water source, and recommendations to create two separate zones to protect both sources. One area is defined as the well protection zone, the second area is known as the resource protection zone.

The town's first attempt to create a comprehensive bylaw failed at Town Meeting in 1981. The second attempt at the next special Town Meeting passed by a unanimous vote. The bylaw was forwarded to the Attorney General's office, where it passed without an alteration to one word of the draft.

The only difference in the bylaw which was successful, and the one which failed before Hanover voters, was a change from the word "assume" to "presume." In simple language, Beal stated, the bylaw says "if you wish to make use of land within the resource protection district, there are certain uses presumed to be hazardous. It is up to that person to prove to the town the use will not be hazardous, and that it will be accomplished in a proper manner."

"In other words," Beal added, "if there is a way to develop the land safely, we don't have any right to object, but if there is no safe way to use the land, it can't be used."

Within the three well protection districts, there is no new development allowed by law. Period. In the resource protection zone, the zoning bylaw has been altered to allow new subdivisions to be constructed, but with larger lot size requirements. Any new developments must not exceed 100 gallons per day per 10,000 square feet of land. That is the equivalent of limiting its future development to residential use within the resource protection district. Any non-residential use must be scrutinized by the Planning Board through a complete site plan review.

There is no recourse to the Zoning Board of Appeals, Beal said, and a decision by the Planning Board may only be appealed to Superior Court.

Among the uses prohibited from the resource protection district, and defined as hazardous, are: motor vehicle repair facilities, motor vehicle body shops, junk and salvage yards, trucking or bus terminals, car and truck washing facilities, coin or commercial laundries, the sale, storage or disposal of gasoline, diesel fuel, heating oil, or engine lubricants, sale, storage or disposal of engine coolants or anti-freeze, hairdressing or beauty shops, use, storage or disposal of hazardous waste, mining operations or gravel removal, discharge of waste water containing other than normal sanitary waste.

The reason for requiring the Planning Board review of a non-allowable useage is so the town can provide a complete check and balance of the resource protection district, "so we know what's being added to our ground water," Beal noted.

Since the inception of the zoning bylaws, the Town of Hanover has granted 19 water quality compliance certificates, which allow developers to construct within the resource protection area. There are many steps a developer must successfully pass before a permit is used. And, as Beal stated, an occupancy permit may not be issued until everything is determined to be in order by the Water Dept.

This year, Hanover is initiating a series of sophisticated ground water tests to monitor the parameters around the watershed district. These tests will determine the water's route and rate of flow. This extensive monitoring system has once again put Hanover in the forefront of water testing technology. Beal knows of no other Massachusetts community working on such a long range, computerized system.

"We're doing all this water testing and protection because the alternate is so much more expensive," he added. Having a limited source of water available, one option we never had was to build a reservoir. That would cost us about $8 or $9 million today. During the past three years, the town has appropriated about $90,000 and a total of about $1/4 million since 1974 to protect our resource."

"This has been a good thing for Hanover. I don't think I'll be around to see the final results," Beal said.

He also mentioned that continued cooperation between the DPW, the Board of Health and Planning Board is essential to the success of the town's water protection

As the department superintendent explained, "we almost lost our water supply. We had water we couldn't even use without treatment. Hanover manufactures 85

When committee members asked what health hazards were present in the department, Capt. James Gurry replied, "we're out of paper towels." Several of the firefighters substantiated his claim. They said there has been an inadequate supply of paper towels for months,and there arecurrently none at the station.No new supplies have been ordered.

"The reason we bring it up here," Capt. Gurry continued, "is because we consider it a hazard to our emergency medical services. There is certain equipment in the ambulance we must wash and dry with the paper towels. We have none, and we can't properly wash these items now."

Committee members answered that they have no authority to discuss that situation, nor to determine any solutions.

The committee members told selectman DeBassio they were unsure of their assignment. No personal communication from selectmen had been made, with the exception of this meeting, they said.

DeBassio said it was up to this committee to advise the selectmen on what type of training should be given to the Cohasset E.M.T.'s, what the cost would be, where it could be given, and what type of additional equipment would be necessary as a result of this higher level of training.

The advisory committee agreed with chairman Dr. Mark Friedman, that it is their intention to recommend a higher level of training for the E.M.T. personnel, particularly in the use of the defribillator.

One of the obstacles to obtaining advanced medical training, according to Dr. Friedman, is that the state is in the midst of changing its training specifications.

Once the state makes its determination, Cohasset will have a better idea of what time and expenses will be incurred with the advanced medical training.

Although it was suggested that a physician from the advisory committee could sponsor periodic testing of the E.M.T.'s CPR technique, the members of the committee did not approve it.

When Dr. Friedman asked the firefighters how many E.M.T.'s would be willing to participate in advanced training programs, one firefighter stated many would not attend such a program without being compensated for their advancement."

According to the committee chairman, "The average successful resuscitation of an ambulance patient in Cohasset is about 10 percent. That is comparable to national averages in communities similar to ours. We basically do as well as can be expected. We can't do better without better equipment and better training."

I'm not saying we're doing something wrong or poorly. But with the advanced skills we can make available to you, you can do a better job. "

Another idea brought forth by the chairman was the recommendation that the Fire Department personnel be trained in simple emergency medical telephone protocol. What this would entail, he explained, is a dispatcher who is capable of reciting simple emergency directions to the person who has called for medical assistance.

If a Cohasset resident calls for an ambulance because someone has been badly cut, the person on the Fire Department phone would be able to tell the person what to do with the patient until the ambulance arrives.

Everyone agreed with the suggestion, and Dr. Friedman said he would begin to draft protocol forms to be used in the department. All such forms would have to be reviewed and approved first by the state Office of Emergency Services.

The next meeting of the Emergency Medical Services Advisory Committee will be held Nov. 27.

Excellent performances mark Nickerson debut

By Corinne A. Kutish

The long-time dream of theatre-lover J. Arnold Nickerson has finally come true with the opening of Kaufman and Hart's comedy, "You Can't Take It With You," in Nickerson's newly-built Tudor-style theatre in Accord Park, Norwell.

As late as a week before the play's opening, the 10,000-ft, 360 seat theatre had yet to see its seats bolted down. But play-goers won't be disappointed today. Plush and elegant, this professional theatre, the first of its kind to be built in the South Shore for over 50 years, is steeply-sloped with extremely comfortable seats, assuring there's not a bad seat in the house.

Decorated entirely in tones of mauve and gray, even down to uniforms worn by the ushers, there is excitement in the air, not to mention the smell of fresh paint.

"You Can't Take It With You" is a much-beloved Broadway hit by the great comedy-writing team, George S. Kaufman and Moss Hart. Revived twice on Broadway since its opening in 1936, the Pulitzer Prize winning comedy has been given more productions by amateur groups around the country than any other American play.

Its charm comes from the unusual cast of characters it assembles on stage: Penelope Sycamore, (Joanne Hamlin), who started writing plays eight years previously when a typewriter was delivered to the house by mistake; her husband, Paul, (John Drabik), who plays with toy boats and invents fireworks in the basement; daughter Essie (Regina Reagan), a ballerina in training, who pirouettes and practices non-stop in hopes that her eight years of lessons will eventually do her some good.

In fact, the whole family is eccentric, evidenced by their unusual household furnishings: snakes on the sideboard, kittens on Penelope's desk, a printing press and a xylophone by the bay window.

The plot centers around the one normal member of the Sycamore family, Alice (Linda Cameron), who has fallen in love with her boss's son, the handsome Tony Kirby, (Robert Riley). The dilemma: how the heck does she explain her family to him and his parents?

As written, the play offers many highly-funny scenes and lines, such as this tableau that greets the audience when the young lover Tony mistakenly brings his parents to dinner at the Sycamores one night too soon.

On stage is Essie in full tutu regalia, dancing to xylophone music, played by her simple-minded husband, Ed, (Mark S. Cartier), her exuberant Russian ballet instructor, Kolenkhov, (Christopher Childs), urging her on, while Penelope paints boarder Mr. DiPinna, (John Adair), in Roman toga as a discus thrower.

At the center of the madcap Sycamore family is grandfather Martin Vanderhof, (Niels Miller), who set the tone for the rest when he quit work one day 35 years prior.

"He got half-way up the elevator one day and then came right back down," explains Alice. "He said work just took too much time. Now he just collects snakes and stamps, and attends commencements."

"You Can't Take It With You" is a demanding comedy. To come off right it must be performed at breakneck speed so you never quite catch your breath.

Nickerson's production never got up to that speed, but that was no doubt attributable to the lateness of the theatre's construction. The cast's rehearsals on the actual stage were very few, but by this time, the show has probably smoothed out its uneven spots.

Excellent performances were turned in by Victoria Howard as Rheba, the unflappable maid, and Wiley Moore as Donald, her slow-witted boyfriend.

Linda Cameron and Robert Riley also hit the mark as "star-crossed" lovers, Alice and Tony. The play comes to a head in the third act when Niels Miller as the grandfather quizzes Tony's Wall Street industrialist father, Mr. Kirby, on whose lifestyle is right.

"Why don't you quit Wall Street," grandfather asks. "You've got all the money you need. After all, you can't take it with you."

If you're one of the nearly 10,000 folks who have already bought a season's subscription to the Nickerson Theatre — congratulations! You're sure to enjoy yourself.

If you're not, don't let that stop you from visiting this affordably priced theatre located right in our backyard. As Nick Nickerson puts it himself, you'll find no "new and great dramatic works . . . rather a place to come where all is pleasant, where one can experience a dimension different from daily life."

"You Can't Take It With You" continues through November 10th at the Nickerson Theatre in Accord Park, Norwell, with evening performances Tuesdays through Sundays, plus matinees on Sunday afternoons. Tickets are priced $12 and $15.

percent of its usable water. Now we have a high water rate, but our residents are very conscious of the value of water."

Planning Board member Libertine joins Beal in his spirited support of the Water Department's accomplishments.

As he explained, Hanover was in a unique circumstance, its aquifer area being totally surrounded by an encroaching business and commercial neighborhood. "Business in Hanover was jumping by leaps and bounds. So, for the past ten years, I have been a proponent of protecting our limited water supply," he added.

The landowners, some of whom were vocal opponents of the proposed protection districts, now are some of its staunchest defenders, he said. "They have come to realize that we would have eventually reached the point of no building, period, in this area, and their land would have been worthless."

Although Libertine believes the protection districts and the restrictive bylaws were the correct course for the town to pursue, he explained that the results won't be known for years. "I hope I'll be around in 20 years and maybe then we'll be getting some answers. And if we don't get the right answers then, we have all failed."

CLT against Mass Bank

By Audrey Louison

In a speech before the Scituate and Hull Republican Town Committees, the head of Citizens For Limited Taxation called on the state Legislature to defeat a bill which would create a separate authority to administrate public works projects.

Barbara Anderson, executive director of the tax lobbying group which launched Proposition 2½, told the conservative audience that Governor Dukakis' proposed Massachusetts Development Bank is a thinly-veiled plan to reduce the power of the Legislation and raise corporate taxes.

Mass Bank, as it is called, would be set up as an independent authority responsible for repairs to roads, sewers, bridges, etc. The projects would be funded, said Anderson, not by revenue bonds as the governor claims, but by a corporate tax hike.

Revenue bonds are purchased by the state on the strength of use fees. The projects that would be funded by the new authority, however, are not of the type to impose user fees.

Anderson said when pressed, the Administration acknowledges the authority's $145 million budget would therefore have to be met through a business profits tax. The deal would be sweetened with other corporate tax breaks, but "the cost of the taxes will eventually be passed onto the consumer," said Anderson.

She quoted Richard Moore (D-Uxbridge), chairman of the House Committee on Taxation, as estimating that under the plan Boston Edison alone would pay $500,000 more each year in taxes. Anderson suggested the company would recoup 90 percent of that figure with consumer price increases.

Anderson doesn't believe extra revenue needs to be raised at all. "The money is there in the budget. These projects should be funded with revenue from gasoline and excise taxes, but that money is being used for other things," she claimed.

According to Anderson's calculations, there is a $400 million surplus in the budget being frittered away on non-essential expenditures.

"Mike Dukakis would rather cut his heart out than give us a tax cut, so he finds things to spend the money on."

For instance, since the governor took office, at least 6,000 new workers have been added to the state payroll, she said.

around town

☐Dave Bishop will have a lot of people cheering for him this weekend. Dave is running in the New York Marathon on Sunday, the 28th, for the fourth time. His training was helped along by several "Cohassetites," all of whom want to wish him the best of luck.

☐Wednesday was a special day for Brownie troop 4616, when David Wadsworth took the girls on a tour of Cohasset Central Cemetery. There was a true surprise in store for them at the end of the tour, when two "ghosts" appeared from behind a hill. The girls were really spooked, thanks to two younger brothers, Greg Schultz and Toby Horn. When they were "recovered," they went back to the Unitarian Parish House where the girls made caramel coated apples. A grand Halloween story!

☐While on the subject of "happies," mustn't forget Jerry Ainslie...Jerry celebrated her "biggie" last week (the night of Open House at the High School) and word spread that it was her big day. It's for sure that she could have strangled the birthday crier. Anyway, Happy Birthday, Jerry.

☐Be sure that you go to the Quincy Cooperative Bank to see the pencil drawings of birds of prey done by Peggy Atkinson. Peggy is a CHS grad, and graduated from Providence College last year. She had shows there, too. Peg's talent is grand. Don't miss the opportunity to see her work.

☐Exciting news from 818 Chief Justice Cushing Highway. This Saturday, Oct. 27, the Country House is holding an open house to show their beautiful new addition. This will give them more room for their antiques and collectibles, as well as allowing Bound Brook Artisans and Bowman and Company to have more room for their handcrafted items (by local artisans) and clothes. The addition is beautiful (I was given a sneak preview and loved it) and the contents are, too. Don't forget to attend the Open House (refreshments sound great, too).

☐Chris Kuhn was home last weekend, sporting his new haircut. He said that his crew cut was "hard to do anything with." Chris reports all is well at college.

☐Paul and Karen Fiori certainly treated their guests royally at their wedding last week. Paul was outstanding as the "poet Lauriat" of Cohasset, and Karen was a pretty and happy bride. It was decided that they should renew their vows every year, and do it exactly the same, so that all of their relatives and friends could have another super time to look forward to. Congratulations to the newlyweds.

☐Peter and Pat Laugelle are sure tanned and feeling super after their great vacation down south. They report having a dynamite time, and can't wait to go back.

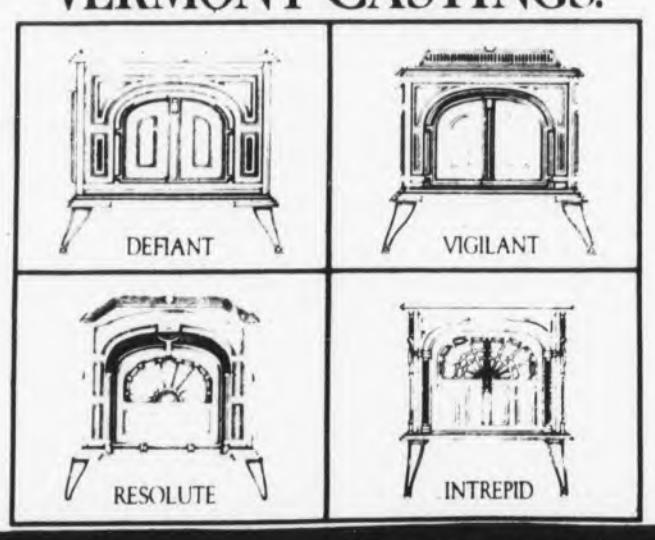
☐After writing all about Linda O'Loughlin and her tennis, must now write and tell you that she won't be playing for a little while. Linda had to have her appendix removed last week. Here's to a speedy recover, Linda.

☐Dean William DiGregorio of Cohasset has recently been elected a fellow of the Massachusetts Society of Certified Public Accountants, Inc.

DiGregorio attended the University of Massachusetts at Amherst where he received a BBA degree in Accounting. He is currently self-employed.

☐Former Cohasset High School soccer star Lee Reid is now playing a key role for Massasoit Community College, where the Warriors were ranked 12th nationally this week by the National Junior College Athletic Association.

Reid, captain at CHS, was selected to the South Shore League All-Stars prior to joining Coach Nick Palantzas at Massasoit.



The Warriors todate, have posted an 11-2 record (5-0 in region play) and moved from their 19th rating last week to their new spot just in front of Community College of Rhode Island and one spot back of soccer powerhouse St. Louis Community College. Cohasset soccer fans will have the opportunity to see Lee in action when Massasoit hosts the New England Championships on November 9 and 10. Games will be played Friday at 11 a.m. and 2 p.m. The championship finale will be at 2 p.m.

☐The defensive Player Of The Game for Massachusetts Maritime Academy last week was So. safety Mike Bridgeman of Cohasset who tied a school record with three interceptions.

That's all the news for this week . . . please be sure that you call or write yours to me, it is what makes this article possible and fun to read.

Art Center Schedule

Visit Vincent Van Gogh at the Metropolitan Museum of Art by traveling to New York City via an art theater double feature.

The South Shore Art Center, 103 Ripley Road in Cohasset, is sponsoring a two-day theater and art trip to the Big Apple, December 8 and 9. The Center's one-day November 17 tour to New York to visit the van Gogh in Arles collection is a sell-out.

The two-day trip offers transportation to and from the City, accomodations at the Harley Motel, admission to the van Gogh exhibit at the Metropolitan, admission to the new wing of the Museum of Modern Art and free time to explore New York at Christmas. Prices for the trip are $139 for double occupancy per person; $133, triple occupancy; and $180 single. Reservations and payment must be made to the Cerel Travel by Oct. 26.

An optional theater program at an additional cost gives participants a choice of attending a Broadway production. Included in the choices are Sunday in the Park, Mike Nichol's Hurley Burley, a Gary Glen Ross drama and a British farce Noises Off.

A second option is a Saturday night dinner at New York's famed Sardi's Restaurant.

The South Shore Art Center will schedule convenient pickup at the Center and at other locations. Transportation will be via motor coach.

For complete details on this two-day Dec. trip contact Cerel's Travel in Natick, 653-2400 or 237-6190.

Works by gallery artists will be featured in the South Shore Art Center's annual Blue Ribbon Show open to all members.

The exhibit will hang in the center, from Oct. 17 to Nov. 24 with a formal reception on Friday, Oct. 26 from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. The reception coincides with the center's general membership meeting and "pot luck" supper in the studio cafe. Members need to call the center, 383-9584, for reservations and food asignments.

The Blue Ribbon Show represents a variety of media and style with blue ribbons awarded in various categories. This annual exhibit gives gallery artists and members a chance to show their work in a comprehensive exhibit and for the general public an opportunity to see the quality of work created by the Center's membership.

Antiques Appraisal Day

The Cohasset Historical Society will hold an Antiques Appraisal Day at the Society's Caleb Lothrop House, Saturday, Nov. 10. The hours will be from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Present at the appraisal day will be two appraisal specialists from Robert W. Skinner, Incorporated, New England's leading auctioneers and appraisers of antiques. They will appraise almost all types of antiques and collectibles excluding stamps and coins.

Included among the types they can accept for appraisal are furniture, silver and other metals, jewelry, paintings, prints, textiles, porcelain, folk art, glass, dolls and toys, books, as well as other antique and art objects. Donation for verbal appraisals will be $5 for one item, or $12.50 for three items.

Noncommunication

This week, we experienced a classic case of non communication.

While the Fire Department grumbled about the need for a new ambulance which Town Meeting approved months ago, bid proposals were being reviewed by various town officials, and the department's current vehicle was in the repair shop again. Two thousand for repairs earlier this month, and another $1000 for additional work a week later, has been expended in October alone.

As firefighters and E.M.T.'s who work with the eight-year old ambulance have attested, the ambulance is "a disgrace." It's in the shop for continual repairs, and since money had been appropriated, why hasn't the new vehicle been ordered?

Well, selectmen said they had given the bid proposals to the newly-formed Emergency Medical Services Advisory Committee. As a courtesy to this latest addition of municipal boards, selectmen said they wanted recommendations from the advisory group.

The emergency medical committee said Tuesday night they knew of no such request from selectmen. And secondly, they would be incapable of providing any insight into ambulance bid specifications.

As one physician member explained, "all I know about an ambulance is that it has four wheels." A firefighter attending Tuesday's session quickly corrected him by noting an ambulance has six tires.

When selectmen did enter the meeting Tuesday, they were baffled as to why and how the bid specifications got to the committee's desk.

They also could not explain why the bid award had not been completed, months after the purchase proposals has been submitted.

The problem here is a lack of communication.

One member of one board says one thing, while the others are left in the dark. Another board knows nothing of what another board has stated publically, and we end up with a mess.

While all this non communication is snowballing, the ambulance is becoming weaker, and the real victim is the townspeople. Once again.

One E.M.T. offered the emergency medical committee members, "come outside and we'll take a ride around the block. You can see for yourself what shape the ambulance is in." The members declined the invitation.

Hopefully, the new ambulance will be ordered next week. But it will still be months before Cohasset actually receives its new vehicle.

We hope the townspeople and the old ambulance can hold on that long.

Resuscitation Annie needed

The Fire Department is in dire need of a new Resuscitation Annie, the mannequin used to train personnel in emergency medical techniques.

The current mannequin is about 15 years old and there are no current plans by the town to purchase a new one.

Some communities in the area have been given the training mannequins through donations from local service organizations. The Emergency Medical Services Advisory Committee has recommended to selectmen that a new Resuscitation Annie be made available to the Fire Department.

Campbell's rebuttal . . . misrepresentation

Letters

To the Editor:

The Kasperowicz letter published October 18, 1984, continues the pattern of misrepresentation that has misled the town into support for the Ward sewer plan. The letter charges that I am a paid lobbyist for an organization that does not exist — and am not listed as a lobbyist in "The State House Registry" — another organization that does not exist. The letter states that my employer is back into sewage treatment plants — even though my company has not, is not, and does not plan to engineer or build sewage plants. The letter claims that a call to my employer will be deflected to a box number — but, in fact, the caller would be immediately connected to my office. I have never told Ms. Kasperowicz, nor anyone else, I was a vice president. An interminable telephone conversation initiated by her some weeks ago has been our only contact (I should be grateful for small mercies). Her two main points were that the townspeople resented being labelled as lemmings and that I should change tactics and emphasize the continuous growth in the town as the reason for a proper sewer system.

As for nuclear power, soon this nation will wake up to the realities of electricity supply, and to the damage done by destructive activists, opportunistic politicians and a manipulated public. The race to catch up with the other industrial nations, especially France and Japan, will be far more costly than if we had proceeded rationally. Just like our sewers.

I'm not a paid hack, either for constructive energy action or for a workable sewer solution. I am a competent and experienced engineer who believes that professionals have not only a right to speak out, but a special responsibility to do so. But I agree that Globe reporter, Peter Sleeper, blew it — he could have done a better expose than he did, given the voluminous evidence available to him.

GSA reviews DEM park land use

(This letter was sent to Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray from Ray Kline, acting administrator of G.S.A.)

Dear Ms. Murray:

Thank you for your letter of September 10, 1984, concerning the interest of the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Management (MDEM) in acquiring the former Army Reserve Center, Hingham/Cohasset, Massachusetts, for park and recreational purposes.

This property, consisting of approximately 785 acres of land improved with 58 buildings and other structures, was determined surplus to the needs of the Federal Government on December 9, 1983. State and local governmental units and nonprofit institutions were then notified and given an opportunity to acquire the property for various public purposes including park and recreational use. As a result, MDEM expressed an interest in acquiring the property for park and recreational use.

Our Boston, Massachusetts, regional office is currently reviewing an appraisal and a land use study submitted by a contract appraiser and a professional land use planner. While a final determination has not yet been made, please be assured the General Service Administration will work closely with the MDEM in order to effect a mutually agreeable disposal of the property.

We appreciate your concerns and suggestions for the disposal of the property and will give them full consideration.

Sincerely,
Ray Kline
Acting Administrator

Numbers needed

To the Board of Selectmen:

Captain Mark H. Trask's graphic warning to all of us of the need for easily located, clearly visible house numbers should be heeded and acted upon without delay.

Perhaps a legal requirement to display such numbers would be in the best interests of everyone. I hope that you agree.

No smoking

(This letter was sent to the Board of Selectmen from Fire Chief Martin Dooley. Ed.)

On Thursday evening, October 11, while sitting in my living room viewing on cable T.V. the Selectmen's meeting of this past week, I personally viewed the members of the Board of Selectmen, showing a complete disregard of a formal written request of your Fire Chief, that you not smoke in the hall in the name of public safety. I remind you of my previous request that you refrain from smoking. It makes it very hard for your fire department to enforce No Smoking regulations, when you board members, the governing body of this town, see fit to disregard this request from your Fire Chief.

In the name of public safety, I remain,

Very truly yours,
Martin W. Dooley
Chief of Department
Cohasset Fire Department

Imagination fills school library

coordinated to various reading levels. Index cards with color codes and short critiques of the books are placed along the rainbow. Eventually, the Kid Critics will become advanced enough to discuss authors' writing styles.

Another aspect to Marge Murphy's teaching is the use of video tape equipment. Several students have put their book reviews on tape by acting out parts of the books including plot summaries and recommendations for certain grades.

Ms. Murphy plans to bring these tapes to cable television in the near future. She explained, "all the other children can see them doing book reviews" on tape. "This will be an incentive to read more."

This time of year is especially fun for Ms. Murphy and her students. Every Halloween she dresses as a witch and reads aloud a tale of suspense to Deer Hill students. As she reads, three sixth graders, dressed in costumes, act out the story. This year the story is The Mummy, the Will and the Crypt by John Bellairs, an author she highly recommends to her students.

In December, the library will sponsor a Media Fair. Each class at Deer Hill will "present books through all forms of art". Videotapes, diaramas, three dimensional designs, mobiles and skits will illustrate not only the various books, but also the time, energy, and skills the students have put into their projects.

Ms. Murphy encourages all teachers to take part, "to incite the kids to read for pleasure and then show what they've accomplished". Each grade will be given first, second, third and honorary prizes by judges from the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, Joann Mitchell and Marilyn Pope.

Between all of her on-going projects, Marge Murphy awaits a new addition to the library, a computer system with five discs for different learning levels. Several games will be designed on the software to enhance the library skills of the students. For example, questions will be asked from the computer, and the only way to find the answers is to look them up in the encyclopedias.

In these games, Ms. Murphy explained, "you can't use the software without the encyclopedias and vice versa." However, the first project for the computer will be to determine what books are overdue. She sees this project as a great way for students to learn to use the computer.

As a result of her efforts to make the library an "interesting, intriguing place," Marge Murphy has established a new style rooted in commitment and growing with creative vitality.

She concluded, "if the students know you enjoy something, show interest in their reading, it catches on"

Committee considers smoking ban in schools

Although one member has stated "the best policy is no policy at all," the school committee is considering revising the current policy to ban smoking in the schools.

As suggested by school committee member Martha Gjesteby, no students would be allowed to smoke on school property. According to the current 1974 school regulation, smoking is allowed by students who are 16 years and older, in an area outside the school building, known as the "snake pit."

But Gjestbey, after receiving calls from concerned parents, recommended that Cohasset adopt a policy similar to other school districts, and begin to phase out smoking by any students on school property.

Scituate and Marshfield initiated strict programs several years ago and within the next few years, there will be no smoking by any students within the school grounds.

But committee member Richard Conley, a former longtime smoker, argued strongly against the formation of a stricter policy. Saying that positive rather than punitive methods should be utilized to prevent children from starting a bad habit, Conley said he could not support a stronger amendment to the current policy.

The present Cohasset policy states there will be no smoking in the school building at any time. Smoking is allowed outside the building on school grounds before and after school with certain exceptions.

Student Council representative Michael DeSantis, who attended Monday's meeting, reminded committee members that the greatest problem now seemed to center on the freshman girls entering the lavatories to smoke.

Supt. Eugene Crowell concurred with his assessment, and added that the more time that is spent in these lavatories, the greater the possibility of vandalism. And with the declining number of personnel to "police" the bathrooms, it is a difficult, if not impossible problem with which to deal, he added.

Member Conley suggested that the responsibility of prohibiting cigarette smoking belongs with the parents, not another school committee policy.

"We have to put a policy in for more parental responsibility. Why is this school system always putting in policies to handle the responsibilities which should be done in the home? " he asked.

School committee member Jack Langmaid answered,"because for umpteen years, this school system and its administration did not have the personnel nor the inclination to make any policies."

But in Conley's opinion," the best policy is no policy at all."

Go home and say to your kids - 'don't smoke.' This is an issue we can't enforce. We have to try another manner."

Gjesteby said her initial concern centered on the younger seventh and eighth grade students who might be pressured by their peers to smoke. She noted that other schools require parents' signature before a child is allowed to smoke on school grounds.

"Now we're talking parental pressure - who's going to give their permission for their kid to smoke at school?" Conley inquired.

When it was suggested that perhaps teachers should also be banned from smoking, Union President George Fortin said the committee would be talking about altering working conditions, a situation not palatable to many teachers, he assured the committee. He also noted that it was nearly impossible for teachers to have to question every student found smoking and inquire "are you a freshman?" in regard to the enforcement of age limitations.

Supt. Crowell said he would talk with superintendents from other area school districts about their smoking policies. He could bring that information to the committee before it considers altering the present regulation.

He said if the committee did decide to strengthen its present regulations, "I'm afraid you may be facing additional personnel. One key place my administrators, (the majority of whom are male) can't get into is the girls' lavs and we would need some matrons. "

One thing positive about the "snake pit," he added, was that the students were out in the fresh air, and school staff members are able to detect if marijuana is also being smoked by the students.

Supt. Crowell urged the committee to "go carefully and review carefully so you have a philosophy that is to your liking, and is also enforceable."

Candidates corner

(In what will be our final week of responses from candidates, we publish the answers of State Senate Candidates William Golden and Anna Doherty to the question: What responsibility if any does the state have in governing abortion and what will be your position on that? Ed.)

Anna Doherty

The decision whether or not to beget or bear a child is basic to every woman's right of private control of her own body.

The members of the Massachusetts Legislature should not enter the doctor's consulting room and interfere with a decision reached by a physician and a competent doctor about whether or not to terminate the patient's pregnancy within twelve weeks of conception. The state has a duty to regulate the delivery of health care within the state so that the health of all women is protected whether they decide to carry a pregnancy to term or not. I believe the state has a duty to regulate the delivery of health services so that they do not arbitrarely inhibit or prevent first or second trimester abortions.

Any medical insurance provided for the poor by the state and federal governments should cover the medical procedure for abortion. Otherwise the government decides that poor women have less right to control their bodies than rich women have. Certain religious groups oppose blood transfusions or cancer treatments for their members; does that mean that public funding for those types of medical treatment should be cutt off?

I would vote against imposing legislative restrictions on the right of Massachusetts women to a first or second trimester abortion. I believe the legislature has no business interfering in the private moral decisions reached by myself, my daughters or my grandaughter.

What is the government's role, if any, in governing abortion and what is your position?

William Golden

I believe that abortion is one of the fundamental moral issues of our times. I believe it is an issue to be decided by a woman, her family, and her physician. I do not believe it is an issue which should be decided by governmental bureaucrats or judges.

I have profound respect for people of conscience who differ on this issue. Our democratic society has survived as a pluralistic community because of the traditional willingness of all citizens to resolve issues such as abortion through the democratic process. Despite my personal opposition to a constitutional amendment, I would therefore support putting the abortion issue before the voters of Massachusetts through a statewide referendum question so that each of us can cast our vote consistent with our beliefs and values.

Legal talk

Mr. Richard Henderson, Cohasset Town Council, was a guest speaker at Mr. Edward F. Sheehan's law class at Cohasset High School Thursday morning, Oct. 18. A member of the law firm of Thaxter, Beckwith and Henderson, Mr. Henderson has practiced law in Massachusetts for the past 15 years.

During his talk, he stressed the importance of writing skills, speaking skills and reading skills for those students who hope to enter legal studies. "There are many areas of the law to study," he said. "These include: contracts, torts, property, criminal, environmental and consumer." He then went into career opportunities in the law. "A large number of new lawyers go into corporate practice," he stated. "The First National Bank in Boston has a legal staff of 60, while General Motors must employ about a thousand lawyers."

Other areas of law covered by Mr. Henderson during the informative class were: paralegal training, the high cost of getting good legal services today and the case method of studying law.

Mr. Henderson will return to the class later this month to conduct an open question and answer session about the law.

School budget update

Asst. Supt. Stephen Hart explained to the school committee Monday night that the system has expended $6,000 from its $16,000 budget for substitute teachers. Hart said there has been another long term teacher absence granted which will further decrease the allotted funds. "This will continue to be a problem for us," he stated, noting that during budget preparations, it can only be estimated how much money will be expended from this account.

Another factor which must be balanced off within the total budget, is the extra kindergarten teacher at Osgood School, he added. "We will keep the school committee and the town's advisory board apprised of the situation, and we will continue to see if we can balance it off with cost savings elsewhere in the budget."

Hart also explained that during a recent meeting with selectmen and members of the advisory board and capital outlay committee, the request for additional appropriations for the school roof project "seems positive." That request will be made at the Nov. 19 special Town Meeting.

Summer school policy

Although a revised edition of the Cohasset Summer School Policy could not be adopted this week because of the committee chairman's absence, there was another addition included to it. After receiving several written suggestions from a parent, the committee decided to require a student to attend 80 percent of the summer school classes to acquire the credits for the class. The committee decided since that is a requirement of the public schools during the regular school year, it should remain the same for summer school. The committee previously decided that only half-credit could be given to those students attending a summer school for class credit.

Foreign language scheduling

The continuing dilemma of not enough students taking certain language classes, was discussed again at this week's school committee meeting. Member Jack Langmaid said he was concerned about the three or four students who have chosen to take French II, but because of the limited number, are placed in a more advanced class with older high school students.

Foreign Language department chairman Richard Narkiewicz explained this is a "numbers" problem which will continually effect Cohasset because of the small student population and the declining enrollment.

He answered that this was the best alternative to take, other than offering specific French classes on alternate years. Hingham uses such a system, he explained, with a choice given between French and Latin on alternate years.

Committe member Diana Kornet suggested that perhaps an eight-class day schedule be implemented, with subjects such as music offered as an after-school activity. She noted that there has always been a number of students in the high school who have had to drop from the band because of a schedule conflict with foreign language, or vice versa.

Asst. Supt. Stephen Hart said he would hate to sacrifice class options because of a scheduling conflict of a few students. This is a dilemma Cohasset High School confronts every year because of the limited amount of students eligible to take certain courses.

Langmaid suggested that Narkiewicz think now about the budgetary implications involved if any changes are recommended in Foreign Language class scheduling.

Aquarium visit

Oct. 18, third graders became periwinkles, crabs, sea stars and other creatures of the tidepool, when a guest speaker from New England Aquarium visited Osgood School. The children acted out life in a tidepool in special costumes with rocks, seaweed and ocean sound effects. Later they were able to see and touch live creatures in buckets.

Graduation change

In a compromise worked out with the South Shore Music Circus, the graduation date has been rescheduled to June 8. The Sunday before, June 2, had originally been slated for the Senior Class graduation.

Supt. Eugene Crowell explained that because the Music Circus will not be opening its facilities until the end of June, it would be a hardship for them to put up the tents and have the necessary personnel on the site three or four weeks prior to the start of the season.

Crowell reminded the committee that although the change may be a slight hardship on some students and faculty, the dontion of the Music Circus site provides a

Campaign for Thayer

The largest capital drive in Thayer Academy history was announced by the trustees Oct. 14. Richard A. Leahy, Norwell, president of the Board, made the announcement at the annual parent cocktail party at The Oaks in Cohasset. He said that the trustees and a small number of leadership donors had already pledged $1.1 million toward the $2.2 million goal. Bruce Tuthill of Hingham will serve as chairman of the campaign.

The campaign funds will finance a complete renovation of the Glover Science Building as well as provide funds needed for endowment. Glover, the second building to be erected on the Thayer campus, opened its doors in 1894. Its "new and expanded laboratories" were flanked on one side by a girls gymnasium, and on the other by a boys gymnasium. The whole building was erected and equipped for $60,000.

The Glover project continues the Second Century Building Program, which, since Thayer's centennial in 1976-77, has seen an addition at the Middle School, a second gymnasium, and the renovation of the stage and auditorium of Frothingham Hall. Campaign Chairman Tuthill said he hoped funds could be raised in time to permit construction to begin in June.

PSO meeting

The parents, school administrators, faculty and school committee members who attended the PSO Fall General Membership Meeting last Thursday were informed, entertained and shocked by what Health Education Director Mike Gill, and his panel Carolyn Contis, Marilyn Watson and Patricia Wunschel had to say about health and nutrition.

After a brief business meeting during which a corresponding secretary slot was added to the PSO Board and School Committee Chairman Joe Nedrow explained the Warrant article covering an increased appropriation for school roof repairs, the panel was introduced.

Marilyn Watson opened the discussion, stating, "You have only one body . . . take care of it." As the Director of Physical education, she has developed a complete fitness program for junior and senior high students which includes aerobics and weight training.

Stressing the need for students to get adequate exercise, she advised parents to leave the car in the driveway and have children walk or ride their bikes to after-school activities. In another word of movement advice, Watson debunked the "candy bar for energy before the game" myth, advocating a high carbohydrate pre-game diet for athletes.

Next, Home Economics teacher Patricia Wunschel described the nutrition classes to which seventh and eighth grades are exposed and the school lunch program which provides one-third of the student's minimum daily nurtient requirements. Some current areas of concern she touched on were the need for increased calcium in post-menopausal women, added protein for a balanced vegetarian diet, and the controversies surrounding caffeine's link to cancer and the dietary links of sugar versus additives with hyperactivity.

Expanding on the junior high nutrition classes, Home Economics teacher Carolyn Contis challenged the whole family to do a diet assessment--are parents meeting adolescents' needs for calcium, vitamins A, B, C and D while providing a minimum of 1500 calories' worth of the other five nutrients? She surprised the audience with the results of a survey of junior high youth who said they spent an average of $5 - $6 per week on snacks and "junk food".

Mike Gill was last to speak and questioned the back-to-basics movement which he feels is a threat to health education. "Can we afford to ignore its importance?" he asked, while children are receiving "mixed messages" at home on the use of tobacco and alcohol, and confronting other critical health issues such as stress, abuse, single parent families, pregnancy and suicide.

He has set up a peer counseling network and is starting a group to help children cope with separation and divorce. Next year he hopes to have crisis intervention counselors based in the schools.

In closing this timely and informative discussion, Gill appealed to parents, "What is more basic than the health of our children?"

Science trip

Friday, Oct. 12, the second grades of Mrs. Clark and Mrs. Tewksbury enriched their science program with a field trip to Carver. They observed and learned more about the varied ways of harvesting one of New England's famous crops - cranberries. Also, they enjoyed the train ride on the Edaville Railroad through some cranberry bogs.

Junior high workshop

Junior high school students will have the opportunity to see what theatre is all about beginnig Nov. 6. A junior high drama workshop, to be directed by Judy Holmes of Hingham, has been established for the first time with assistance from the PSO and a generous grant from the South Shore Playhouse Associates.

Seventh and eighth grade students are invited to meet on Tuesday afternoons from 2 to 3 p.m. in the new study hall to explore drama through informal, improvisational workshops. Over the course of several months the goup may write a script, or adapt a play, and develop it for performance sometime in February or March.

The workshop will focus on giving students the chance to find out what theatre making is all about in a non-competitive way. The performance will develop more from the group of students participating, than

Students cram college night

By Elisabeth Gorfinkle

Hilda Fritze, alumni representative for Cornell University, looked dismayed as she riffled through her brochures.

"I can't believe how many people. We've only been here an hour and I'm afraid we'll run out of materials," she said.

Fritze was referring to the 2,500 or so Cohasset, Hingham, Hull and Scituate students and parents visiting the ninth annual Coastline College Night held last Thursday.

It was the Hingham High's guidance department's turn to host the event. One hundred eighty-four educational institutions were provided with tables set up in the high school gym and cafeteria. Presentations were also given in various classrooms.

Guidance counselor William McCallum, host for the 90-minute event, said the majority of the visiting schools were four-year private colleges from New England. A smaller percentage were junior, nursing and technical colleges.

An estimated 25 percent were institutions from Massachusetts.

Seniors and juniors from the four towns were advised to pick out two or three institutions of interest and prepare questions beforehand.

The dozen students this reporter interviewed and observed had followed through on that advice and, even though their parents seemed far tenser, the students' prevailing attitude was serious.

Cornell's recruiter contended that the students this year were far too serious about getting into the schools of their choice.

"The kids seem worried, competitive. They want specifics. They're all wound up about it," Fritze said, as she pulled more material out of a box. "It seems to me that 10 years ago we just applied and went to college. We were much more relaxed. I think a lot of this tension is from parents wanting a good return on their investment.

"If you're going to dole out a big expense, averaging $15,000 a year (for a private four-year and highly competitive institution), it adds up," Fritze said.

But the price tag for an education was one of many concerns students expressed Thursday night. They also wanted to know if their grade point average was high enough, if their combined Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) scores were acceptable, and if they could find their intended majors.

RADCLIFFE

HARVARD/RADCLIFFE COLLEGES, CAMBRIDGE, MASS.

An eager-looking young man approached the Harvard recruiter, who will look only at Hingham students, Dr. Philip Arena, and asked hurriedly, "Do you offer a business management major?"

Arena, who is the alumni recruiter and scholarship chairman of the Harvard Club of Hingham, smiled broadly and replied slowly, "Harvard is a liberal arts college. You could major in economics."

Arena then opened the college's catalogue to the pages that listed the economics courses. The student asked, "Would I learn about marketing?"

The recruiter pointed to courses he felt might fulfill the student's needs.

Later, Arena said about 16 Hingham students a year apply to this Ivy League college. Out of that number, no more than four will get in in a good year. The accepted students probably have combined SATs of 1300 (the maximum score possible on each of the two parts of the

Cohasset sports report for the week

By Lisa Shumaker

VARSITY BOYS' FOOTBALL

Saturday, Cohasset lost to a tough Norwell team, 44 to 26. Floyd Hardwick of Cohasset had a super game, scoring the Skippers' first three toughdowns. Bobby Durkin scored Cohasset's fourth and final touchdown in the second half. The Skippers scored more points off Norwell than any other team this year.

Cohasset's great offensive game was due largely to the offensive line which consists of seniors Jay Contis and Jeff Brown, and sophomores Jeff Soltesz, Jeff Lydon and Liam Stanford.

Unfortunately, Norwell's Brett Chicko lived up to his reputation and couldn't be stopped by Cohasset's defense.

Despite the loss, Cohasset gained a lot of respect from not only Phil Pisano, the team's coach, but from Norwell as well. The Skippers have improved tremendously as a team and have grown, and matured together as well, this year. Pisano was very pleased and proud of his team's performance and feels strongly that Cohasset will be the team to watch out for during the rest of the season.

Saturday, Cohasset has a big game against an old rival, Hull, in Cohasset.

VARSITY GIRLS' FIELD HOCKEY

The girls started their week Tuesday with a victory over Abington, 3 to 2. Maureen Farren scored in the first half on a pass from Maria Cahill. Vicki Spooner also scored in the first half, assisted by Maureen Farren. In the second half, Maureen scored the winning goal off a pass from Cindy Spooner.

Cindy Spooner turned in a good effort for Cohasset. As a team, Cohasset played well enough to win the game.

Thursday, in a major upset, Cohasset beat East Bridgewater 1 to 0. The entire Cohasset team showed determination and a great desire to win. The difference in the game was that Cohasset wanted to win more than East Bridgewater, and therefore, the Skippers not only outplayed their opponents, but they outhustled them as well.

Cindy Spooner tipped in Vicki Spooner's shot to score the lone goal of the game. Halfback Kara MacDonald showed tremendous improvement during the contest and was a great asset to the team. Maria Cahill, Anne O'Leary, and Cohasset's entire front line never game up their quest for a score.

Fullback Lee Sullivan held Cohasset's defense together and broke up East Bridgewater's offense many times.

Cohasset must win only three of their last six games in order to make the state tournament. Monday, Cohasset faces off against Scituate in Cohasset. Wednesday, the Skippers will travel to Hull, and Friday Cohasset will take on Sandwich. Show your support and come watch Cohasset play!

John Rhodes (R) of Cohasset hustles during a match against Norwell. The junior high team won 3-2.

GIRLS' VARSITY SOCCER

Wednesday, the girls lost to a powerful East Bridgewater 5 to 1. This was a very rough and physical game.

Cohasset school sports

Unfortunately, Cohasset couldn't get any breaks and were beaten.

Friday, Cohasset received a disappointment from Duxbury with a losing score of 2 to 1. Cohasset did not deserve to lose because they outplayed Duxbury the entire game. However, the girls were out of luck and were unable to score when they needed to.

Cohasset's lone goal came from Janet Digorolamo, who scored off of Amy Duncombe's perfect corner kick. Krissy Pompeo and Sarah Seavey both did a good job against Duxbury.

Monday, Cohasset bounced back to beat Hanover, 2 to 1. The victory was the product of an overall team effort. Sarah Seavey picked up both goals for Cohasset, and Tara Stanford played skillfully at halfback.

Monday Cohasset beat a weak Hanover team, 3 to 1. Sarah Seavey scored the Skippers' first goal, unassisted, and went on to score the second goal off a pass from Janet Bagley. Janet Bagley then went on to score Cohasset's third goal, and this time Sarah assisted her. Janet Digorolamo and Tara Stanford stood out in this game for Cohasset, and both played well.

Tuesday Norwell was defeated by the Skippers, 3 to 0. Unassisted, Janet Digorolamo went in to score. Janet Digorolamo also scored Cohasset's second goal, assisted by Sarah Seavey, followed by Janet Bagley, who scored off a pass from Amy Duncombe. Caitlin Staunton, Susan Riley, Melissa Shea and Amy Duncombe all had exceptional games.

Thursday Cohasset was victorious over an extremely physical Rockland team, 2 to 1. The score was tied at zero at halftime, but Janet Digorolamo broke the ice in the second half on a penalty kick. Rockland came back to score 20 seconds later. However, with seven minutes left, Janet Digorolamo scored off Sarah Seavey's pass to win the game for Cohasset.

The Skippers only need to win one more game to make the state tournament. This week Cohasset plays Whitman/Hanson on Tuesday and Holbrook on Thursday.

VARSITY BOYS' SOCCER

Monday Cohasset lost to a tough Rockland team, 3 to 0. However, the Skippers bounced back to crush a weak Middleboro, 6 to 1. Mike DeSantis scored three goals with David MacDonald assisting on two and Chris Kirkendall assisting on the other. Kurt Weisenfluh scored his first goal of the season on a penalty kick.

Bobby Shultz then scored off Kurt Weisenfluh's pass. Mason Sandell picked up Cohasset's final goal, assisted by Bobby Shultz. Coach Jon Anderson was pleased with his entire team's performance.

Friday Cohasset downed East Bridgewater, 2 to 0. Bobby Schultz tipped in Chris Kirkendall's shot to give the Skippers a 1 to 0 lead. David MacDonald then, scoring off a pass from Bobby Shultz, increased Cohasset's lead to 2 and 0. Defensively, Kevin Leary had a great game, and goalie Billy McKenna picked up his sixth shutout.

Cohasset is now tied for first place in the South Shore League and has four games left in their regular season. Tuesday Cohasset will travel to Randolph, and Saturday the Skippers will take on Abington at 10 a.m. at Milliken Field.

Cross Country

The cross country team has not had a very successful season so far, with a record of 0 and 7. However, Paul Narkiewicz, the team's coach, is looking forward to the future and hopes the eight underclassmen on the team will stick with the sport, enabling the team to be strong in the years to come. This year was mainly a building year for Cohasset.

There are 13 members on the team, eleven boys and two girls. In Cohasset the course runs for about 2.5 miles and up some steep hills, such as Norfolk Road and Clay Spring Road. Cohasset's route is one of the most difficult courses around.

Cross country is a very individual sport in Cohasset. Each runner goes out and runs his or her own race without having to worry about other team members.

Second Congregational Church

Confirmation Class - All High School students who have not been confirmed as church members are invited to participate in the Confirmation Class. Please attend the service of worship and then go to Rev. Benbow's office. We will meet from 11:15 until 12:30.

Village Fair - All involved churches made a conscious commitment to do their fair share this year. The church is its people. Have you done your part? There is something for everyone. No one is too young, too old, too busy, or too anything else. You don't have to be skillful or creative. Workshops and home projects are available, but we also need people to gather cones and seeds, use sandpaper, make donations, etc. Call Carol Sandblom, 383-1812, Marsha Silvia, 383-0500, or Claudia Story, 383-6976, for more information or suggestions. Thank you.

Quilt Fund - The quilt is just about finished! There are a number of people who have not returned their raffle money and stubs. Please do so by October 28. If you would like to help tie the quilt, please call Carol Sandblom, 383-1812. We'll have a quilting bee at the church some morning!

Village Fair - Wreaths - It is time to gather cones, chestnuts, pods, etc., for the beautiful wreaths we all enjoy. Drop off at Manganaro's anytime now. 67 No. Main St. (big yellow barn). Preliminary Workshops - November 1, 8, 15, 19, at 10 a.m. to 12 noon at Marie Kelley's, 211 Fairoaks Lane. Everyone welcome. Decorating Workshops will be November 26-29 from 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. in Bates Hall. Candy Table is asking for homemade candy or donations of candy. Please call Pam Mcnamara, 837-8582. Thank you.

Aging - A series of four free workshops will begin Friday, October 26, at the Social Service League. For information, call 383-0771.

Halloween Potluck Supper and Party - The whole church family is invited to share in the fun, games and food in a special evening honoring the Church School teachers, the Christian Education Committee, and Scott Fischer. The supper begins at 5:30 on Saturday, October 27.

As the computer industry has expanded every attempt is being made to overcome this bad image and present the computer as "user friendly" — that is, as easy to operate, responsive to human needs and subject to our control and direction. Computer language has been simplified, instruction manuals are briefer and easier to understand, and the computers are designed to be very forgiving of human error. It is a fascinating development to observe and a concept which I believe has broad application within our church.

A church also should be "user friendly." Our language should be easy to understand. Our procedures should be clear and simple to follow. And we should make every allowance for human error, for mistakes, forgiveness and reconcilliation. Some new computers, for example, even include an unerase or undo button which will allow you to recover information which you mistakenly deleted. And, another computer asks you twice if you want to do something if it seems that you are in the process of making an error. It is a kind of generous behavior which ought to be part of our relationships as church members.

Distinguishable differences between 10th District candidates

By Mike Berger

There are three highly distinguishable differences between the two candidates for Congress in the Tenth District.

Republican Lewis Crampton and incumbent Democratic Gerry Studds have varying views on defense spending, budget deficits and support for President Ronald Reagan.

Thursday's debate at Central Jr. High in Hingham was highly entertaining and many of the several hundred spectators who crammed the auditorium probably wished the debate could have lasted longer than the alloted 60 minutes.

Both candidates were thoughtful, poignant, at times.

What has been the major issue to the media during the primary campaign didn't take much time during the debate.

Studds' censure last year for his 1973 affair with a male teenage page was not referred to until the end of the debate.

Crampton was first asked if the censure had an impact on Studds' effectiveness as a representative in Congress.

Crampton answered that he believed it had some impact outside of Studds' own committee, particularly when having to work with conservative Democrats and Republicans. But he added Studd's effectiveness is further damaged when he continually criticizes the Reagan administration, "making it more difficult to get doors open in Congress."

Studds replied that if Congress has to be of the same view as the President, "then if Walter Mondale wins, you can withdraw from the race and get doors open."

He then read a letter from former Republican Rep. Pete McCloskey of California who wrote, "Southeastern Massachusetts could not ask for a more effective congressman than you."

ECONOMICS

Crampton said the chief difference between the two candidates is Studds does not support the president's economic recovery program.

"Gerry Studds says you have to raise taxes to control the deficit. I say you don't," said Crampton. He later added Studds was one of the big spenders of the last three years.

Studds avoided the term, "raising taxes" but instead said there are two ways to reduce the deficit- "take in more or spend less." His major economic theme is "I think we're going to have to increase revenues and decrease spending."

Crampton argued a tax hike would kill the economic recovery "and all the good things we have over the past three years."

He added tax reform and broadening the tax base would bring down the deficit to more reasonable levels.

Studds also said he would take back "unfair tax cuts," which he said benefit wealthy Americans. "They are not only unfair. They are unwise."

WEAPONS

Both candidates expressed support for a nuclear freeze.

Crampton favors using the MX missile and other weapons as trade-offs with Russian weapons to gain a mutually verifiable freeze. He also favors a build down concept of eliminating two weapons for every new more modern weapon built.

But Studds argued against any first-strike weapon being used as a bargaining chip.

Crampton countered that Studds was being idealistic if he couldn't understand that bargaining couldn't be accomplished without tradeoffs.

Studds replied both the U.S. and Russia have enough nuclear firepower to blow up the world. "There are no reasonable uses for weapons. If a nuclear war is exchanged, they would no longer be used."

He later added in response to a question regarding the importance of jobs to weapons spending, "If these weapons are used, there won't be people is Massachusetts, God help us all."

Studds defended the country's capability to defend "ourselves" but feels the maintenance of the country's national forces has been shortchanged."

On foreign policy, Crampton said Studds once voted to cut off military aid to El Salvador but later changed his mind.

Citing recent developments in El Salvador, Crampton said Reagan has a success there.

Studds said he always insisted on making aid to El Salvador dependent on improvements in human rights there. He added Salvadoran President Jose Napoleon Duarte is doing what Congress has been calling for because of the pressure from Congress and "because the suggestions came from Congress."

ENVIRONMENT

The most verbal confrontation between the two candidates concerned Crampton's environmental support for the Reagan Administration.

Studds asked Crampton, "Where were you during the time Ann Burford was destroying the very agency you worked for?"

Studds added he heard no cries from Crampton or criticism at that time. "We heard them after the fact and one wonders why."

Crampton responded, "Actually what I was doing was helping to hold the agency together in times of difficulty." He added he was one of only two officials kept on by William Ruckleshaus when he took over the Environmental Protection Agency. Crampton received an award for his work from the National Governors Association.

Crampton said he wrote the report which turned the Superfund cleanup program around and his service to the EPA was completely positive and effective and would be more effective than Studds in getting the EPA to clean up toxic waste and acid rain.

Studds acknowledged his awards by broke up the audience with laughter when he replied, "I will use my influence with Mondale and Ferraro (Vice President Candidate Geraldine Ferraro) to get your job back."

State Senate race

The State Senate race for the Norfolk-Plymouth seat has been almost a sedate affair since the bloodletting of the Democratic primary between Rick Walsh and Bill Golden in September. Golden and Marshfield's Anna Doherty now face each other in the general election next month.

This time around, there are no heated arguments about where each candidate hails from, no charges of "carpetbagger" or "born with a silver spoon in his mouth."

Instead, Golden has emphasized his concern with the South Shore working together to get more influence on Beacon Hill. And Doherty has pointed out, on the one hand, Golden's closeness to the Dukakis administration and, on the other, her experience, as U.S. Rep. Hastings Keith's aide, in untangling bureaucracy for individuals.

Both are attorneys and have served public agencies in that capacity: Doherty as attorney for the state's Department of Mental Health (DMH), Golden as Quincy's City Solicitor who initiated and won the suit against the Metropolitan District Commission (MDC) that should, as a result, see Boston Harbor's pollution from the MDC treatment facilities on Nut Island stemmed.

In those capacities, both acted as crusaders against the status quo who won their cases. Yet, in this campaign, they both emphasize the need to work within the system so the South Shore, often perceived as an unloved stepchild of the greater Boston area, can get more of its fair share.

Doherty terms herself fiscally rather conservative, opposing the Dukakis administration's sponsorship of Mass. Bank and a new water and sewer authority separate from the present MDC. She argues that the sensible thing to do is to work within the present structures in place. She also opposes the idea of a minimum statewide teacher's salary, arguing that simply throwing money at a problem will not cure it.

Golden has argued that such a stance is "naive," that thinking that an entrenched agency like the MDC will change its ways is wishful thinking. He says items and services like clean water and quality education cost money, and that fact must be realized by the voters, followed by the necessary action to improve the quality of life on the South Shore.

Once upon a time, not so far away,

a brave Copper King built an enchanted kingdom in a land by the sea.

There in Scituate, he surrounded his mansion with idyllic pastures and formal gardens. Then built a fairy tale tower to watch over his dream.

Some said he was eccentric. Others said he was vain. But in truth, the legendary millionaire, Thomas Lawson, was building a beautiful haven as a gift for his beloved family. And in 1903, Dreamwold came true.

Now it's coming true again.

All the majesty, privacy and splendor that was Dreamwold. In twenty-six unique Victorian condominium residences encircling a spectacular rose garden and beautiful swimming pool.

Dreamwold. A magnificent blend of historic restoration and new construction as only Boston's premier developer, Parencorp, could do.

This fall, Dreamwold is available at pre-completion prices, starting in the mid-100's. Visit Dreamwold between 11:00 AM and 6:00 PM daily for a personal presentation. Or call 545-0222 or 731-5570 for more information.

It's coming true again. The new Dreamwold. Soon to be a legend of its own.

Conway forges company ahead

"Our plans call for a five year growth plan of doubling our sales and influence by 1989," real estate giant Jack Conway told his management staff last Thursday.

Conway called together 50 of his company managers and department heads from all corners of Conway Country to announce management changes for meeting his new goals.

Conway named Richard D. Cahill of Quincy as the new president and Thomas J. Peters of Milton as executive vice president and operations officer.

He also promoted Scituate resident John R. Reardon from president to vice chairman of the board in charge of real estate brokerage operations. Conway said he will remain as chairman, with his duties focused on financing growth rather than operations.

Cahill, the new company president, moves up from executive vice president and manager of the Wollaston and Quincy sales operations. He is the past president of the Quincy and South Shore Board of Realtors and was Realtor of the Year in 1983 of the Quincy Board as well as the Massachusetts Association of Realtors. He has been with Conway for nine years.

Peters has been with the company since 1978 and during that time was a Gold Medal Sales Award winner, the developer and manager of the company's South Weymouth and Weymouth Landing sales offices, and an instructor for the Conway College of Real Estate Knowledge. He has also served on the Quincy and South Shore Real Estate Boards as a director.

Conway began his announcement by tracing the start of his South Shore empire. "Our company is 26 years old today," he said. We are now into our second quarter century of service to the community.

"It all started on Oct. 12, 1957, in an $80 a month rented quarters on South Street in Hingham Square. Now, 26 years later, we are a 28 office, 500 person organization, the largest and best of our type in New England."

Conway's five year plan calls for a larger share of the Cape Cod real estate market, and increased sales in the ocean-front area stretching from the Cape Cod Canal to Westport and the Rhode Island border, activities which will be managed from a Southestern Mass. headquarters to be built on land Conway has purchased in Mattapoisett.

Conway also plans to build a sales center on Nantasket Ave. in Hull, branches and sales centers West and Southwest of Boston, and increased activity in the Greater Boston Market.

Conway is confident his current $300 million sales operation can double its size by 1989, and pointed to his new appointees to lead the way.

"We need younger people at the helm," he said. "We need new blood, newer ideas, sustained driving force. And then, working together as a team we can and will make our objectives and make our planned goal a reality."

The announcement was made at the Satuit Restaurant in Scituate.

from students fitting into pre-selected parts. In this way, Holmes says, a play will evolve more naturally as the group works and acts together.

Holmes was selected to direct the Workshop by High School Principal Richard Streeter, Director of Theatre Arts Ron Emmons, and Karin Bartow of the PSO Arts Enrichment Committee. She is very enthusiastic about the workshop approach. "This is an appropriate way to introduce the junior high age group to theatre," she says. "It is a gentle, non-competitive, and fun way to bring out the unsuspecting talents of this age." She feels it's important for kids to have the chance to 'try' acting before they have to 'compete' to be in the theatre.

Junior and senior high school teachers have repeatedly expresssed the need for a drama workshop for seventh and eighth graders. Thev feel it's a good way for kids to build their self-esteem. It also fills the need at the junior high for activities exclusively for those students.

Emmons, who works with senior high students, is excited about introducing theatre to the junior high. "This will be a healthy and rewarding outlet for these kids. It will also benefit the high school drama workshop since it can serve as a training ground and feeder system for me. The two age groups don't, as a rule, mix well on stage. I feel it's important for 7th and 8th graders to have their own drama workshop and I think Judy Holmes is the right person to direct them."

Judy Holmes worked as a profesisonal actress in London and trained there at the London Academy of Music and Dramatic Art and the Guild Hall School of Music and Drama. She also trains in stage combat.

She was formerly the Artistic Director of the Elizabethan Company of Hingham and has assisted with drama programs in the Hingham Public Schools at the elementary and junior high school levels. She consulted with the Cohasset High School Humanities Team last year during their preparation of "Julius Caesar."

Holmes has directed and appeared in Cohasset Drama Club presentations. She also directed "Twelfth Night" for the Public Theatre in Boston and "Move Over Mrs. Markham" in Brockton. She direced a six-week drama workshop in Hingham this summer.

Junior high students are encouraged to come to the first workshop to see if they want to participate. They also may come to the second, if they have a conflict on Nov. 6, and continue with the group from there on.

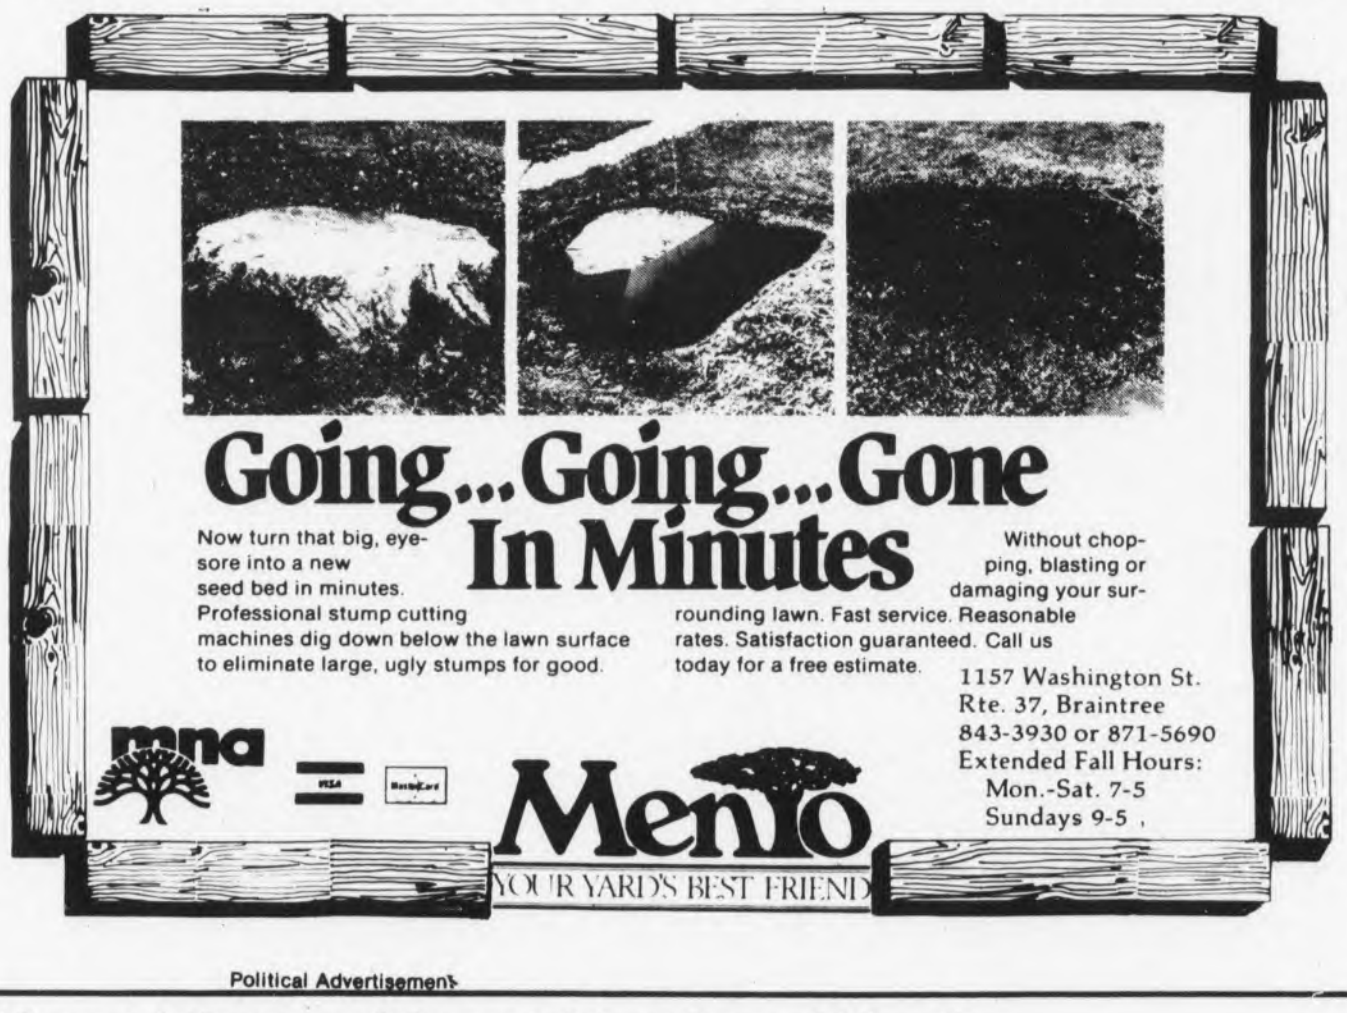
Churches prepare for Dec. 1 Village Fair

Scores of volunteers from five Cohasset churches are already hard at work crafting the hundreds of attractive gift items and assembling the attic treasures, books, plants and other articles that will fill the Town Hall and other buildings around Cohasset Common when the 44th edition of Cohasset's famous Village Fair opens for business at 10 a.m. Saturday, December 1.

In scheduled workshops at the various churches, or working individually at home, parishioners are fashioning articles of children's clothing, stuffed animals, holiday decorations . . . even gingerbread houses . . . all to be put on sale at this giant benefit bazaar which is believed to be a unique example of cooperation among churches.

Joining hands and hearts in the truly ecumenical effort are members of the Panagia Greek Orthodox, St. Stephen's Episcopal, First Parish Unitarian, Second Congregational and St. Anthony's Roman Catholic churches.

In the organizational format of the Fair, each church supplies at least two representatives to a Central Committee which provides overall direction of the enterprise. Leadership of the effort rotates each year among the churches, and this year the Panagia Greek Orthodox Church in North Cohasset, newest member of the five-church group, is providing this leadership.



General Chairman of this year's Fair is Jeanne Syrmopoulos of Cohasset, with Pamela McNamara of Marshfield as secretary and Charles Costas of Scituate as treasurer.

Representatives of the individual churches on the Central Committees are as follows: Panagia Greek Orthodox, Pauline A. Walter of Norwell and Barbara Kiriakos of Hull; Unitarian, Linda Summers and Margaret A. Phelps; Congregational, Marilyn Fessler, Lee Jenkins and Barbara Hislop; St. Anthony's, Kathy Brennock and Theresa Smith; St. Stephen's, Betty Madden and Ginnie Nast.

The Fair will again present most of its standard features that have become fixtures over the years. These include a boutique selling hand-crafted gifts, a potting shed with plants for sale, a bargain bazaar featuring attic and basement treasures, and tables offering home-cooked food, candy, cheese, children's items, wreaths and swags. On the Common will be Santa Claus in his sleigh and balloons for sale. Again planned is the popular Secret Room where children can privately select reasonably priced gifts for parents and relatives. A Children's Movie is also scheduled.

Shoppers will not have to go hungry as they move about the Fair, finding a snack bar in the Town Hall, the picturesque popcorn machine, and, in the vestry of the Congregational Church, a luncheon-chowder bar, which this year will add some Greek delicacies to its menu.

What Are Your Views About Nuclear War?

1. A limited nuclear exchange would likely lead to an all-out nuclear war? Yes ___ No ___
2. Do you believe that the U.S. will succeed in using nuclear weapons as bargaining chips in future negotiations? Yes ___ No ___
3. Will the U.S. use nuclear weapons only if attacked first by Soviet nuclear weapons? Yes ___ No ___
4. Is the US winning the arms race? Yes ___ No ___

According to a recent survey* the majority opinions were:

1. 83 percent of those surveyed said a limited nuclear war would quickly turn into an all-out nuclear war.
2. 84 percent believe that building new weapons as bargaining chips does not work because the USSR builds similar weapons to match those of the U.S.
3. 81 percent mistakenly believe the U.S. will use nuclear weapons only if the Soviets attack the U.S. first with nuclear weapons. (U.S. strategy also provides for use of nuclear weapons first if Europe or Japan is invaded.)
4. 92 percent believe the U.S. can never win the arms race because the USSR will just keep building until they catch up.

October gave a party

By Dorothy Squier

I began to sing and Mama joined in. Esther sang alto.
"Come little leaves said the wind one day,
Come over the meadow with me and play.
Put on your dresses of red and gold,
For summer is gone and the winds grow cold."

Then we sang, "October gave a party, the leaves by hundreds came."

Through its yellow glass shade, the metal kerosene lamp shed a mellow light on the table as we spread our schoolbooks out. Marie was already at her books, chewing the end of her pencil and frowning. Mama bustled about the pantry, putting away the remnants of a pumpkin pie.

From his rocker, Papa said, "Your pie was real good, Mame."

Mama smiled. She had a light hand with pastry.

Papa asked, "Where's Ada?"

"She's baby-sitting for Dr. Wiggins."

Papa looked at me. "That song about the leaves falling is sad. I don't like to think of winter coming."

"But, Papa," I cried, 'October is exciting! I love when the leaves turn all colors. And its fun to pile them up and jump in them and scuff your feet walking through them."

Mama's eyebrows went up. "Before you do that you'd better come home from school first and change your clothes and put on your sneakers. Mind what I say. Do you hear?"

Raising a placating hand, Papa said, "Mame, they don't know the value of a dollar yet."

He turned to us. "You must be very careful of your good school clothes. We're lucky that Mama can sew and make you all those pretty dresses."

Mama said, "The price of Anderson gingham just went up. It's a good thing I bought those materials in the summer."

"We'd never get along without your sewing. I know how hard you work and the girls always look so well dressed. I'm proud of them.

Patting the cat on his lap, he said, "Esther, tell us what you like most about October."

"I like all the good smells. The barrel of red apples out on the back piazza and the blue smoke when the leaves are burning."

Marie butted in, "I like my new plaid kilt. Is it really the McKay plaid, Mama?"

"No, dear," she answered, looking warily at Papa. "The McKay plaid is too gloomy, all black and dark blue. The yellows and reds suit little girls better."

Liz came in from the parlor where she'd been practicing scales.

"What I like most are the football games and dances."

"Oh, sure," I said, "but you're ten years older. When I grow up I'm going to have a raccoon coat and be a cheerleader. And I'll have an evening gown and a Spanish shawl and a feather fan."

Papa's eyes were twinkling as I rattled on, "And who will be your beau escorting you?"

"You, of course." He was my idol.

"Mama, can we have a Halloween Party?" Esther asked.

"MAY we." corrected Mama. "If you promise to help me with the canning this week. I'm going to make mustard pickle and put up the seckle pears."

"I'll help you, too, Mama. How many can we invite?"

"MAY we." Mama sighed.

"All right, Mama. MAY we. How many?"

"Well, there'll be four of you. Liz and Chris will be going to the school dance. You may each invite a friend and that will make eight. We'll put the metal wash tub on the floor and duck for apples. And hang some from a string across the kitchen. And I'll candy some for you and put pennies in them."

"Papa, will you tell us ghost stories? Are we going to wear costumes?" I was squeaking with excitement.

Chris came out of the bathroom, where she'd been all this time, smelling of cologne and wearing rouge and powder.

"Wanna know what I like? The games and the football songs. I know all the college songs." She sang,

"Bulldog, bulldog, bow-wow-wow! Eli, Yale!" Then, "Rah, tiger, sis-boom-bah!" and "Ever to Harvard." By this time we were all singing.

"That's enough for tonight," Mama said. Finish your homework and I'll hear your multiplication tables."

She turned to Chrissie. "Where do you think you're going?"

"I'm not going any place. I was just practicing

"Well, wash it off before you go to bed. You do look pretty, though," she chuckled. "It's your turn to practice. No more football songs."

Papa went into the den to read the evening paper and Mama brought out her basket, plumped herself into the rocker, fitted a long black stocking over her darning ball, needled her thread and began to weave.

The kitchen was quiet. Marie closed her books an hummed softly, "October gave a party."

We had never heard of trick or treat."

SAT, verbal and math, is 800). They are also honor students with some kind of special talent and very good luck. Arena said this year about 1,600 students will be picked out of a pool of 14,000.

The total annual cost is $15,000, Arena said, but about 65 percent of the incoming class receive some financial aid.

Arena added, "If you get into Harvard from Hingham High, you'll be prepared to face the rigors. In the 16 years I've been doing this, no Hingham High School student has flunked out."

CORNELL UNIVERSITY, ITHACA, NEW YORK

Alumni representative Hilda Fritze said her school's admissions staff is impressed with the caliber of students who visit Coastal College Night.

She said an estimated 75 to 100 students apply from the four towns and one out of four is accepted.

Students applying to Cornell should have strong SAT scores, with a combined total of 1100. But the scores can vary, depending on the requirements of the particular school within the university the student is applying to. "Kids are expected to have strong academic backgrounds, strong essays on the application. These things can outweigh somewhat lower SAT scores," she said. The average tuition for a non-resident is between $6,800 and $9,600, depending on the school. Seventy percent of the student body receive some form of financial aid.

LABOURE COLLEGE, BOSTON, MASS.

Laboure, located on the grounds of Carney Hospital, evolved out of the Catherine Laboure School of Nursing.

The college offers a two-year program in nursing and allied health careers leading to an associate in science degree, said admissions representative Betty Fleming.

"We like to admit students who will succeed. We offer excellent earning power opportunities after two years of hard work," Fleming said.

"We've been coming to Coastline for about nine years. And about 10 students from the area apply and an estimated eight get in (annually)."

Students who visited her table were initially interested in nursing but often are later drawn to the other medical technology areas.

"We're looking for good students," she said, "a combination of 850 (SAT scores) or better, but we weigh SAT scores against any health care experience. And students must have strong backgrounds in math and science."

Tuition is about $5,000 annually, and graduates are eligible to register in their field.

LESLEY COLLEGE, CAMBRIDGE, MASS.

Jacqueline Johnston, a senior from Hingham High School, approached the Lesley table and said she was interested in working with children.

Recruiter for the women's college Elizabeth Macomber replied that Lesley is based on education and human services.

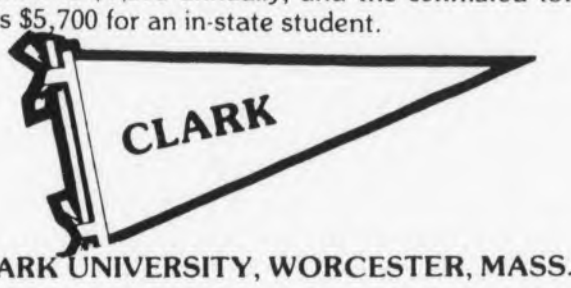
The girl hesitantly asked about the college's requirement for SAT scores.

Macomber said reassuringly, "There is no cutoff on SATs. Usually the scores are in the 400 range but Admissions is usually more interested in academic accomplishments and extra-curricular work that shows an interest in a particular field and some experience."

Johnston said she had done volunteer work in a nursery school in connection with the child development course at HHS. She filled out a card to request a catalogue and application.

Tuition at Lesley is $6,600 a year. Macomber said she expected a maximum of five applicants to result from her attendance at Coastline College Night and for all but one to be accepted.

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS/AMHERST



Probably more students from the four towns apply to the University of Massachusetts/Amherst than to any other college.

An estimated 400 students apply in a year from the area and of those, 250 are accepted, according to recruiter David Bousquet. "I think it is the quality of education and the price which makes it popular," he said.

The university offers 100 different majors and, in any given year, it offers 4,000 courses. The university is an umbrella for seven different undergraduate colleges.

For general admissions, the university expects SAT scores in the 450 range in both verbal and math. Students should be in the top 40 percent of their class and have a B average.

Tuition is $1,298 annually, and the estimated total cost is $5,700 for an in-state student.

CLARK UNIVERSITY, WORCESTER, MASS.

If a student is a self-starter, interested in meeting just about every kind of person in the world, Clark may be the right school.

Because it's a small school, Clark fights for diversity, said Gary Poor, director of undergraduate and international admissions. "It is not a preppie school. We are an egalitarian university."

Poor said about 40 states and countries are represented at Clark. The school is research-oriented and highly academic. He compared its tenor to Tufts and Brown. Undergraduate enrollment is 3,000.

About 20 students from the four towns will probably be accepted at Clark this year. Their median SAT verbal score will be 572 and their median math score will be 584. Their average class rank will be in the top 15 percent, Poor said.

Tuition is $8,400 a year. The total yearly cost is $10,600 (estimated).

ASBESTOS LUNG DISEASE

Asbestos dust causes serious lung ailments; the diseases appear suddenly, years after exposure. Today numerous SHIPYARD WORKERS, MASONS, and PIPEFITTERS of the 1930's-1970's have lung afflictions because they inhaled asbestos particles many years ago.

If you worked in one of those professions then and now have a lung disease, you may be eligible to receive money damages or workers' compensation. Relatives of living and deceased victims can also recover in some cases.

"Working Together For Better Dental Health"

It's happening in Cohasset . . .

High school election

Representative Mary Jeanette Murray announced that elections are to be held in Cohasset, Hingham and Hull High Schools Nov. 6 to select the school's delegate to the thirty-eighth annual Student Government Day Programs.

The program was established in 1947 by the Massachusetts General Court in order that secondary students of the Commonwealth would be able to learn about state government by participating in a unique and meaningful experience. This idea has developed into a six-month program which explores all aspects of our state governmental system and includes a one day "take over" of the state administration by the students.

Any secondary school in Massachusetts is eligible to send one student representative to this program. The student must be sixteen years of age on or before May 31, 1985. The student must be elected by his/her high school in a democratically held election. The student must be dedicated to receiving full benefits offered by the program in understanding state government.

After the election in each school, the name of the delegates are placed in a "Glass Bowl." Names of the student counterparts will be drawn by the governor, other constitutional officers and supreme court justices. Another drawing will be held to select the governor's councillors, department heads, cabinet secretaries, senators and representatives.

Basketball boosters

The first meeting of the 1984-1985 Cohasset Basketball Boosters Club will be held at the home of George and Pat Ellinger, 17 Surrey Drive, at 7:30 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 28.

Parents of basketball players are urged to attend.

Center special events

The Cohasset Community Center is hoping to involve Cohasset residents and members of the Center in a variety of special events coming up at the end of October.

All members of the Community Center are invited to the annual business meeting, Oct. 25, 7:30 p.m. Committee reports, officer's slate, and a summation of the year's activity will be presented. Please come to express your opinion of the Center's progress this year and to hear the plans for next year.

The big event for this fall is the Halloween Dance for adults, to be held Oct. 27 at St. Stephen's Church, from 8 to 12 p.m. Tickets are only $5 from a board member or at the Community Center.

Tickets will also be sold at the door, if space permits. Plan to attend this dance whether you are a familiar face at Center functions or are new to these social evenings. Everybody is looking forward to a fun evening of costumes and dancing.

An annual children's Halloween parade takes place the following day, Sunday, Oct. 28, at 2 p.m. Begarbed witches and goblins march around the common for an admiring throng, and are served refreshments afterward. There is a pumpkin contest with prizes awarded at the same time. Pumpkins must be at the Community Center at 12:30 p.m. on Sunday for judging.

Gardeners meet

The Amateur Gardeners of Cohasset will meet Oct. 23 at 1 p.m. at the home of Mrs. Lydia Kanzler, 3 Jerusalem Lane. Dr. Uve Hublitz of Cohasset will present a program, "Birds of the South Shore" at 2 p.m.

Care for a little Marshfield Mud? How about a slice of North River pie? A pig-out pail? Decisions, decisions. Walk in the door of Jan's Sweet Shoppe at Marshfield Plaza East and you've got choices to make. Not only are there 124 flavors of their homemade ice cream, but such delights as wagon wheels and brownies supreme Jan makes on the premises with the help of her family. Hardly a summer resident goes home at the end of the season without the popular Mud pie and the North River pie is equally as tempting with its layers of chocolate fudge and ice cream, all slathered with whipped cream. Here is Jan's recipe for

CHOCOLATE FUDGE WITH PEANUT BUTTER

4 c. sugar
1 can (14½ oz.) evaporated milk
1 c. butter or oleo
2 pkg. (6 oz. each, or a 12 oz.) semisweet chocolate bits
1 pt. marshmallow cream
1 tsp. vanilla
1 c. nut meats, optional

Cook sugar, milk and butter to soft-ball stage, 236 degrees, stirring often. Remove from heat, add chocolate, marshmallow, vanilla and nuts. Beat till chocolate is melted. Pour into buttered 13 x 9 x 2" pan. (½ c. peanut butter can be added with chocolate to ½ of mix, if you wish.)

Jan's husband, Lennie, built the dream bar she designed where children (of all ages) can go absolutely wild when it comes to making their own sundaes. The formica counter next to the penny candy display has wells similar to those on our stoves, only each is filled with a different topping: fudge or caramel sauce, jimmies, nuts, sprinkles and more — all that gorgeous stuff. The store is the mecca for the younger set where birthday guests or scout groups can create wondrous dishes, or choose "surprise cones," to be devoured at the small table, once Jan's when she was a little girl. This recipe of Jan's makes 60 small

CHOCOLATE BALLS

¾ c. peanut butter
1 c. each chopped nuts, chopped dates, confectioner's sugar and coconut.
1 egg, slightly beaten

Melt 6 oz. chocolate bits in pan of hot water. Do not let water boil. Dip the balls in melted chocolate.

With Halloween in the offing, we all have a wonderful excuse for having a few "treats" on hand which we naturally have to sample to make certain our little hobgoblins approve. Jan tells us how to make a small batch of fudge called

2½ c. brown sugar
Dash of salt
1 T. light corn syrup
1 T. butter or oleo
¾ c. milk
1 tsp. vanilla
½ c. chopped nuts if desired

Combine first five ingredients, stirring till sugar dissolves, to soft-ball stage (236 degress). Cool at room temperature without stirring till 110 degrees. Add vanilla. Beat until mixture holds its shape.

Halloween treats are even featured in the new format of "Gourmet" magazine. Always lovely to look at, it often seemed to me that you needed a full-time cook to prepare most of their recipes, but the new publishers are offering recipes that are less time-consuming and a little more plebian. In the October issue are such down-to-earth recipes as those for brownies, ground meats and even Halloween treats such as these

CHOCOLATE PEANUT RAISIN BARK

1 pound semisweet chocolate, chopped
1½ c. raisins
1½ c. roasted salted peanuts.

In a heavy saucepan melt the chocolate over low heat, stirring constantly, pour half of it into a jelly-roll pan lined with buttered wax paper and spread it in an even layer. Sprinkle the chocolate with the raisins and the peanuts, drizzle the mixture with remaining chocolate and spread the chocolate evenly over the top. Let the confection cool, chill it, covered, for three hours, or until it is hard and break it into pieces. Makes about 1½ pounds of candy.

Ellsworth to Bar Harbor, a lifeline to survival

By Lois Martin

We could see it from Anitra's cupola.

That was about 4 o'clock in the afternoon, Oct. 23, 1948, my mother's birthday.

Anitra's house was a large one. The cupola on top was big enough to be the holding ground for our dolls and play gear. It was not a place from which two 11-year-olds expected to see Bar Harbor burning 26 miles away as it threatened to destroy Acadia National Park, Mount Desert Island in its path.

Bar Harbor is famous. Ellsworth is not. Acadia National Park on that island is the attraction for thousands of tourists. We always had a rivalry between us. We in Ellsworth claimed that Bar Harbor kids suffered all winter from left over summer snobbery. They swam with Rockefellers and the rich while we remained the down-to-earth Shiretown of the county. We said Bar Harbor would have been nothing without us, 'cause you couldn't get there except through us.

But that changed when the flames from that burning town made the sky red in Ellsworth. And getting there from here became a lifeline for survival from the holocaust.

Within a matter of hours the purpose of our existence turned to harbor, protect and keep safe the lives of those residents who fled to our town.

We youngsters went to bed knowing about the fire, enlivened by the emergency. But we woke up to chip in on it.

In my parents bedroom the next morning were two strangers. Downstairs there were more. Everybody's house was filled with frightened grateful people.

Every organization had swung into action throughout the night and by 7 a.m. every high school student, every Girl Scout, every adult had a duty.

The Masonic Lodge was one of the main evacuation centers. My sister and I went there to help serve food, take care of babies, do whatever. My brother was broadcasting something or other in coordination with where people were assigned to go, what transportation was available.

And the smoke to our southeast rose higher and higher as the air got its drift of soot.

We fought the fire for those who had reason to fear it most. They, our guests in crisis had no idea whether their homes had burned or not. The island was evacuated in a steady stream from that road used before for routine business or that high-falootin' tourism. Now their cause was our concern.

For three days we worked day and night, cooking, serving, caring, rounding up towels, blankets, and diapers and another batch of brownies, sometimes baked by mere Brownies.

The end of the third day was a turning point. The fire was being quelled. The wind was not the bad guy that could make the difference. The island would be saved though millions of dollars worth of homes were lost. Marvelous buildings had burned, even dolls like those Anitra and I had in the cupola, owned by little girls in Bar Harbor, were lost in the conflagration.

On the morning of the fourth day, my sister and I woke up sick, too much overtime for firefighters who were only Girl Scouts.

Cleanup began on the island and at the Masonic Lodge while Marilyn and I had gentle dropped eggs on toast.

My mother's birthday observation was an unforgettable one since she shared it with people we hadn't known before then.

And after that kinship in October, 1948, the rivalry was never quite the same. We didn't go around saying Bar Harbor would be nothing if you couldn't get to it. Our egos had been bolstered because it wasn't the rich summer people who bailed them out. It was Ellsworth.

I have never heard the word cupola since without thinking of that bright red smoke filled sky when Bar Harbor and Ellsworth found a warm appreciation for one another because of a crisis.

The island is beautiful, it really is. But your still gotta go through Ellsworth to get there.

Musings

By John Cutler

☐ No man is a hero to his wallet.

☐ A bank is an institution where you can borrow money if you can prove you don't need it.

☐ The opposite of a correct statement is a false statement. But the opposite of a profound truth may well be another profound truth. Niels Bohr said it.

☐ When Frederick the Great was on his death bed, it was suggested that he forgive all his enemies. Turning to the Queen, he said weakly, "Dorothy, write to your brother that I forgive him all the evil he has done me; but wait until I am dead first."

☐ Scientists at the University of California believe the sun may have a companion star that passes so close to the Earth every 28 million years that it could destroy all life on this planet. Don't worry. The death star isn't due until 15 million A.D.

☐ With the passing of a vain and pompous Illinois politician, Lincoln was asked by a reporter for a statement. "I understand," said the President, "his funeral was largely attended. To that I say, had he known how big a funeral he would have, it is my feeling he would have died years ago."

☐ Barbara Seuling wrote a little book titled You Can't Eat Peanuts in Church and Other Little Known Laws. A few examples:

☐ You are permitted to swim on dry land in Santa Ana, CA.

☐ North Dakota railroad engineers may not take their trains home with them at night unless they carry a full crew.

☐ In Gary, IN, it is illegal to attend the theater within four hours of eating garlic.

☐ In Atlanta, GA, smelly persons are not allowed on streetcars.

☐ According to the Boston health laws, "a lodger shall not be lodged for more than 7 consecutive nights unless he shall have taken a shower or bath."

☐ Neatest trick! A St. Louis woman, born 20 years earlier on Feb. 29, gave birth to a daughter on Feb. 29, 1944. The Globe-Democrat carried the following headline in the early edition: WOMAN BORN FEB. 29 HAS BABY SAME DAY.

☐ Why don't restaurants retaliate by putting in a line of drugs and toilet articles?

Citizen group against agency

"Mass Bank," she said, "is a way to get more money during a period of tax revolt without directly admitting to raising taxes."

Anderson went on to criticize the trend toward establishing independent authorities free of direct government control. In the case of Mass Bank, the governor would appoint directors for staggered terms and the agency would be audited by the state. It would not, however, be subject to any legislative scrutiny.

Governor Dukakis' reasoning, contends Anderson, is that creating an independent agency will rescue these kinds of projects from the clutches of capricious pork barrel legislation.

Anderson predicts that free of legislative reigns, the authority would preside over uncontrolled spending designed to win the governor votes and friends. Furthermore, she said, removing legislative input further erodes the public's power while setting a dangerous precedent for government centralization. "Is this an admission that state government is a failure?" she asked.

The highly partisan gathering gave Anderson's remarks an enthusiastic reception. Anderson took the opportunity to credit Mary Jeanette Murray, state representative for Cohasset, Hull and Scituate, with aiding the passage of Proposition 2½. "Now that the Prop. 2½ doomsday prophecies have been proven wrong, it should be easier for us to get support on other tax limitation issues," Anderson concluded.

Mrs. Murray added her opposition to MassBank, saying that "It creates another bureacracy over which the legislature has no control. This takes the power away from the people."

Science Center schedule

For children, ages 4 and 5, at the South Shore Natural Science Center, Norwell, on Thursdays, Nov. 1, 8 and 15 from 9:30-11:30 a.m., find out "who left the nut shells on the stone wall?" How can so many berries disappear from the bushes? Does that fat chimpmunk know some of the answers? Children will have an exciting time finding out with Instructor, Dorothy Marshall, how that sassy chimpmunk and other furry families get ready for winter. Did you know some even change the color of their fur coats? Fee for all three sessions: $20 members; $25 non-members. Pre-paid registration required. For further information, call 659-2559.

Trip back

If you are age 9 to 14, you can take a trip back in history at the South Shore Natural Science Center, Norwell, on Saturdays, Nov. 3, 10 and 17 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. How did the early American survive before and after the colonists arrived? How were stones used by these early people? Become a junior archeologist for these three Saturdays and research the lives of these early inhabitants of New England. Learn how to identify artifacts and visit an actual dig site. Archaeologist, Mary Johnson, instructor. Fee: $16 members; $20 non-members. Pre-paid registration required. For further information, call 659-2259.

Parents and tots

Popular program, Parents & Tots, continues at the South Shore Natural Science Center, Norwell, on Tuesday and Friday mornings from 10 to 11:15 a.m. Naturalist and teacher, Barbara Devine, helps parent and child share a sense of wonder by exploring woods, ponds and field. Learn to open your eyes and share the excitment of natural discoveries with a child. Session III, Tuesdays, Oct. 23, 30 and Nov. 6; Fridays, Oct. 26, Nov. 2, and 9. Session IV: Tuesdays, Nov. 13, 20 and 27; Fridays, Nov. 16, 23 and 30.

SEMI-IMPOVERISHED newspaper person is looking for furniture to redo a postage stamp size living room. The old couch has just become the latest casualty between myself, my wife and Graything (my neurotic couch killing cat). I'm looking for a reasonably priced bit of furniture that will not clash with our early American Orange Crate decor. Money is tight, so be gentle, Folks. Here is your chance to get rid of that unwanted couch while making my wife happy and, perhaps, even saving the life of my cat. Call in the evenings after 6 p.m., 585-5427. (TFN)

DELIGHT YOUR TASTE BUDS with my delicious and original recipes. A versatile salad dressing, simple yet superb appetizers, delicate and hearty main dishes, plus a bevy of fabulous desserts, including old fashioned Plum Cake and a luscius strawberry sauced cheese pie. 10 recipes in all. Mail $3 to E. Waring, Box BE, Mariner Newspapers, P.O. Box 682, Marshfield, MA 02050. (TFN)

If you can remember what happened in 1972, you know a lot has changed since then.

1984. Lew Crampton is running

Lew Crampton has spent twenty years working for change. In the 1960's, he was helping to organize people to get better housing. Ten years later he was the Commissioner of the Department of Community Affairs where he was in charge of building low-income housing. Most recently Lew Crampton was working at the Environmental Protection Agency and helping figure out what the federal government should be doing to clean-up the environment.

Over the years Lew Crampton has seen America change.

The truth is what worked twenty years ago doesn't always work now. That's why Lew Crampton's approach to government has also changed over those years. In the activist 1960's, Lew was a community organizer. Now, in the 1980's, Lew Crampton has found that sitting down and talking makes more sense than standing up and yelling about problems. But, one thing that hasn't changed for Lew Crampton is his commitment to getting the most out of government for you. Without taking most of your paycheck in taxes.

Since 1983 things have also changed for Congressman Studds. Voters in the 10th District are asking a simple question these days: Can Gerry Studds still be an effective voice for them in Congress?

Lew Crampton thinks there is a simple answer: No.

Gerry Studds isn't the Congressman he once was. Part of his reduced effectiveness certainly comes from the censure. But, even more important than that, is the fact that Gerry Studds has cut himself off from the administration and other people who can help get things done for the district. Gerry Studds is so busy criticizing the President that he isn't able to develop the contacts with the Republican administration needed to really be effective. Lew Crampton, who was a member of the Reagan administration, not only thinks the President is doing a good enough job to be re-elected, but knows that the administration will be listening to him.

The passing years have left Gerry Studds out-of-step with the times.

He still thinks that the best way to solve our problems is to bring more government into our lives. That might have made sense twelve years ago when Congressman Studds first went to Washington, but it just doesn't work today. And, with more government comes more taxes. Gerry Studds still thinks that the only good tax is a bigger tax. That's why last April he voted for a 181 billion dollar increase in your taxes. (Even more than Walter Mondale wants to take from you!)

Gerry Studds' idea of economic development is to spend millions of tax dollars on make-work programs that don't work. That's why he voted for almost every multi-billion dollar CETA and public jobs bill that has come before the Congress. And, that's why he's against the President's Economic Recovery Program that utilizes business—not your tax dollars—to create real jobs that last.

Lew Crampton and Gerry Studds. There's a real difference.

Both Gerry Studds and Lew Crampton believe that government should work for people. But, the difference between them is in their approach to government. Gerry thinks throwing money into new public bureaucracies is the best way to deal with our problems.

"I've served in the private sector and in state and federal agencies. I've learned that sitting down and talking about a problem makes more sense than standing up and yelling about it."

"President Reagan's economic policies are working. This is the first administration in over twenty years to have brought down both inflation and unemployment."

"One thing that I've learned during my career is that government exists only to meet the needs of the people. When politicians forget that, they're not doing their job."

for Congress in the 10th District.

Lew Crampton knows better.

During his years in public life, Lew Crampton learned that good intentions aren't always enough to make up for the waste that's built into big federal programs. One of Congressman Studds' favorite programs, CETA, was supposed to train workers for productive jobs. All it succeeded in training them for was more unemployment. And, only 18¢ out of every tax dollar spent on CETA ended up in the pockets of the trainees. The rest of the money went down the drain.

Lew Crampton wants to balance the budget. So does Gerry Studds. The difference is in their approach.

To cut the deficit, Congressman Studds wants to raise taxes by $181 billion and slash the defense budget below what we need to insure national security. Lew Crampton has a better idea. He will cut some defense spending, but still keep America protected. He will get rid of some expensive programs like synfuels research and many agricultural subsidies. He wants a separate capital outlay budget and a line-item veto for the President, so he can cut the fat out of programs without cutting the whole program. Lew Crampton will work for tax reform to make the system fairer, and he'll apply growth revenues from the revitalized economy to cut the deficit.

We don't need new taxes to balance the budget. Just good, solid management and Lew Crampton in Congress.

The years have also threatened our environment. Our shorelines and ocean have been protected, but as we look to the future new problems face us. Hazardous wastes, unsafe drinking water and acid rain are the challenges of the 1980's. The kind of challenges Lew Crampton is prepared to meet.

Lew Crampton spent four years at the EPA in Washington. He knows what programs are available to help clean up the environment, and he knows how to make them work for us. He was instrumental in having a health study done on PCB-contaminated New Bedford Harbor. Lew Crampton got that in the budget. Gerry Studds didn't. And as Congressman, Lew Crampton will be able to make the EPA and the administration in Washington pay attention to New Bedford's PCB problem—and to other environmental problems in the district.

Lew Crampton is looking to the future. He knows that meeting tomorrow's challenges will take a new kind of leadership, the kind of leadership that Lew Crampton has demonstrated over the years.

It's 1984. It's time for a change.

"It takes a lot of experience to be a good Congressman. Raising a family could be the best experience I could have for the job."

"I want to go to Congress because we need to bring a new approach to solving our problems. What worked ten or twenty years ago just doesn't work today."

The Boston Herald

The Tenth Congressional District needs to be represented by a man of honor, a man with a sense of duty to the office he holds and to the people whose needs he must serve. The Tenth District needs a man like Lewis Crampton.

The bottom line in the Tenth District is that Lew Crampton will stand with the president, supporting his programs and his efforts to keep our economy moving. Gerry Studds won't; Lew Crampton will be a credit not merely to his party, but to the district he represents. Lew Crampton will restore a sense of honor and decency to the office. For all of those reasons the Boston Herald endorses the candidacy of Lewis Crampton. The Boston Herald–September 27, 1984

The Enterprise

His Republican challenger, Mr. Crampton, is an able man with political experience and experience in public service, on Beacon Hill and in Washington. His will be the most serious challenge that Mr. Studds has faced. The Enterprise (Falmouth)–September 21, 1984

The Boston Globe

Crampton, 45, brought up in Duxbury and Cohasset and now a Plymouth resident, seems equipped to cut Studds among moderate-liberal Republicans and Independents who in the past have responded to the congressman's Groton-Yale social graces.

In Washington recently as one of Administrator William Ruckelshaus's lieutenants at the Environmental Protection Agency, he is knowledgeable on one of the issues most crucial to the district. Other credentials include a stint as commissioner of community affairs under former Gov. Francis W. Sargent and a vigorous run against the invulnerable State Treasurer and lottery magnate Robert Q. Crane.

Neighbors against Sohier Street developments

Car dealer reviewed

As neighbors who attended Tuesday night's Conservation Commission meeting testified, the whole town seems to be against a proposed car dealership on Sohier Street.

About 40 people jammed the commission's hearing to express their disapproval with the plans to locate a Ford car dealership near the corner of Sohier Street and Route 3A. The location would be across the street from the commercial development proposed by Donald Staszko.

Atty. Michael Sullivan of Scituate represented Joseph Abba-Ezzi, who proposes to construct the new car sales facility beside the Mobil gas station on Sohier Street. But Fairoaks Lane residents have hired attorneys, and will present petitions requesting denial of the car dealership plans.

What the Conservation Commission is concerned with in this plan,is how an area which will be filled for pavement and construction of the building, will be simulated elsewhere on the property. That wetlands runs off into Sanctuary Pond and eventually into the town wells around James Brook. Any pollutants within the simulated ponding area will end in the town water supply area.

Because of the need to construct this simulated ponding area, engineers from Perkins Engineering have altered the entire site plan. The facility itself has been scaled down, with the number of parking spaces limited to 119.

After talking with the engineer representing Abba-Ezzi, the commission decided more calculations were needed. The hearing was continued until Nov. 20.

As commission member Robert Mackie explained, it is the responsibility of the proponent to convince the town that the town's water supply will not be negatively effected, and that the Fairoaks Lane residents will not experience any flooding because of the construction. The commission also wants the engineer to delineate precisely where the wetlands are located on the property.

According to Atty. Sullivan, this scaled-down version of the facility is the most drastic cut the owner may take. Anything smaller than the building proposed before the Conservation Commission would not meet Ford Co. regulations, and would not be economically feasible for the owner.

It was a stipulation of the commission last month that the engineer devise a method to simulate a ponding area, similar to the wetlands they would be filling for the construction of the facility. The problem with simulating the wetlands is replacing the natural vegetation which filters pollutants from the ground into the water. Commission members were not satisfied that the proponent planned to seed new grass there. It would take several years to replace the vegetation currently there. Reconstruction of the same vegatation would have to be completed immediately, they warned.

Although the commission was previously concerned with possible drainage runoff from the Staszko development, the Perkins Engineering representative argued that their calculations far surpassed any figures made by Staszko's engineers, and they would be capable of handling any runoff.

According to the revised plans, 1.73 acres of the Shopping plaza

By Lisa J. Messersmith

It will take more than an argument for free enterprise to convince several Cohasset residents that the proposed Cohasset Plaza shopping complex will be a welcome and beneficial addition to their town.

Developer Donald Staszko, represented by Atty. Charles Humphrey and Engineer Bruce Wait, met with the Planning Board Wednesday, Oct. 24 "to file additional information and hear public comment" at an open hearing.

Because the plaza is intended to be built on a large wetland area at the corner of 3A and Sohier Street, the Conservation Commission had previously approved the site plan under certain conditions. The DEQE, however, denied a superceding order which would have allowed site work to begin pending approval from the Planning Board.

One of the major points of contention at the open hearing was the need for an entrance/exit at the plaza from Sohier Street. Bill Good of Fair Oaks Lane stated that he was "wildly opposed to an entrance on Sohier Street." Sohier Street, he said, "could not handle the traffic."

An estimated 5000 cars are supposed to visit the proposed plaza daily. Al Moore, also of Fair Oaks Lane, described the current traffic problems at the intersection of Sohier and 3A as "terrible" and that "any additional traffic without a traffic light is asking for disaster."

According to several residents, an increase in traffic along Sohier Street posed a serious safety threat. John

Cohasset has caught high school soccer fever

By Jane Lane

In the words of Coach Jon Anderson, this week's game against Norwell was a heartbreaker. But beneath the disappointment is the knowledge that the boys of the Cohasset High School soccer team deserved better.

Individually and collectively, Anderson feels this is the best soccer team he has coached in his four years at Cohasset. They are a strong team, deserving of a title and eager to claim it.

As of Wednesday, before their final match against Sandwich, Cohasset had a chance at tying for first place in the small schools division of the South Shore League. They had previously qualified for the state championship tournament.

They bring with them talent, ability, spirit and a lot of fans who had never before witnessed a soccer game. People who have no idea what players are performing what duties, or how many players are on a team, suddenly appear at Cohasset soccer matches.

At a recent game against Scituate, about 400 spectators watched along the sidelines as Cohasset claimed victory. This town has caught soccer fever.

And no one is more pleased than Coach Anderson. He is an avid soccer fan, and a believer in the ability and drive of this year's team.

One reason, Anderson said, for this year's 11-5 record, is a fundamental principle beneath any decent relationship - the kids communicate with each other.

"These kids have played soccer on the same teams after school and in other leagues for many years. They know each other very well and are good friends. They talk constantly on the field - they anticipate each other's moves. That's a big part of their success," he says.

The other segment of their success is due in no small way to their athletic talents. Soccer is a very intense, fast-paced game. And soccer players come in all shapes and sizes. One not need be large or tall to play this game. But, Anderson explains that soccer players are among the best conditioned athletes in the world.

Just one look at the game quickly explains why. These kids are constantly running up and down the entire length of a football field. Manuevering with the deftness of a swift deer on the run, a soccer player leads the ball along the ground. Heads smash against the ball for an aerial ascent to a teammate. No hands are used in this game - all movements are made by the feet or by the head.

Anderson describes this group as "sophisticated." Hardly a term frequently used to label a bunch of athletes. What the coach means is that this team of 24 athletes have played together for years, meshed into a unit that can predict each other's moves and sense each other's needs.

In the aftermath of Monday afternoon's loss to Norwell, Anderson grieved for the probable loss of the division title. But as quickly as he described the loss, he interjects, "I have never seen us play such a tremendous game and lose." As is sometimes the case in games of chance, Cohasset lost 2-1 despite their overwhelming efforts during the second half. They were untouchable, Anderson said. The loss came quickly in the first quarter when Norwell scored two goals. Cohasset was unpenetrable the remainder of the game. But according to the coach, the Norwell goalie was unflapable, allowing only one Cohasset shot through the net. In the first half alone, he added, Cohasset outshot Norwell 30-1. That's a difficult statistic to comprehend in a loss.

Whatever the outcome of the division standings or the state tournament, Cohasset has witnessed this year an expanding resurgence in this sport. Children are now active participants in youth leagues. The high school boys are playing year-round and in summer camps and competitions.

Soccer fever has not been limited to the male gender. The girls varsity high school team has also achieved tournament status.

And some other girls have helped out with the varsity team, lending their cheering talents in the cause of victory. Team manager Staci Stobart herself new to Canines inquire 'what's a kennel?'

When does ownership of a group of dogs constitute a kennel? This probing question and more, will be answered soon by Town Counsel as he tries to unravel another Cohasset puzzle without use of the word litigation.

This most recent legal mystery began late September when three Beechwood Street neighbors complained about another neighbor operating a kennel without proper authority.

Doesn't a resident residing in a residential neighborhood need a special permit to keep a kennel? they inquired of selectmen.

Let's see, they determined.

Building Inspector Edward Poskus said according to the Zoning Bylaws, a kennel owner needs a license to operate such a facility in a residential zone. In a Highway Business and Light Industry Zone, no. Residential, yes. This Beechwood resident must go before the Zoning Board of Appeals for a special permit, he wrote in a letter to Town Counsel.

According to Town Clerk Frances Marks, the town has always given kennel licenses to anyone requesting them, as long as the county has supplied them to her. In fact, 12 people in town are now the proud owners of kennel licenses, some holding ten or more dogs on their property.

And as far as she know, the only operator to obtain a special permit is the owner of Casey's Kennels. As usual, no one questioned the method of obtaining a license until a complaint was made.

Although this issue has been forwarded to Town Counsel Richard Henderson for his input, Town Clerk Marks said no move can be made until April. These licenses will not expire until then, she explained, and are legally binding until that expiration date.

After Henderson submits his legal opinion, Marks said she will have in writing a legal reason for approving or denying a request for kennel licenses. Currently there is no basis for her to reject someone's request.

Cohasset's week . . .

Ambulance purchased

Monday night, selectmen approved the purchase of a new ambulance for the Fire Department at a total cost of $46,990. It is expected that Wheeled Coaches of New England in Natick will have the vehicle delivered to Cohasset within 45-60 days.

Although the basic net cost of the vehicle, including trade-in on the current 1976 ambulance was $43,740, selectmen added a few options to the bid award. After Fire Capt. Mark Trask talked with EMT Capt. James Gurry, it was decided that the specific options could be utilized later if the EMT's are trained in advanced life support techniques. That is an alternative currently being explored by the Emergency Medical Services Advisory Committee.

The options that will be included in the Class I Type I walk-through emergency medical vehicle include a 1000 watt inverter, a D200 power commander, a laerdal portable suction unit and a battery charger and conditioner. The total cost of the vehicle with the options totaled $46,990.

Special town meeting in June appropriated $50,000 for the purchase of a new ambulance.

Voting hours

The hours for next week's election will be from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. Nov. 6 at Town Hall. The hours were incorrectly reported in last week's Mariner. Voting will take place during these hours in the Town Hall auditorium.

Non payment on pipes

According to a letter written by Sewer Commission Chairman Charles DeSantis, Geneva Construction has refused to pay the $750 it cost to televise a Margin Street sewer line, nor the repayment costs. DeSantis suggested to Water Supt. Ben Curley that since the sewer line crack and repairs were made because of work done by Geneva, that the company be forced to pay the bill.

DeSantis stated that the construction company suggested the town file an insurance claim. The commission chairman rejected that offer by noting it will be "a lengthy procedure and will result in the disturbance of a newly paved road with its added expense and nuisance to residents."

DeSantis forwarded an invoice for the repairs to Curley with the understanding that the superintendent "withhold sufficient payment to Geneva in order to pay for this."

He added, "I sense a less than cooperative attitude from this firm, and ask that you express for all taxpayers of this town our displeasure with their refusal to respect their obligations."

Flats remain closed

Notice has been received from the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) that they extended the Prohibited classification in the town of Cohasset for an additional thirty days.

Therefore, pursuant to M.G.L. Chapter 130, Section 74A, the below defined area is closed to the harvest of shellfish for human consumption: "The waters and flats and all tributaries therein of Cohasset Harbor, southwest of a line drawn across the breakwater."

Committee resignation

Selectmen accepted the resignation of J. Arnold Nickerson from the cable advisory committee. Although the committee has received communication from residents interested in serving on the committee, no names have yet been forwarded to selectmen for their approval.

Selectmen were also advised this week that there is still one vacancy on the Government Structure Study Committee. Anyone interested in serving on either of the two committees should contact selectmen's office.

Health advisory committee

Selectmen are still seeking town employees to serve on the health insurance advisory committee. Town employees notified selectmen of the need to further study insurance needs and available programs for the employees. The idea of forming the committee came as a result of that request, but no employees have yet to volunteer.

Selectmen have until March to award a bid for a new insurance program. Any town or school employee interested in serving on the advisory committee should contact the selectmen's office.

Looking for good stuff cheap?

If you want to find a real treasure for that extra special someone this Christmas, the Cohasset School System may have the answer.

The Deer Hill School cellar is presently the site of some fantastic bargains for the early Christmas shopper.

According to Supt. Eugene Crowell, who would love to get this junk, umm, we mean, antiques, off his hands, most everything will sell for $2. "Take it, it's yours," is the slogan for this sale.

Chairs, desks and old cafeteria tables, just perfect for that nouveau lunchroom look in your home, are at the Dear Hill School. Actually, all this excess furniture is in very useable condition, Crowell said, and many may be refinished to perfection.

There is also an operable, but deteriorating bus for sale. This is not at the Deer Hill School cellar. Sale price for this 65-passenger vehicle is $100.

In addition to the furniture, there are about 25 brass fire extinguishers which may be fashioned into lamps, plant stands or piano seats for very thin pianists.

Landfill Supervisor Joseph Laugelle also has some of the excess school supplies set in a special area at the landfill.

Anyone interested in viewing these artifacts, may ask Deer Hill Principal Ken Ekberg or the school custodian for a tour. All checks for the items must be made payable to the Town of Cohasset.

Selectmen want town hall painted

Like several other town boards, the Cohasset Board of Selectmen expressed its concern Monday, Oct. 22, about the condition of the Bates building and the Town Hall. Members of the board agreed to rescind the Bates building sandblasting bid awarded to MX, Inc. Mary Jane McArthur stated, "I'm concerned because the wood on the building is in such bad shape." "I think we will create more problems," she added, if the sandblasting is done.

Acting chairman Frank England motioned that the building instead be scraped and painted. All board members agreed and decided to open up bids in late January for this work to be done on the building.

The Selectmen turned next to the condition of the Town Hall which in Rocco Laugelle's words, "is a disgrace. It should be painted within two weeks." Acting chairman Frank England added that he would like the interior of the building to be painted "immediately, but not during election time" when the hall is used for voting purposes. Laugelle suggested that "this fine place should be cleaned up a bit." He questioned the purpose of the wires overhanging the auditorium, and member Mary Jane McArthur wants to "get rid of the tacky signs" hanging up on the walls.

The Selectmen decided to contact the contracted painters to set an agreed time for the work to begin. They will also take the old red drapes currently hanging in the hall to a professional cleaners to determine if they are salvagable.

In other business, the Board of Selectmen agreed with the Board of Health to elect Dr. C. Michael Bliss as acting Municipal Coordinator to the Right-to-Know Law.

The South Shore Arts Center was granted a liquor license by the Selectmen for Friday, Oct. 26 between 5:30 and 9:30 p.m. The proceeds from the fundraiser will go to a scholarship for the arts.

The Selectmen also granted a permit to Boy Scout Troop 28 to sell coffee, doughnuts, cold drinks and sandwiches at the Town Hall on election day between 7 a.m. and 8 p.m. The troop will set up their stand outside the common. In case of inclement weather, the refreshments will be sold in the foyer of the Town Hall.

Moratorium discussed

The Planning Board discussed the moratorium issue in relation to their review of site plans. Chairman Chris Bassett stated, "We have to handle the site plans as if there is no moratorium." However, approval of any project in the Lily Pond and Aaron River Watershed areas is subject to approval of septic systems by the Board of Health. Under its authority, the Board of Health may bar the construction of septic systems within the watershed area and within 1000 feet of any town well.

Suspects depicted in Hingham robbery

By Judy Gilman

Hingham police have released a composite sketch of a person seen Saturday near the home of a Cohasset family whose family members were tied up and beaten Saturday night in a bizarre incident that may have been a kidnap attempt gone wrong.

Det. Lt. Edmond Burgess said Tuesday the suspect, about 5'10", between 19 and 25 and with sandy hair, was seen both in the morning and the afternoon in the vicinity of the Cirones' 278 East St. home.

For the family of Jerry and Antoinette Cirone, the owners of Cohasset Jewelers, the night of terror began shortly before 7 p.m. Saturday night. A family party was planned and though everyone, mother, father, and son Mark and daughter Debora were in the house, all except Antoinette left the house to do a variety of last-minute errands.

Antoinette was on the ground floor of the house in the playroom when she was confronted by an intruder with a stocking mask and a double-barreled sawed-off shotgun. Later neither she nor Jerry recalled whether the downstairs door had been left open. He had built a fire in the fireplace and the room had become somewhat smoky, so he'd left the door open for awhile.

With the intruder threatening her, Antoinette told the family dog, a German shepherd trained to attack, to go after the gunmen. But he merely kicked the dog aside and told her he'd kill the dog if he wasn't called off. So Antoinette called off the dog. The gunmen then hit her in the eye with the butt of the shotgun and tied her hands and feet. She told him she had to have her medicine, upstairs in her purse. The second masked gunman then got the pocketbook, gave her her medicine, and stuffed her in a closet.

Mrs. Cirone described the two intruders as being between 19 and 25, one very mean and one younger, very nervous and polite. The younger one made sure the masking tape put over her mouth still allowed her to breathe, she told police.

But she pretended to faint, and, when the men went upstairs when they heard her son Donald come home, she managed to get herself untied and ran next door to her mother's house to call the police.

Donald was the next one into the house, stopping by only briefly to drop off a set of car keys and planning to return to the party later. He realized something was amiss when he found a seldom-used deadbolt lock was locked. On coming into the house, he found the phone off the hook and no one answering his calls. Suddenly a gunman ran up the stairs from the playroom below and ordered him to lie down. Donald thought it was a Halloween joke at first, and brushed the gun away. The second intruder then joined the first and kicked Donald in the groin three times, slammed him down on the tiled floor of the kitchen and then tied him up and dragged him into another room.

Donald later told police he could hear a walkie-talkie between the two gunmen in the house and a third one apparently waiting outside nearby in a vehicle.

Donald's wife Donna was waiting for him outside in her car. When he didn't reappear in a few minutes, she went into the house where she was grabbed from behind, thrown across the kitchen smashing into the sink, and then tied up and taken downstairs and stuffed in another closet.

At this point the gunmen realized that the elder Mrs. Cirone had escaped, but they also heard someone else coming in upstairs. It was daughter Debora returning home from an errand at the grocery store, and when she was confronted with the two gunmen, she turned and ran out of the house and down East Street. The gunmen pursued her for a few steps, seemed to hesitate over taking her car, which had been left running, and then took the keys, grabbed her purse and vanished.

By this time, just about 7 p.m., Hingham Officer James Taylor and Cohasset Officer Richard Yokum were first on the scene at the house. Although Donald was only semi-conscious, they could hear Donna yelling from the closet where she had been put downstairs.

The officers, together with Sgt. Paul Cadigan, went down into the playroom armed with shotguns. "We weren't sure whether the gunmen were holding them hostage down there or what the situation was," Cadigan said Sunday night. But the gunmen had already fled the scene, perhaps tipped off by a police scanner the driver outside the house had.

The first officers on the scene were joined by Dets. Taylor Mills and Gerald McInnis, who photographed the scene and took fingerprints, Officer Joseph Mayer, two canine officers from the Plymouth County Sheriff's Office, and State Police troopers from C-PAK. Hingham Police Chief Joachim-Ingo Borowski was also on the scene.

The officers set up a road block in the vicinity of the house.

The family members interviewed said their assailants were between 18 and 25, one blond, one dark-haired, each about 5'10". There was no description of the driver of the getaway vehicle.

After questioning neighbors, police made the above Indentik sketch of a man who was seen near the house early Saturday morning. He was seen in the company of another man of similar build. The man sketched had very curly sandy hair. The other had dark hair. Both were said to be about 20. They were believed to be driving a Ford pick up truck with the sides dented.

After talking at length with Jerry Cirone, there may have been a fourth person involved, a large man with curly hair who seemed to be waiting outside the Cohasset jewelry store when the elder Cirone closed up for the night. Police speculate he might have been the fourth lookout man on the job, and if a kidnap had taken place, he would have been in position to warn the coming vehicle if any police were in the area. Burgess said Tuesday the men might have planned on taking the elder Cirone back to the store and forcing him to open the vault while holding other family members hostage.

Sunday a search was conducted of the area, turning up three nylon masks made from women's knee-high pantyhose and a kitchen knife, the one allegedly used to threaten Antoinette Cirone. The contents of Debora Cirone's pocketbook were found in the woods by the parking lot just below Glastonbury Abbey Sunday morning after Mass, leading Burgess to suspect the gunmen paused in their vehicle in that parking lot before making their escape.

Cohasset school sports schedule

By Lisa Shumaker

Varsity Girls' Field Hockey

The girls opened their week with a victory over Scituate, 1 - 0. Assisted by Maria Cahill, Vicki Spooner scored Cohasset's lone goal to win the game. The whole team looked confident and controlled the entire game.

Wednesday, the Skippers traveled to Hull and tied the Pirates, 0 - 0. Hull was very aggressive on offense, but Cohasset's defense held them off. Lee Sullivan, and Cindy Spooner, had strong games. Jill Shockman played her best game yet this season and stopped all of Hull's attempts to score.

Friday, Cohasset played tremendously and tied a tough Sandwich team, 1 - 1. Cohasset's hustle and determination kept the two teams even. Although the Skippers didn't win, this game was definitely an upset in Cohasset's eyes.

Maria Cahill and Lee Sullivan both played superbly for the Skippers. Maureen had an excellent game and scored off of passes from Vicki Spooner and Cindy Spooner who both played well also. However, the key to the Skipper's success was Kara MacDonald's outstanding job of shutting down Sandwich's strongest player.

Monday, Cohasset clinched a spot in the State Tournament by defeating Norwell 2 to 1. By being unselfish and passing the ball very well, the Skippers offense played as a team. Maureen Farren scored both of Cohasset's goals, assisted first by Lee Sullivan and second by Cindy Spooner. Both Anne O'Leary and Maria Cahill had good games for Cohasset.

The Skippers will take on Duxbury Tuesday, and Hanover, Friday. Both of these teams are very good and will be a challenge for Cohasset. Come cheer Cohasset's first state tournament field hockey team to victory!

Varsity Girls' Soccer

Tuesday, Sarah Seavey scored off a beautiful pass from Tara Stanford with three minutes left in the game to give Cohasset a victory over Whitman/Hanson, 1 -0. The Skippers played better overall and controlled the entire game.

Caroline Lord, Joanie Chisolm, Amy Duncombe and Any Donovan all had a good game. Goalie, Tracy Fitzpatrick picked up her sixth shutout of the season.

Cohasset continued their winning streak by defeating Holbrook, 5 - 2. The Skippers outshot their opponents by a margin of 21 to 10. Janet DiGirolamo scored Cohasset's first goal off a pass from Amy Donovan. Janet then went on to score again, unassisted. Sarah Seavey had Cohasset's next three goals, assisted by Caitlin Staunton, Janet DiGirolamo and Amy Duncombe. Chris Pompeo, Kristin O'Brien, Kerry O'Brien, and Janet Bagley were very impressive.

Tuesday, the girls will take on Abington and battle it our for third place. Thursday, Cohasset will travel to Scituate and attempt to beat the Sailors.

Boys' Varsity Soccer

Tuesday, Cohasset traveled to Randolph and won, 6 - 2. Randolph scored first, however, the Skippers rallied to score six goals. David MacDonald, Mark Crough, Mason Sandell, Mike deSantis, Bobby Shultz, and Kevin Henry all scored for Cohasset.

Assists were had by Mike deSantis, Kevin Leary, and Chris Kirkendall who had three. Chris Kirkendall had a good game, and Kevin Henry came off the bench to play well for Cohasset.

Saturday, Cohasset crushed Abington, 3 to 0. David MacDonald scored first, assisted by Chris Kirkendall. Bobby Shultz then scored off a pass from Mike deSantis. Chris Kirkendall picked up Cohasset's third and final goal, assisted by David MacDonald. Chris Kirkendall, David MacDonald, Mike deSantis, and John Reidy all played well for the Skippers.

This victory qualified Cohasset for the state tournament which begins November 6. This week Cohasset plays Norwell at home Monday, and at Sandwich, Wednesday.

Varsity Football

Saturday, Cohasset upset a heavily favored Hull team, 21 to 7. The Skippers controlled the entire game both defensively and offensively and demonstrated their best team effort of the season thus far.

In the first quarter, Troy Chatteston intercepted the ball which resulted in Cohasset's Danny Curran scoring on a two-yard run. This interception proved to be a key factor in establishing momentum for Cohasset.

In the second quarter, Troy Chatteston passed 22 yards to Jackie Cooper for a touchdown. Troy then came back to hand off to Jackie, who then tossed the ball to Floyd Hardwick. He ran thirty yards for Cohasset's third and final touchdown. Bobby Durkin successfully completed a three-point kick to give Cohasset a substantial lead over the Pirates.

Danny Curran had a fantastic game making nine tackles and blocking well on offense. Jeff Brown and Jay Contis led Cohasset's offensive line. Jeff Lydon showed remarkable improvement on the offensive line as well. Defensively, Mark Lahive, Liam Stanford, Bobby Durkin and Troy Chatterton all played well. Bobby Corkery was very impressive at linebacker also.

Cohasset is now 3 and 3 as they go into this Sunday's game against East Bridgewater in Cohasset at 1:30 p.m.

Coach Phil Pisano feels his players are confident about this game, but must rise to the occasion and play tough in order to keep their winning streak going.

The freshman football team was victorious once again, beating Hull 16 - 0. With this victory, the boys remain undefeated with an incredible record of nine wins and no losses. Led by quarterback, Peter Sandblom, the boys will try to keep their streak going. Because of the team's outstanding success, the future looks bright for Cohasset football the next few years.

All the boys have played above and beyond potential, and will someday undoubtedly be stars on the varsity football team.

the sport, explains how the soccer squad was formed.

"Chrissy Vivian and Cheryl Turner were always at the soccer games, and so were a lot of other girls. They felt bad that the varsity cheering squad never went to their games. So they decided to form their own squad and recruited a few of the other girls who were always at the games - Jacqui Fahey, Pam Maynard, Beth Perry, and Melanie Walsh. "

These girls became so dedicated to their cause, they designed and bought their own outfits and developed some new cheers specifically for this team. They attend each match, and ride with the players on the bus to away games.

As Staci explains, she and the other girls were completely ignorant of the sport until this year. Once they began faithfully attending the games, they were hooked. Staci now provides the coach with all game statistics. "I love it," she enthuses. "Now I know all the rules of the games. I have even learn the referee's signals. It's pretty tricky, but it's fun."

Meanwhile, Coach Anderson is looking forward to a successful state championship tournament. He'd like to take this one for all the senior players whom, he says, deserve the recognition and attention. These players include Co-captains Mike DeSantis and David MacDonald, Greg Igo, Mason Sandell, Eric Karcher, Gary Parziale, Peter Cotter, Chris Kulturides, and J.P. Dietrich.

As he explains, "these kids are good all-round athletes. Most of them have grown up and played soccer and stuck with it. They deserve the best."

☐ Jennifer Jackson, 9 Woodland Drive was honored at a luncheon Sunday, Oct. 21, at the Winsor Mills Restaurant. New England Swimming awarded her Outstanding Swimmer of New England. Twenty swimmers from New England were awarded this honor for the terrific job they did during the Long Course Season. Congratulations surely go to you after all of that hard work Jennifer.

☐ Pvt. Andrew T. Dougherty, a member of the Army National Guard, graduated from the fuels specialist course at Chanute Air Force Base in Illinois.

☐ It certainly will be grand to watch Little League next year, when they play "under the lights". Donated by developer Donald Staszko, it should help baseball become more popular than ever . . . what's more fun to a player than being in the "big leagues" under the lights. A nice thing to do!

☐ Robert Pattison will be celebrating his "Jack Benny Birthday" on Nov. 5th. All of his friends and neighbors want to be sure he gets their best wishes. Happy Birthday to Bob.

☐ This week marked a tough one for Mary Jeannette Murray. At the football game, Cohasset v. Hull, she had to be very careful who saw her cheering for Cohasset! After all, both towns are in her district (even though her heart was with her town) . . . someone told her the best bet was to head to the Hingham game, where she wouldn't get in trouble cheering for a team! Isn't it nice to see that she cares enough to attend! And, congratulations to a HUGE win for the CHS football team (perhaps Mary Jeannette is their good luck charm).

☐ It was great fun to go by the common this Sunday and see ghosts and goblins, witches and dolls, etc., all done up for the parade sponsored by the Community Center. The kids all love the day so much, it allows them to get all dressed up twice. And, to be able to bring their decorated pumpkins to be judged is an added bonus! As all who saw (all that weren't raking) can testify to, I'm glad that choosing a winner wasn't my job!

Looks like a bunny trying to find the correct holiday. Actually, its Jamie Simons at the Halloween parade on the common. (Carol McCann)

☐ John C. McLaughlin, a Cohassetite and senior partner of Parent, McLaughlin and Nangle, a certified public accounting firm located in Boston, was elected president of the Smaller Business Association of New England at the 46th annaul meeting. McLaughlin has been a member of SBANE since 1978 (SBANE is the nations oldest regional small business association). McLaughlin is also president of PMN Corp., the parent company of David P. Erlish, a retail tobacco chain.

☐ Under the "Wonderful News Department", Jerry White's return from Israel certainly takes the headlines. By now everyone has read Jerry's story . . . a true tale of courage indeed. Sure was great to see members of the White family around town this weekend, with smiles that were bigger and wider than the cheshire cat!

☐ In case you don't believe that man's best friend is his dog, ask Frank Pattison . . . saw saw him buy an ice cream for himself and one for his dog last week! That's what being a good "master" is all about.

☐ Congratulations go to Donna McGee on her recent appointment as Director of Personnel and Labor Relations for the Executive Office of Human Services. Until recently, Donna was serving as the Deputy Director of the Governors Office of Human Resources and prior to that an Administrative Assistant to Philip Johnston in the House of Representatives. Very best of luck in your latest venture.

☐ Elizabeth M. McGuire, a resident of Cohasset, is a member of the Class of 1988 at Saint Anselm College. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William T. McGuire, 6 Reservoir Road.

☐ Julie M. Hoogeveen is one of almost 300 freshmen arriving for the 150th opening of Wheaton College in Norton, Massachusetts. A graduate of Cohasset High School, Julie is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence J. Hoogeveen of 22 Pratt Ct., Cohasset.

☐Congratulations to Jack Conway, who was honored recently by the Plymouth County Development Council. Jack, the retiring president, was honored for his many years of service to Plymouth County. Jack received a nice award at the annual meeting, presented to him by David Case, director of Plimoth Plantation, and the new PCDC president for 1984-1985.

☐The Cohasset Boosters have a new group of items that say Cohasset on them for sale, under the direction of Ruth Nedrow and Ernie Grassey. Among the items that you can buy are white and navy sweaters, white turtlenecks, mugs and painter hats. All proceeds are used to support CHS sports, as well as awards night for each season. Call Ruth at 383-9292 or Ernie at 383-6875 for more details on the items mentioned.

Stanford, who teaches business administration courses, began teaching for University College in 1959.

☐ That's it for this week . . . keep the news coming to me, and I'll report it to you!

A warning about heating stoves

Temperatures are decreasing on a daily basis as the seasons march into winter. As the weather grows colder our thoughts turn to keeping warm. In recent years with enormous fluctuations in the price and availability of conventional fuel sources (oil, gas) many economy-minded home owners have converted to wood and coal for primary and auxiliary heating purposes.

This trend has been reflected by Cohasset Fire Department statistics which show that chimney fire is the number one type of fire incident occurring in our homes. What is a chimney fire? What causes chimney fires? What can you do to prevent a chimney fire in your home?

When wood burns it produces heat energy which is radiated into your home by the stove. What we don't feel or see are the other products of combustion which travel into the chimney. Acids, aldehydes, carbon, water vapor, and heat all exit the home via the chimney flue. These materials in combination condense and harden onto the relatively cool surfaces of the chimney flue.

After prolonged use (one year) these condensed materials, commonly referred to as creosote, built layer upon layer can amount to a serious threat to both your home and its occupants. A chimney fire occurs when these "cresote" deposits are heated to ignition temperature and a fire occurs in the flue of the chimney.

Chimney fires occur in varying degree from relatively minor "spot" fires within the flue to full blown where the chimney becomes in essence a multistory blowtorch. Faulty chimneys, high temperatures, and improper stove installation all become factors inviting extension of the chimney fire into the structure of your home.

How can we achieve prevention of this menace? (1) Remove the fuel-on an annual basis clean the entire heating apparatus (stove, smokepipe, and flue). (2) Examine the heating apparatus for any defects and repair or replace any components in questionable condition. (3) If you are making a new installation or replacing an existing one contact the Building Inspector, Edward Poskus at 383-0017 to be certain of proper installation. (4) When lighting a fire control the rate of ignition. Use kindling (never use paper as it compounds the build up within the flue) and your draft controls to maintain a safe rate of ignition.

Never allow a stove to operate at full draft for an extended period of time. Never leave a stove unattended during the initial ignition. (5) Use dry well-seasoned wood to minimize "creosote" build up. Should you suspect that you have a chimney fire do not delay notifying the Fire Department at 383-0260. Have a Fire Safe heating season. Smoke Detectors save lives.

Murray on reform

Representative Mary Jeanette Murray (R), 3rd Plymouth District attended a press conference last week with House Republican Leader William G. Robinson at the State House in Boston on the issue of Rules Reform.

Agreeing with Representative Robinson, Representative Murray stressed the need for a more open legislative process.

"It is the time to separate personalities from the issue of Rules Reform. The history is clerk on this issue--for nearly twenty years Republicans have been the proponents of Rules Reform," said Mary Jeanette Murray. "In 1983, 91.2% of the Republicans voted for Rules Reform and only 8.8% of the Democrats," Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray stated.

Murray pointed out that Democrats as a whole, including Tom McGee and George Keverian, have consistently voted against Rules Reform, while Republicans have pushed for a more open legislative process. You can be sure who ever wins between these two Democrats the rules will not change.

"Republicans have been and will continue to be in the forefront of Rules Reform," stated Representative Murray.

No smoking

At last week's school committee meeting, member Martha Gjesteby brought up the subject of implementing a smoking ban at the high school.

There was a lot of discussion from the audience attending the session and from the committee members present at the meeting.

Some people resent the absolute fact that the school department is continually developing more bureaucracy in the form of additional rules and regulations. As one member noted, the school regulates activity over which it holds no authority. The responsibility of some of this subject matter should be labeled as "homework" and should rest upon the ultimate authority of the parents. The schools have no right to tell a child they may or may not smoke. It is the parents' duty and responsibility.

Although we cringe at the thought of continuing this endless stream of regulations, we approve of the implementation of a smoking ban in the public schools.

As a matter of fact, let's include the teachers within this new policy. It may not be a concept legally allowable within the confines of a union contract, but why not ask the teachers to quit on a voluntary basis. The onus will be on them to provide our kids with superior role models.

Why, some department chairmen even smoke in their offices. Shame on them. Go home and smoke - but don't display your unhealthy habits on our children.

Gjesteby brought up a point which speaks in favor of the smoking prohibition. Our children in the high school are not just 16 and 17 year-old teens. There are seventh and eight graders here, children susceptible to the pressures brought on by their peers and older friends and relatives.

Although we at the Mariner can not be easily compared to a public high school, we just recently had to undergo a similar change. About a year ago, we "computerized," and the typewriters were swept aside for modern disk-drive machines. Everything went fine in the production room for a couple of weeks, and then slowly, one by one, each of the computers began to malfunction. Whole stories were swallowed in one bite by these monsters, never to be seen again.

When a production expert from the company was called in to pinpoint the problem, the solution came as a shock. There was to be no more smoking in the production area. The hazardous smoke was clogging these delicate machines. You can not smoke near computers, he said with a defiance no one would question.

We had to change our lives that day. No more smoking while working. People at the Mariner can now be found for hours behind these machines, only to rush into the great outdoors or to a small, crowded room adjacent to the production area to take a few puffs.

A few even quit. And the non smokers feel better for the lack of nicotine they fail to inhale.

Yes, it will be another policy upon our increasingly crowded book of regulations. But our kids are worth saving. Look to the other schools who have implemented similar policies. It can be done successfully.

Perhaps we will have saved a few lives . And we may salvage the careers of students entering the world of non-smoking computers.

What's the trouble here?

By Claire McDonough

"The trouble with you," I told the Dragon, "is that you're a pessimist."

He sighed. "Last week the trouble with me was that I don't believe alien beings are stealing our socks. Before that the trouble with me was that I stand talking at the door after I've said goodnight to our hosts. Before that the trouble with me was that I think my half of the bed is in the middle. Will you never run out of things that are the trouble with me?

"And anyway," he continued defensively, "I'm not a pessimist. I'm a realist. You, on the other hand, are unrealistically optimistic."

"I am not. I am a realist who doesn't believe in worrying before there's a clear indication that there's something to worry about."

The Dragon put down his newspaper and faced me. "Claire, it is not realistic to not have something that's wrong with your car fixed because 'Maybe it'll heal'."

"It worked, didn't it?"

"I know," he groaned. "If there's one thing I can't stand it's to have something totally unscientific, unrealistic, and unexplainable work. There's no earthly reason why that car of yours should run."

I smiled. "Nevertheless, it does. Furthermore, I'd rather have my optimistic type of realism than your pessimistic type. Have you ever noticed how you open a letter?

"You examine both sides of the envelope, presumably for fingerprints. If the return address is unfamiliar, you hold it up to the light to see if there's any clue as to what's in it.

"Then you shake it. After about fifteen minutes of your world famous imitation of "Sherlock Holmes in a State of Paranoia," you conclude that you're being sued and that we've lost our home and our savings. Then you finally open it, and it turns out that some company wants to sell you real estate in Outer Mongolia, and you throw it in the trash. Which is where you could have thrown it twenty minutes earlier if you had any sense. It's never that you're being sued."

The Dragon gave me a dour look. "So far," he muttered darkly. "So far."

"I suppose you were being realistic about the new refrigerator the other morning," I suggested.

He had the grace to blush. "Let's not talk about that."

"Are you out of your mind?" I asked. "Of course we're going to talk about it. You were wrong and I was right. Why shouldn't I talk about it?"

"Magnaminity?" he suggested hopefully.

I ignored him. "You woke me out of a sound sleep at 2 in the morning to tell me that the refrigerator was making weird noises and accuse me of not mailing in the guarantee form. You said the motor was boiling over."

"I didn't use those terms, but you're fairly close," he admitted "I had been lying there listening to that terrible noise for a half an hour before I woke you. Do you realize what we spent for that refrigerator? I went through 30 minutes of torture."

"That could have been avoided," I said triumphantly, "if you had gone out and investigated.

"By the way," I asked curiously, "does rain hitting a pan in the backyard really sound like a refrigerator motor boiling over?"

"It does," he said grimly, "if it's 2 a.m. and you have a horrible suspicion your wife hasn't mailed in the guarantee form.

"I only hope," he added, "that some day you'll stop exposing my every foible, my every picadillo, my every faux pas to your readers."

I smiled. "I guess I was wrong about your being a pessimist after all," I told him.

"You have just given a marvelous demonstration of the triumph of optimism over experience."

Cohasset is ignoring reality

To the Editor:

Folly, Folly, Folly!

Your October 11 editorial makes a good argument against improper development in a watershed area, while welcoming new business that would share the tax burden for maintaining and improving town services to residents.

But to say that Cohasset is coming to grips with its problems ignores reality. Our sewage solution has been deferred by irrationality so that whatever future solution will be less well funded by the federal and state government and its cost inflated by time.

It isn't Big Brother that has been heroically opposed by the current Sewer Commissioners and their acolytes, it is common sense. Not being fond either of regulations or court mandates, i regret that Cohasset has so foolishly set itself up for court intervention.

In the end, we'll have a proper sewer system — but we've chosen a mighty indirect, feckless and costly route to get there. I hope my just-completed $2,500 septic system recontruction will last that long. I probably won't be around to say I told you so — but probably neither will the perpetrators.

A new venture

The Mariner Newspapers begins a new venture this week with the debut of Shorelines, a full section of news, features and information devoted to life on the South Shore.

This youngest Mariner publication was conceived with the addition of two new newspapers to the family. With the acquisition of the Braintree Forum and the Weymouth News, the Mariner chain has become one of the largest paid circulation newspapers in the state. That brings more responsibilities and more opportunities to give our readers the best possible coverage of the news and events that affect all our lives.

It is an immense change for the Mariner, one that was met with dubious pessimism by some on the editorial staff — and for good reason, we all admit. The basic philosophy of this newspaper has been to focus on and strive for excellence in local, hometown news. That is why we write and that is why we are read. We are not, nor will we pretend to be, more or less than that.

Shorelines will not detract from that basic premise. It promises, instead, to complement and augment the local coverage which we will continue to bring to you each week. In fact, since the classified section and several feature pages ("Patches," " From the Kitchen" and "Bulletin Board") will now appear in Shorelines, there will be even more pages of local news, features and photos.

In addition, Shorelines will bring you top quality regional news and features, prepared and edited by our founding father and guiding light, publisher David Cutler (who, we hear, is a fair writer himself). As you will see, this is no second rate catch-all section for news and press releases deemed not fit for publication in the local section. We will bring you first rate news, features and commentaries on a broad range of issues, from the arts to politics to pollution, that touch our lives regardless of community boundaries.

We launch our newest child-paper with the same commitment to quality which we continue to strive to bring you on a local level.

Welcome aboard, Shorelines. With this new venture the Mariner Newspapers paves new ground in coverage of the South Shore. It will be a welcome, needed addition.

This is a new game on Border Street called, "Can you get the water from the Main into the barrel?" This sport is becoming quite popular along the harbor during reconstruction work. (Rose Cundari)

Passing the blame

To the Editor:

The recent controversy regarding the awarding of a bid for the purchase of a new ambulance, once again brings home to the citizens of Cohasset the reluctance of our Board of Selectmen to make a major decision and their adeptness at passing the blame along to a committee which they, themselves, appointed.

Now, according to last reports, the Committee to Study Emergency Medical Services was never notified that the Board of Selectmen was awaiting input from it to make this most important decision. Ironic isn't it? This very committee that the Board of Selectmen felt was so necessary to study our already excellent emergency medical services, has been chosen to bear the blame for the Board's own ineptness in dealing with this situation. In the meantime, we, the citizens of Cohasset, have been left without adequate ambulance facilities for these past months, and Lord only knows for how much longer before we finally get our new ambulance.

When our Town voted, mistakenly in my opinion, to change our Board of Selectmen from a three-member-board to a five-member-board, one of the "selling points" by the proponents was an assurance to the townspeople that just such a situation would not arise. Now, even with five members to govern the Town, we have a situation where, apparently, the left hand doesn't know what the right hand is doing. From all appearances, it would seem as if the Board would rather appoint committees to make their decisions for them. It does make sense — after all, if there is a delay or the decisions happen to turn out to be a wrong ones, then how can the Board be to blame?

While I am on the subject of our Selectmen's ineffectiveness in governing our Town, may I point out the Board's move to remove the positon of Treasurer-Collector from an elected position to one appointed by the Selectmen. It would behoove everyone of us to carefully scrutinize the manner in which the Board has conducted itself in over-seeing the management of the Town Departments it already has jurisdiction over.

Surely there must be an individual within the Town who, being paid a reasonable salary, would be competent and able to run for and handle this position. Haven't we all had enough of "outside searches" for individuals to fill our most important positions? Don't we, the citizens of Cohasset, have the right to elect who we want to fill these offices? Do we really want to, willingly, turn over yet another department to the jurisdiction of only five people? Isn't it an insult to the mentality of the people for the board to use the excuse that there is no one capable of being Treasurer-Collector living in Cohasset, and willing to run for elected office?

I think it is extremely important for all of us to think long and hard about these issues I have raised, for surely these questions will appear as questions on our ballots sooner or later. We do still live in a Democracy, and our raised voices and cast votes can and will make a difference.

Report from the State House

Are Americans really better off than they were four years ago?

By most accounts, Americans as a whole would answer an unequivocal YES! According to a recent USA TODAY poll, 80 percent of Americans feel they are the same or better off than they were four years ago.

And why not? The Reagan Administration's policies of long-term growth and not quick-fix solutions have created job opportunities, stimulated productivity and provided for a rising standard of living.

In 1980, for example, the prime rate was a staggering 21.5 percent - today it is at a low of 13 to 14 percent: inflation was unbearable at 22.1 percent - today it is below 5 percent.

On the homefront, the Massachusetts' unemployment rate dropped to 3.9 percent in June and has risen only slightly to 4.5 percent in September. During the first six months of 1984 alone, 63,800 more people were employed than the first six months of 1983.

The Reagan Administration is the first administration in 20 years to bring both unemployment and inflation down. Policies including lower tax rates, spending control, regulatory reform and a commitment to a noninflationary policy seems to be working.

For example, homeowners are much better off now than they were in January 1981. From 1977 to 1981, the percentage of first-time homebuyers dropped from a whopping 36 percent to 13.5 percent. Compare that to 1983 when first-time buyers made up 39.7 percent of the housing market. According to the National Association of Realtors, January 1981 to January 1984 produced more than three million more American families who could afford to buy homes.

Annual meeting

Tuesday, Nov. 13 is the date of the Historical Society's 1984 Annual Meeting featuring a catered dinner of beef tips on rice and hot apple pie.

The caterer will be Cohasset's Strawberry Parfait. Time of the dinner will be 6:30 p.m. and the location will be the Unitarian Parish House Hall. Following dinner there will be a short business meeting for the election of directors and officers for the 1985 year, and for the presenting of yearly reports.

The evening's special program will feature a guest speaker from the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, Cape Cod, presenting an illustrated talk on the history and construction of the Cape Cod Canal. Built during the early 20th century so that shipping might avoid the dangerous shoals and treacherous waters to the east and south of the Cape, the canal was a major engineering triumph of its day. It remains one of our country's major waterways, and its story is fascinating as well as informative.

Reservations are $6.50 per person, payable to the Society, in advance only. Checks may be sent to the Society at P.O. Box 324, Cohasset, or may be dropped off at the Lothrop House, 14 Summer St. Please call 383-0773 or 383-6930 for reservations. Deadline for reservations is Saturday Nov. 10.

Antiques Appraisal Day

The Cohasset Historical Society will hold an Antiques Appraisal Day at the Society's Caleb Lothrop House Saturday, Nov. 10. The hours will be from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Present at the appraisal day will be two appraisal specialists from Robert W. Skinner Incorporated, New England's leading auctioneers and appraisers of antiques. They will appraise almost all types of antiques and collectables excluding stamps and coins.

Included among the types they can accept for appraisal are furniture, silver and other metals, jewelry, painting, prints, textiles, porcelain, folk art, glass, dolls and toys, books and as well as other antique and art objects.

Donations for verbal appraisals will be $5 for one item, or $12.50 for three items. Written appraisals can be arranged at special cost.

If you own antique objects or collectables you would like to have appraised by Robert W. Skinner Inc. at the Historical Society's Appraisal Day, plan to bring them to the Lothrop House on Nov. 10. Proceeds from the appraisal day will be for the benefit of the Society.

Democrats Motorcade

The Cohasset Democratic Town Committee will sponsor a motorcade through Cohasset Sunday, Nov. 4 from 2 to 4 p.m.

"The purpose of the motorcade is to remind Democrats in Cohasset to vote on Nov. 6, and to encourage all voters to support the Democratic ticket," said Town Committee Chairman Donna J. McGee.

Bill Golden, the Democratic candidate for State Senator, will be riding in the motorcade, in an open convertible.

The motorcade will also promote the candidacy of the Democratic candidates for President, Walter Mondale; Vice-President, Geraldine Ferraro; U.S. Senator, John Kerry; and U.S. Congressman, Gerry Studds.

The motorcade will start at the South Shore Music Circus on Sohier Street at about 2 p.m. and end at Cohasset Harbor around 4 p.m.

Cohasset's Pack 38 Cub Scouts and Troop 28 Boy Scouts will be participating in a Bowl-A-Rama fundraiser during the weeks of Nov. 2 to Nov. 11 at the Cohasset Community Center.

Each participating Scout is asked to obtain sponsors. The sponsor can pledge one to five cents per pin times the total score of three strings. The Scout bowls or the sponsor can give a donation.

The money collected is divided, fifty percent to the District, twenty five to Troop 28 or Pack 38 and twenty five toward prizes for the Scouts.

Testimonial Dinner

Final reservations are in for the Testimonial dinner for Gordon E. Flint, Treasurer-Collector for the Town of Cohasset, Ma. for thirty-three years. Retirement as of 10/1/84 Dinner to be held at South Shore Country Club Nov. 2.

There will be a cash bar starting at 6:30 and dinner at 7:30 p.m.

During Gordon E. Flint years serving the Town of Cohasset, he also was the Veteran's Agent, Member of the School Committee and served on a Town Study Committee.

AARP Fair

The third Annual Fair of the South Shore Chapter No. 1139 of the American Association of Retired Persons will be held Thursday, Nov. 8, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at Sons of Italy Hall, Route 3A, Hingham.

There will be 10 tables of handcrafted items, jewelry, boutique, white elephant, plants, etc. A raffle with a huge basket of goodies, plus a Thanksgiving turkey, a digital clock and radio and a pocket computer, will be held.

Every hour on the hour free door prizes will be awarded. Homemade refreshments will be on sale. For further information, call 749-8135 or 749-2997.

Turkey raffle

A turkey basket raffle is being sponsored by the Cohasset 118 American Legion Auxiliary. It will consist of an 18-20 lb. turkey with all the trimmings including a pie.

Contact any Auxiliary member if interested in trying your luck or you may purchase a raffle at the George H. Mealy Post.

Boosters meeting

The next meeting of the Cohasset Boosters will be held Nov. 4 at 7:30 p.m. at the home of Joan and Merle Brown, 546 Beechwood Street, tel., 383-1625.

All sports supporters in Cohasset schools are invited. The sports banquet will be discussed.

Holiday Fair

A Holiday Fair sponsored by Scituate-Cohasset Newcomers Club will be held Saturday, Nov. 17 at the Second Congregational Church in Cohasset — 43 Highland Ave. near Town Hall, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Admission is free and there will be a quilt raffle,craft and gift items — White Elephant Table — old magazines and books, baked goods with a few surprises.

Refreshments may be purchased.

Each year the bazaar has been a huge success and proceeds from the event go toward a scholarship award to a student from each town.

Audit available

The Cohasset Town Audit has been completed and is available to the public at the Selectmen's Office during regular business hours.

Last years recipients were: $750 scholarship to Carolyn Koopman of Cohasset and a $750 scholarship to George Meegan of Scituate.

There were alsoscholarshipprizes of $250 to Scituate Town Library for designated books and $250 to the Cohasset Junior-Senior High School Library.

Chess club standings

Ed Cox of Brechwood Street, demoralized all three of his opponents at the first official meeting (games were played for standings) of the Cohasset Chess Club.

Arne Gjesteby, Dee DeSantis and Tanna Kasperowicz gave Cox little to think about in their respective games.

DeSantis said, "I'm going to have to do some serious reading before next week." Gjesteby said, "Well, that was quick. He has all my pieces." Kasperowicz spilled Coke across the board, in an effort to deflect Cox. She lost.

Mostly, the Cohasset Chess Club is amateur. All games are fun. Call 383-9115 for more information.

Christmas shop

The American Legion Auxiliary, Cohasset 118 is sponsoring their Christmas Gift Shop.

Each year the Auxiliary units all over the states purchase gifts and donate them to our disabled veterans so they may have Christmas gifts for their families.

Each year, gift boxes are the most expensive item. If anyone has a few boxes they feel they could donate to the auxiliary, it would be appreciated.

Please contact Brenda at 545-2354 after 5 p.m.

FREQUENT-FLYER NEWS
Almost 10 million travelers have enrolled in one or more of the frequent-flyer bonus programs begun by the airlines in the last several years. Because of recent changes in many of these plans, the fad promises to become even more popular and rewarding in the coming months. New promotions provide mileage credits for staying at particular hotels, for rentihng cars from designated firms and even for sailing on selected cruise lines. Some of the airlines no longer require the traveler to patronize just one company to build up frequent-flyer points. Several major airlines now interchangeably credit mileage. The usual miles-traveled threshold for substantial rewards is 50,000 miles or more.
COLPITTS TRAVEL CENTER is the only travel agency here in Scituate. If you are planning on taking a trip, come in and see us. We can make bookings for all airlines, hotels, steamship and rail companies as well as car rentals. We can customize a tour for your family or group and can design tours for special interest and events. We can also plan sports vacations including tennis clinics, golf packages, ski trips, hunting etc. Look for us at 3 Brook Street, Scituate. We are open 9-5 Mon.-Fri.; 10-4 Sat. and by appointment. Tel. 545-4500 and 383-1717.
TRAVEL TIP
If you buy merchandise abroad with a credit card, always save the receipt.

Show choir festival

Fri. and Sat. (Oct. 26 and 27) members of the Sr. Choirs at CHS participated in the Baystate Show Choir Festival at Oliver Ames High School in Easton.

The workshops included every aspect of the Show Choir presentation, from rehersal techniques to choreography by nationally acclaimed clinicians in the field. The weekend culminated with a showcase performance Saturday evening.

Attending the weekend activities with Mr. Marlis were Karl Becker, Kristen Green, Joe Mazza, Michelle Meagher, David Richards and Jenra Winn.

Expressionism in Cohasset

"In years past, students were invited to enter village window-painting contests' says Mrs. Jean O'Malley, Art Director of the Joseph Osgood and Deer Hill Schools. "This year I thought I'd let the students try something culturally innovative. We studied the Expressionistic Movement, and I encouraged them to show their feelings about Halloween through forms and color. Their results completely delighted me."

Fourth graders made three-dimensional monster masks. Fifth graders came up with ghoulish portraits and incredible "Thriller-style" scenes and landscapes.

"We wanted to share the artwork with the town, and PSO volunteers Sue DeMichelle and Regina Shultz were more than cooperative," O'Malley says. They arranged an impromptu exhibit in the windows of some of the town's most popular gathering points. We are most gratified to the Log and Line, Goodale Insurance Co., Dependable Cleaners, and Central Market for allowing us to use their space. We hope many of the townspeople get to see the art show and will enjoy this Halloween treat."

Anyone interested in assisting with future exhibits is invited to call Sue at 383-6192 or Regina at 383-0598. The PSO welcomes your support.

Cohasset arts funded

The Cohasset Arts Lottery Committee met Tuesday, Oct. 16 to review the many applications for funds from organizations, individual artists, and educational groups.

This funding period Cohasset received $1,250 and the committee had hard choices to make reviewing the interesting applications.

Committee members attending were: Sigrid Carey, Linda Stearns Halloran, Helen Ketchum, Tom Lucas and Larry Fone. Those applicants voted to be funded were individual artists,Scott Ketchum, $250 and Mary Lou Slotnik, $250. Funds are to be used pursuing their craft with a stipulation that their work will be shown in Cohasset in the next few months.

It was voted that the Cohasset Historic Society be given $300 for their continuing project of restoration of paintings and prints, soon to be on view in the Historic Society's buildings.

One hundred dollars was approved toward a fund to provide a Sculpture Workshop at the Osgood School. Application was filed by the Arts Enrichment Committee, Cohasset Parent School Organization. The Cohasset Recreation Department was approved for funding of $300 toward a budget to provide Band Concerts on Cohasset Common.

These applications, approved on the Cohasset level, have been sent to the Massachusetts Arts Lottery Council for funding approval. By January, the Cohasset Treasure will be able to provide checks to the approved applicants with the proper validation paperwork.

The Cohasset Arts Lottery Committee also considered other applications from the South Shore Art Center, Folio Magazine, the Osgood School Program for Theatre for Children's Cultural Enrichment, and a project to provide free design to Cohasset non-profit organization, applied for by Susan Buckley and Margaret Atkinson.

The Committee urges those applications not approved to re-apply the next funding period, May 1985. The Cohasset Arts Lottery Committee hopes that Cohasset residents will benefit from the activities of our small but very active and talented artists and art groups.

November calendar

Monday, November 12 — Holiday/Veterans' Day; Wednesday, November 21 — Early Dismissal/Start Thanksgiving recess; and Monday, November 26 — Make-up Day/Student pictures.

METO meeting

Sunday, November 4, forty Cohasset families, the METCO students and their families will meet at the high school cafeteria for an evening of good food and friendship.

The dinner will be held from 4 to 6 p.m. and families have been asked to contribute $7.50 towards the catered main course and bring home-made salads and desserts. Brian Marks' talented singers will provide some light musical entertainment.

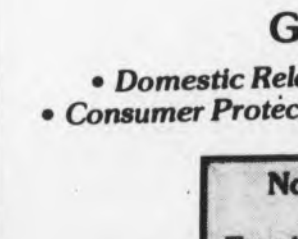
Fifth grade reporters

Well, the fifth grade reporters are back on the beat. This week we will start with some words from Mrs. Magoun's class. Mrs. Magoun told us about their plans for picture books and their Thanksgiving project. The kids said they liked being with the sixth graders. They "think" they are more independent than the rest of the fifth graders.

Pilgrim recreation

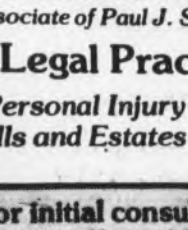
Mrs. DiBenedetto's second grade created realistic-looking pilgrim and Indian settlements with the assistance of Mrs. Mary Lou Slotnick. Each child built a twig "log" home and a decorated teepee and arranged them on a landscaped board complete with trees, shrubs and a small stream. Campfires, pottery, and even a papoose added detail to the scenes.

Art show



An exciting art show is on display at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library by Cohasset's very youngest artists.

A selection of Halloween spooks fashioned of torn paper plus lovely mobile pumpkins were contributed by the three and four year-old children at the Cohasset Community Center Nursery School where Sandy Putnam is the director.



From the Carriage House Nursery School, Sally Atkinson's students contributed a selection of apple prints demonstrating that apples come in many colors on trees as well as in bowls. These pictures were made with small sized finger 'prints'.

An eight-foot trick or treat mural was painted by Rose Collins' third grade class at the Osgood School. Sue DeMichele, mother of Marnie, helped the class with this special project. The class then voted to share the mural with the library.

Ms. Jean O'Malley, art teacher at Osgood and Deer Hill Schools, added a bright selection of action studies that were done by second graders inspired by playground activities. These paintings incorporate body movement at play and in dance and also perspective and detail.

In a completely different genre, the Junior Gardeners, under the direction of Carmen Schramm from the Community Garden Club of Cohasset, designed and decorated a Halloween pumpkin "person" to welcome all library patrons to the circulation desk of the library.

This art show was arranged by Regina Schultz as children's art chairman for the Friends of the Library. The South Shore Art Center, the Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home, the Ripley Road Nursing Home and various other organizations have been invited to display current projects or accomplishments.

If your group or organization is interested in having a library show in the children's room please contact Nancy Connolly (383-9883), Regina Schultz (383-0598), children's librarians Marilyn Pope or Jo Ann Mitchell at the library (383-1348).

Graduation date

Due to a typographical error, the new date for the Cohasset High School graduation was listed incorrectly last week. The new date for graduation at the South Shore Music Circus will be June 9.

Although the day had originally been scheduled for June 2, school administrators worked out a compromise at the request of the Music Circus. The day was set back one week later to June 9.

Brownie Scout news

If any second of third grade Brownie Scout who has outgrown her uniform would be interested in passing it on to a smaller Brownie — please bring the uniform to school and leave with Mrs. Broderick in the office. We will also be asking the fourth grade Brownies to do the same — wait before you buy a uniform as a re-cycled one might fit!

First in the series is an update on the North River Archaeological Project on Sunday, Nov. 4 from 1-3 p.m. With Dave Magnussen, archaeologist and teacher, find out about discoveries made during the first year of this 10-20 year study of the North River Valley. How did the early Americans live before the colonists came? What artifacts have already been discovered? Slides of some of the digs will be shown and artifacts will be displayed. Pre-registration is required. Fee: $5 member $7 non-members. For further information, call 659-2559.

The South Shore Natural Science Center is located on Jacobs Lane in Norwell just off Rte. 123 and is open from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. weekdays and 1 to 4 p.m. Sundays and most holidays.

Food stamp theft

Beginning Nov. 1, elderly and disabled people who receive Supplemental Security Income (SSI) and Food Stamps will have more protection against Food Stamp theft.

SSI-Food Stamp recipients will use a special, tamper proof photo I.D. to exchange their monthly "Authorization-to-Participate" (ATP) cards for actual Food Stamp coupons.

The photo I.D. is required by the Federal government and is designed to reduce fraud and protect Food Stamp recipients from having their monthly authorization card stolen and cashed by someone else. The photo I.D.s may also be used as a legal form of identification for cashing checks and showing eligibility for reduced price meals, for example.

Commuter boats are up, running and on time

By Judy Gilman

In the last several weeks, the news has been full of dire predictions about the imminent demise of the service of the Gracious Lady, the boat that brought high-speed water commuting back to the South Shore 18 months ago after the ill-fated hovercraft Yankee was permanently retired.

But the important thing to remember is that Boston commuter boating, despite the financial difficulties and future uncertainties of Gracious Lady owner Charles English, is alive and well and carrying about 400 passengers back and forth daily.

The two vessels of the Boston Harbor Commuter Service line, the Dragonfish and the Chimera ply the waters between the Hingham Shipyard and Rowes Wharf, keeping to their schedule and, on six of their 11 scheduled trips, running at 75 percent or more capacity, according to their owner, Dana Goodell of Nahant.

Interviewed last week, Goodell said he was pleased with the way the current commuter service is running. He would not predict the future of English or the Gracious Lady, except to note that the boat has some problems.

Those problems have the Gracious Lady sidelined at the momet in Hewitt's Cove. An estimated $45,500 is needed for vital engine repair on the Lady, and English has said he must wait for the insurance company payment before proceeding. In the meantime, the state is threatening to cut off his subsidy of $1,012 for the commuter runs (The state subsidizes only runs that have under 100 passengers on board. The original subsidy formula had the state paying a flat fee for each available inside seat on a particular vessel, whether that seat was occupied or not.

State officials were scheduled to meet with English Wednesday to make a final determination on the fate of the Gracious Lady, which has been out of service since Sept. 11.

Goodell said he has been pleased with the number of commuters using the boats. "Yes, you can say the numbers have dropped off somewhat since summer (with a high of 617), but that's mostly due to the fact that we cut the midday runs. Those runs were very popular during the summer, but right after Labor Day they dropped way off. We'd be carrying 10 people at a time, and I think that's putting too much strain on the boat. We should be saving the boats for the runs where they're really needed."

Goodell had been running the Dragonfish throughout the summer in conjunction with the Gracious Lady. The Chimera had been used as a backup boat, for which the state paid an additional subsidy of $100 a day to stand ready. When both boats began taking the full complement of commuters, there were a few problems, Goodell admitted. In the first week, two transmissions were blown (on the three-engine boats), forcing the skippers to travel more slowly and not make the schedule on time. But, he said, the boats are now on time. Are the commuters happy? "Come on board and ask them," was his reply.

What if similar brakdowns plague the Chimera and Dragonfish? Goodell says he's prepared, with three spare engines on their way up from Florida. He added he was planning to go to Louisiana to look at three more craft similar to the two he has now in service. "I think at some time in the future this can be a moneymaker, without a state subsidy," he said optimistically. "I'm excited about the business right now," he said. "It's hard to do business when you're fighting with someone else all the time," referring to his sometimes-acrimonious relationship with English.

Is he concerned with proposed plans to rehabilitate the whole Rowes Wharf area with shops, condominiums and hotels, leaving only half the commuter boat dock space now available? "The state has spent a good deal of money on subsidizing the runs and making improvements like the parking lot at the shipyard," Goodell said. "They'll find us a dock."

Thanksgiving Ecumenical Service - Plan now to be part of the joint service (Orthodox, Catholic and Protestant) Wednesday, Nov. 21 at 8 p.m.

We Want You - This paraphrase of an old popular song expresses the church's high regard for all of its volunteer workers--from officers to kitchen clean-up crews, from choir members to quilt stitchers.

In this season of the year, it applies especially to those who give time and energy to the Village Fair, our community's unique ecumenical event held on the first Saturday in December. The Village Fair doesn't just happen; it is the result of long hours of work by dozens of people over a period of several months.

You can help, even at this late date, by participating in one of the Village Fair Workshops. Come to Bates Hall any Tuesday evening from 7:30 on, or any Wednesday morning after 9:30, and you'll find not only work to do, but also friends to share the work.

Studds/Crampton race tightening up

By David Cutler

In September, following his convincing primary win over Peter Flynn, Congressman Gerry Studds took to the microphone in Hanover to blast the radical right.

It was primary night and the occasion was a victory speech to a group of happy and relieved supporters. After issuing his thanks, Studds unleashed an attack on the Reagan Administration and warned of right-wing money pouring into the district to defeat his candidacy in November.

That has not happened.

Gerry Studds

The 10th Congressional race between Studds and Republican Lewis Crampton of Plymouth has drawn considerable national attention and some outside money as well. But Studds has received more of that money, and, as the campaign enters its final days, he has emerged as the winner of the chase for dollars, having outraised and outspent Crampton.

The issue of political action committee (PAC) money has been a non-issue in this campaign, with both candidates saying they don't believe in "unilateral disarmament." But PAC money has been a part of the race, with Studds raising $108,000 to Crampton's $15,800, according to federal campaign reports filed in mid October.

Nearly half of the Studds' PAC money has come from unions and he received $10,000 from the Human Rights Campaign Fund, a gay rights group headquarterd in Washington. He has also received strong financial support from peace and conservation groups.

The Crampton campaign, however, has not been run on a shoestring. To date, Crampton has raised $280,000 (including a $75,000 loan from himself) and by election day he expects the total to surpass $300,000.

Crampton acknowledges that he could have raised more outside Republican money had he hit the censure issue harder. He has not, he said, "because voters in this district would reject that kind of campaign."

"The Censure," he added, "is a serious punishment: only 23 members have been censured in the history of the House, but the moral aspect of the issue has been explained left, right and sideways. Voters don't need any help from me to sort it out."

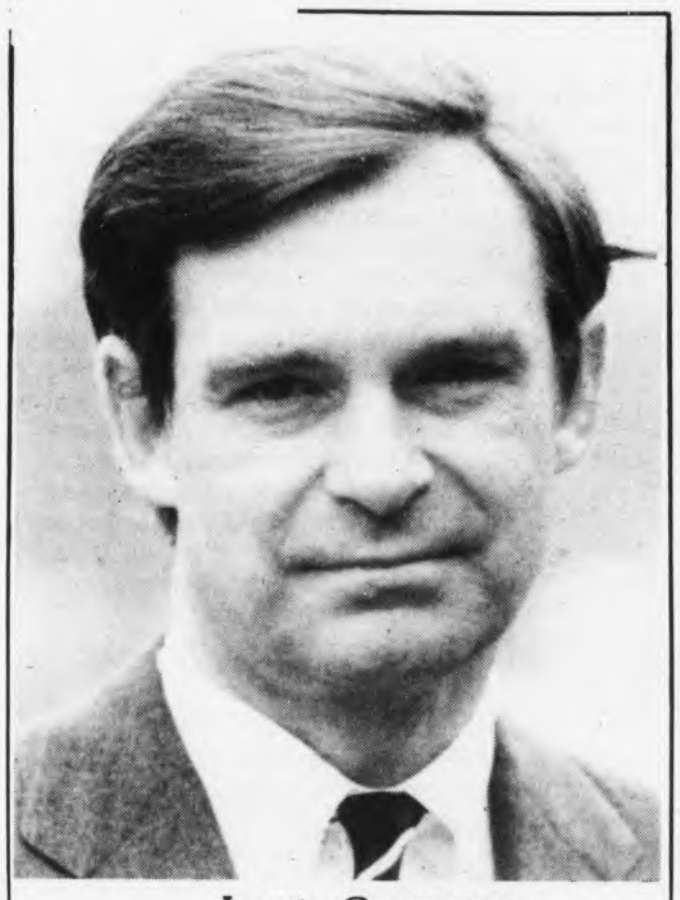
The censure — the result of a homosexual liaison Studds had with a congressional page more than 10 years ago — loomed as a menacing issue for the Studds' Campaign, particularly during the primary when Peter Flynn used it as his principal battering ram. It, and nothing else, drew national attention to the 10th District.

With the Flynn candidacy over, the big guns of the media have begun to pay less attention to Studds' reelection fortunes. The censure issue is still there, bobbing beneath the surface, but it no longer reigns supreme.

At the Crampton-Studds' debates around the district, voters spend more time questioning the candidates on economic policy and Central America. It is the debates, more than anything else, that spell out the differences between Studds and Crampton.

Studds, having been first elected in 1972 and reelected by huge majorities ever since, is a known quantity throughout the district. He is a liberal Democrat in the mold of George McGovern. He has few kind words for President Reagan and he probably has the best congressional campaign organization in the state. He is also a superb debater who has fine-tuned the art of ridicule.

In debate, he hammers at Reagan's forays into Central America; he dismisses the Reagan tax cuts as unfair and unwise. He has used the word "obscene" to dscribe military spending and he rarely passes up an occasion to lacerate the Reagan deficit.



Congressman Studds is not a typical member of the Democratic team. He does not love politics for politics sake and he is not a member of the old boy network. He does not suffer political hacks of any stripe.

Even so, in political circles he is considered a most formidable foe. He knows how to raise money and he knows how to build a political organization. His predecessor, Hastings Keith, had one office in the district for most of his career. Studds has had three since day one in Washington. When not in Washington, he spends his time touring the district and at local meetings with constituents. His record of constituent service is among the best in Congress.

In 1980, while President Reagan was carrying Massachusetts and the 10th District, Studds was winning every precinct in every town. To call him formidable is to be guilty of understatement.

ENTER CRAMPTON

It is not only the censure that makes Gerry Studds run harder than ever before in 1984. In Lewis Crampton, Studds is taking on his toughest opponent since he edged out William Weeks of Cohasset in 1972.

Lewis Crampton

Crampton is an attractive, well educated and articulate man. He can hold his own — "go 15 rounds" - in a debate with Studds. He is a moderate-to-conservative Republican who many in the GOP see as the best hope to close out the career of his old boyhood acquaintance.

Much has been made of the fact that Studds and Crampton grew up together in Cohasset. They are both products of elite private schools and Ivy League colleges (Yale for Studds and Princeton for Crampton). Crampton, Studds recalls, was part of the Studds' household and to this day, Crampton speaks of the respect and affection he has for the Studds' family.

They are political opposites on many issues, but there is not the bitterness between them that so often surfaces in political campaigns.

Crampton's chief problem since he entered the race has been to get himself known. He is a former member of the Reagan EPA and was once a cabinet office (Department of Community Affairs) in the administration of former Gov. Francis Sargent. He is married and the father of two children and has publicized that fact in commercials aired on Boston and New Bedford TV stations. He is the first candidate to ever use TV in the 10th district.

The Crampton strength is on the Cape and on the South Shore. He is relatively weak in New Bedford and will have to make some in roads there to avert a Studds' landslide.

With less than a week to go, Studds has a solid lead, according to Crampton's own polls. But the gap, says the challenger, is narrowing and the race could prove to be the closest this district has seen in 12 years.

Wheeler/Teeters

Mr. and Mrs. Christopher Wheeler

Deborah Sue Teeters, daughter of Richard C. and Pauline A. Teeters of Loudonville, Ohio, became the bride of Christopher Barnard Wheeler, son of Richard P. and Sally B. Wheeler of Cohasset, on Sept. 22, 1984.

Pastor Keith Swenson presided over the double-ring ceremony at the Bethany Lutheran Church in Denver, Colorado. Organ music was provided by Kathy Eggleston and harp music provided by Nancy Sotack.

Carol Davis, sister of the bride served as matron of honor. She carried an arm style bouquet of altromeria, bridal white roses, pink carnations and baby's breath accented by pink picot ribbon and off-white lace streamers. The bride's attendants were Nancy (Johnson) Williams, Margaret Rambin and Holly Riccio, friends of the bride. They carried arm style bouquets of altromeria, pink carnations, sweetheart roses, and baby's breath accented by pink picot ribbon streamers.

William Munyan, friend of the groom, served as best man, while Arlin Berge, Fred Heilner, friends of the groom, and James Davis, brother-in-law of the bride, shared ushering duties.

Following a honeymoon trip to the Hawiian Islands, the newlyweds will reside at 2682 S. Roslyn, #203, Denver, Colorado.

Debbie is a 1976 graduate of Loudonville High School. She is employed as a legal secretary with the law firm of Issacson, Rosenbaum & Friedman in Denver.

Chris is a 1974 graduate of the Noble & Greenough School in Dedham, Mass. received a bachelor's degree in 1978 from the University of North Carolina in Charlotte, and received his master's degree in architecture in 1981 from the University of Colorado in Denver. He is employed as an architect with RNL, Inc. in Denver.

Mr. and Mrs. Sherwood Ainslie

Ainslie/Davis

The recent wedding of Deborah Anne Davis, daughter of Linwood and Andrea Davis, and Sherwood C. Ainslie III, son of Cora and Sherwood Ainslie, Jr. all of Church St., Cohasset, took place in Saint Anthony's Church, Cohasset.

Father John Keohane performed the September 8 service, and a reception immediately followed at the Sons of Italy in Hingham.

Carolyn Davis, the bride's sister, was the maid of honor. The bride's other sister, Monica Lee, and the bride's sister-in-law, Angela Davis were the bridesmaids.

The groom's niece Brenda Burnside was junior bridesmaid.

Dana Ainslie, the groom's brother was best man. The bride's two brothers, Kenneth P. Davis and Glenn Davis, were ushers.

The groom's nephew Kenneth Burnside was junior usher.

The newlyweds will live in Norwell, with plans to build a home in Cohasset.

Residents oppose commercial plans for Sohier St

Bishop stated that the intersection was "extremely dangerous now." The megamarket "will attract people from surrounding towns" who will enter and exit through Sohier Street.; thus exacerbating the traffic safety problem.

Virginia Thomas reminded those present that two schools and a pool are located on Sohier Street. Her concern was the presence of tractor trailer trucks, as well as an increase in traffic on a residential community road where children often walk and play.

One resident asked, "If we as a group strongly oppose (the construction of the shopping plaza) what can we do?" Planning Board Chairman Chris Bassett told the group that coming to the open hearing and voicing their opinions was the way to accomplish their goal. The input from Cohasset residents will influence the board's decision on the basis of whether the proposed plan is harmonious and not harmful to the community and whether the traffic is safe and convenient, she said.

Atty. Charles Humphrey offered to "petition the state to put in a traffic light" if the public wants it. Chairman Chris Bassett summed up the public's argument: "What you're hearing is that they don't want access on Sohier Street."

The open discussion then turned to the question of whether or not the Town of Cohasset needs or wants a megamarket. Bert Kelly of Fair Oaks Lane stated that the existing stores were "adequate to serve the residents of Cohasset. We don't want this."

Atty. Humphrey reminded the public as well as the planning board that the land in question is designated as a business district and those who own the land in a capitalist society have a right to build on that land upon approval from town boards.

Board member John O'Toole asked what company will be operating the proposed market. Staszko deferred the question to Atty. Humphrey who replied that he was not at liberty to say. O'Toole expressed his concern that the market will be operated by Stop 'n Shop. If this is the case, then the current Stop 'n Shop located on Route 3A will eventually stand vacant. Other markets, O'Tool added, "have failed in Cohasset," and empty buildings of that size created a "blight" in the community.

Atty. Humphrey stated that the reason such markets ailed was because they "were not large enough." Board Member Robert Sturdy cited a New York Times rticle of approximately one month ago: "When this ize market goes in," he stated, "three or four smaller ones bite the dust. If other markets fail then there is no need to be competitive." Free enterprise, he suggested could very well turn into a monopoly.

Atty Michael Puzo, who represented Jan Cooke in her attempt to stop construction of the plaza, argued against approval of the site plan. According to Puzo, the DEQE denied necessary permits because the DEQE "does not agree the wetlands in question are properly protected." The flow of water created by such a project, he said, must be looked at more carefully. Engineer for the project, Bruce Wait, stated that they will "appeal the DEQE's decision and have a good chance of reinstating the Conservation Commission's conditions."

The proposed shopping center, Puzo continued, sits "right in the middle of the watershed" protection district of the Lily Pond and Aaron River areas. "How can the planning board give approval?" Atty. Humphrey countered by stating that "The moratorium does exist."

Atty. Puzo added that Staszko must apply for a curb-cut permit in order to connect with the "loop" required by the fire department. But in order to obtain a curb-cut permit, Staszko must file with the Massachusetts Environmental Protection Act and comply with MEPA's requirements. Puzo suggested that Staszko does not want to apply for a curb-cut permit because the site plan will not meet with these requirements. Any project which uses state dollars or needs state permits must file with MEPA. "An Environmental Impact Report would be required in this project," stated traffic engineer Dick Cooke, also a representative of Jane Cook.

The traffic study, Cooke stated, was conducted by Staszko's traffic engineer in February and not during the summer months when a greater and more recreational flow of traffic exists. "The analysis does not depict real circumstances," Cooke said. Compared to an estimated 3,000 vehicles a day traveling along 3A in February, an estimated 20,000 vehicles a day during the summer is a "significant increase."

Cooke also contended that when the district was set up for "strip development" those who planned it did not intend for a residential road to be used as a "primary access road." But according to Atty. Humphrey, people will not usually drive seven to ten miles beyond their homes to shop. Therefore, those who shop in the area now will also be the ones to shop at the new market.

At the conclusion of the public hearing, Atty. Charles Humphrey stated, "I would not like the board to go off on a lot of red herring issues." The moratorium, he said, should not affect the planning board and its review of the site plans. Members of the board, however, disagreed with Humphrey. They believe the wetland area is a concern for the board because the total amount of water which leaves the area in a storm is unknown.

The planning board asked Atty. Michael Puzo and Engineer Dick Cook to give the board copies of their notes for the site plan review process. Donald Staszko and his representatives will meet again with the planning board Wednesday, Nov. 7 after a site plan review. Meanwhile, the DEQE is expected to make a decision on the drainage issue within the next week.

AFS international weekend

By Ted Blaszak

Following tradition, the Hingham and Cohasset chapters of the American Field Service have just held their annual International Family weekend, this year in Hingham. The AFS International/Intercultural program hosted 32 foreign students from 21 countries.

The visiting students came from Australia, Spain, Switzerland, France, Belgium, Italy, the Dominican Republic, Turkey, Germany, Honduras, New Zealand, the Netherlands, Norway, Mexico, Colombia, Canada, Argentina, Japan, Brazil and Uruguay. But right now all these students live with their host families in Massachusetts and Rhode Island.

The major portion of the weekend was spent Saturday morning and afternoon at a workshop meeting. At the meeting, host families and students exchanged experiences and feelings.

Later that afternoon at Derby Academy, the American students and the guests played an international game of soccer. Americans are making progress! Because, for the first time in many years, the home team won, 4-3.

That game was followed by a party that evening at Dawn Brayanton's home, where foreign and American students got together.

The weekend was capped off by Sunday morning activity at the Church of St. John the Evangelist, where three AFSers read Biblical lessons in their native tongues. After the religious service, a tribute was paid to Jerome Preston, one of the original AFS ambulance drivers in World War I, from where the entire student exchange organization was formed. He was presented with a letter of commendation and a plaque by Marge Farrell on behalf of William Dyal, the president of AFS International. Farrell is the national director of AFS and organizes this yearly event, in cooperation with the Hingham and Cohasset chapters.

On November 6 you will decide who represents you in Congress.

And this time you have a real choice.

When all the campaigning is done, one fact remains: you, the voter, will determine who goes to Washington to represent you.

You can vote for Gerry Studds who is on record as consistently supporting massive federal programs that only are successful at spending your tax money, who thinks that the only good tax is a bigger tax, and who thinks that the only way to improve the economy is to increase federal spending.

Or you can vote for Lew Crampton. Then you'll be voting for a man who knows that good intentions aren't enough to make up for the waste that's built into big government programs. You'll be voting for a man who knows that we don't need to raise taxes to control the deficit. And you'll be voting for a man who will bring his years of experience to work on improving transportation and preserving the quality of life that is so important to us on the South Shore.

A Cape Cod Voter Speaks...

The U.S. 10th Congressional District has once again made national headlines. The nation shakes its head with amazement and owner as we nominate Gerry Studds for the Democratic candidate for U.S. Congressman. Many of us here say: "Only in Massachusetts."

Someone once said: "Never underestimate the ignorance of the American voter." After the primaries, I am embarrassed to admit I live in the district. To those of you who respond, "Well move!", I say, "Never! In the true spirit of New England, I will fight to see that Gerry Studds is not elected in November."

You say, "Well, he has done a good job," I say, "That may be, but he cannot continue to do so." He embarrassed and offended his colleagues with his defiant response to their censure. He is totally at odds with the Reagan administration. So where is his support or his future effectiveness going to come from? What has he done since the censure? Did you know that Mr. Studds voted to use your tax dollars to fund experiments on live, aborted fetuses (HR 6457)?

In November, we have a chance to elect a very qualified and capable man, Lewis Crampton. His experiences in the Environmental Protection Agency would be a tremendous asset to us in his efforts to preserve our coastal and natural resources. His close ties to the Reagan administration will surely afford him a much more open ear than Mr. Studds could ever expect.

Gerry Studds was a nobody 12 years ago. What makes you think someone else couldn't do as good a job, or better, than he has?

Cohasset's interpretation of 'Cinderella'

What do a local Fire Marshal, an eccentric inventor, a genuine fairy godmother, an opportunistic bottled water salesman, two zany sisters named Nostalgia and Nausea, a real Prince Charming, a talking cat and lots of mice have in common? The Cohasset Dramatic Club will bring these and other diverse characters together to populate its hilarious English "panto" version of the tale of Cinderella.

The forthcoming December production of "Cinderella", the first of the Club's three 1984-85 season shows, promises to be anything but a classical version. For instance, it is doubtful that Cinderella ever has been portrayed as residing in a South Shore town which suffers from a chronic water shortage and is ruled by a Charming Prince.

This, however, is the case in author Rushworth Kidder's specially adapted "Cinderella". "Fairy Godmothers have almost entirely disappeared from the South Shore" laments Cinderella's own fairy godmother. "How would I ever get sprinkle dust down the Southeast Expressway, anyway?" This fairy godmother knows the local situation. But the Cinderella story is there, dressed up in antics, spectacle, and even some audience participation.

Rush Kidder's original script is brought to life by Dramatic Club Director Judy Holmes of Hingham, highly respected Artistic Director of Hingham's Elizabethan Companie of Waytes and Players. Judy's most recent directing experience with the Cohasset Club was two years ago when she directed the mystery story "Dangerous Corner."

"Cinderella" will see a cast of about 60 people ranging from youngsters to adults portraying the amazing characters called for in this unique and never before seen adaptation of the traditional tale about the poor girl who married her Prince Charming. Hingham actress Jan Higbee will play Cinderella, Derek Holmes portrays her father Baron Stoneybroke the impoverished but dogged inventor of unusual items, Alice Duffy plays the last of real South Shore Fairy Godmothers, and in the particular switcheroo which makes English panto unique, Sally Rossi-Langer plays Prince Charming, Bob Julian performs as the sister Nostalgia and Jim McLeod--Warrick the same as the other "ugly sister" Nausea.

Scott Ketcham plays the out-of-work apprentice inventor named Buttons, and in another panto transformation, Sarah Delima plays the Prince's assistant Dandini.

Traditional English "panto", being seen in Cohasset for the first time since the Hanlon Brothers' professional company of the late 19th century based its national touring pantomime company here, is a combination of acting, singing, dancing and outright spectacle all done in antic good humor.

Performance dates for the Cohasset "Cinderella" will be Friday and Saturday evenings, Dec. 7 and 8, with a matinee Sunday Dec. 9: and Friday evening Dec. 14 and a matinee Saturday Dec. 15. Tickets will be available in advance at Fleming's, Cohasset Center.

Undercover Elegance

The St. Luke's Mothers Group will present "Undercover Elegance" a fashion show of fine lingerie. All fine fashions are featured by Topaz, of Cohasset and will be modeled by local talent.

The event will be held Nov. 7 at the corner of Rte. 3A and First Parish Rd. Refreshments will be served.

A $2 donation will be requested at the door.

Cohasset recreation schedule

LOON MOUNTAIN SKI TRIP

The Cohasset Recreation Department in conjunction with the Mass. Ski Club will offer a December 2, (Sunday) Ski Trip to Loon Mountain, Lincoln, N.H.

The trip is open to all aged students and the cost will be $27 per person which includes lift ticket, motor coach transportation, ski lessons and rentals for beginners. If not a beginner and renting equipment, the rental fee will be $12, payable at Loon.

Buses will leave from the Town Hall at 6 a.m. and return at about 7:30 p.m.

To take advantage of this low cost trip, please call the Cohasset Recreation Department office at 383-6791 before Friday, Nov. 9.

DOG OBEDIENCE CLASSES

The Cohasset Recreation Department will offer three levels of instruction for Dog Obedience Classes, to be taught by Laurie Ann Cleveland. All classes will be held at the G.A.R. Hall, Scituate, and will begin Sunday, Nov. 4. Beginner training classes will be held at 7 p.m.

The purpose of these classes will be to teach novice, pet owners basic obedience and responsible pet ownership. Subjects to be covered are proper use of voice, corrections, stay commands, getting the dog to come, heel, etc. Helpful hints on dog ownership and responsibility will also be included. The obedience will include those exercises beneficial to the pet owner as well as those thinking about eventually showing their dogs in obedience. An intermediate/advanced class will be held at 8 p.m. This class is designed for dogs that have had some prior basic training or have completed the Recreation Department Beginner class.

For the above classes owners are required to have their dogs equipped with a humane choke chain. The proper size of the chain is determined by measuring the dog's neck and adding four inches. Absolutely no spike collars will be allowed!

It is also strongly suggested that handlers wear comfortable shoes and clothes for these sessions. For all classes: the fee is $17 per dog for the eight week, one-hour program. Dogs should be a minimum of three months of age, and there is no limit on maximum age. To register, please call the Recreation Department office at 383-6791. Classes will be limited in size.

Peppery debate ends Senate race

By Jane Lane

As the Nov. 6 election draws neigh, the candidates have added a little pepper to their comments. The debate last week in Scituate was seasoned with a few barbs and jabs, and culminated in a lively exchange of comments.

The debate, sponsored by the Marshfield-Duxbury, and Scituate League of Women Voters, featured the three candidates for the Fourth Plymouth District State Representative, and the two candidates vying for the vacant seat in the Norfolk-Plymouth District State Senate.

Held last Wednesday at the Scituate Public Library, unopposed State Representative Mary Jeanette Murray addressed the audience prior to the two debates. During her brief statement, Rep. Murray said she is in support of the state's rules reform package, except for the segment allowing secret ballots. She is also an enthusiastic backer of a compromise county reform bill which, she said, "will bring government closer to the people and get rid of some of the bureaucracy in Boston."

Rep. Murray also predicted the proposed education reform legislation, Bill 5074, "will not move this year, but will be back as a compromise bill next year."

Last Wednesday's debate between Norfolk-Plymouth-District Senate candidates Anna Doherty and William Golden featured some good-natured, but decisive jabbing by the two opponents.

While Weymouth Democrat Golden repeatedly accused Doherty of "tooth fairy " politics, the Marshfield Republican challenged her opponent's support of additional state bureaucracies.

As was noted by both of the candidates vying for Sen. Allan McKinnon's seat, there is a clear choice this year for voters.

Pressing problems

When asked what he considers the most crucial problems facing the Senatorial district, Golden answered that the environmental problems surfacing in each of the coastal communities is tremendous. Transportation, or the lack of it, must be upgraded to include a system that is based on the needs of the South Shore, not Boston. He also cited the need for comprehensive education reform.

Doherty was concise in her reply to this question, saying, "the taxpayers from Weymouth to Duxbury need someone to represent their needs, not the legislative priorities of the Governor." Alluding to her opponent, Doherty said he is in support "of vastly increasing state bureaucracy beyond the taxpayers' control." This, she added, will cost hundreds of millions of dollars in taxes and fees. Doherty also noted that she and her opponent share concern for education reform and improved transportation.

Following Doherty's remarks, opponent Golden accused her of "tooth fairy economics - you make a wish and it will go away. " He added that the financial problems facing the South Shore "need continued strong state aid and efficiency in government through hard work. "

Doherty refuted Golden's label by saying the difference in their approach to solutions is that, "I believe the state collects more than enough money to correct problems, with more than enough staff and agencies. We don't need MassBank to borrow more money. We have the DPW and taxes collected, to fix our roads and bridges.

Golden supports the MassBank proposal as a positive response to the problem of critically-needed repairs to state roads and bridges. This is an issue he has criticized his opponent for misunderstanding.

Education reform

Doherty said she supports the need of educational reform through the upgrading of the Department of Education, but does not back the proposed legislation which mandates a starting salary of $18,000 for teachers. Any decision of that magnitude should emanate from the local school committees and town meetings, not the state legislature.

Golden said when began this campaign months ago, he was concerned about public education. "Now I am alarmed," he stated. There is a need for comprehensive educational reform in this state, he added, with a clear standard set for additional state funds to local communities.

Abortion issue

Golden labeled the issue of a woman's right to choose, "perhaps the most profound moral decision which must be decided by a woman." Golden answered the state has no authority to interfere with that personal decision, although he conceded the issue should be put before voters for their input. "I am committed to non-interference, but I am committed to

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
THE TRIAL COURT
THE PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT
NORFOLK DIVISION
DOCKET NO. 84P2662E1

Estate of ELIZABETH M. FELTON late of COHASSET in the County of NORFOLK.

NOTICE

A petition has been presented in the above-captioned matter praying that the last will of said decedent be proved and allowed and that ANN ROGERS MALONEY of CARY in the State of Illinois and SOUTH SHORE BANK of QUINCY in the County of NORFOLK be appointed executors named in the will without surety on the bond.

If you desire to object to the allowance of said petition, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before 10:00 in the forenoon on November 28, 1984.

In addition you should file a written statement of objections to the petition, giving the specific grounds therefore, within thirty (30) days after the return day (or such other time as the Court, on motion with notice to the petitioner, may allow) in accordance with Probate Rule 2A.

Witness, Robert M. Ford, Esquire, First Justice of said Court at Dedham, the twenty-ninth day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and eighty four.

placing the issue before the voters," he added.

Doherty agreed this issue is one in which "a woman must decide what happens to her body," and not one in which the state should interfere.

Significant environmental concerns

Doherty stated this is an shared concern between herself and opponent Golden. Clearing local waterways of pollutants is a priority, she said, adding that no new bureaucracies are needed to oversee that course of action. The correction of environmental problems is something the state senator may be a catalyst in solving, she added.

Golden noted that he "differs in the way we differ" about solving environmental concerns. He noted that as a co-author of legislation to develop the Environmental Protection Agency and as the attorney who brought a lawsuit against the M.D.C. to clean Boston Harbor, Golden said he has the experience to deal with such dilemmas.

It was during a discussion on the ways in which the environment should be handled, that Golden once again charged Doherty with a misunderstanding of the ways in which such complex problems are solved. Doherty vehemently denied the accusation.

Surtax issue

Both candidates said they would call for the immediate repeal of the seven and a half percent income tax surtax. Golden said he would do so "on the condition that the state can afford it and it is done in a fair and uniform way, not just to the wealthy."

Doherty said the surtax, brought about during the first Dukakis administration, should be immediately repealed. There is no need of such a tax now that the state is enjoying "a great economic situation, thanks to Mr. Reagan."

Concluding remarks

Candidate Golden said there is a need for voters "to get people who are qualified to work to solve problems." His experience in federal, state and local government and in the private sector has added to his qualifications for this position, he said. The Democrat added, "I am passionately committed to preserving the quality of life."

Doherty reminded the voters to listen to the differences expressed during this and previous debates. She has made no broad-based claims, but added she has federal, state and local governmental experience in addition to "grassroots involvement."

The Marshfield resident added, "you have been presented with some grand schemes. I believe in the need for less bureaucracies to solve problems. More often, bureaucrats spend more protecting their jobs." There is a need, she continued, for a fullfime legislator for the South Shore "to bring unrelenting pressure on the bureaucrats to solve our problems."

property would be used for pavement and building; 1.17 acres will be wetlands, and .6 acre would be unpaved landscape.

Some neighbors questioned whether a car sales facility would introduce more petroleum pollutants into the ground water. Although grease traps will be installed on the property, there is no guarantee that no oil will seep into the ground, the engineer replied. Atty. Sullivan added that a new car sales business is one of the cleanest businesses allowed within the commercially-zoned property.

Mackie was also concerned that the proposed development may encroach upon the Wetlands Protection District which will be defined in depth in a few months. When the watershed is finally determined by engineers, he said, the commission will know for certain whether runoff from this project will actually be interfering with the town's water supply.

Mackie remained concerned that the proposed plan will eradicate all of the natural functions of wetlands in the area.

When asked by Sue McNamara of Fairoaks Lane if the owner intended to purchase the Mobil station, Atty. Sullivan replied it was not for sale. Because the property is leased, they would be unable to purchase the station property. He could not say definitely, however, what they would do in the future if they ever had the option to buy the adjacent land.

The proponents will be back to the commission Nov. 20 with all the drainage and grading calculations requested for the site plan.

What is source of pollution ?

The clam flats in Cohasset Harbor have been closed for months now, and the state has just extended the shellfishing prohibition.

The Division of Marine Fisheries notified the town Oct. 23 that the prohibition of all shellfishing in Cohasset Harbor has been extended another 30 days. According to Health Agent Joseph Godzik, who has been here since early August, the flats have been shut down since his arrival.

At their Monday night meeting this week, selectmen wanted to know why the flats are contaminated and what the source is. Rocco Laugelle, who harvests clams three or four times a year, wanted to know how the state makes its determination to close the flats, and what was causing this contamination.

Health Agent Godzik has found a pipe emanating from the ground into the harbor beside the yacht club, across the street from two residences on Howard Gleason Road. There is an abnormally high fecal coloform count in the water around the area of the pipe. Dye tests were recently completed in the septic system of one of the Howard Gleason Road residences, but the outcome was negative. Godzik is requesting permission from the other residence for a second dye test.

The health agent said it would be almost impossible to determine where the pipe begins if this second dye test is negative.

Gerry Studds is the most effective Congressman this district's ever had.

If you live in the 10th Congressional District, you already know how much Gerry Studds has accomplished — for the good of our district and for the rest of the country.

He's worked hard to save the fishing industry, to keep our water and our beaches clean, to keep our Coast Guard strong, to keep us out of war in Central America, and to make our government more responsive to the needs of its' people.

And he's been so effective that Republican Party officials in Washington have targeted him as one of the Congressmen they'd most like to defeat.

Don't let it happen! On November 6th, Reelect Congressman Gerry Studds.

Raccoons in the suburban scene

By Elisabeth Gorfinkle

This summer Charles Garzik had raccoons living in his attic and he wanted them out. He wondered why raccoons would want to live in the upper story of a suburban house in Scituate.

Didn't wild animals belong to the hinterlands of Massachusetts, Garzik asked himself as he watched, from a safe distance, a mother raccoon nurse her baby in his storage box.

He had tried to drive her out with towels soaked in ammonia and bleach. He had tried to drive her out with an insect spray bomb. But she had remained with the baby in the box.

"It wasn't the first time (four years ago three babies had been raised in a space created by a wooden frame around the chimney and had eventually left) but this time I thought it was scary for the family," he said.

"The raccoon would scratch at the attic door connected to the master bedroom and crawl into a wall (partition) between the children's suite. This was all happening during a busy time and we didn't seem to get around to finding who to call, because nothing we tried had worked.

"But I saw a wildlife show on TV where the narrator said if an animal knew its den was discovered it would then move its family to another den. So as she nursed, I sat and told her I'd really appreciate it if she would leave. The next day we saw her on the eaves and it looked like she was looking for a safe way to bring her baby down."

After the raccoons had left, Garzik sealed up the air vent the mother had used as an entrance to his attic. He said he was pleasantly surprised to have found such a simple solution to what had once seemed an insurmountable problem.

Garzik's experience with raccoons is classic. Raccoons are creating mischief in almost all Massachusetts' neighborhoods. Nuisance calls concerning them are logged by the Division of Fish and Wildlife, private sector wildlife centers and local animal control offices regularly.

Dr. Mark Pokras, Massachusetts Audubon Society's newly-appointed assistant director of animal welfare, said raccoons are becoming nuisances in densely populated Eastern Massachusetts, possibly because more of them may exist in the region than can be supported by their remaining natural habitats, wooded and swampy areas.

The animals are being displaced by development and are trying to replace lost natural habitats with backyards, he said.

"The big question concerning raccoons is where

Jay O'Callahan celebrates life

By Judith Montminy

Treat yourself. Rush to the Next Move Theatre in Boston before November 18 and travel with master storyteller Jay O'Callahan into the rich lives of his "Village Heroes."

Jay O'Callahan is a one-man celebration of all that is precious in humankind. He doesn't just "tell" stories, he lives them. He enters the souls of his many characters and brings his audience into a magical world of hope, courage and dignity. He starts with the inner core of each character and builds until his audience fully accepts him as a host of personalities ranging from a 1920's spinster store clerk to a Depression-era schoolboy.

In less gifted hands, the "heroes" in the four stories that form O'Callahan's "Village Heroes" might have been seen as ordinary people living ordinary lives in ordinary places. But O'Callahan sees beyond the ordinary. An extraordinary artist himself, he captures the wonder and sparkling sense of life welled up inside his characters. Sound, rhythm and movement are integral parts of O'Callahan's performance. His voice is a musical instrument becoming bees in one instant, bells in another.

"The audience creates half the show with their imagination," O'Callahan tells those who come to "Village Heroes." This is audience participation at its most enjoyable. Without props or scenery, O'Callahan asks his audience to see, to hear, and to feel the Hungarian border-town during the Napoleanic era, the Ohio River Valley in the 1930's, or Harvard, Mass. in the 1920's. It is no effort to believe in these places or to see O'Callahan as the old Hussar soldier, the Austrian princess and the Russian Cossack — all in a matter of seconds. Each character is distinct, physically and vocally discernible from the others. Each shares an heroic view of life — one where the spirit and courage to go on overcomes obstacles and defeats.

If there is any criticism at all, it is that the first story, "Hary Janos," is less excellent than the other three. The story was commissioned by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and was based on the opera by Zoltan Kodaly. O'Callahan originally worked on the project with Richard McElvain, director of "Village Heroes." Hary Janos is an old Hungarian soldier who tells how he defeated Napolean and was wooed by an Austrian princess. The piece serves as a good warming up period and introduction to O'Callahan's original approach to his stories.

The second story, "The Lighthouse Man," presents the most varied characterizations. A teenage boy, Tom Nelson, works hard to keep the lighthouse flame burning so that he can earn enough money to save the family farm. The time is the Depression and O'Callahan captures the pulse of hope within those desperate times. With precision and gusto he becomes young Tom, the boy "with a smile like a crack in an apple," one minute, the imposing school teacher the next, and Cop Reeves, the enigmatic jazz musician seconds later. The story is filled with the full gamut of emotions and brings the audience to the brink of tears.

While "The Lighthouse Man" is realistic, "Fool's Bells," a story commissioned by Youth Pro Musica, is fantasy-filled. "Fool's Bells" is about two children born in the same town at the same instant. The townspeople closely watch what happens to the two to see which turns out to be the better man. O'Callahan uses sounds and whimsy to extol the special greatness found in the least likely "hero" of the story.

The last, and perhaps most deeply moving story of "Village Heroes" is "Edna Robinson," a story commissioned by the town of Harvard to celebrate its 250th anniversary. There is no doubt that O'Callahan embodies Edna. We can't help but see that "her elbows bruised the air as she was walking home." A spinster in the 1930's, Edna has a brief but chaste affair with a cultured-looking hobo, Blackberry Jack. The special relationship they share is as touching and heartwarming as any piece of modern theatre. When the evening is over, the audience is left with soft smiles and a wonderful sense of having had a satisfying theatrical experience.

Jay O'Callahan has brought his "Village Heroes" to audiences from Seattle to Washington, D.C. Although many are familiar with O'Callahan's work for children, "Village Heroes" is appropriate primarily for adults, college and high school students due to the length of the stories and the subtle emotions explored. The plots and subplots wind themselves in and out, but no threads are left dangling.

A native New Englander, Jay O'Callahan lives in Marshfield. He has toured much of the United States and has performed in London, Europe, Canada and the Netherlands. The United States State Department appointed him the official story teller to Africa and in 1980 he was named the Olympic Bard.

"Village Heroes" is presented Tuesday through Friday at 8 p.m.; Saturday at 6:30 and 9:30 p.m., and Sunday at 3 p.m. The Next Move Theatre is the perfect setting for Jay O'Callahan's art. The informal, intimate theatre's ticket prices are reasonable — the rewards are magnificent — a perfect early holiday gift or outing with friends or by oneself. The friends you meet through O'Callahan's stories will stay with you for a very long time.

In "Fool's Bells," one of the characters muses as he fills in the grave of another, "We were both weavers with words in our lives and you did your weaving well." He could have been describing Jay O'Callahan - the brilliant weaver of rich, enduring tapestries.

Commuters to get relief in late November

By Cheri L. Sinnott

Commuters who struggle up the Southeast Expressway can expect some marginal relief in late November when construction on the road's bridges comes to a temporary halt. Work on the two-year project will resume in March.

"We're slated to be off the roadway Nov. 19," said Terry Murray of the State Department of Public Works. "We're behind schedule, so we may be one or two weeks longer on the road, but we're ahead in other areas, such as the permanent lighting near Granite Ave. and Rte. 128."

A snowstorm and some heavy rain last March put the project behind schedule from the beginning. "We've lost some time with the weather, but we may make it up on the other end," Murray said.

In addition to the weather, work on some of the larger bridges, such as the Roy C. Smith and Neponset River Bridges, is slowing down the project. "These bridges need extra steel beams," Murray said. "Also, when we pour the concrete we have to consider the traffic. We have to pour at non-peak times and reroute the traffic because the vibrations from the traffic can cause problems.

"But overall the project seems to be moving very well. We're nearing the end of this year's project."

The major bridge rehabilitation effort invloves 8.3 miles of road and 15 bridges in various states of deterioration, Murray said.

"While we're working on the bridges we're also resurfacing the road, widening some bridges, and installing permanent lighting and a permanent median barrier.

"We're redesigning some ramps to make them better and safer. There's going to be a uniform traffic management lane. The final paving of the road will have a safer non-skid surface with better drainage. We're also doing a rehaul on some drainage problems. In Milton we're fixing some sewer problems."

The project is the result of years of impact studies, environmental studies and designing, Murray said.

"They were afraid a bridge might cave in. They had to do it now. The road was originally built to carry fewer vehicles. It was built in 1959 for 70,000 vehicles per day and now there's 120,000 to 140,000 per day."

This was caused by the influx of people to the South Shore and the ending of rail service to the South Shore, she said.

The project will cost approximately $63 million. Over the past 10 years, said Murray, the DPW has spent $14 million in maintenance, including $7 million to maintain concrete bridge decks, $3 million for resurfacing and $4 million on potholes.

"And these were just maintenance to slow down the wear and tear on the bridge."

Since construction began in March, "We've had phenomenal success with the traffic. People even want us to keep the reversible express lanes to Boston after the construction is over.

"We've had free tow service for breakdowns. Since March we've had service to 4,894 vehicles."

This year, the northbound side of the expressway was worked on; next year workers will concentrate on the southbound side.

When construction for the year ends, workers will remove the barriers and the northbound side will become three lanes again. Also, the closed ramps will be reopened. There will be no reversible lanes during the winter.

Red alert out for drivers

During the period of construction on the Southeast Expressway, transportation coordinators have been hired to assist commuters.

"The positions were set up to aid South Shore commuters find alternative transportation or routes to Boston," said Beverly Johnston, Transportation Coordinator for Marshfield, Pembroke and Duxbury.

"The construction itself is necessary. Most people understand it's needed," she said. "But the effect is it makes commuting slower than it used to be; it gives cars less space to travel.

"Even when the road is not under repair, commuting is still quite a hassle. This just makes it worse and prompts people to seek alternatives.

"A service like this has been needed for many years. We offer a safe central clearinghouse. We match people up for carpools or vanpools, and give information on the MBTA and other public transportation.

'We also advise people who are commuting to places other than Boston, such as Quincy, Braintree or up Rte. 128.

"The current road work is the impetus, but this has been a long standing need."

Johnston said although she has been assigned to Marshfield, Pembroke and Duxbury, she has had calls from people in eight other towns.

"I'll really try to help anyone who calls," she said.

There is currently a red alert out for drivers. Johnston said she has had an increase in calls from commuters who want rides. Most drivers receive compensation from riders.

"If they have to go anyway they may as well take paying passengers," Johnston said.

does wildlife fit into the modern world?" he said. "We are decreasing the habitat for wildlife by increasing human pressure. Many suburban people seem happier to be seeing raccoons more often, but it's important to appreciate them from a distance. The rule is don't approach wildlife."

Raccoons, Procyon lotor, have many behavioral and physical traits which aid them in adapting to human foods and dwellings. They eat both plants and small animals and are accustomed to scavenging carrion (dead meat). They are agile climbers with long dextrous toes used to perform intricate tasks. Raccoons can open porch screen doors, climb into small openings and pry open the sturdiest of food packaging.

Raccoons are also nocturnal, usually pulling off their capers during the wee hours of the morning.

Wildlife authorities generally give the same advice about managing raccoon-related problems. The rule of thumb seems to be -- patiently find the ways to secure your property by out-thinking the animal.

Pokras said Audubon and other private and public wildlife agencies counsel individuals on how to handle various problems, like animals getting into garbage and chimneys.

He said often persons have trouble living with raccoons near their homes, because either they tend to imbue wild mammals with human qualities and try to befriend them, or they react with unwarranted fear and intolerance.

Janet Polomis, an animal rights activists and wildlife rehabilitator, said many a time she has rescued raccoons from abusive human beings.

Polomis recounted a rescue mission in Weymouth: "A family knew a mother and kits (babies) were in the chimney. They didn't give the mother a chance to remove her kits (to her emergency den). They set a fire in the fireplace. The mother burned to death and I found a live kit underneath her. She had been protecting it."

She said on many of her calls she has witnessed human beings displaying a total lack of compassion and common sense. And on other calls she has known persons to be concerned and very helpful.

It seems that raccoon kits cause the most havoc for human beings. The kits are grayish-brown half-pounds of squealing energy with tiny grasping paws and huge, black eyes. They are for many irresistible, according to law enforcement officer Gordon Smith from the state's Office of Environmental Affairs.

Female raccoons in Massachusetts breed during the warm weather months. On the average they raise a brood of three to four kits which begin to explore outside the nest in about six weeks. About 15 percent of the kits survive to spend the winter with their mothers before they go off to establish two- to six-square-mile territories. Raccoons can live in one territory for their more than 10-year life spans.

Smith said many persons rear raccoons as pets, even though it is against state laws to raise unprotected wildlife mammal species and to relocate them. These animals are routinely confiscated and euthanized to prevent injury and spread of disease.

This raccoon is cute from a distance but carries its own potential hazards for those who get too close.

Raccoons pose a potential public health threat

Despite their cute appearance, South Shore raccoons are a potential public health threat due to diseases and parasites they carry, according to a local wildlife medical center and the American Veterinary Medical Association.

The South Shore Wildlife Medical Center, Inc., a diagnostic hospital in Hingham, has found 23 percent of the 65 raccoons brought into the center this year died of the virus for Canine Distemper (CD), a disease that is transmissible to unvaccinated dogs.

And three of the center's raccoon patients carried an intestinal roundworm the AVMA Council on Public Health and Regulatory Veterinary Medicine cites as being a severe health risk to human beings.

Rabies was not found in 25 tested raccoons.

CD, though it can devastate raccoon populations, is caused by a virus that is harmless to human beings and vaccinated dogs.

Yet animals suffering from central nervous system disorders created by the paramyxovirus can lack fear of humans and sometimes bite if touched.

Raccoons and other wild carnivores suffering from the disease may show the following symptoms: eye and nose discharge, aimless wandering, uncoordinated movement, heavy salivation. These animals often have secondary infections which cause them to breathe heavily and cough.

It is unwise to approach any wild animal, especially a raccoon that seems friendly, for often it is infected with CD or other serious infections, according to wildlife experts.

The paramyxovirus causing CD symptoms is transmitted by air and attacks most raccoons in their first months of life. Unless the young raccoons can fight the disease and build up an immunity, death is inevitable, according to a study by Dr. Richard Evans published in the National Wildlife Rehabilitation Symposium's 1982 proceedings.

The center's director, Dr. Vaughan Pratt, is affiliated with the National Wildlife Rehabilitators Association. Pratt said, "Right now the biggest problem the center has encountered is with Canine Distemper, but the three (raccoons) found with the roundworms is enough to indicate its presence in the population.

"We (the NWRA) are trying to understand what diseases are in the population of urban raccoons that may be of public health significance."

The 'coon hunt continues in Wompatuck

In the crisp autumn night, hunters listen to the baying of hounds. Mesmerized by warm campfires and cushioned by darkness, they can hear the dogs picking up the scent and treeing raccoons.

"It's a lot of fun just sitting there and listening to the hounds run. Some hunters enjoy hearing the dogs run as much as getting the coons," said Gordon Smith, hunter safety coordinator for the Executive Office of Environmental Affairs.

Smith works for the Division of Law Enforcement, which regulates hunting and trapping in state forests and parks.

In Massachusetts, hunting and trapping are permitted on private property where both local authorities and landowners allow it, and on designated portions of public lands like the South Shore's Wompatuck State Park.

Wompatuck, which is in Hingham, Cohasset, Scituate and Norwell, allows raccoon hunting at night (the time when the animals are active), as long as licensed hunters register at the park's visitors' center, where they are issued special permits, according to Park Supervisor Robert MacKenzie.

The park has a 500-acre parcel designated for hunting, but no trapping takes place in state parks. Trappers would be referred to the nearest state forest, Myles Standish, located in the Plymouth-Carver-Wareham area, said MacKenzie.

He added that the traffic of coon hunters hasn't been heavy enough to warrant restrictions. Hunters are required to stay within the limits of the state's quotas, three raccoons for one person or six raccoons for a group of two or more persons per night, and report the numbers killed at the visitors' center's check station.

The Division of Fisheries and Wildlife allows the killing of raccoons to "manage" their populations, said state wildlife biologist James Cardoza. The hunting season this year began Oct. 1 and will extend to Jan. 31. The trapping season will begin Nov. 1 and ends the last day of February. During these months the state expects to count between 6,000 and 10,000 pelts, a number which Cardoza said raccoon populations can bear to lose.

One of the tough ones of the animal kingdom, a raccoon that has thus far survived the dangers of living near people.

Cardoza quoted from a four-year study completed in 1983 by a University of Massachusetts graduate student, which concludes that the raccoons' reproductive rate could compensate for the present losses, but taking more could have an effect.

Besides being a useful management tool, raccoon hunting and trapping is a lucrative sport. The state generates revenue from license fees that range from $8.50 to $20.50, and hunters received about $10.84 per raccoon pelt last year, Cardoza said.

"It looks like the price per pelt is going up (this year)," Cardoza said. "People do hunt and trap raccoons for the money, but it is an enjoyable sport. I don't know of full-time professional raccoon hunters in the state. The core of them are dedicated to a tradition. Since the settlement of this country, people have been cooning."

Hunters also capture raccoons to eat their meat, said Smith. "Raccoons are usually roasted. It is somewhere between pork and lamb. It's dark meat, and sometimes it's rather strong tasting in older animals."

He added, "Most raccoon hunters are pretty good people. They've invested a lot of money in purchasing and training dogs. It can go from $150 to over $1,000 to buy a good bloodline dog."

Though Smith and others consider killing raccoons sporting, some persons consider it a cruel practice, said animal rights activist Janet Polomis of Hanson.

"I've been testifying at the State House for the past 12 years about hunting and trapping matters. And out of all of the hunters I've heard speak, the most sadistic sounding, in my opinion, are the coon hunters," Polomis said. "Men have testified to shooting raccoons to give their dogs a good chew.

"The worst hunting possible is done with dog packs. The raccoons don't have a chance. They're traumatized by the baying hounds and blinded by the lights worn in the hunters' caps. The hunters don't care if the raccoons are eight years old or four months. They are shot out of the trees and ripped apart by dogs."

Polomis also said trapping practices are being regulated poorly by the state. She said she recently found, with the aid of a metal detector, 85 illegal leghold traps on dry land.

Leghold traps are metal clasping devices designed to spring shut on the limbs of animals. Cardoza said the use of these traps is illegal unless they are set in water in such a way that the animal drowns quickly.

Polomis said she has found these traps set on land in clusters that often catch more than one of a raccoon's limbs.

"I found one raccoon with his hand missing fingers and his back leg mangled," she said. "I find leghold traps everywhere and I've rehabilitated many raccoons that were injured by these traps."

Raccoons pose a health threat

The roundworm parasite, Baylisascaris procyonis, according to a 1984 AVMA bulletin, "has recently been the cause of fatal infections in other wildlife species and in two children."

The bulletin reads: "People, especially small children who habitually insert dirty hands or objects into their mouths, may become infected by ingesting parasite eggs found in contaminated dirt or food. The eggs eventually hatch into larvae, migrate through the body organs, especially the brain, eyes and/or spinal cord, and cause death."

Places where raccoons frequently visit are usually contaminated, and roundworm eggs can remain infective for long periods of time, according to the bulletin. Wildlife experts advise not to put up feeders for raccoons or try to encourage them in any way. It is suggested that children's sandboxes be covered.

PATCHES — by Lois Martin

The right dress for the groom's mother

Under the gun. Back to the wall. Less than one month left. No dress yet for the mother of the bridegroom.

And if you're immediate response is to remind me that the mother of the male wears beige and keeps her mouth shut, I must say I can't do either.

I've shopped. I've swished into the better, longer dresses section where I could find one, and I've grabbed wads of chiffon and crepe and delivered myself to the merciless dressing room triple mirror odyssey.

I know what colors the bridesmaids and the other women are wearing. They'll be in elegant shades of green. And they'll be long. So there's no sense stitching an edging on my good blue dress. Short and blue.

But I might go blue if I can find the right one. At this stage I might go simulated orange if the bloomin' thing would fit and didn't leave the aura of the first hot air balloon to reach Greenwich in November.

I tried on, at the urging of someone who said she saw my free spirit, a 'periwinkle blue.' It was tea length, my choice.

The top was adequately restrained, but the multiple layers of slashed hemline bespoke a woman whom you feared would run down the aisle and dance with the bandleader at the reception. The bandleader could have handled it, but I couldn't do that to the bridegroom.

Next, I managed to enrobe my body in tireless tiers of moderate blue chiffon with an inset of beautiful beading. I've never worn such a lovely nightgown. I looked ready for bed in Buckingham. And it was marked down to $299 from $700. Decision done.

I had on an ever-so-ruffled navy blue, cut low front and back. No sleeves. I decided I'd freeze to death that close to Christmas and Andy would swoon at the attempted risk in the low cut front. Decolletage is no more dangerous on me than a Fruit of the Loom label, but mothers don't wear it.

There was an adorable white with brown chiffon, great hemline, sparkle, spirit, reusable. It didn't zip. I couldn't have pulled it off, walking to my seat back-to.

I thought I had found the solution in a silk green velvet. It was trimmed in rich black lace. Long enough, lovely enough, fit enough if I held my stomach in. It was something that I hadn't noticed, an Albert Nipon, $502. I asked the saleswoman to pause with me for a bit of riotous laughter.

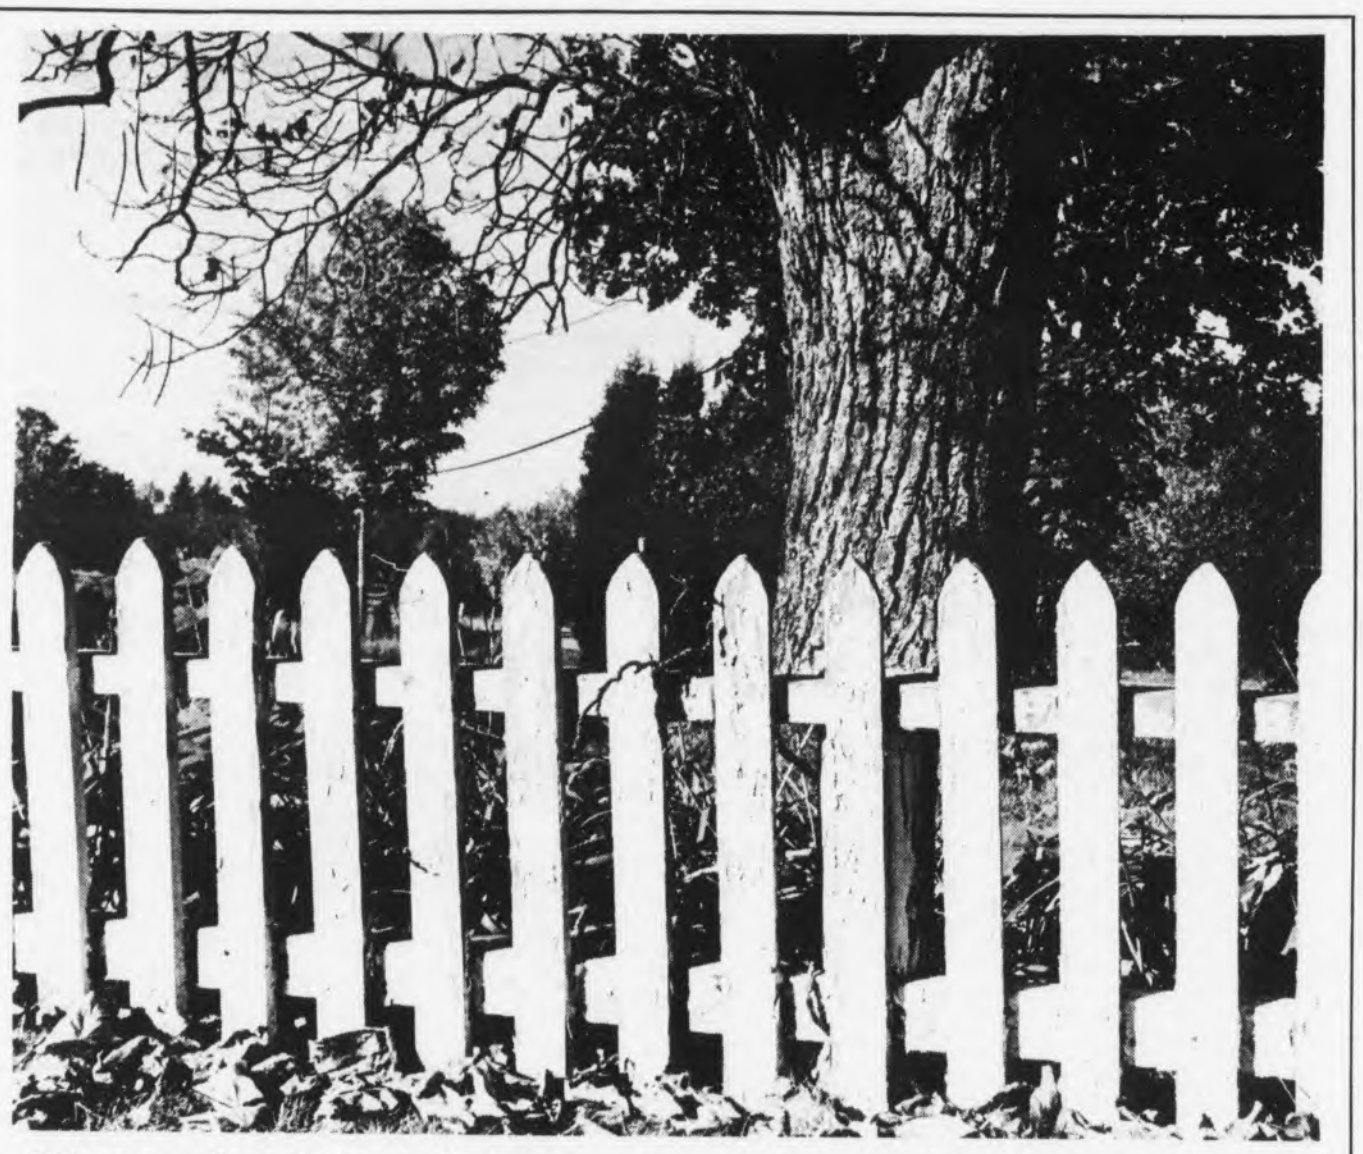
I started to expedite. I'd call shops (good dresses are in those rather than stores) before going.

I had spotted a royal purple, fun but decidedly out of the boundaries of a quiet blending green, unless I opted to carry flags of several nations to my front right pew with me.

Last Saturday in yet another bridal shop, I fought my way through the billowing chiffon of mauve to see a woman's face peering from a straggling mass of fabric. I'm not sure I used the armholes.

Then gowned in a silvery outfit that smacked of a demure woman on whom you could count to pour, I resisted scratching the lace away from my neck. Not a prom dress, it was clearly of inaugural calling, for the wife of the winner. A second occasion use for the frock would have been marriage, but only to the likes of Prince Albert.

I was reduced to begging. "Please," I said to the owner of the shop, "Don't show me any more fhru-fhru. I look lousy in it. I'll never wear it. I ought not possess it." She counseled me, joining in a plaintive yearning for something simple that doesn't disgrace either the bride's family or the bridegroom.



I was tempted to risk criticism another route when I saw the tuxedos the men will wear. There in a book, marked with choice of chic cumberbund. Just measure those shoulders and inseam, home free.

Something original for a mother, and I like that trait, clean, neat, in keeping with other garments and not a stitch of chiffon or lace.

I jest of course. My reputation's at stake. I'm nagged by my inability to come up with The Dress. It's a thrilling occasion. What a treat to have an excuse to find something wonderful.

I'll give me one more week. There's an unpacked box down cellar that holds a softly shaped green nightgown, with a small bits of embroidery on the enclosed shoulders. That with my good gold belt, strap heels dyed to match, pearls, perhaps a gardenia on the bodice....

Better not. I don't want to be the only mother to be given away by sons at a wedding.

Ray Shamie vs. The Boston Globe

As Barbara Bush would put it, it rhymes with "hissing contest," and Ray Shamie probably erred in getting into one with the Boston Globe.

. . . Not because the Globe is not capable of Brobdingnagian unfairness to a fellow like Shamie who comes from beyond its political and ideological pale. Not even because the Globe will likely win the argument and Shamie lose the election, since in such cases the violated party is always required to use the medium of the violator to defend himself.

Ray Shamie erred, rather, because almost alone among the major candidates of 1984 his message has been visionary. He has spoken in ideas, and his ideas have been full of hope. Furthermore, when he has had to criticize the ideas of others he has done so with a gentleheartedness that recalls Adlai Stevenson.

Compare for a moment Shamie's rhetoric with the long-running debate between John Kerry and James Shannon as to which of them, historically, became the most unctuously knee-jerk liberal the soonest. Compare it with Lew Crampton's television commercial in which while Crampton blithers on about being a family man, his wife is seen doing dishes in the background - the message (stated in so unmanly a way) apparently being a reminder that Cong. Studds the bachelor is gay.

So it has gone this year. Most of the candidates from either party have had little to say about the future or about us or even about themselves. All they know is how to denigrate each other. Is it any wonder that the heroes we truly admire were not even born in Massachusetts and have surnames such as Auerbach and Bird and Houk?

But Ray Shamie was different, and he is different. However, in taking on the Globe he joined the pack at the "whiners' club" for a few crucial campaign days. What he needs to do now if he is to conquer Kerry (a youth who shirked his elected office in order to run) is to swallow indignation and hurt, and resume his crusade. Shamie, in short, must let Shamie be Shamie; it's the only chance he has of overcoming the political/ideological "old boy network" in back of Kerry.

Much has been made about the Republican "old boy network" that Shamie supposedly took on when he defeated Elliot Richardson in the Republican Primary. Too much was made, for that network had been politically moribund for a number of years.

The real power in the state is Democratic, and it is the Democratic "old boy network," of which in the last 20 years the Globe has become a part, that Ray Shamie has really to fear. That network of ideologues and developers, of reformers and reform school graduates, of idealists and calculating gamblers, is not always monolithic, but it has the power to make a youth a U.S. Senator.

Ray Shamie is anathema to every component of that network except the electorate itself. When he says, " . . . it is not time for government to grow, it is time for dreams to grow . . . " he speaks to all of us as few politicians have done in years. He is fresh and passionate, and even . . . through 63-year-old eyes . . . beautiful.

But he disappears into the pack when he goes after the Globe. He becomes, like the rest, a man defined by his enemies. And only his enemies rejoice.

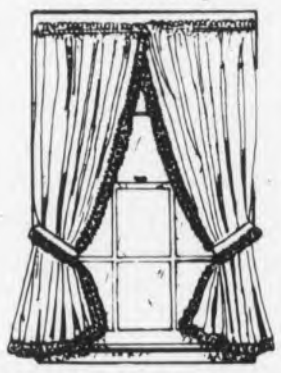
Ghouls and goblins to meet in Plymouth

Ghouls and goblins of all shapes and sizes will meet in The Pavilion lounge of the Inn For All Seasons for a shrieking good time during the annual Halloween Party on Thursday, Nov. 1. A tasty buffet and some great prizes, including $150 for the best individual costume, promise to make this adult masquerade party a howling success.

The fun will begin at 8 p.m. with the opening of the buffet table. There will also be live entertainment all evening, featuring dance music by the On-The-Rocks band. Prizes for winners in the costume contest will be awarded later in the evening.

The Inn For All Seasons is located on Route 3A in Plymouth, near Plimoth Plantation. For more information, call 746-8823.

Update on short supply of type O blood



Early last week the supply of group O blood dropped below critical levels in Massachusetts, forcing the Red Cross to limit its service to many hospitals. An appeal for group O blood donors, as well as new blood donors, was subsequently issued.

Blood collections did increase slightly, reducing the deficit for group O blood by about 400 units. But this still leaves about 1,200 units below what is needed for hospitals throughout the region.

The Red Cross supplies blood to over 160 hospitals throughout Massachusetts and Maine for medical/surgical procedures and treatments, including an average of 30 open heart surgeries and multiple liver transplantations, sometimes on a weekly basis.

Generally, anyone in good health, 18 years old (17 years with parental consent) or older, who weighs at least 110 pounds and has never had hepatitis may be able to donate blood. For more information on donor center's hours and scheduled bloodmobiles call 1-800-342-8748 or your local American Red Cross.

FROM THE KITCHEN

by JOAN PINKHAM

"Momma Food" is here, much to the relief of anyone who has groaned over culinary fads such as goat's cheese salad and stuffed enchiladas, or spending a small fortune in a restaurant for three peapods and a two-inch steak. The latest trend is a nostalgic return to memories of Mom's pot roast when the entire family gathered to share the evening meal, or for Sunday dinner at Grandma's with roast chicken and mashed potato smothered in gravy. Meat loaf is "in", along with meat pies, apple pie and ice cream and even puddings. This homespun fare is being offered in a number of New York restaurants according to an article by Bryan Miller and it would seem that customers are treating their tastebuds to childhood meals of fried chicken, salmon croquettes, tuna noodle casserole, or even such calorie laden desserts as

BRANDY BREAD PUDDING

Romove crusts from 1/4 pd. stale sliced white bread and cut into 1/2" squares. Saute bread in heavy skillet in 1/4 c. butter until golden and transfer to 1 qt. baking dish.

In saucepan scald
2 1/2 c. milk with
1/4 c. cognac
2 T butter and let mixture cool.
In a bowl beat
3 eggs
2/3 c. sugar
1/4 tsp. salt and add milk mixture in a stream, beating.

Pour custard over bread and let mixture stand, stirring occasionally, for at least 2 hours, or until bread is soft. Put dish in baking pan with hot water in pan to reach half-way up the sides of dish. Bake at 350 degrees for 45 min., or until it is puffed and golden. Remove dish from pan, force 2T light brown sugar through a sieve over the pudding and broil under broiler about 2" for 1 min., or until sugar is caramelized. Serve warm, or at room temp. Serves 4.

Those of us who are fond of reading are so addicted to the habit that anything will do in a pinch. How else to while away precious time when waiting for an appointment, a delayed plane, a tardy friend, or one's turn at the check-out counter at the market. That's when I turn to the magazine rack to amuse myself. The wait was not in vain last week, for I read of a few tips for holiday cooking. This one I loved: secure a recipe card or open cook book under an upside-down glass pie plate. While you check the ingredients, amounts, etc., through the curved magnifying plate bottom, pages escape drizzled sauce and spattered butter. Plus, the cookbook stays open to the recipe you are using.

But, back to "Momma Food", avid readers devour cookbooks as fast as they do the recipes therein and I whiled away a spare half hour while waiting for an oven dish by browsing through a favorite cookbook prepared by the Gourmet Decorators' Guild of the Scituate Arts Association. What is more nostalgic that the smell of hememade bread cooling on the counter? Perhaps your children will carry the remembrance of this fragrance down through the years.

GRANDMOTHER'S YEAST ROLLS

1 1/2 c. lukewarm water
2/3 c. sugar
1 1/2 tsp. salt
2/3 c. melted shortening
1 c. lukewarm mashed potatoes (can use instant)
2 eggs, beaten
2 cakes yeast
6 c. flour

Dissolve yeast in 1/2 c. lukewarm water and set aside. Then in large mixing bowl, place 1 c. lukewarm water, sugar, salt, shortening, potatoes and eggs. Add dissolved yeast. Stir in flour to make a soft dough. Cover and place in fridge for 2 hours. Take out and shape into rolls. Place in warm place for 2 to 3 hours. Bake at 400 degrees for 20. min. To freeze: After refrigerating dough for two hours as directed, remove, shape into balls and freeze. Makes 5 dozen.

From a tattered Reader's Digest in the dentist's waiting room I read how many Japanese homemakers skip the daily chore of dreaming up menus and shopping for food; they simply mark their selections for the coming week on a list supplied by a delivery company. Choices are made from pamphlets displaying 14 series of 7 menus each. Each meal comes with a color guide describing how to cook it.

Volunteers needed for Parent Aide

Volunteers are needed to participate in an innovative and challenging program, sponsored by the local Department of Social Services Office in Plymouth.

The Parent Aide Program needs volunteers to work on a one-to-one basis with young parents who are having problems coping with the stresses of parenting.

The Parent Aide Program has proven to be one effective technique to prevent child maltreatment, and is spreading across the country.

A Parent Aide is a warm, caring volunteer from the community who acts as a supportive and nurturing friend to a young, overwhelmed parent.

Parent Aides, parents themselves, realize that all parents can use a helping hand. Sometimes, that help comes from nearby relatives or other friends. But sadly, sometimes there is no one that young parents can talk to. There are many single parents who are both geographically and emotionally isolated and have no family or friends. There are many teenage parents who have become separated from their families. There are young parents who lack child care techniques because they themselves were neglected as a child.

The Parent Aide Program is sponsored by the Department of Social Services in Plymouth. At this time, there are 12 Parent Aides working on a one-to-one basis with parents under stress. These Parent Aides range in age from 27 to 70 years old and come from the local communities of Marshfield, Plymouth, Duxbury, Pembroke, Kingston, and Carver. Many more Parents Aides are needed.

Parent Aides must be 21 years or older, be parents themselves or have child care experience, and most importantly, care about people. Professional training, ongoing supervision, and expense reimbursement are provided to the Parent Aide volunteer.

Through this program, professional staff and volunteers work together as a team to provide services to children and families seeking to over come the problems of family stress existing in the community.

The Plymouth Area Parent Aide Program is recruiting Parent Aides now. For more information, call Jason Todd, Director of Volunteer Services, Department of Social Services, Plymouth at 585-6533 or 747-3933.

SEMI-IMPOVERISHED newspaper person is looking for furniture to redo a postage stamp size living room. The old couch has just become the latest casualty between myself, my wife and Graything (my neurotic couch killing cat). I'm looking for a reasonably priced bit of furniture that will not clash with our early American Orange Crate decor. Money is tight, so be gentle, Folks. Here is your chance to get rid of that unwanted couch while making my wife happy and, perhaps, even saving the life of my cat. Call in the evenings after 6 p.m., 585-5427. (TFN)

Camey told me that 20th Century Fox, whom he was representing, had considered making a film out of my book, Put It On the Front Page, Please! "We rejected the idea only because we had made a film a few years before based on the book, It Happens Every Thursday, another book about a weekly newspaper." ASBESTOS LUNG DISEASE

Asbestos dust causes serious lung ailments; the diseases appear suddenly, years after exposure. Today numerous SHIPYARD WORKERS, MASONS, and PIPEFITTERS of the 1930's-1970's have lung afflictions because they inhaled asbestos particles many years ago.

If you worked in one of those professions then and now have a lung disease, you may be eligible to receive money damages or workers' compensation. Relatives of living and deceased victims can also recover in some cases.

Who'll pay for Bill's Golden Dreams?

According to Bill Golden, the future of the South Shore depends on his election to the State Senate.

Your future tax burden will increase if Bill Golden is elected, because. . .

Bill Golden has targeted your pocketbook.

He has targeted the issue of pollution to prove his "effectiveness."

He tells the voters he "forced the MDC to clean up pollution in Massachusetts Bay and the South Shore."

However, the MDC has not been forced to clean up the harbors — by Bill Golden, the courts or the state — the dumping of raw sewage continues.

Bill Golden has "proven effectiveness" in increasing state spending and bureaucracies.

Studds defeated here

A healthy Cohasset turnout goes Republican

By Jane Lane

It was a steady stream of voters that flowed into the polls during Tuesday's election. And Cohasset, with the exception of the State Senate race, voted Republican down the line.

Cohasset now has more registered Democratic voters than Republican. For this election, there were 1259 registered Republicans, and 1362 Democrats. The Independent party played a significant role in Tuesday's election. According to the total vote count, there are 2626 Independent affiliates in Cohasset.

That includes the first-time hometown defeat of Gerry Studds. Although Studds was re-elected over his opponent Lewis Crampton, another Cohasset native, he couldn't manage a win over his Republican challenger. This was the first time Studds has suffered a loss in this town where he still casts his ballot.

The sole Democrat to survive the Cohasset vote was William Golden of Weymouth. Golden, a former Cohasset resident with a solid team of campaign supporters here, took 2323 votes. Republican Anna Doherty of Marshfield received 1714 votes in Cohasset.

There were a total of 4299 votes cast in this Presidential election. That is 82 percent of the total registered Cohasset voters. An excellent turnout, Town Clerk Frances Marks agreed, signifying a record number of voters in a Cohasset election.

In the 1980 national election, 84 percent of Cohasset

Tuesday's election stirred up a lot of interest. This display of Democratic affection even piqued the curiosity of a non registered voter

DEQE helps solve natural resource problems

When there's something strange in your river bed-- who you gonna call? Dan Viscardi!!

By Dave Warren

The North River has been hoarding headlines for just about half a year now.

From sewage overflows to red tide to puzzlingly high bacteria counts, problems plaguing our area's greatest natural resource have brought about a call for action.

Concerned citizens turned to their respective town halls for answers. Town officials, in turn, sent out a distress signal to the state DEQE (Department of Environmental Quality Engineering).

After drawing and analyzing water samples from numerous checkpoints along the murky river, the DEQE confirmed earlier findings indicating bacteria counts exceeding levels safe for shellfish.

The river was closed, a regional meeting was held, and Dan Viscardi, who runs this area's DEQE office in Lakeville, told officials that they would have to find the sources polluting the river on their own. The DEQE would help confirm study findings and offer clean-up advise, but the towns would have to do the leg-work.

Local officials hoped for more assistance, and criticized the DEQE for it's lack of committment and overall fend-for-yourself approach.

What is the DEQE?

But who and what is the DEQE? What can we reasonably expect of them? And what do they do that is so important that they can't spend more time helping this area resolve one of its highest priority problems?

The DEQE's Lakeville office operates under a state mandate as part of the Interstate Shellfish Sanitation Program, Viscardi said. The program operates under guidelines established by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration.

The territory covered by the Lakeville office is immense. Stretching south from Cohasset Harbor to the Rhode Island border, it consists of 42 towns, including all of the Cape and the Islands.

All told, the area encompasses 800 miles of coastline (the territory's most inland point is the origin of the North River), contains 258 shellfish growing areas (of which the North River is just one), and 138 interior areas.

Coupled with this large territorial expanse are numerous responsibilities. Under the guidelines of the Sanitary Shellfish Program, the Lakeville office must reappraise all 258 shellfish growing areas once every two years, and resurvey each of the areas once every ten years.

Viscardi explained the difference between a reappraisal and a resurvey. "A reappraisal is a good sanitary survey which includes evaluating data and submitting a report in a file.

"Resurveying is much more detailed. It's a more intense survey with intense sampling that can take as long as four or five days. You take a look at the bird population, houses in the area, and look for any pipes that are showing. Basically, the survey basically finds out what the land is used for. We're looking to determine the sanitary quality of the area for that time."

Viscardi said that six sets of data are used to reappraise an area (the 138 interior areas must be reappraised three times each year), and 30 sets are used to resurvey a shellfish growing area.

Staffing

Viscardi, 25, joined the Lakeville program just about a year ago. Prior to his arrival, the office was manned by only two people, a sanitary agent and an environmental health technician, who were responsible for conducting all the above tests. Needless to say, it was a formidable task.

Tax rate meeting tonight

The assessors will be meeting at 8 p.m. tonight with selectmen to set the town's new tax rate. The public is invited to attend the public hearing at Town Hall.

Assessors hope that the state Bureau of Local Assessments will certify their recommended tax rate by Thursday. They must have that certification before the public hearing is held.

At the time of the hearing, the Board of Assessors will provide residents with all information and data relevent to making a decision on the tax levy.

Along with computer problems, the assessors have been hampered by a market trend survey they completed for the new tax rate.

The tax rate for 1984 was set at $18.60 per thousand for residential, commercial and open space properties. Prior to Proposition 2 1/2 and 100 percent valuation, Cohasset's tax rate was more than $55 per thousand.

Cohasset's week . . .

Cedar Acres fire

Acting Chief Mark Trask praised the efforts of Cohasset firefighters during a house fire on Cedar Acres Lane last Thursday.

According to Trask, the department received a call at 5:38 p.m. about a kitchen fire at the Lepere home on Cedar Acres Lane. Trask, who was nearby the scene, inspecting the water reconstruction work, arrived at the home within minutes.

Fire had spread quickly from the kitchen stove, to the cabinets, to the rear of the house. Mrs. Lepere and a son were out completing a newspaper delivery route, and supper had been simmering on the stove, Trask said.

Somehow a fire ignited from the flames on the gas stove, he added. Another son was upstairs, but escaped to a neighbor's house before the flames engulfed the kitchen.

Engines 3 and 4 and ladder 1 responded to the scene. Capt. Roger Lincoln, Lenny Davis, Tom Finegan, and Robert Protulis handled the apparatus. Trask said without the quick, professional work of these men, the fire would have enveloped the home. The firefighters knocked down the flames within 20 minutes. There was an estimated $50,000 damage to the home. The structure of the Colonial two-story home and garage were not substantially damaged.

At the same time, Trask said the department received a call about a burst water tank in a Jerusalem Road home, and a false alarm on Atlantic Avenue.

Trask appointed

Despite a recommendation from Fire Chief Martin Dooley to appoint someone else, selectmen this week appointed Peter Trask of Cohasset to a permanent firefighter- E.M.T. position.

Although Trask, whose brother Mark is a captain in the fire department, scored a perfect 100 on the Civil Service test, Chief Dooley recommended the appointment of Thomas Hernon of Cohasset. When asked after the selectmen's meeting, why he did not recommend Trask, the chief would not comment.

Hernon and the other candidate, Barbara Bowen of Cohasset, both scored 98 on the state test. Although Bowen seemed to be a qualified candidate, she did not meet selectmen's requirement for E.M.T. certification. Trask has been a temporary firefighter in the department for the past year and a half.

Selectmen Chairman Clifford Mitman warned the chief they were advised by Town Counsel that the top scorer on the test should be selected for appointment. If that was not followed, there should be a good reason for not choosing the top candidate, he said.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle said that if a person is qualified, and has obtained the best test scores, it has been a tradition to appoint that person to the first vacancy.

"Nothing is in his personnel file, about the performance of his duties - anything you can add about Trask?" Mitman asked the chief. Chief Dooley replied that he had interviewed the three candidates, and if he could not make an honest recommendation "maybe I was wasting my time," he told the board.

Selectman John DeBassio, former chief of the police department, told Chief Dooley that if two persons with equal experience and qualifications were competing for the same job, the one with the highest Civil Service score should be appointed.

The board then voted unanimously to appoint Trask to the permanent position. They also voted to offer an appointment to Hernon to fill the temporary position vacated by Trask's promotion.

Town Hall ramp

Selectmen gave the go-ahead for plans to construct a permanent handicapped access ramp outside Town Hall. The temporary structure built in time for the April municipal elections has been dismantled.

Jim Lagrotteria is heading up the voluntary efforts to build the ramp. Building Inspector Edward Poskus, a registered engineer, has developed plans for the ramp.

Selectmen said this week that they would like the ramp constructed on the parking lot side of the building for easier access. Although a study committee is currently reviewing plans to renovate or reconstruct Town Hall, selectmen said there is currently a great need for the access ramp.

Where's the chief?

Although Fire Chief Martin Dooley appeared at Monday night's selectmen's meeting in that capacity, by the time he left the meeting he was on sick leave again.

Chief Dooley arrived at the meeting in the chief's official car. He was to appear at the Selectmen's meeting to discuss a permanent firefighter's appointment.

He left the meeting and returned a brief time later. Selectmen then asked if he had a doctor's written approval to return to duty. He had visited his physician but the letter had not reached selectmen's office yet.

Chief Dooley has been out sick for two weeks. He was injured during an inspection of the water main reconstruction work. He said his physician okayed his return to duty Monday, but the written approval had not been completed.

Selectmen chairman, Clifford Mitman said without the note, Chief Dooley could not return to work. Directly after the meeting, he told the chief to notify Capt. Mark Trask that he was to remain Acting Chief until selectmen received the physician's letter.

At 9:42 p.m., Monday, Chief Dooley notified Capt. Trask to remain in charge of the department until further notification. The car and his portable radio were to be picked up at the chief's residence, "per order of the Board of Selectmen."

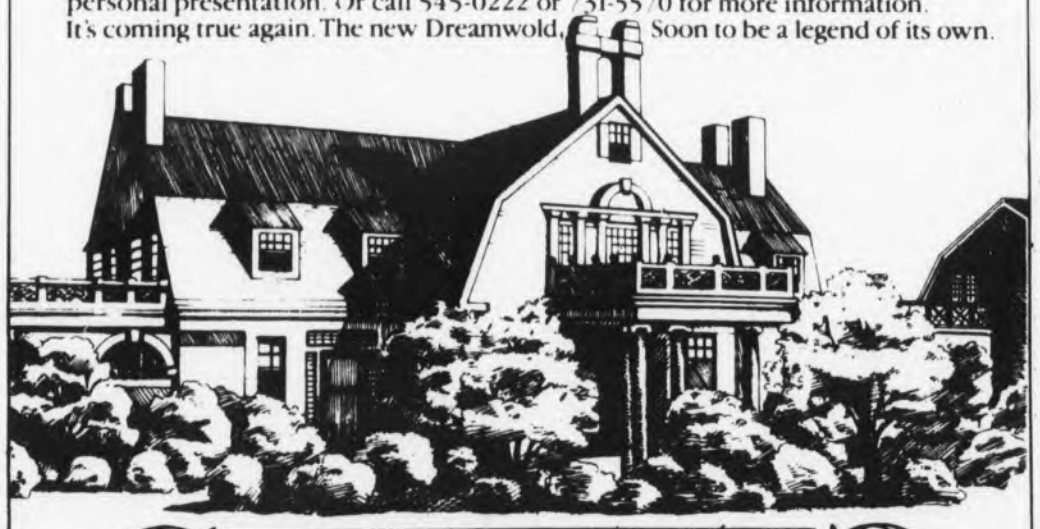
In a second notation in the Fire Department log book, Chief Dooley wrote at 9:55 p.m., "per order of the Chief — any firefighter out sick for any period of time will require a doctor's certificate upon return to duty."

A third note, written in the log at 10:24 p.m. states, "per order of Cliff Mitman to Dooley — doctor's certificate requirement rescinded, except in the event of duty injury a doctor's note is needed to return to work."

As of Tuesday afternoon, Mark Trask remained as Acting Chief.

Once upon a time, not so far away, a brave Copper King built an enchanted kingdom in a land by the sea.

There in Scituate, he surrounded his mansion with idyllic pastures and formal gardens. Then built a fairy tale tower to watch over his dream.



Some said he was eccentric. Others said he was vain. But in truth, the legendary millionaire, Thomas Lawson, was building a beautiful haven as a gift for his beloved family. And in 1903, Dreamwold came true.

Now it's coming true again. All the majesty, privacy and splendor that was Dreamwold. In twenty-six unique Victorian condominium residences encircling a spectacular rose garden and beautiful swimming pool.

Dreamwold. A magnificent blend of historic restoration and new construction as only Boston's premier developer, Parencorp, could do.

This fall, Dreamwold is available at pre-completion prices, starting in the mid-100's. Visit Dreamwold between 11:00 AM and 6:00 PM daily for a personal presentation. Or call 545-0222 or 731-5570 for more information.

It's coming true again. The new Dreamwold. Soon to be a legend of its own.

voters participated. But the total registered voters was smaller four years ago, and the total number of ballots totaled 4252.

Five hundred new Cohasset voters participated in Tuesday's election, and there were numerous absentee ballots.

The Reagan - Bush ticket took off here, gathering 2585 votes compared to 1623 for the Democrats, Walter Mondale and Geraldine Ferarro.

Four years ago, Cohasset swarmed to Reagan's side with a total of 2190 votes compared to 1286 for Jimmy Carter and Walter Mondale. Independent candidate John Anderson received 676 votes in 1980.

Democrat Studds was also an overwhleming favorite here four years ago, gathering almost 3000 votes. His Republican opponent Paul Doane had 1047 votes.

In his defeat here, Democrat Studds gathered 2048 votes. Republican Crampton of Plymouth received almost 100 additional votes.

In the race for the Governor's Council, Peter Eleey received 1837 votes, while challenger Patricia Ruskiewicz had 1754 votes Tuesday.

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, who was unopposed in her fourth bid, received 3491 votes. There were numerous write-in candidates added to the election ballots totals.

According to the Town Clerk, the 20 poll workers completed the ballot counting by 12:30 a.m. Wednesday. No problems were reported throughout the long night.

"Actually, this election went much smoother than the September primary," Mrs. Marks said Wednesday morning. "The people working here did a great job. Everything went very smooth. The only thing that holds us up a little is the number of write-in candidates which were added to just about every race."

These are the votes cast for the major party candidates in each of the Cohasset races. A record number of registered voters cast their ballots Tuesday at Town Hall. Eighty-two percent of all eligible Cohasset voters turned out at the polls. Although the ballot tabulation concluded at 12:30 a.m., Town Clerk Frances Marks said there were no problems. She praised the long hours of effort provided by the 20 Cohasset poll workers.

A highlight of the Cohasset election is always Congressman Gerry Studds at the polls. The local and state media had their cameras aimed toward the incumbent. (Bill Quigley)

Studds and Golden reaction

CONGRESSIONAL RACE

The key to Studd's overall victory over Crampton was New Bedford (the largest town in the district) where he captured more than 70 percent of the vote.

Specifically around Cohasset, Studds did not fare well.

His only win in the Greater Cohasset area was Marshfield where he beat Crampton 5,269 to 4,722.

Studds lost in Hanover where Crampton collected 2,943 votes and Studds only tallied 2,593 votes. In other towns, Studds lost in Norwell, 2,526 to 2,067; Hingham, 6,077 to 4,690; Scituate, 4,732 to 4,395 and Cohasset, 2,135 to 2,048.

Early Wednesday morning, both candidates complimented each other for the style of their campaigns.

Crampton said Studds was an able and committed public servant and it was time for Tenth Congressional voters to allow Studds to get on with the job of representing the district.

Both candidates couldn't heap enough praise for their dedicated campaign workers but Crampton added at the end of his speech there is a chance the voters in the district will be hearing from him again.

Studds said both candidates set a good example of how a campaign should be run, limiting the debate to the issues "with an occasional flight into hyperbole."

Reflecting on his overall vote and the national elections, Studds quoted from famous author Mark Twain who said, "Always do the right thing. This will gratify some people and astound the rest."

He felt voters around the country voted from their affections rather than their mind. "I am not saying this in a pejorative way but I feel" the nation will be looking toward the House of Representatives for the next two to four years because the country will be faced with an unprecented military buildup; an arms race never before seen on this planet and a mind boggling assault on our environment."

Studds also warned about President Ronald Reagan's attack on aid to education and to the elderly the Equal Rights Amendment civil rights and human rights "with an increasing likelihood our young men will be called upon to bear arms in Central America."

He also wished he had placed bets on the size and date of the tax increase request. "There will be a tax increase. It will be regressive and it will be unfair." He

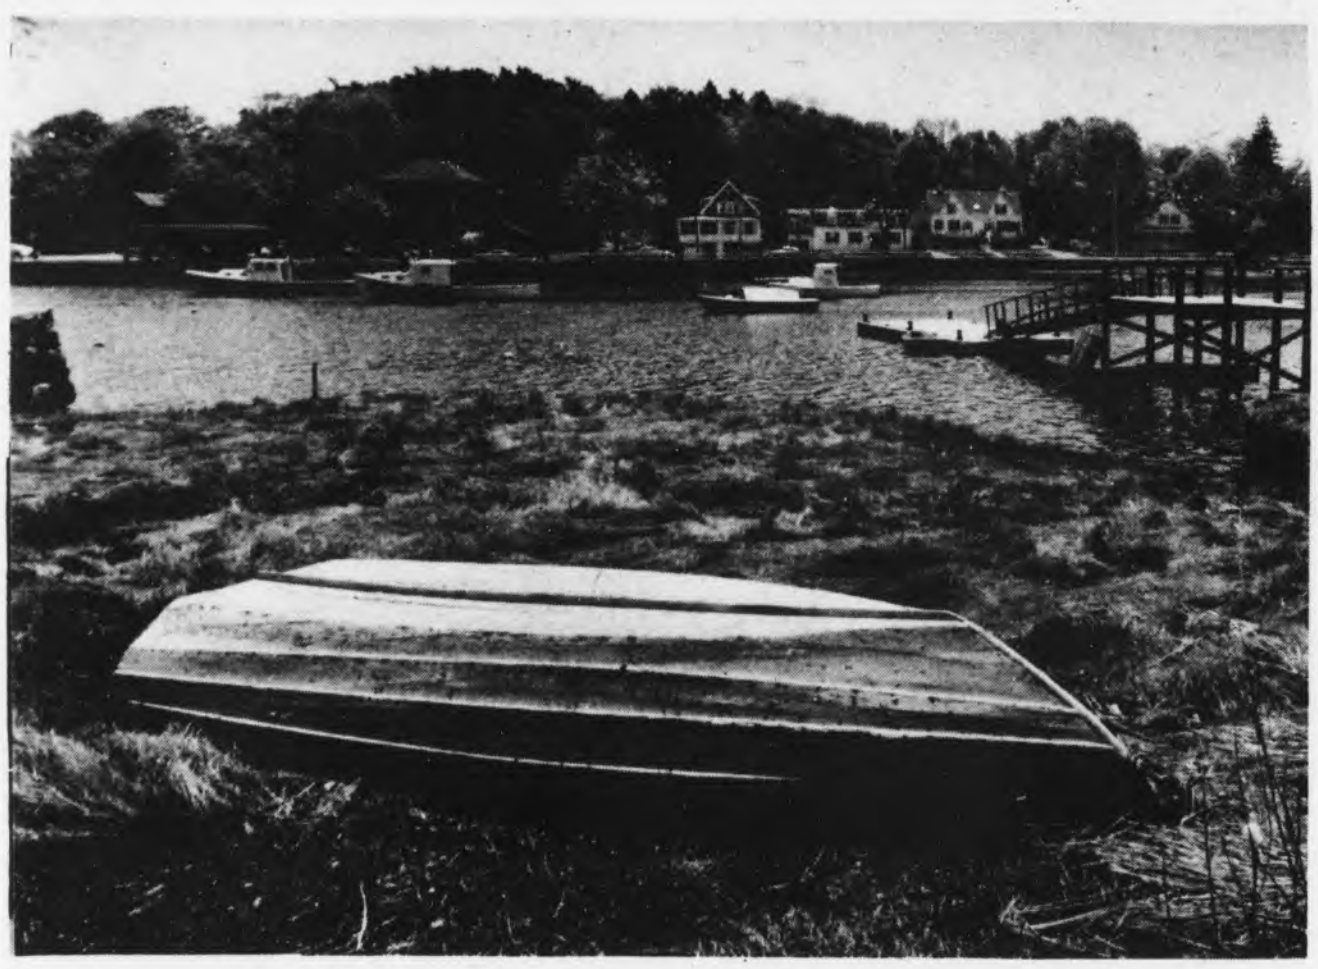
Salvador continues the family's fishing heritage

(This article was written by Frank Sharman, a writer from St. Kitts, West Indies. Ed.)

Decked out in an oversize blue baseball cap, thick blue jeans and a warm jacket, a small boy called Glenn Salvador stood on the end of a sturdy wooden dock in Massachusetts clutching his lunch pail. He gazed up in awe at Grandfather Bernard's mighty lobster boat as she gently nudged her way up to the edge of the Cohasset Harbor dock.



It was a bright and sunny Saturday morning, in the spring and just over 30 years ago. Young Glenn was about to get his first taste of the world of New England commercial fishing. In fact, this trip with Grandpa was a special birthday treat — for young Glenn was just three years and one week old and feeling quite 'a helluva fella' about to embark on a day of adventure which would firmly mark him as a professional fisherman like his Dad, his Grandad and his Great Grandad before him.

Thirty years later, but this time in the sparkling blue waters of the Caribbean Sea off the tiny island of St. Kitts, Glenn still feels 'a helluva fella' as he steps aboard. This time however, it's onto the deck of his own boat — for Glenn has become the forth generation of New England Salvadors to earn their living as professional fishermen.

The 44 foot Maine-built offshore lobster boat, the AUDREY P. II which is named after Glenns mother, is today a long way from the Salvador family's home ground of Cohasset, Mass. but as Glenn says happily, "It's a helluva lot warmer here too.'

Dirven primarily by overfished local waters and erratic fish prices to explore other possibilites, Glenn drew on his own experience of 12 years of Caribbean vacation trips — and on father Bernard's specialized knowledge of the waters around the Caribbean's beautiful Leewards Islands — and snugged his anchor gently down on the island of St. Kitts.

Backed by a grant from the Washington-based Overseas Private Investment Corporation, Bernard Salvador and Glenn conducted a detailed fesibility study — the first OPIC grant to cover the newly independent Caribbean twin-island State of St. Kitts and Nevis.

A panoramic view of a near-deserted Cohasset Harbor.

Bernard himself was no stranger to Caribbean waters, having worked as a specialist consultant helping the island of Antigua to set up a more efficient fisheries operation under the auspices of ECIF — the Massachusetts-based Eastern Caribbean International Fisheries.

His credentials for such a task are impressive. Since 1975 he has been President of the Cohasset Fishermens Association and is Cohasset's Fish Warden. He is also currently a member of the Massachusetts Lobster Association, the South Shore Fishermens Association, the State Gear Conflict Committee and the Cohasset Harbor Study Committee. Despite all these shore-based activities, 55 year old Bernard is no senile

Scholarship fair

The public is cordially invited to the twenty-sixth annual Noble and Greenough Scholarship Fair, Nobles Noel, at the school 507 Bridge Street in Dedham. The fair will be held Sunday, Nov. 11, from noon to 4 p.m. and on Monday, Nov. 12, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Admission is free.

The fair will feature over thirty boutiques, each chosen to offer a wide range of original and unique items for your early holiday shopping. Raffle prizes will include air fare for two to any destination within the continental United States and two Cabbage Patch dolls.

Again this year, good used clothing, attic treasures, plants, and homemade baked and frozen food will be sold. Refreshments will be available on Sunday and lunch will be served on Monday.

All proceeds from the fair will benefit the Nobel and Greenough Scholarship Fund.

Community Thanksgiving service

Wednesday, Nov. 21 at 8 p.m. in the First Parish Meeting House, the religious communities of Cohasset will join for a Community Thanksgiving Service. Lay and clergy leaders, musicians and choirs from each of the churches will participate.

The Thanksgiving Offering received during the service will be given to Project Bread, the Boston agency which serves as a clearing-house for a large number of programs for the hungry.

Participating churches include Beechwood Congregational Church, First Parish (Unitarian Universalist) Church, Panagia Greek Orthodox Church, St. Anthony's Roman Catholic Church, St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, Second Congregational Church and the Vedanta Center.

The public is invited to share in this community-wide service. "Come, ye thankful people, come . . . "

Workshops on aging

The Social Service League of Cohasset will be sponsoring two workshops on aging. Friday, Nov. 9 and Friday, Nov. 16.

Anyone interested is welcome to join. The series will be held at 16 Highland Avenue from 9:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m.

Topics will be "Social and Emotional Aspects of Aging" and Case Study and Discussion. The workshops will be led by Carolyn Housman LICSW, and Mary Anne Hansen, Public Health Nurse.

The Senior Shuttle Bus schedule for November Mall trips is the following: Monday, Nov. 12 to Braintree Mall, Wednesday, Nov. 14 to Hanover Mall and Thursday, Nov. 15 leaving at 9 a.m. for Hingham Bus Station (for those passengers who wish to travel to Quincy or Boston).

After leaving bus station, the shuttle will continue to Marshall's, Harborlight Mall and Purity Supreme. For reservations, please call 383-0821.

Saturday, Nov. 10 from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Cohasset Historical Society's headquarters, the Galeb Lothrop House, 14 Summer Street, is the time, date and place for the society's second annual Antiques and Collectables Appraisal Day. Two experts from the company of Robert W. Skinner, Inc. will be present to appraise your antique or collectables items.

The cost of a verbal appraisal, by donation, will be $5 for one item, $12.50 for three items. Written appraisals can be arranged at special cost. Antiques and collectables appraisal days have become a popular event on the South Shore, and the Historical Society's presentation features specialists from New England's leading auction and appraisal firm. Most all types of antiques and collectables can be appraised by the firm's representatives except stamps and coins.

If you have artworks, furniture, furnishings, china or porcelain, toys, silver or other good items of which you have wondered about the value, plan to bring them to the Cohasset Historical Society's Appraisal Day at the Lothrop House. Proceeds of the event will be for the benefit of the Cohasset Historical Society.

Society dinner meeting

Tuesday Nov. 13 is the date of the Cohasset Historical Society's fall dinner meeting featuring a special guest speaker.

The dinner will be served at 6:30 p.m. at the Unitarian Parish House Hall, and will feature beef tips on rice and hot apple pie catered by Cohasset's Strawberry Parfait.

Following the dinner there will be a short business meeting.

The special guest speaker will be a representative of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, Cape Cod, whose subject will be the story of the Cape Cod Canal. The talk will be illustrated. Built during the early years of the 20th century so that shipping might avoid the dangerous shoals and treacherous waters to the east and south of the Cape, the canal was an engineering feat for its time.

It remains one of our country's major waterways, and its story is fascinating as well as informative.

Reservations for the dinner will be $6.50 per person, made in advance only. Checks may be sent to the Historical Society at P.O. Box 324, Cohasset, or may be dropped off at the Lothrop House, 14 Summer Street. Call 383-0773 or 383-6930 for reservations. Seating is limited.

around town

Cohasset's Susan Dalrymple is a member of the Bridgewater State College tennis team. She is a junior majoring in Physical Education.

☐ Had a nice note from Kay McNeill last week, everyone has settled in in their new home. The McNeills live in Hudson, N.H. now, and are hoping to visit Cohasset real soon. They are missed by all! Especially the football refs, Jim always attended the games and always had a word or two for them. Even saw a ref scanning the crowd last week . . .

☐ Grand reports are coming in about Diane Maloney, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Maloney. Diane graduated in 1984 Cum Laude from Northeastern University with a BS degree in physical therapy. Diane was a five-year deans list student, and was inducted as a member of Kappa Delta Pi (a national honor society in education). Diane has successfully completed and passed the physical therapy examination for licensure in the Commonwealth of Mass. As a result, she is now a registered physical therapist. Presently, Diane is working as a therapist at the Physical Therapy Sports Conditioning Center in Quincy which specializes in orthopedics.

☐ John Replogle had good news to report from Dartmouth last week. John made the varsity freshman crew team, and is looking forward to their first meet against Yale that will take place on Nov. 11. John is also continuing his work with fellow students . . . he is a member of the Residence Hall Council. He is sure to do a great job. Everyone remembers the good work he did while on the Student Council at the high school.

☐ This weekend (and all weekends through Nov. 18) will be a special one for Andrea Burke, daughter of Tom and Rita Burke of Windy Hill. Andrea is playing in the musical that will appear at the Wang Center's China Showcase, "Chinese Cabaret: Cold Stone and the Water Flowing". She will be playing the leading role (Andrea received rave reviews from both the Globe and the Herald. Both stated that she "exudes such musical and dramatic authority it's hard to believe that she hasn't been singing and dancing for years; also called "dazzling"). The Chinese Cabaret is a musical play about a woman who dances obsessively with the phantoms of a dead relationship. With a libretto adapted from Chinese courtship poems of the Bronze Age (800-600 B.C.) and a score composed by Melnick, the play has a contemporary feel while its theme transcends the modern day setting. It runs Friday through Sunday at 8 p.m. through Nov. 18, in the Wang Center's China Showcase, admission is $6.50 ($4.50 for senior citizens and students).

In his new position, West is exploring prototyping as an alternative systems development procedure. He has also served as a Junior Achievement advisor for the Hancock and has taught fundamentals of data processing in the company's supervisory curriculum.

He joined the Hancock in 1981 as a programmer trainee in administrative and financial services and has held a variety of positions in the electronic data processing and the information services area.

☐ The Duxbury Band is planning a gala show on Thanksgiving Day, both before the game and during half-time. They were pleased to be invited by us, and it will give another reason to attend the game on that day.

☐ While on the subject of football, the game this week will be in Rockland Monday, not Saturday, at 1:30. It is a busy week for Cohasset sports, and we should be proud of our student athletes. Both girls' and boys' soccer teams have made it to the States as well as the girls' field hockey team. For a school with one of the smallest student enrollments in the league, our kids are to be congratulated. Best of luck to each and every one!

☐ The Testimonial Dinner held for Gordon Flint last Friday was a testimony indeed, with several people on hand to wish Gordon well and to thank him for all of his years of service to Cohasset. Here's to a long and happy retriement with lots of good golf weather, Gordon!

☐ Sounds like the Chess Club is going great guns! The members have worked hard to make it a success, and still would like more players. If you are interested, call 383-9115 and join the fun.

☐ The Democrats certainly made a hit when they drove their motorcade through Cohasset last Sunday . . . open convertibles in the cold weather and all. Now that the election is over, hope your candidate won.

also warned that funds will be diverted from the elderly nutrition program to the MX Missile, B-1 Bomber or to the "Star Wars concept."

GOLDEN REFLECTS

Not one to rest on his laurels, newly-elected State Senator Bill Golden didn't linger in bed Wednesday morning after an exhausting campaign and a night of celebration. Instead, at 6:30 a.m. he was out on an overpass of the Southeast Expressway with a "Thank You" sign in hand.

He was the only Democrat in the district to have a clear-cut victory in what was a South Shore Republican sweep. "The Republican sweep was overwhelming, except in Hull and Weymouth," he said Wednesday. "And a plurality overall of 12,000 votes in a district this size is very convincing."

Of the seven towns in the Plymouth-Norfolk district, he lost only Marshfield, rival Anna Doherty's hometown, and Duxbury. "And in Marshfield we lost by only 150 votes," he noted. In his hometown of Weymouth, it was a 2-1 win.

"I'm very sincere when I say this is the cleanest, most issue-oriented campagin I've ever been in," Golden said. "There was no pettiness and there was a lot of good fellowship. There are a lot of issues Anna and I agree on and we will probably work together in the future.

"It's been a long campaign but not a lonely one," he said. "The energy, effort and support of not only my wife Paula and my children but of all my campaign workers—it's become like a family. They really played their hearts out. There were many diverse philosophical backgrounds, with many who had decided to get back into the political arena after being away. And Anna's workers worked their hearts out, too. She was a most worthy opponent."

The new senator's first goal (though he doesn't actually take over from the retiring Allan McKinnon until January) will be to sit down with the whole South Shore legislative delegation and put together a common program of goals that he would like to see include environmental issues and transportation. "I think it's important to get a consensus and map out legislative objectives to be achieved with this administration," he said. He also wants to take each Cabinet secretary on a complete seven-town tour to make them aware of what the South Shore needs.

He plans to attend the Nov. 14 meeting of the South Shore Transportation Caucus, originally founded by McKinnon and former Rep. (now Secretary of Human Services) Philip Johnston of Marshfield, which will be held at 7:30 p.m. in Barnes Auditorium of Hingham Town Hall, Route 228. "Absolutely, we want to keep that group active," he said.

Now that the long campaign trail is finally at an end, Golden could become somewhat philosophical. "No matter what else, I think politics should be fun," he said. "It shouldn't interfere with friendships. I made friends on both sides during this campaign and that was one of the most enjoyable parts."

Straits Pond committee

Selectmen are seeking a member for the Straits Pond Management Committee.

Members of the committee include two neighborhood residents, the executive secretary to the Board of Selectmen, and the health agent. Since there is currently no executive secretary and the health agent is new to the position, there has been no recent meeting. One resident remains on the committee.

Selectmen said anyone interested in serving on the committee should contact their office.

South Shore books

The H.A. Manning Company is pleased to announce delivery of a series of 1984 South Shore little phone books. Five individual books make up the South Shore group. The towns of Norwell, Hanover, Marshfield, and Hingham are four individual books, and Scituate/Cohasset is the fifth in the series. All town residents and businesses will be receiving their copy in the mail, free of charge.

Each book features a White Pages for just the local community and a complete professional Yellow Pages for all businesses. Also included are money saving coupons from local merchants, local maps, dentist guide, government guide, physicians and surgeons guide and a restaurant guide.

RAIL PASSES
A pass which can give you freedom to use the excellent rail system in Europe during certain periods of time can often be an excellent buy. Most of these passes have to be purchased from a travel agent in the U.S. before departing for Europe. The most well-known pass is the Eurailpass, valid for rail travel in 16 countries, with the one glaring exception being Great Britian which has the Britrail Pass. One of the major advantages of these passes is the convenience of hopping on a train and going where and when you like. The other is cost. Because the pass has a fixed cost, the more you travel, the lower will be your cost per mile.
If you would like to experience a truly grand vacation this year at a lower price than you would expect to pay, consider joining a tour. There are tours available to points all over the world. Your biggest dilemma will be choosing just one. Come in and discuss the matter with us. You will find us located at 3 Brook Street, Scituate. We are open 9-5 Mon.-Fri.; 10-4 Sat. and by appointment. Tel. 545-4500 and 383-1717. Most major credit cards are honored.

A planning problem

There's a lot of discussion about the proposed commercial developments looking to locate on Route 3A and Sohier Street.

Neighbors in the vicinity are overwhelmingly opposed to both projects. Yet the two developers are eager to locate in the area, and if they do not succeed, there will surely be more to follow.

Opponents bring several issues into their arguments against these specific developments. Watershed protection, preservation of wetlands, and objection to the types of businesses proposed, comprise the basis of their opposition.

The developers have turned in every direction to please planners and conservationists and their next-door neighbors. But the simple fact is, these specific developments are not wanted. And the opponents will not welcome them to this community.

Engineers, architects and attorneys representing these new developers have repeatedly presented the pleas to construct their facilities here. They will be good, clean, environmentally-sound, law-abiding residents of Cohasset. They claim that, contrary to their opponents' statements, they are a needed component in this community.

Shops, banks, and supermarkets are needed in this area of town, they argue. A car dealership, specifically a Ford franchise, is a necessity here, they state. People in neighboring communities as well as Cohasset, need more local shopping facilities.

We have not been convinced by their voluminous statements.

Yes, the land is zoned for commercial development. But we have the option of deciding what type of commercial development will eventually locate here. As neighbors have testified, a car dealership is not the best neighbor the Fairoaks residents could hope for. Car dealerships also include repair bays, body shops and customer traffic. And who would predict a success when a former Ford dealership suffered a lonely death just a few years ago. The vacant building remains, a haunting memory of the past.

And a super-supermarket on the Route 3A land, which has been rumored to be a Stop and Shop brand, will ultimately mean the death of the same store down the road. Perhaps another food store will relocate there, maybe another type. But no one can predict its success.

Sure, it might be nice to have more businesses here to share the tax base. But we can afford to be particular. Just because we have a vacant stretch of commercial land along Route 3A, doesn't mean we have to jump at the chance to develop it. Let's make sure everything is just as we want it. Let's protect our future water supply from contamination, stop any encroachment upon our precious wetlands areas. And let's make sure that any business that locates here is a necessary, welcomed addition to our neighborhood.

That is our perogative and our responsibility.

Tales of a political activist

By Claire McDonough

Breida and Skipper had their heads together. When I entered the room they suddenly stopped talking.

"You're discussing me, aren't you?" I demanded.

When they didn't respond, I looked around nervously. "It's that darned Polateen you belong to, isn't it? You think I'm a compulsive political activist, don't you? Well, you're wrong."

Breida took a deep breath. "Mother," she began in that ultra-reasonable tone of voice one might use to try to coax a crazed ape down from the Empire State Building, "the election's been over since Tuesday, and you're still wearing political buttons. Don't you think it's time you put them away?"

I covered my buttons protectively. "I'm only wearing them till I can find brooches the right size to cover up the little holes the buttons made in my clothes. Then I'll take them off."

"O.K.," Skipper said gently. "Now explain why you stood on 3A this morning waving at cars. You didn't even have a sign to hold."

I sniffed. "This would be a better world if more people tried to be friendly to other human beings. Whether they know them or not. And anyway, I don't have to stand out on street corners and wave. I can stop any time I want to."

They looked at each other and shook their heads sadly.

"Denial," Breida told me, "is the first symptom."

"Look," Skipper added, "you show every sign of compulsive political activism. As long as there's a campaign going on, you have yourself under control. Sort of. But the day after an election you give every indication of acute withdrawal.

You no longer do it for pleasure — you need a certain amount of political activity every day just to keep yourself from going to pieces."

"You're saying that I'm a political junkie," I objected, and that's absolutely ridiculous. Who took my voting lists?"

"You don't need them," Breida replied. "The election is over."

"I know that," I snapped. "I just like to have my lists near me. And anyway, Gigi or Ellie or Sue might call any minute and ask me to 'Dear Friend' cards for somebody."

Correctly interpreting the guilty looks they exchanged, I traced the telephone cord and plugged it back into the outlet.

"It's for your own good," Breida pleaded.

"Don Brown's probably been trying to reach me all afternoon," I told her accusingly.

Skipper sighed "Mother, repeat after me, 'The election is over.' "

Breida tried to reinforce him. "It's better this way. Don't try to taper off. Go cold turkey. We know you can do it. Go ahead, say 'the election is over.' "

I avoided eye contact with them. "O.K.," I told them, "so the presidential election is over. So is U.S. Senator and Congressman. Ditto state senator and state rep. Even county commissioner. But somewhere there's a campaign. Somewhere envelopes are waiting to be stuffed. Somewhere someone wants someone to compile sure vote lists. Somewhere there are signs to be held."

They shook their heads slowly. "No, there are not. Face it. The election is over."

They each held one of my hands.

"Take that first step," Breida begged. "Admit that you're powerless over politics."

"If you won't do it for yourself," Skipper added, "do it for your family. There's a whole new life waiting for you. There's help at hand if you'll accept it. Please."

I looked at them. "O.K.," I blurted, "I'll do it. If I can stay away from one campaign for one day, I'll kick the habit. You can throw out the voting lists."

They threw their arms around me happily. "That's great, Mother! You have just become a recovering political activist. We know you'll make it."

They didn't see my crafty smile. Soon there would be a campaign for selectman. And I had another voting list behind the bathroom tank.

Let's be practical about car dealer

Letters

To the Editor:

As a citizen I wrote a brief note to the Planning Board expressing my opinion that locating a car dealership on Sohier St. made little sense. Besides being adjacent to a residential development, a car dealership went out of business a couple of years ago two hundred yards down the road. It is now an eyesore on Rte. 3A.

While we must accept free enterprise as one of the foundations of our society, there must also be a responsibility of the community to assess the needs of the area in view of proposed developments and business endeavors. Businesses ought not to be able to override the common good in the name of free enterprise.

But let's be practical. If the owners of this Sohier St. property really feel Cohasset needs another car dealership, why not arrange a land swap or lease/purchase plan for the former Ford dealership on Rte. 3A? The property would be on the main thoroughfair. The business would utilize an improved, but idle piece of property. And most important, Fairoaks would be spared the encroachment of a noncompatible business in their neighborhood. Hopefully a more suitable use for this land — if it is buildable at all — could be found.

My sentiments for Staszkos project across the street, are the same. Cohasset appears to be adequately served by the existing shops, supermarkets and convenience stores in town. Is there really a clear and urgent enough need for this sort of project that justifies jeopardizing the town's environment and character? I think not.

Selectmen audio problems addressed

(This letter was written to the Board of Selectmen from David Chitlim, chairman of the Cable Television Counsel. Ed.)

Dear Mr. Mitman:

The Cable Television Counsel has asked me to write to your board regarding the audio portion of televising of your meetings. In the Town there has been good response to these on-air meetings but there is an awareness among viewers and the production staff that the audio portion is - well, not too audible. As you are well aware, even for the audience in the hall itself, the acoustics are not good and much of the meeting is lost for most people.

Our request, therefore, is that as soon as possible, you install more adequate equipment that will enhance reception not only in the hall but in the cable homes. There are now over 1000 homes on cable and the Company expects this to grow finally to about 1500 customers out of 2500 homes in Cohasset.

Both the Council and the American Cablesystems Company would be glad to assist you in improving your audio system for the benefit of both the live as well as the cable audience.

David Chitlim

The unsung heroes

To the Editor:

The Cohasset freshmen football team this year is going unnoticed. What a shame it is! A group of talented young gentlemen stand with an undefeated record. A record which deserves attention because many of these boys promise to go on to the varsity team. The freshmen team has two fine coaches who have trained and motivated these boys to a winning record. I feel that this group of talented young men deserve recognition for a job well done.

A narrative masterpiece of Cohasset's history

At the Town Meeting of March 5, 1894, voters approved Warrant Article 16 which read "Will the Town appoint a Committee on Town History, or act upon anything related thereto".

Thus Cohasset's first historical organization came into being, constituted of five members all appointed by the Town's Moderator, John Quincy Adams Lothrop. The five chosen were the venerable Rev. Joseph Osgood D.D., pastor of Cohasset's original First Parish; Aaron Pratt Esq.; Edmund Pomeroy Collier; Dr. Oliver H. Howe and Newcomb Bates Tower.

Immediately the committee was further enlarged by a special vote to include the Rev. E. Victor Bigelow, pastor of the Second Congregational Church. Since the town's vote included a provision that the new committee could choose more members if it saw fit, the names of Ira B. Pratt and George W. Collier were added less than a month later.

Those serving on the History Committee were leading citizens of the town, and astute students of Cohasset's early history. The first work they undertook was to begin gathering information for the publication of a comprehensive history of the town. Early maps were consulted, those showing the first highways and roads, and interviews were scheduled with the town's "old residents" to obtain information about bygone days. Plans, maps, letters, old deeds, account books, newspapers, even railroad timetables were asked for by the committee, and a collection of historical artifacts was begun. The public library was asked to make available space for exhibit of these items, and its response was immediate.

A library committee consisting of Abraham H. Tower, Miss Edith M. Bates and Miss Sarah B. Collier was chosen to help the town committee arrange its displays. By April of 1895 the Committee on Town History had written a paper describing the town's first highways and roads, and the dividing up of lands of Conahasset in the year 1670. From old records and from word of mouth there began to appear a scenario of a small village at first scarcely more than an offshoot of its parent town, Hingham.

Then by February of 1896 the town committee had turned its attention to even earlier residents, the Quonahassit Indians, a stone-age society found on these shores by Capt. John Smith in 1614. Early industry caught the committee's attention, particularly the old grist mill at Cohasset Harbor.

The town's long history as a maritime and fishing center came under the committee's scrutiny. Meanwhile, work continued on the writing down of information to be used for a comprehensive volume of town history to be issued by the committee.

Committee member Rev. Bigelow volunteered to undertake the monumental task of writing numerous chapters to be compiled into book form. By late 1898, after exhaustive checking and rechecking of their information, the committee was ready to put into print Bigelow's new book, known as "The Narrative History of the Town of Cohasset, Massachusetts".

Chapter after chapter had emerged over a period of numerous months, beginning with the town's granite rock geology, its glacial epoch and botany, and its Indian tribe. The pioneer settlers, first homes, the land division, and the precincting of Cohasset in 1717 all formed separate chapters, as did the building of early industry, the separation from Hingham in 1770, and the development of schools, churches and cultural life.

Seafaring, fishing, shipwrecks, and lifesaving received close attention, as did the construction of Minot's Ledge Lighthouse. When completed, Bigelow's History covered the range of Cohasset's history from its very beginnings to the time of its publication. Numerous pictures showed old Cohasset and some of its residents, and carefully drawn maps recorded the evolution of the town.

Even as Bigelow wrote in 1898, the old New England seacoast village was becoming transformed into a metropolitan suburb and old landmarks familiar to generations of Cohasseters were disappearing.

The "Narrative History" stands today as a record of eras long past and it is the definitive history of our town. The original edition of Rev. Bigelow's 1898 book long ago was sold out; but its continuing popularity has led to two reprintings. Currently, the Cohasset Historical Society has made available a printing of the "Narrative History" as a commemorative volume. Bigelow's picturesque style of writing, rooted at it was in the 19th century manner, created a 560 page volume that is not only fascinating and highly informative, but easily readable. The "Narrative History of the Town of Cohasset" is an ideal holiday gift for the student of history and for the casual reader alike. If you would like to include this unique book in your holiday giving, please contact the Historical Society at 383-6930 or 383-0773, or stop at Fleming's, Cohasset Center. The cost is $21 including sales tax.

Murray's memos

By Mary Jeanette Murray

Report from the State House

Reaganomics comes through again for the needy. The Fuel Assistance Program for Massachusetts is funded by the Federal Department of Health and Human Services under the guidance of the Secretary of the Department, Margaret Heckler. Massachusetts will be the recipient of approximately 60 to $75 million for the 1984-1985 winter fuel assistance.

To explain this program Representative Murray's office has the program COLD RELIEF brochures which describe how the program works, how eligibility is determined, and where assistance can be obtained.

"It is to help those most in need this winter, and I am confident that this brochure will help us reach that goal", Mary Jeanette stated.

The Fuel Assistance Program is designed to help low-income households meet the high costs of home heating. It is not intended to cover the entire cost of home heating. Eligible households are expected to use their own financial resources for fuel costs in addition to fuel assistance payments.

Mary Jeanette's office will supply a copy of the booklet upon request. Simply write or call her office. Representative Mary Jeanette Murray Room 134, State House Boston, MA 02133 or phone 722-2400. You may also contact South Shore Community Action Council, 17 Court Street (Rear) Plymouth, Mass. 02361 Tel. (617) 746-6707, Plymouth.

December production

The Cohasset Dramatic Club is feverishly working on its original English Patomime version of "Cinderella." This is not the fairybook tale we all knew as children, although many of the familiar themes are there; this piece was written specifically for the club by author and noted columnist of the Christian Science Monitor, Rushworth Kidder, and employs far-out gags and broad, hilarious comedy.

An original English Pantomime has never before graced the stage of the Cohasset Town Hall where performances are scheduled for Dec. 7, 8 and 14 at 8 p.m. and Dec. 9 and 15 at 2 p.m. All Senior Citizens are invited to the dress rehearsal Dec. 5 at 8 p.m. at no charge. Tickets are available in advance at Fleming's Hardware, 124 Elm Street in downtown Cohasset or by calling 383-0170. This is family entertaiment at its most enchanting.

Varsity Girls' Field Hockey

The girls started off their week beating Norwell 2 to 1. Maureen Farren had both goals, assisted on one by Lee Sullivan and on the other by Cindy Spooner. Offensively, Cohasset had an outstanding game led by Cindy Spooner, Vicki Spooner, Maureen Farren and Maria Cahill. By winning this game, Cohasset clinched a spot in the state tournament.

Tuesday, Cohasset lost to Duxbury 2 to 1. Maureen Farren picked up the Skipper's only goal, assisted by Vicki Spooner who had one of her best games of the season. On defense, both Lee Sullivan and Jill Shockman broke up Duxbury's offensive attack several times.

Thursday, Hanover overpowered Cohasset 3 to 0. Anne O'Leary turned in a good effort for the Skippers and Cindy Spooner and Vicki Spooner played very well together. Kara MacDonald, Maria Cahill, and Lee Sullivan all showed both intensity and hustle during this game as well.

Tuesday, Cohasset will play Harwich away for their first tournament game. The girls are all very optimistic and feel they have a good shot of winning.

Varsity Girls' Soccer

Tuesday, Cohasset lost to Abington 2 to 0. Cohasset hit the goal post three times and outshot Abington almost 2 to 1, but they were unable to score. However, the team never gave up and played with great hustle until the end.

For the Skippers, Amy Donovan had her best game of the year, and Sara Seavey and Carla Lucas kept the pressure on offensively. Tara Stanford also showed much improvement this game.

Cohasset came back on Thursday to beat Scituate 2 to 0. Sara Seavey picked up Cohasset's first goal assisted by Amy Duncombe followed by Susan Riley who also scored off a pass from Amy Duncombe.

The Skippers controlled the entire game and were helped along by Amy Donovan whose intensity has improved tremendously this season. Amy Duncombe, Tara Stanford, and Krissy Pompeo all had strong games as well.

Wednesday, Cohasset will travel to Natick and play a very physical team, Marion. Coach, Kennan Startzell is very confident about this game and feels his team will do very well.

Varsity Boys' Soccer

Monday, Cohasset lost to Norwell 2 to 1. Bobby Shultz picked up the Skipper's only goal off a pass from Mike DeSantis. Cohasset dominated the entire game and had 35 shots on net but unfortunately, was unable to tie it up. Despite the loss, coach Jon Anderson was pleased with the game and was not disappointed with his team's efforts.

Cohasset traveled to Sandwich on Wednesday and tied 1 to 1. Mike DeSantis scored the Skippers only goal off a penalty kick. Kevin Leary, John Reidy, and Bobby Shultz all played very well for Cohasset. Overall, this was a good game for the Skippers, for they kept Sandwich out of the state tournament.

Tuesday, Cohasset will travel to Kingston and play Sacred Heart in the first preliminary round of the state tournament. The Skippers are up for this game and hopefully will walk away with a victory.

Varsity Football

Sunday, Cohasset lost to East Bridgewater 14 to 7. Cohasset had a strong first half both ways scoring in the first three and a half minutes of the game, when Danny Curran's picture-perfect 55 yard run set up Bobby Durkin's three yard run for the touchdown. However, East Bridgewater immediately came back to score off a 12 yard pass.

Defensively for the Skippers, Philip Mahoney, Danny Curran, Jackie Cooper, Mark Lahive, and Bobby Durkin all played very well. Unfortunately, the offense was unable to come up with the big play and East Bridgewater, gaining momentum, took control of the second half and scored once again to stay ahead for good.

In preparation for Rockland, the Skippers will be working on their passing game this week which will hopefully open up their running attack. According to coach Phil Pisano, "Cohasset must bounce back and play four quarters of fundamentally sound football in order to beat this very physical team." This game will be played Monday at 1:30 p.m. in Rockland.

Plea for school repairs

Despite a rejection by the advisory committee to recommend the $225,000 request to complete school roof repairs, the school committee is eager to present their plea to town meeting voters.

School Supt. Eugene Crowell and Committee Chairman Joseph Nedrow appeared before selectmen Monday night to ask for their support of the special Town Meeting article. As an added impetus, Supt. Crowell told selectmen that the state has approved the fifty percent funding of the previously- appropriated $551,000 roof repairs. And if this article is passed Nov.19, there is a good chance an application for more state funds will be completed in time for additional approval, he said.

As he explained to selectmen, the areas of the high school roof which have been substituted for other, more seriously-deteriorating sections, are not in good shape. During recent weeks, cracks and bubbles have appeared on the roof infrastructure over the intersection of the north and west wings over the junior-senior high school.

Last week the advisory committee voted not to back this request for additional monies for more roof repairs. But as Supt. Crowell explained, they were not aware at that time that the State Department of Education had approved the paying half the costs of the repairs approved at the June town meeting. He said the state is expected to formally approve funding Cohasset's school-roof repair request at its Nov. 27 meeting.

The superintendent also noted that town's Capital Budget Committee and the School Facilities Committee have recommended funding the last phase of the school roofs project.

Selectmen told the school representatives they would-not decide on the issue until they meet with the advisory committee next week.

School news

Fifth grade news update

(This report was written by Tanya Peterson and Vanessa Jones. Ed.)

This week we had a chance to interview Mr. Deakin. It is his first year in the fifth grade at Deer Hill. He teaches Social Studies among other subjects.

We found out that Mr. Deakin is planning to have a special black history report, and at the end of the year reports on famous Americans.

He told us he is looking forward to running the Cohasset Road Race. He runs every year with Mr. Levine.

In other news, congratulations to Rod Hemassi! He won our first fifth grade Spelling Bee. His winning word was "frantic." Rod told reporters he was nervous on stage. He won a Cadbury candybar.

Town counsel visit

Mr. Richard Henderson, Cohasset Town Counsel, made his second visit to Mr. Edward F. Sheehan's senior elective's law class Thursday, Oct. 25.

In a free-wheeling question and answer session, Mr. Henderson discussed many aspects of criminal justice in America today. In his previous visit, he lectured on such diverse subjects as the education of a lawyer and constitutional rights. During the semester-length basic law course, seniors study many key aspects of contemporary legal cases.

Students are presently giving oral reports or in-depth research reports on important legal cases in American History.

Kindergarten visit

The a.m. and p.m. kindergarten classes of Mrs. Price paid a halloween visit to the ladies at the Ripley Rd. Nursing Home. We gave them pumpkin cards and treats. We sang a few halloween songs with the ladies. The ladies had fun trying on our masks. Mrs. Jimmy Thomas took video tapes of our fun. We will be on Channel 3.

Many thanks to Mrs. Moira Stansell, Mrs. Moria Williams, Mrs. Velma Begley, Mrs. Kathy Brennock and Mrs. Ilene Calwill for their wonderful help on our most exciting day in kindergarten.

Spelling bee champ

The winner of sixth grade Spelling Bee last week was Nicole Barry. Congratulations!

Aerobic class

A new Phys Ed elective course will be offered next term. This class will be held third period on days 1-3-5 for the second quarter.

The content of the course will be the development and filming of an aerobic dance/exercise video to be used for class and cable T.V. purposes.

The people involved will select their own music, choreograph their exercises and perform them for taping. This course will be a substitute for a regular P.E. class, and full credit will be given.

Acceptance into this class is subject to P.E. teacher approval.

Sign up with Mrs. Kealey.

Magical field trip

Fairies, pirates, indians and flying children were the source of fascination for the Osgood School first graders and special needs classes on their field trip to see "Peter Pan." The production was performed by Eastern Nazarene College October 19.

Bring on the books

That's the slogan for Children's Book Week this year. We'll be celebrating at Joseph Osgood School Library with a Book Fair. Parents are invited to examine the books Tuesday, Nov. 13. The books will go on sale Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, Nov. 14-16.

Mary Stein of the Hingham Square Book Store is providing the books, based on lists worked out with the school librarian. The Book Fair is sponsored by the PSO.

Food demonstrations

The Pre Chef classes have been fortunate to have had Chef Rick Conley of Cohasset and North Miami Beach Florida present food preparation demonstrations. His Veal Bercy, Souffle au chocolat, and Apple Strudel were skillfully prepared and thoroughly enjoyed by both Mrs. Wunschel and Mrs. Contis's classes.

Spooky tales

When can you go into a classroom at Osgood and not hear a sound?

When Mrs. Marilyn Pope is telling one of her exciting stories! This past week it was halloween stories. Mrs. Pope, children's librarian at the Cohasset Library, read to all classes from a collection of spooky tales. The children look forward to her weekly visits.

Fall awards night

The Cohasset Boosters will have their annual fall sports awards Nov. 14, at 7 p.m. in the high school cafeteria.

Apple pie, ice cream, cheese and milk or coffee will be served. The athletes and coaches will be our guests. Parents of the athletes will cost $2.50, and are most welcome.

Cotton elected

At the 70th annual meeting of the Massachusetts Federation of Planning Boards, held last weekend in Lenox, Daniel C. Cotton of Cohasset was elected a director of the Federation's southeast regional area. Cotton has been a member of the Cohasset Planning Board for four years.

Visit Plimouth

Pilgrims prepare for winter

Visitors to Plimoth Plantation during November will see for themselves how the early colonists preserved food to survive the long winter in the wilderness.

Threshing of grain, parching of corn, baking, drying herbs, butchering hogs, curing hams and bacons, salting fish, making sausage and rendering fat for soap are a few of the activities that will be going on each week in the 1627 Pilgrim Village.

In addition to routine chores, women will do laundry and bake breads, and men will repair chimneys, wattle and daub the Cooke House presently under construction, make nails and hold court sessions. There will be militia musters daily.

Plimoth Plantation is the outdoor living history museum of 17th century Plymouth, and is open daily from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. through Nov. 30. Its exhibits include a full scale replica Mayflower II docked at State Pier in Plymouth Harbor and the 1627 Pilgrim Village. A special exhibit, "Four Centuries of Wampanoag Clothing," is located in the Orientation Center near the Village.

Admission to Mayflower II is $2.50 for adults, $1.50 for children (ages 5 to 13). Admission to the Pilgrim Village is $5.50 for adults, $3 for children. Children under age 5 are admitted free.

Developers discuss moratorium

Developer Edward Britt, who plans to construct 34 homes on a 37-acre piece of property adjacent to Lily Pond, told the Board of Health his development would not be affected by a building moratorium.

The Board of Health has voted to establish a building moratorium in the watershed protection area. That moratorium would prohibit the construction of on-site septic systems within the protection district. But Britt and his engineer, William Moore, said an on-site sewage treatment plant would adequately handle the wastewater from the development. No individual septic system will be necessary in the area off King Street, they added.

Member Michael Bliss said the terminology used within moratorium may have to be altered to include the prohibition of any subsurface wastewater system. But a variance may be granted to any development where it is demonstrated that the water supply will not be negatively affected.

The developers said they will be presenting plans to the planning board, and will return for additional discussions with the Board of Health.

Girls soccer grows in confidence

By Lisa J. Messersmith

For the smallest high school in the South Shore League, Cohasset has pulled more than its weight in athletic ability.

Six years ago, the girls varsity soccer team was non-existent. Today, the young team prepares for the state tournament with an impressive record of twelve wins, four losses and two ties. Not only is this the first time the team has reached the state tournament, but it is also the first time five of the players were named to the Globe All Scholastic Team.

Coach Kennan Startzell, with nineteen years of playing and coaching experience behind him, accepted his position only two years ago. According to Startzell, the girls had "trouble with confidence" when he first came to Cohasset. "They did not have enough wins under their belts," he explained. But once the team started winning it created a "snowball effect," and the girls confidence grew as well.

"The girls are all good athletes and extremely competitive." Startzell added that "a positive competition between the girls" also exists, but it is not as important to them as playing and winning for the team.

Startzell was "pleasantly surprised" when he first started coaching. The girls have a "willingness to learn," he said. "It was easy for me to come in" and give "constructive criticism." "My personal goal," he added "is to see them enjoy the game and win."

Startzell explained the girls have to master the basic soccer skills in high school. The girls were previously "exposed to people with enthusiasm but not to those with soccer knowledge". Some girls were more advanced than others and therefore at different skill levels. Startzell needed to "get them to improve from their level".

Known as a "tough conditioner," Startzell said, "I put them through the same drills as I went through as a semi-pro." The girls "run a lot and run hard" and then drill with the ball. While the girls are still doing sprints, they do not notice it as much because they have to concentrate on the ball. Startzell added that the team is a "physically-skilled team". "You have to be physical if you want to be known," but he said the girls "don't play dirty." It's all a matter of physical power and ability through hard work and a positive attitude.

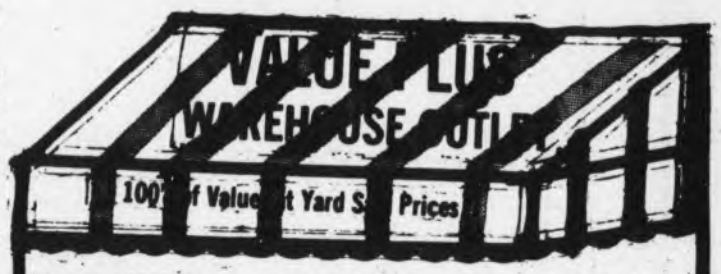
Startzell gives much credit for the girls' success to the parents, an extremely enthusiasic and supportive group. As many as 200 family and friends attend nearly all of the games. Several of the girls have played together in the town leagues where younger girls usually get their start.

"A team sport always has a positive effect," Startzell said. "When the girls are involved with more people, they must learn to get along with more people." The effort instills confidence in the team as well as in the individual.

At the end of this year, the girls varsity soccer team will lose fourteen seniors out of twenty-one players. The coach believes that at least six or seven of the girls will continue to play in college.

Although the team is losing a significant number of its players, Coach Startzell knows that the younger girls will prove to be future champions in their own right. For now the girls' varsity soccer team looks forward to the state tournament, the culmination of much hard work and determination.

Bare Cove Squadron dinner



It was a night of warm reminiscences and a look back on the progress made in the last quarter century in educating boat owners on the joys of safe boating, as the 25th anniversary dinner of the Bare Cove Power Squadron filled the Scituate Harbor Yacht Club to capacity Oct. 20.

Bare Cove draws its members from Quincy to Duxbury and inland to Canton too. And not all are boat owners, either; some interested in promoting boating safety and others fascinated with the fine points of celestial navigation.

Commander James McIver introduced a large number of past commanders of the squadron dating back to its founding in 1959, when 15 members of the Quincy squadron started the fledgling group. And Past Commander George Dolan gave a brief history of the club's 25 years, together with amusing anecdotes about how the squadron's burgee came to be.

Power Squadron members don't limit their navigating to these familiar New England waters, either, as Ed Rhymstra of the Boston Squadron amply demonstrated in a slide show illustrating his voyage from Capetown, South Africa, to Boston that he undertook in a 50-foot yacht five years ago. His slides were enough to set any would-be sailor hankering for the far horizon, though his shots of mid-ocean 50-foot waves might give some of the faint-hearted pause ("But they're not really as bad as they seem. They're about a quarter mile apart, and you ride up one side and down the other, like body surfing," he described.).

First Parish

South Shore Cluster dinner reminder: Thu sday, Nov. 8 at the Old Ship Church, Hingham. The s eaker will be Rev. Sid Peterman, Inter-District represe ative for the South New England area. Call the church office immediately to make reservations.

Religious Education news: Did you remember to bring your UNICEF boxes out with you? Please return the boxes at the Parish House before Nov. 11. If you are collecting pennies at home, great! Starvation does exist and your help is needed.

Reminder: Two weeks from Sunday will be our Thanksgiving Celebration. Sign up for jobs will be coming soon in Family Circle.

South Shore Hospital support group: There will be a support group starting at South Shore Hospital on Nov. 14 for people with cancer and their families. The purpose of the group is to address needs for hope, honesty, accurate information and emotional support in coping with the stress of cancer. The support group is sponsored by South Shore Hospital and will be held there every second and fourth Wednesday begining Nov. 14 at 7 p.m. Membership is open to the general public: people with cancer and up to two family members. The group facilitators will be Maryellen Concannon, Oncology Clinical Nurse Specialist and Rosemary MacKay, Director of Pastoral Care, both from South Shore Hospital. We request that you call one of the group leaders prior to attendance or for more information call either facilitator at 337-7011.

Peacemaking film night: If you are concerned about the military budget, global security, the arms race and nuclear weaponry and what you can do about it, you should consider coming to St. Stephen's Church Wednesday, Nov. 14 at 7:30 p.m.

At this time two especially powerful films will be shown which depict the extent to which concerned citizens can make a difference on these overriding issues of the day.

The first film, "The Time Has Come" tells the story of the June 12, 1982 Peace March in New York City on the occasion of the United Nations Disarmament Conference.

The second film, "Be Not Afraid" is the story of the events surrounding the Peace Pentecost Celebration at the Washington Cathedral in 1983.

These films are for everyone, free of charge. If you have any questions, please call John Seavey at 383-9722.

Second Congregational Church

Anxiety and Peace (from a recent sermon) — In Phillippians 4:4-9, Paul wrote "Have no anxiety . . ." Since anxiety remains a major problem for some of us most of the time, and all of us some of the time, we may find Paul's description of the journey out of anxiety and toward the joyful peace of God a helpful model for our own lives. He describes three things we can do in the face of anxiety, and carefully notes in each case the quality of the action he prescribes.

1. We can pray. "In everything, by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving, let your requests be made known to God." What Paul describes is not the prayer of desperation or defeat, but that of humility, confidence and graditude.

2. We can think. In verse 8, Paul tells us what to think about: not the worst that might happen (which is our usual tendency when we are anxious) but "whatever is true . . honorable . . just . . lovely" and so on. Paul recommends instead that we fix our minds on the good and the positive, and "think on these things."

3. We can act. Since a common response to anxiety is to rush headlong from activity to activity in order to mask or deny our anxiety, we need to be sure of what Paul meant. Our action, he says, should be guided by what we have heard and seen in him, which in turn imitates the life and spirit of Jesus. In other words, our action in times of anxiety should be guided by our prayers and our thoughts, and conformed to the spirit of Christ. To pray, to think, and to act: these three together can lead us to Paul's own experience in an anxious time (for the words were written from prison) — an experience in which he could say: "Rejoice in the Lord always! . . . The peace of God, which passes all understanding, will keep your hearts and minds in Christ Jesus our Lord."

Peacemaking Film Night — Concerned about the military budget, global security, the arms race, nuclear weapons? Wednesday, Nov. 14, two powerful films will be shown at St. Stephen's Church at 7:30 p.m. The films are "The Time Has Come," describing the 1982 Peace March in New York — a peaceful demonstration by a million people supporting peace and justice issues; and "Be Not Afraid," the story of the Peace Pentecost in Washington in 1983. The event is open to all and free. For more information, call John Seavey, 383-9722.

Cancer Support Group — South Shore Hospital will sponsor a support group for cancer patients and their families beginning Nov. 14 at 7 p.m. Its purpose is to address needs for hope, honesty, accurate information and emotional support in dealing with the stress of cancer. For more informaiton call 337-7011.

Insurance Companies Compete to Win Homeowners with Lower Rates.

"Now, homeowners can generally get increased coverage and pay less for it," according to Mary Porter of Whitman's Doran & Mason Insurance Agency.

Interviewed at her Bridgewater home, Ms. Porter said, "My job is to see that my clients have all the facts they need to buy insurance wisely. Right now, the fact is that you can probably duplicate your present homeowner's coverage at a lower cost — or — increase your coverage without increasing your cost."

"You can still get good, personal service with your low rates, too," Ms. Porter added. Doran & Mason has a team system. "Each of my clients can phone my office teammate any time a question arises or a problem occurs. We have enough people for that, and our size makes us important to the companies we represent. Even difficult claims can be handled more easily."

"I'll take the time to explain the details to you and I'll get to know you well enough to understand what insurance you need. I don't press;" she concluded, "if you have all the information you need, you'll make the right decisions." As an insurance professional in the Doran & Mason Agency, Mary Porter writes automobile, life, medical, business, boat and other forms of insurance as well as homeowner's.

Childbirth classes

A series of eight classes for expectant women and couples who seek a safe, fulfilling birth experience, in a hospital or at home, are offered continuously throughout the year.

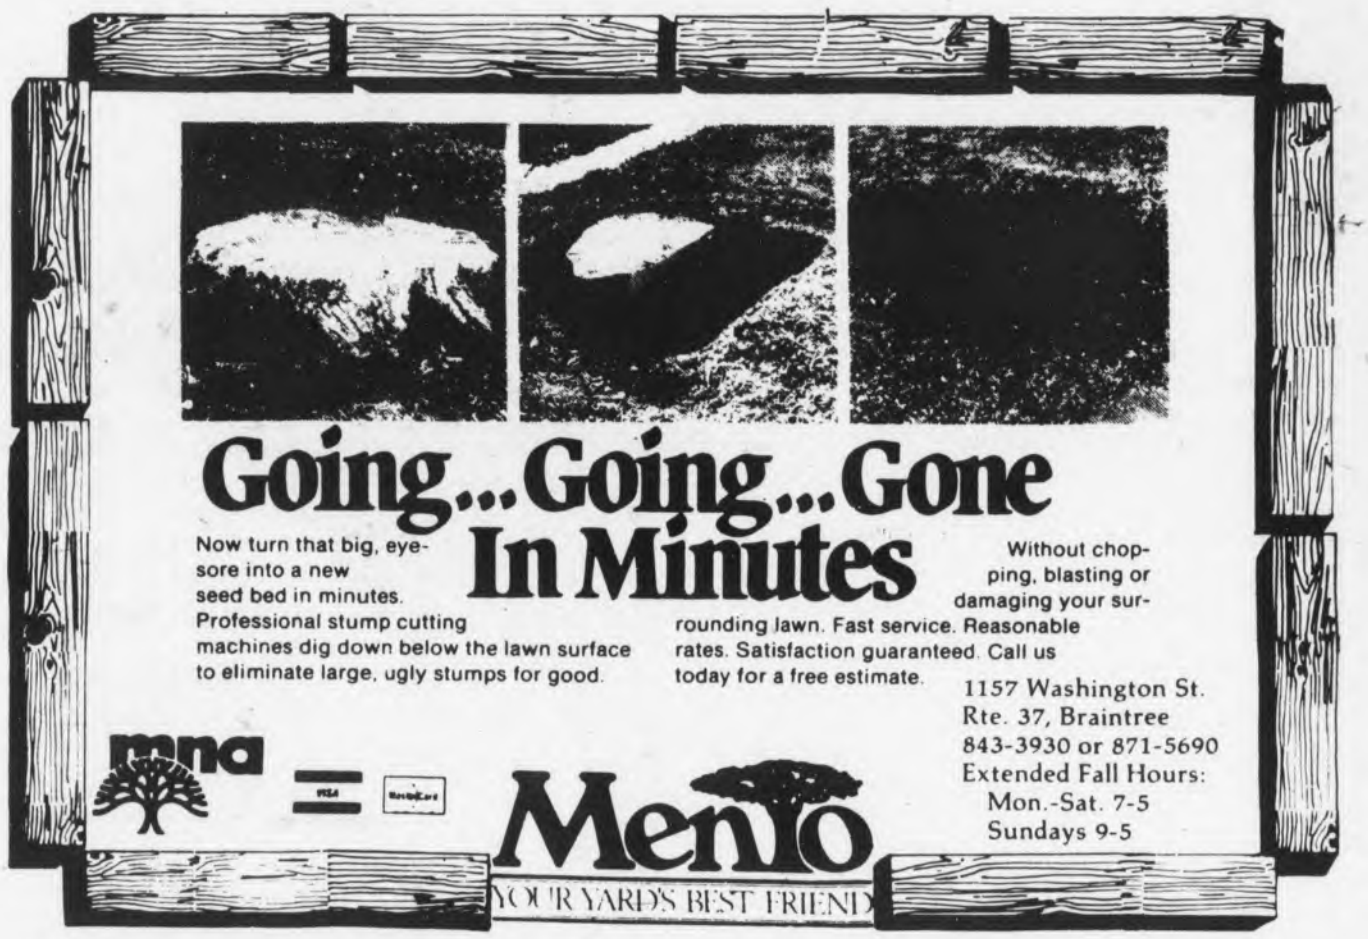
Classes cover thoroughly the physiological and emotional aspects of pregnancy and childbirth.

Topics include: choosing a doctor or midwife; Nutrition and exercise during pregnancy and breastfeeding; breathing, relaxation and other aids to comfort in labor; possible complications in pregnancy and in labor; caesarean prevention; postpartum adjustment and care of the newborn.

Discussion support groups are also offered for such concerns as breastfeeding, early parenting, child-bearing loss and infant death, sibling adjustments, postpartum adjustments, and more.

Please call to register for the next series, beginning in mid-November. The classes are sponsored by Birthchoice, Inc. For more information call 383-6540.

Congregation Sha'aray Shalom



Rabbi Stephen Karol of Congregation Sha'aray Shalom, 1112 Main Street, Hingham, will lead an Adult Bat Mitzvah Service Friday, Nov. 9 at 8 p.m.

Five recent graduates of the adult Hebrew class who never became Bat Mitzvah will read from the Torah. In keeping with the spirit of honoring those who continue to learn, members of the Congregation are invited to this service to honor these women. An oneg shabbat (refreshments) will follow the service.

The annual Main Street Mini-Mall Bazaar at Congregation Sha'aray Shalom, 1112 Main Street, (Rte. 228) Hingham will be held Nov. 11 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. There will be finely crafted hand-made articles, originally designed children's clothing, smocking, floral arrangements, classical handknits, wall hangings, a bake table, a gift boutique, as well as activities for the children and refreshments all day.

English "Panto" Cinderella

What do a local Fire Marshal, an eccentric inventor, a genuine fairy godmother, an opportunistic bottled water salesman, two zany sisters named Nostalgia and Nausea, a real Prince Charming, a talking cat and lots of mice have in common?

The Cohasset Dramatic Club will bring these and other diverse characters together to populate its hilarious English "panto" version of the tale of Cinderella. The forthcoming December production of "Cinderella," the first of the club's three 1984-85 season shows, promises to be anything but a classical version.

For instance, it is doubtful that Cinderella ever has been portrayed as residing in a South Shore town which suffers from a chronic water shortage and is ruled by a charming Prince. This, however, is the case in author Rushworth Kidder's specially adapted "Cinderella". "Fairy godmothers have almost entirely disappeared from the South Shore" lament Cinderella's own fairy godmother. "How would I ever get sprinkle dust down the Southeast Expressway, anyway?"

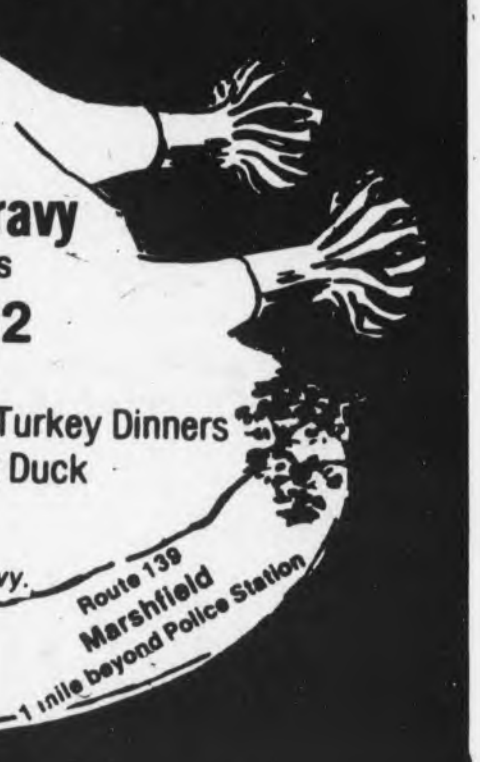
This fairy godmother knows the local situation. But the Cinderella story is there, dressed up in antics, spectacle, and even some audience participation. Rush Kidder's original script is brought to life by Dramatic Club Director Judy Holmes of Hingham, highly respected artistic director of Hingham's Elizabethan Companie of Waytes and Players. Judy's most recent directing experience with the Cohasset club was two years ago when she directed the mystery story "Dangerous Corner."

"Cinderella" will see a cast of about 60 people ranging from youngsters to adults portraying the amazing characters called for in this unique and never before seen adaptation of the traditional tale about the poor girl who married her Prince Charming.

Hingham actress Jan Higbee will play Cinderella, Derek Holmes portrays her father Baron Stoneybroke, the impoverished but dogged inventor of unusual items, Alice Duffy plays the last of real South Shore Fairy Godmothers, and in the particular switcheroo which makes English panto unique, Sally Rossi-Langer plays Prince Charming, Bob Julian performs as the sister Nostalgia and Jim McLeod-Warrick does the same as the other "ugly sister" Nausea. Scott Ketcham plays the out-of-work apprentice inventor named Buttons, and in another panto transformation, Sarah Delima plays the Prince's assistant Dandini.

Traditional English "panto", being seen in Cohasset for the first time since the Hanlon Brothers' professional company of the late 19th century based its nationwide touring pantomime company here, is a combination of acting, singing, dancing and outright spectacle all done in antic good humor.

Performance dates for the Cohasset "Cinderella" will be Friday and Saturday evenings, Dec. 7 and 8, with a matinee Sunday, Dec. 9; and Friday evening, Dec. 14 and a matinee Saturday Dec. 15. Tickets will be available in advance at Fleming's, Cohasset Center.



A reminder — this Saturday, Nov. 10, is the day for the Cohasset Historical Society's Antiques and Collectables Appraisal Day at the Society's Caleb Lothrop House, 14 Summer St., Cohasset.

Specialists from the Robert W. Skinner Auction and Appraisal firm, New England's foremost in its field, will be on hand to make verbal appraisals of your antiques and collectables.

Cost of the appraisal will be $5 for one item, $12.50 for three. Hours will be from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Written appraisals may be arranged. Most kinds of antiques and collectables will be welcomed, the exceptions being stamps and coins.

Bring items you've always wondered about to this unique event, to be held rain or shine. Proceeds from the Appraisal Day will benefit the Historical Society in its program to maintain and improve its two excellent museums at Cohasset Center and the Lothrop House.

AAA administration locates in Rockland

AAA Massachusetts' new Headquarters building at 1050 Hingham Street, Rockland, is completed, and the auto club will officially occupy the facility Nov. 6.

The granite-faced three-story building features 50,000 square feet of office space and is located on 4.8 acres on Route 3 at Exit 14 near the Hingham-Rockland line. There is ample free parking.

The new Headquarters contains the club's administrative offices, Emergency Road Service call receiving and dispatching, and computerized membership processing and record keeping. On the first floor there is a full service office, including Travel Agency, auto touring, insurance department, travelers checks and discount movie ticket sales, and all membership services and benefits.

General Manager Gerald Connolly said many of the 125 employees in the new facility are from the South Shore. "We're very impressed with those who've sought employment with us," he said. "The quality of the labor force in the area was one of the factors in our decision to locate here."

Adjacent to the Headquarters, AAA Massachusetts is also constructing an Auto Diagnostic Center, which will provide diagnostic counseling to members and non-members alike. The Center is expected to open in late December.

"The Diagnostic Center will bring a whole new dimension of technical service to our members," Connolly said. "It effectively complements our 'Autograph' publications evaluating new cars, and our network of Approved Auto Repair facilities."

No repairs will be carried out at the center — the certified automotive technicians will impartially analyze and evaluate a vehicle's condition and then inform the owner of their findings.

AAA Massachusetts' expansion is not limited to the South Shore. On or about January 1, the Association will relocate its Chestnut Hill District Office to a new building adjacent to Route 128 in Needham, and further District Office expansions are planned for late 1985 and 1986. AAA Massachusetts has other District Offices in Downtown Boston, Saugus, and Fairhaven.

Derby clothing sale

The Parent's Association of Derby Academy is planning its major fund raiser of the Bicentennial year, the Derby clothing and yard sale. The sale will include furniture, boutique items, home-made foods, plants, as well as, a selection of hand-made gifts.

A tradition at Derby for over twenty-five years, the sale offers residents of the South Shore area bargains on good used clothing, white elephant items, toys, books, household items and sporting equipment.

A snack bar will be open during sale hours, which will offer a light lunch, as well as, Grandmother's Pantry which will feature freshly baked foods.

Chairing the event this year are the Association's co-presidents, Randy and Sandy Wright.

The sale will be held in the Derby gym, Burditt Avenue, just off 3A in Hingham Thursday, Nov. 15 from 7 to 9 p.m.; Friday, Nov. 16 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. and 7 to 9 p.m.; and Saturday, Nov. 17 the doors will open from 9 a.m. to noon.

Donations from Derby friends and alumni are still being accepted. Please call 749-0296 or 659-7375 to arrange for pick up of items.

Preparations are being make for the Scituate-Cohasset Newcomers Club Holiday Fair. The event will be held Saturday, Nov. 17 at the Second Congregational Church in Cohasset. Crafters preparing their items to be sold at the Fair include (top, left to right) Vernita Bryant, Janet Field, Mary Moberg and Wendy Ullrich. (Botton) Mo Beers, Bunny Wagner and Lori Bosco.

There's a magical kingdom waiting for you and your child.

A kingdom where the Spirit of Christmas burns brightly for young and old alike. Where 200,000 Christmas lights illuminate the night-time sky, painting rainbows across the winter landscape. And heated turn-of-the-century steam trains travel through woods and fields alive with wondrous sights and gaily lit seasonal displays.

It's the Edaville Railroad Christmas Light Festival. A magical mixture of light and color, sights and sounds. Where Christmas carols fill the air. And laughing children run from one marvelous sight to the next. From Santa's Village to the baby deer in the petting zoo. From the "Night Before Christmas" animated display to the white-bearded man in the red suit who always has a good word and a small gift to share with a child.

Discover this wonderful world for your child—and yourself. Experience the dozens of attractions, the once-in-a-lifetime train ride, and the most magnificent display of Christmas lights you'll probably ever see. This year, rediscover the Spirit of Christmas. You'll find it wonderfully lit up at the Edaville Railroad Christmas Light Festival.

Visit the Edaville Railroad Christmas Light Festival.

See RONALD McDONALD® when he turns on the lights at the Edaville Festival! Saturday, November 10th, from 3–5 PM. Open daily, Nov. 9th through Jan. 6th, 4–9 PM weekdays, 2–9 PM weekends. Edaville Railroad, Route 58, South Carver, MA 02366. (617) 866-4526. Closed Nov. 22nd and Dec. 25th.

Cohasset recreation schedule

Aerobic Exercise Classes

The Cohasset Recreation Department's Aerobic Exercise classes will begin Tuesday and/or Thursday evenings, Nov. 27, and 29, at the Town Hall Auditorium from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m.

Participants have the option of registering for both the Tuesday and Thursday classes or just one of the two classes. The cost for the eight week program is: Both Tuesday and Thursday evenings — $25 per person, for one evening $15 per person. Also morning classes will be offered Tuesday and/or Thursday beginning Nov. 27 and 29, from 10 to 11 a.m. Town Hall Auditorum. The fee will be $15 for one class and $25 for both.

Classes will be taught by Margaret Watson who has taught extensively on the South Shore for a number of years.

To register please call the Recreation Department office at 383-6791 as soon as possible.

Beechwood Play Lot

The new Play Lot at the site of the now removed Beechwood Fire station is nearing completion. Asphalting and fencing is essentially completed and basketball standards will be added soon.

Many thanks should go to Mr. Harold Litchfield, Highway surveyor and his crew for the fine job they have done preparing and surfacing the Play Lot. Also, many thanks to Mr. Peter Laugelle, Tree and Park Superintendant and his men for their work at the site.

A tennis bangboard and lights will be added as soon as possible. The Play Lot should prove ideal for street hockey, roller hockey, basketball, low organized games, and free play offering safety as well as a functional play area.

Wrestling Clinic

The Cohasset Recreation Department will sponsor an open wrestling clinic at Cohasset High School, Saturday from 10 a.m. to 12 noon.

Mr. Doug Bell and Mr. Torin Sweeney, wrestling coaches for Hingham and Cohasset High Schools respectively, will volunteer their time teaching. The clinic will be open to all ages and will begin on Saturday, November 3. No pre-registration will be necessary and participants may report to the Cohasset High School gym, Saturday mornings.

Loon Mountain Ski Trip

There are still a few openings for the Sunday, Dec. 2, Ski Trip to Loon Mountain. If interested please call the Recreation Department at 383-6791, immediately.

A long-standing feud intensifies

The long-standing feud between Habormaster Harry Ritter and Parker Avenue resident William Figueiredo widened a bit more last week. Both men squared off during a Conservation Commission hearing scheduled to determine whether Figueiredo needs to file a notice of intent in order to fill potholes in front of his property.

The latest feud began a few weeks ago when commission chairman Merle Brown, after consulting with the other commission members, gave verbal approval to Figuierdo to have five truckloads of fill delivered to the site. The fill was actually gravel and crushed asphalt dug up by Geneva Construction during the Border Street water main reconstruction work.

Figuierdo explained to the commission members last week that the gravel road in front of his property was being eaten away by motorists who repeatedly drive onto Parker Avenue and turn around on his land. There were large potholes on the road that he wished to cover over with the gravel.

The problem developed when commission members and Harbormaster Ritter saw much more than five truckloads of fill being deposited at the site.

A secondary problem which resulted during last week's discussion was the incorrect procedure followed by the commission chairman. Selectman Mary Jane McArthur, who attended the session, told Brown it is not up to him to give verbal approval to any resident. If anyone requests guidance or approval by the Conservation Commission, they must seek a formal review by the entire committee.

A third dilemma was discussed at the outset of last week's meeting when Harbormaster Ritter asked commission member Robert Maki to disqualify himself from this hearing. Ritter said that because Maki is an employee of Army Corps of Engineers, he should not be participating in a review involving property under the jurisdiction of the Federal Wetlands Act. Maki said his employment in the Design Division of the corps has nothing to do with the federal act, and refused to disqualify himself from the discussion last week.

According to Figueiredo, the land which was filled with clay gravel and asphalt encompasses a 100 feet-by-100 feet area in front of his home. Each year, the gravel road is continually washed away, he told the commission, by motorists on the way to the public landing. Cars continually turn around on the property, as many as 200 on a summer weekend.

The commission members and Harbormaster Ritter said the fill which has already been placed in the holes. looks to be much more than five truckloads. And a neighbor, Connie Parker, said she witnessed trucks driving to and from the site the entire day of the delivery.

Commission members Maki and Brown argued that more specific plans must be presented to the commission before approval is possible. Figueiredo countered that he had contacted the Army Corps of Engineers and they maintained no authority in the matter.

Maki noted that in order to determine whether the land should be labeled a coastal beach or coastal bank, a notice of intent will have to be filed. Until a more detailed engineering plan is presented to the commission, they can not determine whether the area is under the jurisdiction of the wetlands act. The major concern, he told the Parker Avenue resident, is how that fill will affect the land beneath the bordering ocean. The gravel sidewalk or dockside superintendant. He is out and about on the waters with Glenn virtually every day, taking his full share of the hard work. 'The day I stop working for my catch,' says Bernard, 'Glenn can just use me as fishbait.'

Along the way to the sun-drenched, palm-studded island of St. Kitts, Glenn has led the usual New England fisherman's life of hard work, hard work — and yet more hard work. Starting out on his own with a rugged Clifford Alley hull from Beale's Island, Maine — he first built the 37 foot Deborah Irene, named after Debbie, the sloe-eyed beauty from Scituate, Mass. who became his wife in 1976.

Moving up to the 44 foot Deborah Irene II which Glenn and his brother Mark fitted out to Bernard Salvadors design, he continued fishing the biting-cold waters from Nova Scotia to Nantucket, dreaming all the time of the sparkling blue Caribbean seas where he had spent so many happy vacations. Primarily fishing for lobsters, Glenn also turned his hand to gill netting out of season.

Fluctuating fish prices and overfished waters often meant however, that a week's hard work produced too low a return for commercial viability and Glenn started to think hard about the alternatives that were open to him.

'I got to thinking how good it felt down on the islands, just to wander round in an old baseball cap, a pair of shorts and a snappy new teeshirt,' says Glenn. 'As opposed to the five or six layers of gloves, socks, shirts and trousers that were pretty normal gear to beat the New England cold. Figured I couldn't go wrong moving somewhere warmer — what I might lose on fish catches, I'd be bound to get back in savings on protective gear.'

His father Bernard, no doubt with similar fond memories of warm tropical nights when carrying out his Antiguan survey — and Glenn's wife Debbie, herself of Portugese ancestry and missing the sunshine too, also backed the idea. Soon the little Salvador house in Cohasset began to look like a travel bureau. Colorful brochures began to vie with each other, each extolling the virtues of a different Caribbean island as the prime vacation spot.

But Glenn was no ideal tourist seeking a few sun-filled weeks and before long the brochures were covered in another layer of paper. This time, ocean and fishing stock surveys, letters from the many Chambers of Industry and Commerce and the islands' Government Fishery Departments. The repsonses were welcoming and warm.

Slowly but surely the name of St. Kitts began to emerge from the wealth of data. Although relatively unknown to both Glenn and Debbie, they liked the friendly tone of the offical letters and the many offers of private sector help from such energetic islanders as Rickie Skerritt, Executive Director of the St. Kitts-Nevis Chamber of Industry and Commerce. Governmental officers of official advice and assistance were not far behind and soon the names on letters became voices on telephones as Glenn continued his research.

Finally, the die was cast, the Deborah Irene II was sold and the entire Salvador family made its unanimous choice. The Audrey P.II, Bernard Salvador's boat, was readied for the trip and the Salvadors set sail for a new life in the Caribbean.

Today, firmly ensconced in St. Kitts, both Glenn and Bernard are fully accepted as useful members of the local professional fishing community. Two local Kittitians are under training as crew members, willing and eager to learn the new fishing skills that Glenn and his father are only too happy to pass on.

The Salvadors supplied free nets and wires for the St. Kitts fishermen to test and evaluate — and offered the use of their boat to the Government as a 'test bed' for one or two days a week.

After busy weeks of test fishing, Glenn looks forward to the arrival of the rest of their newly ordered fishing gear, which is scheduled to arrive in St. Kitts shortly. 'I guess I'll need to fish harder for my catch,' says Glenn thoughtfully. 'And I think the catches may be smaller compared to a good day in Cohasset but the value's sure to be a lot higher and it's a nice place to work.'

Catch values certainly are higher — fish down in St. Kitts sells at U.S.$1.30 per pound even directly off the boat. Gutted, cleaned and filleted, it will sell for far more sold to the growing number of local hotels or exported to local islands.

As the Audrey P. II gets into full swing with the arrival of the new gear, Glenn plans to export regular supplies of fish using the services of a small father and son airline, owned and run by lifelong friends Douglas and Michael Parker orginally from Norwell, Ma.

A move to a purpose-built plant is planned, together with various co-ventures with local fishermen who welcome this new outlet for their catches — which are normally sold on an ad-hoc basis direct from their boats as they land on the palm-fringed sandy beach at Newtown.

Both Glenn and Bernard are sponsoring training courses for the fishermen, aimed at helping them to increase their efficiency thereby also building up more secure supply lines for their new 5,000 square feet processing plant which should be fully on-stream by about the Spring of 1985.

Meanwhile the Audrey P. II is attracting a steady stream of local fishermen eager to see how their 'up-North cousins' build their boats. To many of them America is just a dream and the Audrey P. represents their first chance to see how other professional fishermen outside the narrow confines of the Leeward Islands earn their living at one of the world's oldest and toughest professions.

Since Viscardi's arrival, a junior sanitary engineer has been added to the staff (eight months ago), and a bacteriologist will join the office in about a month's time.

Just increasing the staff to four people had a great impact on the Lakeville operation. "When I started, it was a nightmare," Viscardi said. "Now, things are much, much better--they're a hundred percent better... in the last six months we've drawn and analyzed 1500 to 1800 (water and shellfish) samples, which is a 200 percent increase over the previous six months.

There have been repercussions from this increased ability to get more done. "People are just starting to see problems which have been in existence for some time," Viscardi explained. "All of a sudden they see a big increase in the number of environmental problems--all of a sudden, Massachusetts is polluted.

"It really isn't like that. It's just that, in the past, our staff wasn't large enough to see all the problems and analyze the necessary data. We had 17 new closures this year . . . I'd say six to eight of those are cases where the data has been there, and there had been (pollution) problems in the past, but our staff just wasn't large enough."

Problem areas

And what about the problem areas, the 60 shellfish growing areas that are either partially or fully closed, which require more attention than periodic reappraisals and samplings? Viscardi admits the role of the DEQE is still limited by staffing and funding restraints.

"It's frustrating to us to go down to a town and close an area and only be able to say, 'okay, you have these potential problems and that's all we can do for you.'

"But we can't give them the manpower they need. What we can do is give them direction in a general sense. And when a town thinks they have a problem, we can come down and look at specific instances and tell them if they really are problems."

Viscardi says that while the DEQE has some scientific knowledge town officials don't possess, those officials and the long-time residents who live near shellfish areas still know their towns far better than the DEQE does.

"I've put in about 300 hours on the North River," he said, "and to be very honest with you, I still don't know that much about it."

"Where we can really help is in providing technical assistance--technically we can do the work if we have the information. Getting that information is the worst part. If a town has 25 or 30 possible sources, we just can't do it.

"Every town would like us to get more involved. Some towns are more vocal about it. Unfortunately, we still can't. But most towns we have dealt with have been very cooperative. Some towns question our ability, but there's no reason for us to want to have bad counts. We like to see all the areas open--it's good for the communities, and good for the state."

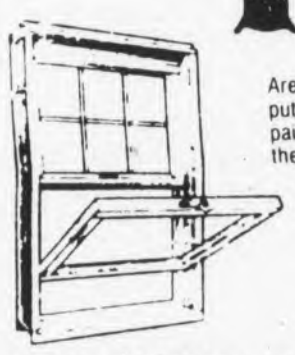
Viscardi said the North River is a priority shellfish area for the DEQE, although it doesn't top their list, in part because "the North River doesn't have the commercial shellfishing resources other areas have." He listed Buttermilk Bay (on the Cape), Mount Hope Bay (Swansea/Fall River) and the Taunton River (which in certain areas has been closed for 20 years) as high priority problem areas.

Viscardi, a senior sanitation engineer, has bachelor's and master's degrees in environmental engineering. The atmosphere at Lakeville, he feels, is very friendly and very professional. "It's a fairly close operation. Everybody gets along well. And any information you can't get out of yourself, it's easy to just ask somebody."

The DEQE Lakeville office is housed in Lakeville Hospital, located a short distance from Rte. 495. Downstairs from the DEQE is a state Water Supply laboratory, where Viscardi and his co-workers analyze water and shellfish samples.

In addition to its monitoring role, Viscardi said the DEQE spends a good deal of time working with the Division of Marine Fisheries, transferring contaminated shellfish to clean areas where they can propogate and rid their systems of bacteria.

The most enjoyable part of his job, Viscardi said, is being able to open a shellfish area that has been closed. "We tend to be the bringer of doom--we come in and close an area. Finding a problem and having it corrected is very rewarding. Unfortunately, most of the problems we come across take a long time to clear up, and in some cases, when we're able to identify the problem, the town may decide it doesn't want to invest the money to have it cleaned up."



With the addition of another staff member, Viscardi says the Lakeville office will be able to keep up with federal monitoring regulations, and perhaps do a little more.

"As long as we have the manpower, we can do the job," he says. "Complaints about the program have diminished, and we're much more visible than we were. Overall, it has been a good year. I think people can feel more comfortable with the shellfish that's on the market now. I certainly do."

Churches unite in plans for Village Fair

Treats and Treasures for children are high on the agenda of plans for Cohasset's Village Fair, the traditional holiday season opener in this South Shore town to be held in buildings around the Cohasset Common on Saturday, Dec. 1, from 10-3.

Children will have the chance to be tempted by goodies dear to young appetites, to try their luck on "going for grabs", to put in their orders directly to Santa Claus, and to do their own private Christmas shopping, all at this big five-church event that is being staged for the 44th successive year.

Once again working together on what is considered a unique ecumenical benefit effort, are scores of parishoners of the Panagia Greek Orthodox, St. Stephen's Episcopal, First Parish Unitarian, Second Congregational and St. Anthony's Roman Catholic churches in town.

General Chairman Jeanne Syrmopoulos of the Greek church, which this year is taking organizational leadership of the event, has announced that virtually all of the children's features of proven popularity will again be on the schedule of the Fair.

Expanded this year, for example, will be the popular Secret Room in the vestry of the Congregational Church. Here admission to the room will be limited to those 12 and under so that youngsters can shop in private for Mom and Dad, brother and sister, aunts and uncles. Dozens of small gifts crafted or selected as appropriate for fathers and mothers as well as for their appeal to young shoppers, will be offered for sale and then attractively gift-wrapped to be ready to be put under the family tree. Lee Jenkins and Barbara Hislop head the group arranging this feature. They will be helped during the Fair Day by a teen-age sales staff.

Children under shopping age will have their traditional opportunity to put in Christmas present orders in their own behalf by visiting with Santa Claus who will arrive on the Common about 11 a.m. Jeff Steele, who has arranged Santa's visit to the Village Fair for a number of years, has already secured his promise to return this year. She and Margaret Young will again be offering parents the opportunity record, via Polaroid photos, the scene of their offspring in Santa's lap as he sits in his sleigh surrounded by a bower of evergreens.

Meanwhile the Common and surrounding streets will sport an air of festivity provided by balloons that will be inflated and merchandised by a group headed by Kathy Brennock.

Another attraction this year will be a Children's Movie, to be shown at intervals during the day. This will feature subjects specially selected for children. Linda Summers, who also doubles as procurment chairman of the Fair, and Meagan Philips, are arranging this program.

Children and parents alike will be drawn to the Children's Table that will have a prominent place in the center of the Town Hall auditorium. A group of workers headed by Claudia Story, has been meeting for weeks making dozens of items of clothing, stuffed animals and novelties with particular appeal to children. The Children's Table group includes Annette Sawchuk, Meagan Philips, Andrea White, Kathy Pratt, Gail Seavey and Stephanie Williams.

Hard by the Children's Table, to occupy youngsters while parents shop elsewhere, will be the tempting feature of Grabs, where a collection of wrapped mystery treasures will be available to young spectators.

Another standard Fair feature with appeal to young and old alike, will be the Bargain Bazaar in the Unitarian Parish House. Pauline Walter and her committee have been soliciting and collecting used but still usable articles for weeks, and promise a wide selection of spots items, tools, small appliances, kitchenware, etc.

A variety of fast foods facilities will satisfy the total sweep of children's tastes. Phil Shockman and Jack Riley will be back again at the Snack Bar in the Town Hall, dispensing hot dogs and soft drinks. The popular popcorn machine will be grinding out its product under the management of Rod and Marilyn Hobson. More substantial food will be found at the Chowder Bar in the Congregational church, where home-made candy will also be on sale.

Representatives of the individual churches on the Central Committee are Pauline Walter of Norwell and Barbara Kiriakos of Hull, from the Greek church; Linda Summers and Margaret Phelps from the Unitarian; Marilyn Fessler, Lee Jenkins and Barbara Hislop from the Congregational church; Kathy Brennock and Theresa Smith from St. Anthony's and Betty Madden and Ginnie Nast from St. Stephen's. Charles Costas of Scituate, is treasurer, and Pamela McNamara of Marshfield, is secretary.

He calls the weather, God writes the script

"There is nothing on Earth that has such power to turn our thoughts upon God as the weather."
--Warren Waitkus

By Dave Warren

The National Weather Service can keep its multi-billion dollar computers, satellites and meteorological wizards--all Warren Waitkas needs for his "weather outlooks" is that good 'ole American know-how passed down by our founding fathers.

As the avidly read author of Waitkus' World of Weather, published each month in the Mariner, Warren proudly says his guesses at the weather are more accurate than anyone and everyone else's--despite his apparant technological disadvantages.

"Modern day scientists scoff at our forefathers' methods of interpreting natural phenomenon," Warren points out. "But if our forefathers' wisdom was good enough to form the constitution--which we still embrace today--why can't we put more faith in their wisdom regarding science? My forecasts are remarkably accurate, and I challenge the National Weather Service with their multi-billion dollar computers and staffs of PhD's to do better than our founding fathers."

Warren Waitkus, now 51, eagerly welcomed the World of Weather into his life before he started grade school. It was the Hurricane of 1938 that piqued his interest in what he calls "God's business," and it has remained an important part of his life ever since.

By profession he's a senior piping designer for Stone and Webster. But Warren greets each morning and ends each day in his "Nerve Center," a small rectangular room in his Marshfield home he has stocked over the years with communications equipment and weather data and paraphernalia.

The room meets his description well: lining a table along one wall of the paneled room are a CB radio, a general communications receiver, a ham radio, and a stack of Weatherwise magazines.

On this Saturday afternoon, the CB and the receiver are a whir of activity: LED lights race along chosen frequencies in search of the latest report, information request or call for a friendly chat, picking up static along the way.

Adorning the wall is an original War Department weather map dating to 1872, listing weather information stations across the country (there are but a few scattered in the newly settled Western states). Also hanging neatly from the wall are Warren's weather data logs, which he faithfully fills out each morning and night.

And against the opposite wall sits a book case filled with weather books and historical publications dating back to the early days of recorded weather history, including a complete set of the Farmer's Almanacs dating to the 1700's, and including an original copy of Benjamin Franklin's Poor Richard's Almanac containing Franklin's classic essay "The Way to Wealth."

Amidst it all sits Warren, the picture of a man in control of his surroundings. His children may not share his enthusiasm for the weather (they call the room "The Nerd Center"), but they certainly have to respect his love and devotion to his avocation.

And Warren is devoted. As an observer for the National Weather Service, he calls in weather reports each morning at 7 a.m. and 7 p.m., which is then relayed to the National Climatic Center in North Carolina.

Some days he's up at 5:45 a.m., catching the weather from Florida to Ohio and Maine on New England Weathernet. At 11 past every hour he can get filled in on all storms in the North Atlantic on another frequency, and for the latest aviation weather he simply flips the dial to BOULMET, which transmits the information on a continuous basis.

If he's not passing on data to the weather service, he may be answering a call from meterologists at channel 4 or 5, who plant his data on their local maps.

Warren has no interest in forecasting the weather. "Only God knows the workings of the weather," he says. Even the meteorologists, with their computer-fed forecast, are dealing in an "inexact science--the raw data still has to be interpreted by a human being," he remarks.

What Warren does is give his readers "weather outlooks," an approximation of what the coming month's weather pattern should be--when we can expect fair and stormy weather, whether temperatures will be above or below normal. He may predict periods of heavy rain and high winds from the 18th to the 23rd, which he has for this month (during which time he says we will also be susceptible to a hurricane). He's usually right.

"Lunar Weather Rhythm"

Warren's outlooks are based upon what he calls "Lunar Weather Rhythm," a system he has devised from a theory originated by Sir William Herschel in the mid-1700's.

Herschel was an English astronomer whose observations of our galaxy provided the foundation for scientific study of galactic structure. He is credited with the discovery of over 2,500 star clusters and nebulae and over 800 double stars, as well as discovering the planet Uranus.

Warren discovered Herschel about the time he was 20, and was captivated by one of the astronomer's theories that history books don't mention (perhaps because scientists feel it didn't merit attention).

Digging through his Farmer's Almanacs from the 1840's, Warren read in an 1849 edition that Herschel believed the moon had a direct impact on the weather. Herschel stated that certain weather patterns, even forecasts, could be derived by studying the lunations of the moon--where the moon was in its orbit at a particular time.

Warren discarded the exact forecasting methods described by Herschel, but felt the lunations of the moon could be used to determine if high or low weather patterns were likely to occur.

"There's a definite relationship between the transit of the moon and the movements of highs and lows," Warren professes. "It made sense to me that the moon had the same affect on the atmosphere as it did on the tides. The atmospehere is per se like a sea."

Once convinced of the theory's validity, Warren painstakingly compiled data on precipitation and lunations from his Almanacs for the past 100 years. For the next 18 years he watched the weather, noting the lunations. and finally came up with his homemade disc 10 years ago.

The disc is made up of two smaller discs with windows on a larger disc. Lining up the discs to account for the lunation of the moon for the time period he wants to find the weather for, he finds out what the predominant air mass for that time period will be. Further details are Warren's secret.

The disc eliminates his having to refer to his almanacs, which saves a lot of time. An outlook that took a day to derive without the disc now takes but five minutes. Warren says he might spend a day or two figuring out weather outlooks for the next 100 years. "When I finally depart," he says, "I'll leave the outlooks with the Mariner."

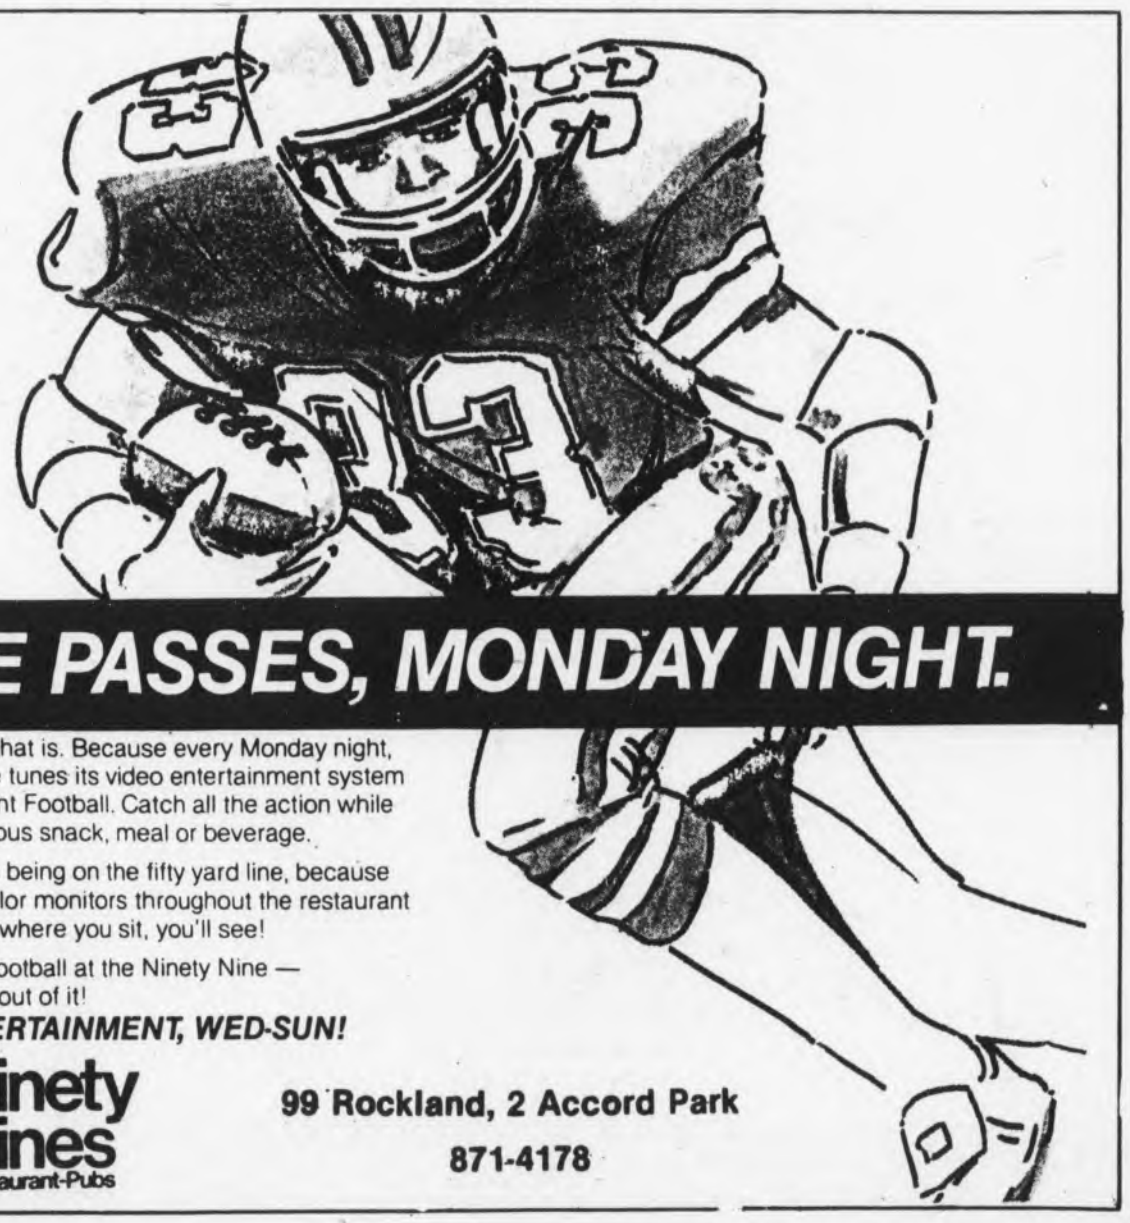
Scientific scorn

Warren's belief in the moon's affect on the weather has never been studied in depth, to his knowledge, to either prove or dispel the theory. But it has received scorn from scientists who have seen it and cared to comment--Warren says he even got hate mail from some scientists.

"My system is in direct conflict with contemporary scientific theory, which says the moon has nothing to do with the weather," Warren says. "But I have no education to tell me that something isn'e right--I can be objective.

"All these scientists say it can't be because their professors told them it can't be. They wouldn't even waste their time on it. They laugh at you."

Any forecaster who's aware of Warren's system right now can't be laughing, though. While national forecasters called for as many as eight hurricanes to hit the East Coast this season, Warren predicted just three periods of susceptibility to a hurricane--from September 18 to 23, and during two periods in October. He says it's too early to say if the latest hurricane, Diana, will hit New England. Even if if doesn't, Warren says there's a chance another tropical storm may form and develope into a hurricane in time to reach us by his September period of susceptibility.



Warren is also looking forward to outguessing the "experts" on the upcoming winter. "I'm going to publish my outlook next month, before the Farmer's Almanac and the National Weather Service. No one will be able to say I'm copying their forecasts, because I'm going to be the first one in print. Last winter I was right on the money."

Children's art class

Two children's painting and drawing classes are about to begin at the South Shore Art Center; both courses offer students an opportunity to improve their artistic abilities.

Beginning at the Center, 103 Ripley Road in Cohasset, Tuesday, Nov. 13, is Serena Brundige's painting and drawing for ages six to eight. Her class will explore design, composition and color using craypas, tempera and watercolors.

The students learn basic drawing and painting skills and work on projects geared to their age level. The class meets from 4 to 5:30 p.m.

A more advanced painting and drawing course for ages nine to twelve begins Wednesday, November 14, form 3:30 to 5 p.m. The course, taught by Lisbeth Koopman-Wyman, will include instruction in mirror drawing, basics of landscape, use of acrylic paint and technique of collograph printing.

For complete information on fees, materials and registration, call the Center, 383-9548.

must be maintained adequately so it will not erode or be carried away by an abnormally high tide.

Figueiredo claimed high tides never eroded the land, just motorists. He also noted that before he has to spend money to hire an engineer, he will simply construct a chain link fence around the area, prohibiting motorists from the property.

"I think this is awfully stupid," he told the commission members. "When the Harbor Study Committee wanted the area for a town parking lot , you knew it needed fill then. If it is good enough for the town, why isn't it good enough for me?"

Harbormaster Ritter claimed the land is within the floodplain and therefore a registered engineer would have to draw plans showing the property's elevation. Commission member Maki agreed the plans previously submitted by Figueiredo have been incomplete. He also stated the fill should be removed until the commission makes a final determination on the notice of intent.

The World of Weather for month of November

By Warren Waitkus

This time of year we often use the expression Indian summer to describe a period of calm, hazy and unseasonably warm weather. It is a familiar phrase and its occurrance is confidently expected by all of us during late autumn, following the first killing frost, usually in late October or early November. But do you know that in weatherlore the origin of the term Indian summer remains a mystery?

One of the earliest examples of the term occurs in Major Ebenezer Denny's journal under the date of October 13, 1798: "Pleasant weather. The Indian summer here. Frosty nights." He used the phrase in a manner indicating that it was perfectly familiar to him, but he adds no explanation.

In June, 1798, Dr. Mason F. Cogswell, describing the previous winter at Hartford, Connecticut, noted: "About the beginning of January the weather softened considerably, and continued mild for several days. Most people supposed the Indian summer was approaching (a week or fortnight of warm weather, which generally takes place about the middle of January), but, instead of this, there succeeded to these pleasant days a delightful fall of snow, about a foot in depth, which was bound down by an incrustation of hail, and prevented from blowing in heaps by the winds which followed."

Dr. Cogswell referred to a period in January. There are other examples of similar laxity of time of occurrance. Thoreau, in his Autumn, notes Indian summer weather, from 1851 to 1860, on Sept. 27; Oct. 7, 13, 14, 31; Nov. 1, 7, 8, 17, 23, 25; Dec. 7, 10, and 13. But since the late 1800s the tendency has been strongly in favor of late autumn.

There is no evidence that the term was used in the early days of our colonization or that it was derived from American aborigines. There is no written record of it before 1794 and its origin still remains uncertain.

There has been considerable speculation as to the significance of Indian in the phrase. For example, it might have been coined by the natives who recognized the early frosts as the signal for the coming winter and took advantage of the fine weather to make final preparations for the rigors of the season to come. Another explanation derives the term from the Indian custom of burning over the woods in November to destroy the underbrush, a practice noted by the early settlers.

One possible explanation that I consider plausible is the conjecture that the name alludes to the proverbial deceitfulness and treachery of the natives, as perceived by our forefathers. Hence, the expression "Indian giving." This is making a present and taking it back again, like children when they repent of an impulse of generosity. Mother Nature gives us a brief period of summer, being less than the summer of the solstice, yet sweet in itself. She takes it back, and there we are, facing Old Man Winter. Don't feel sad, the good old Indian summers will return again.

October Summary

October was below normal in temperature, and despite 19 rainless days, above average in precipitation. The first two days of the month saw downpours that produced copious amounts of rain. Ed Maree recorded 5.76 inches at Pembroke on October 1 and 2, while Brant Miller reported 5.5 inches during that storm in Cohasset. At my station I recorded 4.12 inches and 4 to 5 inches was generally experienced throughout southeastern Massachusetts.

Following that storm, the first measurable amount of rain didn't fall until the 22nd. It was the wettest October in 22 years.

On October 2, a Wareham man was killed on Route 28 in Middleborough when a tree fell and crushed his car. The National Weather Service in Boston said wind speed in the area was about 28 MPH at the time, and I'm sure that soggy ground conditions contributed to the tragedy. On the 14th, a 38-year-old Wrentham man fell overboard from a 22-foot boat at the mouth of the North River and was pronounced dead at Jordan Hospital, Plymouth, after he was brought there by a Coast Guard helicopter. At that time winds were 15 to 25 MPH from the northeast causing rough seas. The high winds were caused by Hurricane Josephine that was moving slowly northward causing some concern to residents of southern coastal areas of New England. A high pressure system from Canada moved into New England and pushed the storm harmlessly out to sea.

Total precipitation for October, at my station in Marshfield, was 6.09 inches, 2.54 inches above normal. The maximum 24-hour rainfall, 4.12 inches on Oct. 1-2. Rain, .01 inches or more, occurred on 11 days. The total precipitation this year has been 48.05 inches, 13.05 inches above normal. The mean temperature was 51.9 degrees, 2.7 degrees below normal. The average daily maximum reading was 60.8 degrees, while the average daily minimum was 43 degrees. The low temperature for the month was 24 degrees on the 7th, with a high reading of 80 degrees on the 20th.

There were six clear days, 13 partly cloudy days, and 12 cloudy days. The average wind speed was 9.9 MPH; normal is 12 MPH. The highest gust was 46 MPH on the 1st.

The normal heating season is from Sept. 1 to May 23. Some 91 percent of the heating year remains.

November Outlook

From the 7th to 19th should be basically fair but with a chance of showers or a low developing along a frontal system. The latter part of this period should see cold weather with windy conditions. From the 20th into the beginning of December a stormy period is indicated, with high winds and rain. There is a chance of some snow or mixed precipitation though the odds favor all rain.

Winter Outlook

My outlook for the meteorological winter of 1984-85 was published on October 3, 1984 calling for December, January, and February, on the whole, to be above normal in temperature with a confidence factor of 65 percent and above average in precipitation with a confidence factor of 55 percent.

The National Weather Service will issue their winter good storm. "There's nothing more magnificent and clearing than a snowstorm. All other storms are dirty and destructive, but a snowstorm covers all the drabness of the land. The trees take on beautiful shapes where they would otherwise just be grotesquely-bare branches."

His favorite month of the year is November, "a transition period where the good times of the summer are gone and the rigors of the winter lie ahead. It grey and overcast and cool, and you go home and build a fire. It really feels good to be home, and good to be alive."

Whether he'll challenge the scientific community on his system in the future remains to be seen. For now, he's happy with his superior track record for calling the weather as God makes it.

"If it works, they can't knock me."

Going public

Warren first brought his outlooks to the public in the Mariner in the mid-70's, after a start in the now-extinct daily Newsday from Hanover. He brought with him over 1,200 questions from Newsday readers, shich he still uses in his column today.

In 1978 he took a 51/2 year break from the Mariner to host a one-hour radio show on the Talking Information Center. "Warren's World" dealt with stories of the "bizarre and the unusual," and primarily consisted of interviews Warren conducted with the street people of Boston.

"It was an interlude in my life that I truly loved," he recalls. He befriended the street aicoholics and brought them food, and one day he hopes to tell their story. It was during his broadcasting years that he adopted his closing line, "Have a good week and a nice forever."

Warren returned to the Mariner last year, changing his slogan to "Have a good day and a nice forever," and he will continue to give readers a look at weather history, answer questions, and provide monthly summaries and outlooks.

And when he does die, his disc will be passed on tc his son Mark, 26, who is currently a consulting meteorologist for the National Weather Service. Mark is stationed at a remote Arctic station 360 miles south of the North Pole, where he has launched weather balloons into the air since 1981. Warren is able to communicate with his son through his equipment by satellite.

Weather Q and A

Q. What was the "Portland storm?"

A. This storm, so called because of a sea tragedy, occurred on November 26-27, 1898. At 7 p.m., Saturday, Nov. 26, the side-paddle steamer, S.S. Portland left Boston's India Wharf and disappeared into the forboding darkness. Offshore, a frightful northeaster was lurking. In 70 MPH winds and mountainous seas, the S.S. Portland sank, going down off the Cape's Highland Light; 191 people, crew and passengers, perished. This storm also closed the old mouth of the North River in Rexhame, Mass. while opening what is now known as the New Inlet, in Scituate. West of the storm track, heavy snow fell, with 27-inch depths reported. Total loss of life in this great storm is estimated at 400.

Have a good day and a nice forever.

Energy conservation by Edison Co.

A cooperative effort to encourage area residents in their energy conservation efforts was announced today, by the Eastern Edison Company and Mass-Save, Inc.

The program, based on a $10 Mass-Save Home Energy Survey, offers the purchase and installation of attic insulation of Eastern Edison Company customers at substantially reduced prices through a group bidding process.

The Eastern Edison Community-Save program is being conducted throughout their entire service area in three phases. The initial phase, which included the communities of Abington, Avon, Bridgewater, Brockton, East Bridgewater, Easton, Stoughton, West Bridgewater and Whitman, met with even more success than was expected.

Today's kick-off of the second phase will include the towns of Cohasset, Halifax, Hanover, Hanson, Norwell, Pembroke, Rockland and Scituate.

All contractors interested in participating in this program should call Ron Moreira at Mass-Save, 1-800-642-7542.

Eastern Edison customers in the Phase II communities will be receiving details about the Save program in the mail. To participate in the Community-Save Program homeowners simply fill in the postage-paid request card and mail it before November 23, 1984, in order to be eligible.

If you have any questions about the program, contact Tom Petrouski the Eastern Edison Community-Save Save Coordinator at 1-800-462-6515 between the hours of 9 a.m. and 5 p.m.

Nuclear scientist speaks at Thayer Academy

Students told: worry about war

By Jane Lane

Q. Do you feel any guilt because of your involvement in inventing the nuclear bomb?

A. "I feel guilty because I felt that it should have been demonstrated first. It may, just may, have helped to save a few lives during the war. But I don't feel much guilt about having helped develop it. There was a clear and present danger from an irrational world leader (Hitler) that could have resulted in catastrophe.

"I also feel that all things possible will be done. If the bomb had not been developed during the war, it would have come after the war.

"And, I am guilty as any American should be, for the many things that shouldn't have been done."

Victor Weiskopf speaks to the students slowly, burdened by the accent he aquired from his Vienna birthplace, and the dark knowledge he is about to impart.

In his brief address this week to the Thayer Academy audience, Weiskopf does not aim to threaten, nor to frighten. "I don't want us to end up with a bunch of drug addicts," he later confides with a gentle chuckle.

The direction of his life, forty years after this most miraculous invention, is to guide these young people into deep thought. The hope upon which he continues his mission, is to startle these kids into the awareness that disaster can be avoided, that there are alternatives.

It was in 1939 that the renowned physicist was asked to join the Manhattan Project in Las Alamos, Calif. He was an impressionable 31 years old, wise enough to realize that Hitler would try any means of winning this global conflict, yet eager enough to work side by side with some of the most brilliant scientists in the nation. It was an opportunity he could not resist, he says of his decision, not fully realizing the eternal effect it would

"I am always asked, 'do you think there will ever be a nuclear war?' I answer no, but only if everyone worries about it, discusses it and influences the decisions which will be made. It depends on what we do and what the Soviet Union does."

book review

By Pat Barlow

Having A Baby In Boston and Surrounding Areas
By Barbara Rosenbaum and Toby Schlein
The Harvard Common Press. $9.95

Resource guides and directories rarely concern themselves with getting a message across. Their purpose is, after all, to compile, organize and present information not easily found elsewhere. Having A Baby In Boston . . . is a unique book because it does both. In addition to being a sourcebook, it enlightens readers beyond that stated objective: the message it brings is expectant parents now have a number of safe and customized alternatives to the comparatively impersonal medical management of pregnancy and childbirth that was conventional a decade-and-less ago.

Another service this 190-page paperback performs uncommonly well: it poses questions that expectant parents — particularly first-timers — rarely think to ask until the moment for decision-making is at hand. Questions such as the birth setting best suited to their family style; who will supervise routine prenatal care (physican, nurse-midwife, or lay midwife); at what point have on the survival of the human race.

Weiskopf asks his young audience, "Is this not a terrible application of science - for destructive purposes?" But he reminds his teenaged listeners, "there was a great threat from the Nazis. The nuclear fusion process had been discovered in Germany and there was a clear and present danger from Hitler. It was up to us to develop the bomb faster. That was the main purpose to join."

Of the actual invention, Weiskopf says primarily "it was a good collaboration of scientists," although it was invented three months after Germany's surrender. As the second leader of the group, Weiskopf determined that the scientists should go ahead, continue their efforts until they were completed.

Once the bomb was manufactured, there was a split of opinion as to how it would be detonated. Weiskopf and others pushed for a test application, a non destructive show of the United States' strength. He concedes the scientists' did not hold much decision-making power, and the ultimate choice was made to actually drop the bomb upon the enemy.

It was an offense unconscienable to the classroom professor, but he admits, "perhaps by dropping the bomb on Hiroshima, we may have hastened the end to the war and saved more lives."

It is a statement steeped in regret and sorrow. Weiskopf stands before his young audience, a tall man bent with anxiety to push forward his message before it becomes meaningless. He is 75 years old, and eager to carry his wisdom to those who will benefit. The future is in the actions of the young, he believes.

He chooses not to disclose his political affiliation, because the ultimate choice does not base itself on Republican or Democratic philosophies. It must be an international decision to avoid nuclear holocaust, to keep peace as we have done for the past forty years.

"I am always asked, "do you think there will ever be a nuclear war. I answer no, but only if everyone worrries about it, discusses it and influences the decisions which will be made. It depends on what we do and what the Soviet Union does."

As a board member of the Union of Concerned Scientists, Weiskopf is dedicating his life to averting "the greatest catastrophe that man has ever suffered."

In a chart he outlines for the students, Weiskopf starkly demonstrates " the crazy arms race." Not with slides despicting horrific war scenes, but with numbers - this is how the professor teaches his students.

The chart states that although a bare minimum of armament is necessary to annihilate the United States and Russia, both countries possess enough power to destroy the world 100,000 times over. Weiskopf describes it as "a collective mental disease."

It is the superpowers' mutual fear of first strike without warning, an "irrational" basis for fear, he says. The knowledge that the other side possesses more weapons, are stronger than the enemy, "does not mean anything, yet the race continues on."

One of the worse misconceptions currently circulated is the possibility of a limited nuclear war, for instance between two Mid East countries or in an effort to free Poland. That liklihood is "extremely improbable."-

"We are living under tremendous pressure," the M.I.T. professor emeritus explains. "Russia can kill us all with less weapons than they have now."

He advises a lenient approach to quieting the threat of nuclear war. First, we must realize we are not in any position to change the totalitarian government of the Soviet Union. The more we threaten, the more oppores-sive they will become, he predicts.

"The only hope is that their form of government will not last forever. So, far they have kept up with us in the arms race. Our only superiority is that we are more technologically advanced than they. But the total effect will be that our leaders will not give up their power. If Russia becomes desperate, they may start a war before anything like the 'Star Wars' shield is erected, or they will double or quadruple their number of bombs."

The war game of superiority "is a very dangerous argument," he continues. "In the old days before nuclear weapons, it was correct when one side was superior and the other sides dared not attack or we would defeat them.

"Now an inferior opponent can kill us. And bringing the Soviet leaders to desperation will only be a greater danger. My view is that the only way is not superiority, but accommodating parity," Weiskopf says.

The days of the battles of good versus bad are over in relation to international warfare. Hitler was the last regime to be silenced by the interference of another nation. The evolution of the nuclear weapon makes that an impossible course to follow.

Having a baby in Boston, etc.

medical assistance becomes interference; how to determine a physician's philosophy concerning medications, labor support services, cesarean delivery, prepping procedures, parent-infant bonding; and the type and variety of services available (and their phone numbers) to help new parents and expectant parents cope with anticipated and unanticipated needs, and changes in their daily lives.

The book makes one thing very clear throughout: expectant parents may exercise a great deal of freedom when it comes to choosing the environment in which their baby will be born. Unlike the previous generation of parents who left decisions concerning childbearing and childbirth exclusively to the medical profession, today's expectant couples are eager to participate in all matters pertinent to the pregnancy and delivery. But having such options also means assuming the responsibility to keep themselves well enough informed to make decisions. For instance, in what birth setting would the couple feel most comfortable and secure? A hospital, birth center, or at home? How much participation in the birthing does the couple want or expect of the attending professional? And should a hospital be chosen for the blessed event, which one? What kind of care, services and facilities — in order of importance to the couple — are conveniently located?

Having A Baby In Boston and Surrounding Areas is not just another book; it's one whose time has come because Boston is currently hosting a baby boom. At the same time, the frequency of caesarean births has become a matter of controversy all over the country, and particularly here. Boston has one of the highest surgical birth rates in the nation, yet its medical professionals have been unable to justify this to the satisfaction of critics and childbirth experts.

Attitudes about pregnancy and childbirth have changed dramatically over the years, which this book reflects. Not too long ago, having a baby meant nine months (at least) of mystery and apprehension, and discovering things-your-mother-never-told-you. Authors Rosenbaum and Schlein, themselves mothers, tell you; or tell you where to find the particular information you need on such subjects as choosing your medical supervision; assessing and comparing hospitals; genetic counseling and testing services; midwifery for hospital and home birth; setting the stage for baby; and what support services and groups new parents may want to consult. Also included in the book are tips on prenatal exercise classes and building a flattering maternity wardrobe without breaking the bank.

Having A Baby In Boston . . .is a straightforward presentation that deals with maternity care from the consumer's point of view. It also distinguishes contemporary supervision of childbirth vs. medical intervention that was yesterday's complex tradition. If we need to be reminded that a normal pregnancy and birth is essentially a family affair and not a medical condition, the book does that, too. The forward, written by childbirth expert, Elizabeth Noble, is a revelation in itself, and confirms what women have been saying for years: Having a baby is a natural and normal event, not an illness, so let's dispense with the interventions and restrictions that are unnecessary in 90 percent of births. This is a "must-read" for all couples planning a family, and it wouldn't hurt to share the enlightenment with prospective grandparents and anyone else inclined to be a worrywart when there's a baby on the way.

Our primary policy, he says, is to avoid catastrophe. We must help to improve the lot of the people of the Soviet Union, "not by superiority of nuclear weapons, confrontation or threats." We must look to accommodation - "we must live with that dangerous bear because he can kill us," he adds.

The United States must take the difficult steps to initiate a comprehensive test ban of all nuclear weapons and anti satellite missiles, a procedure not viewed favorably by the administration. We must collaborate with the Soviet Union in many fields such as art, music and a variety of subjects Weiskopf compiles under the title of Mutual Economic Scientific Technology Advantages. Russia and the U.S. could collaborate on common peaceable interests, including developing new energy sources, investigating ocean pollution, atmospheric problems, health problems and scientific enterprises.

"I believe," the professor tells his audience, " that the present policy of going to superiority , and developing less connections to the Soviets, is fatal. We are on a collision course that can be avoided. It depends on what we do."

After talking with high school and undergraduates students throughout the country, this gentle man with wise, dark eyes shrugs his shoulders and confides, "they are not interested enough. I don't want to scare them, but they must care enough to work. That is the only way out of this."

politicus — by David A. Mittell, Jr.

Good transportation . . . in our time

We whiners and doomsayers have been taking it on the chin lately from President Reagan, and it is time we faced up to one of our more noteworthy recent sins: our sorry assessment of the chances of any commuter ever reaching Boston during the two-year (1984-1986) reconstruction of the Southeast Expressway.

We had fun predicting traffic jams, tempers lost, fenders bent, marriages menaced, and fathers unknown to their wee children beginning on that March, 1984 day when the state Department of Public Works would begin blocking off two lanes of Route 3 for the proposed rebuilding.

But alas, and as it came to pass, Commissioner Tierney of the D.P.W. and his staff did such a superb job of preplanning for the massive project at hand that commuting to Boston on the Expressway has if anything gotten a little easier in 1984.

A lot of us underestimated the capacity of a public bureaucracy to intelligently prepare the highly complicated undertaking involved, and as one of the more shrill voices of doom when the project was announced in the summer of 1983, it is a pleasure to salute the Commissioner, the staff, the contractors, the on-scene police, etc. who made us eat crow.

At this juncture the issue is not the disruption that the continuing reconstruction may cause. Nor is it the fact that the chief contractor will not finish this year's allotted work in this year's allotted time. The issue is not at the commissional level at all, the issue, rather, is at the gubernatorial level.

For the issue that any bloke who has ever been made late commuting to Boston may rightly raise now is how this project, which will undoubtedly be completed next year with a minimum of personal and economic disruption, fits into our commuting future.

The answer, regrettably, is that this project does not speak to the future, rather it locks us into the past. It rebuilds the 1954 Expressway with improved drainage and other irrelevencies for the commuter, but it does virtually nothing to ease the problem of the drive to Boston.

What the South Shore desperately needs if its transportation conundrum is ever to be resolved is bold thinking and master planning. The essential trouble with both our road building and rapid transit extending in the last 20 years is that projects have been undertaken in isolation and without thoroughly considering their ramifications.

Thus the Red Line was built through Quincy to Braintree in such a way that it obliterated the rail right of way that at one time had brought commuter trains to Boston from lines ending in Scituate, Hanover, Plymouth, Whitman, Brockton, Cape Cod. The Red Line to Boston didn't have to be built that way, but it was, and now getting commuter rail in the South Shore back to where it was in the fifties will be enormously costly and time-consuming.

Rebuilding the Southeast Expressway without widening or seriously improving it was the same sort of short-sighted action on a transportation "trunk" that building the Red Line through Quincy was. Just as several rail lines that converge in Braintree must pass through Quincy to get to Boston, all the highways that feed into the junction of Rtes. 3 and 128 necessarily send their spittle of traffic onto the Southeast Expressway.

What rebuilding the Expressway without widening it or putting in permanent reversible lanes really means is that the Expressway of 2014 won't be significantly better than the 1954 version. By not deciding for ourselves we have decided for our children.

Not too many years ago New Jersey and Ontario confronted the same problem of an old, overtaxed road, and they opted to widen the New Jersey Turnpike and the McDonald Cartier Freeway to six lanes in each direction. A case can be made against doing the same to Route 3. A case can also be made against the massive investment that would be needed to bring commuter rail back to its 1958 level — never mind its 1938 level.

But what should be remembered is that road and rail are the only two modes we have of moving great masses of people to and from work. The commuter boat, the commuter aircraft etc., have their place, but they cannot represent a comprehensive solution of the terrible commuting problem that this, the state's fastest-growing region for over 20 years, has.

In short, the solution, if it ever is to come, must be a much better road, much better rail transportation, or some combination of the two. What ought to be infuriating to any South Shore commuter stuck on Route 3 or crammed into a broken-down Red Line car is that no governor since a man named Bob Bradford has seen fit to have the South Shore's transportation system comprehensively evaluated. That good man was elected in 1948, ejected foolishly in 1950. Perhaps that's where our troubles began.

I mean to explore this central South Shore issue in more detail in future articles, but for now I will leave you with a hopeful little story. For a South Shore boy whose voice changed on about the day the New Haven Railroad succumbed in these parts, it was quite an experience.

Last week I went down to the Apple to see the New York Marathon, and took the train. Alas, a few others had the same idea, and for the return trip to Boston the waiting room at Penn Station contained more human beings than I've ever seen in a train station except in Kiev, U.S.S.R., where our species doesn't drive automobiles.

But to my pleasant surprise, the service is excellent. There were plenty of seats on the train, two food cars, a polite staff, and a smooth, punctual ride. After a great crowd of Yalies had left the train in New Haven, my curiousity got the better of me. I walked the length of the train and counted 715 passengers exclusive of toilets.

Now, I remember the last days of the New Haven Railroad, and I remember the Penn Central, and riding them to New York was not like riding our Red Line or driving our Expressway — it was incomparably worse. It seems to me that if a quasi-public outfit like Amtrak can do as much as it apparently has to turn transportation disaster into mass transportation service that on this occasion approached excellence, then we of the South Shore can hope for and demand a transportation system that is excellent in our time.

FROM THE KITCHEN

by JOAN PINKHAM

At long last the elections are over. Polls, speeches, pundits and photographs of candidates posing in silly hats before adoring crowds are behind us and perhaps now we can get on with our own affairs. Sometimes it's nice to turn off the radio and television and just tend to our own little cabbage patch, for we all need our quiet times, a chance to "do our own thing" and a change of pace is always refreshing. After lo these many years of preparing meals, I always get a lift out of eating somebody else's cooking. So it was that my friend, Ethel and I took off for a day and ended up at our Katy's home where a delicious luncheon awaited. One bite and I knew it was a "must" for the column and you'll see why when you, too, taste Katy's

SPINACH-RICOTTA PIE

Follow directions for baking one frozen pie crust. While it is baking, prepare filling:
1 T butter
1 c. minced onion
1 pkg. (10 oz.) chopped spinach, thawed
1 container (15 oz.) ricotta cheese
2 eggs
3/4 tsp. salt
1/4 tsp. each pepper, nutmeg
3/8 c. parmesan cheese

Thoroughly drain spinach, using hands to squeeze out as much moisture as possible. Melt butter and fry onion until soft. Add spinach and stir until most of moisture is gone. Remove from heat. In large bowl, add all the other ingredients to the spinach and stir til mixture looks like green marble. Pour into baked pie shell. Bake at 350 degrees for about 40 min., or until top is golden and filling set.

Now that the hustle-bustle of the election gives way to the flurry preceding the holiday season, Thanksgiving plans are already under way for many and so it is, that this recipe that Ann Byers gave me the other night at bridge club is just about perfect for this time of year. It's not your ordinary, run-of-the-mill cranberry loaf, as you'll notice, for it has sour cream. The recipe makes two loaves — one to gobble up now and one for the freezer. Sometimes, when you've been asked to bake for the food table at a local fair, it's fun to bake those little loaves in aluminum loaf tins. Your regular loaf tins call for baking this recipe at 350 degrees for one hour; for smaller loaves, shorten the baking time.

CRANBERRY NUT BREAD

Melt 1 c. butter
Mix in 2 c. sugar
Add 4 eggs, one at a time
Stir in 2 tsp. vanilla
Mix together and stir in:
4 c. flour
2 tsp. baking powder
2 tsp. baking soda
1 tsp. salt
Add:
2 c. sour cream
1 c. walnuts
2 c. floured cranberries

Shifting gears comes automatically when you're a mother and your cooking habits change with the season. The Gazpacho Soup your family welcomed cold on a hot summer's day, must be piping hot as we scurry around before the brisk, autumn wind. A thermosful on a crisp autumn day at a football game, or just a day-long drive and tailgate picnic, can be the occasion for six servings of

GAZPACHO SOUP

5 large, ripe tomatoes, seeded and chopped
1 medium-sized onion, chopped
1/2 clove of garlic
2 c. cold beef bouillon
2 T each olive oil, wine vinegar
1/4 tsp. each black pepper, paprika
4 oz. dry sherry
1/2 c. fine bread crumbs
1 c. each cucumber, onion, green pepper, finely chopped
1 bowl garlic croutons

Combine all the ingredients through paprika. Refrigerate for 2 hours. Pour into blender and blend for 1½ minutes. Pour into a pot and stir in the sherry and bread crumbs. Heat and pour into thermos. Place chopped cucumbers, peppers and onions in separate bowls, as well as croutons and these may be sprinkled on top of the soup as desired.

North River Club presents British farce

By Corinne A. Kutish

The North River Community Club presents its Fall production, the hilarious British farce, "No Sex Please, We're British", by Anthony Marriot and Alistair Foot, Friday and Saturday, Nov. 16, 17, 23, 24, 30 and Dec. 1 at 8 p.m.

"No Sex Please, We're British" tells the tale of young British newly-weds Frances and Peter Hunter, played by Kathy Ericson of Quincy and Brian DeLorenzo of Weymouth, who learn to cope with more than the usual newly-wed problems.

Their apartment is upstairs from the bank Peter manages, meaning interruptions at inopportune times. Then there's an ever-present mother-in-law (Janice Daley of Quincy), who is sweet on Peter's boss (Bill Chouinard of Hanover).

But that's nothing compared to the chaos that erupts when wild pornographic material starts showing up at their door. It seems Frances thought she was ordering Swedish glassware.

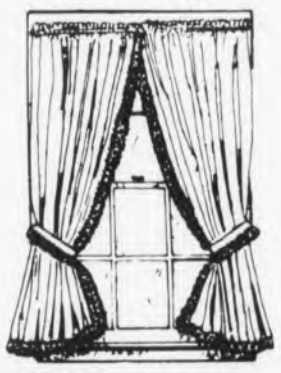
Sean Mahony of Norwell plays Brian Runnicles, the hapless bank cashier, who is enlisted to "dispose" of the unwanted photos and films, even as the delivery man (Jim McPhee of Weymouth) keeps dropping off more.

Meanwhile police superintendent Paul (Bob Treganowen of Duxbury) is in hot pursuit of the culprit.

The plot really complicates, though, when two "ladies of the evening" (Gail Dunphy of Norwell and Alice Fitzgerald of Somerville) show up under the mistaken notion that they have been sent for as well. Al Pizzotti of Norwell plays Mr. Needham, a timid bank inspector, caught in the middle of the confusion.

THEATRE REVIEW

The play is directed by Joe McAlarney of Weymouth, assisted by Marion Barnes of Hanover. Set construction is by Bob Neary and Barry Cornwall. Jan Lindemann is responsible for props and stage dressing; Jim McPhee of Weymouth for technical. The producer is Barry Cornwall.



The North River Community Club is located at 513 River Street in Norwell. Seating is cabaret style and refreshments will be served.

Tickets cost $6.00 and must be purchased in advance, either at The Deli on Route 123 in Norwell Center, or through the mail by calling 659-7000 (an answering service — leave your name and telephone number.)

PLAYBILL

"No Sex Please, We're British," presented by the North River Community Club, Friday and Saturday, Nov. 16, 17, 23, 24, 30 and Dec. 1 at 8 p.m. at the Clubhouse, 513 River Street, Norwell. SEMI-IMPOVERISHED newspaper person is looking for furniture to redo a postage stamp size living room. The old couch has just become the latest casualty between myself, my wife and Graything (my neurotic couch killing cat). I'm looking for a reasonably priced bit of furniture that will not clash with our early American Orange Crate decor. Money is tight, so be gentle, Folks. Here is your chance to get rid of that unwanted couch while making my wife happy and, perhaps, even saving the life of my cat. Call in the evenings after 6 p.m., 585-5427. (TFN)

DELIGHT YOUR TASTE BUDS with my delicious and original recipes. PATCHES by Lois MARTIN

Keeping the accent on individualism

They're going to blend us into a society that has the palatibility of pablum.

Honest. Watch it. However you talk now, don't you dare change it. We will be linguistic clones if we lose our individual accents. Nothing more vibrant than ginger ale with the fizz gone.

"They," you know the ubiquitous "they," the ones who are the phantoms of pending changes that bring alteration instead of improvement, they're trying to homogenize our language.

I heard a group of people talking about this recently. The linguists of the world have decided America would be better if we all talked the same. I believe they've settled on the radio type voice, mid-western for the universal accent.

And I'll have none of it. How will I know who's calling; how will I know when I'm in the process of meeting someone interesting with a different background.

Part of the personality of an individual is the way he or she talks, the wondrous inflections, the hometown hangovers of our heritage, the variety we employ and demonstrate in pronouncing words differently.

And the expressions. We would lose all those. Someone from Iowa would be spouting the same talk type as someone from Arkansas.

Who'll even listen to Julio anymore once he's a man who sings mid-western. And Queen Elizabeth, what will we find to make fun of in her lofty royal dissertations if she's just another voice from Kansas. John F. Kennedy probably would never have been elected if he didn't bring fresh verve to the language for those who discovered Boston in him. The mimics will be out of work . . . we wouldn't recognize a John Wayne takeoff, or a Cary Grant or Jimmy Stewart.

A Texan, a southerner, oh, how I'd miss them.

And Maine.

Heaven protect the poor soul who wants to get me to talk a Dakota. I started 'talking funny' early and there's no indication of a let up.

Within the state of Maine alone, I'll get to this state in a minute, there are five different dialects. I love them. It lets me know where they come from in so many ways. And I've let others know the same about me.

How many dialects are in Boston alone? You got it, as many as there were Little City Halls at least. The purity of the potpourri is not to be toyed with.

The antithesis of variety is boredom. The other side of naturalness is phoniness. I'd like to see me try to pull off a New York accent, an Uptown sophisticate who quickly shows herself as someone with a dight of clamflat on her left heel.

And for my part, it'll stay there.

Half of America's humor is inspired by our individual traits, reflecting origin and dialect. America couldn't do without Yankee humor. Those characteristics would be eliminated. We'd lose the contributions of the many who sprinkle our Americanized English with colorful adaptations of other language.

A long time ago a woman of French descent asked me to teach her English so she wouldn't "embarass" her children. I told her I'd make a deal with her. I'd teach her anything I could about the language of the land to which she'd moved . . . with the understanding that her new knowledge should be viewed as an enricher not as a necessary replacement for her own native tongue. She still has my English books come to think of it and I hope she still has a charming edge of French-touched accent in her English.

Anyway good luck to 'them,' the ones who think America should be of just one type of cookie.

Let them do what they will. When they ask to discuss it with me, when they think they're strong enough to tackle weeding out of my type of language, I'll be more'n happy to say, "Ayyuh." or Shohah."

Parenting talk at Crane Public Library

A special program, "Single Parents & Parenting Stress," will be presented by Dr. Richard C. Raynard and Karen Gardner at 10:30 a.m. Thursday, November 15 at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington Street, Quincy Square.

Addressing the concerns of both divorced and married parents, this talk will explore the pressures parents face and options for dealing with them. Fewer than one out of three children under 18 live in an intact "nuclear" family; over 12 million adults are single parents, and another 25 million are step-parents. For all parents, the problems of parenting, finances, day care, career, child abuse, latch key children, time management and stress are of concern.

Dr. Raynard is the director of Crossroads Counseling Center in Braintree, and Ms. Gardner is a Licensed Clinical Social Worker at Crossroads and specializes in family therapy.

The program is free and the public is invited. More information may be obtained by calling the library at 471-2400 or Crossroads Counseling Center at 843-7550.

ASBESTOS LUNG DISEASE

Asbestos dust causes serious lung ailments; the diseases appear suddenly, years after exposure. Today numerous SHIPYARD WORKERS, MASONS, and PIPEFITTERS of the 1930's-1970's have lung afflictions because they inhaled asbestos particles many years ago.

If you worked in one of those professions then and now have a lung disease, you may be eligible to receive money damages or workers' compensation. Relatives of living and deceased victims can also recover in some cases.

To learn your rights free of charge, or to bring an asbestos claim, contact:

Beatification was the 'event of a lifetime'

By Judy Gilman

Saints and other godly people—those who lived a long time ago, who have little or no connection with this rapid, 20th century world—right?

In the case of a Cohasset family, that connection became very close indeed, as they journeyed to Rome the end of September to attend the beatification ceremony in St. Peter's Square for a great-great grandmother.

Charles (Chick) Pyle and his wife Jan still have some difficulty talking about the event, an occasion that encompassed both the ancient pageantry of the Roman Catholic Church and the 20th century high technology used by the security forces to safeguard the public appearance of a Pope who has already survived one assassination attempt. The actual ceremony took place Sunday, Sept. 30 in the vast confines of St. Peter's Square when Mother Rafaela de Ybarra was beatified.

She was a Basque woman of a fairly wealthy family who was married and had seven children. At the age of 42, in 1885, she took a vow of celibacy and founded an order of nuns, known as the Angeles Custodios, who looked after unwed mothers and orphans. And she was Chick Pyle's great-great grandmother, which is where the Cohasset connection to the story comes into play.

Mother Rafaela, as she was known, used her family's house, La Cava, as the chapter house for the order, which spread through Spain and then into Central and South America and Puerto Rico, where it is still active today. Many of those celebrating Mother Rafaela's beatification in Rome this fall wore the distinctive gray habit of the order she founded.

Mother Rafaela, who is shown in the tapestry portrait displayed at the beatification as a petite woman with a patient, strongly-boned face, hair pulled back in a knot, and a long brown dress, died in 1900. By 1929, a move was underway to have her beatified, the first step on the road to sainthood.

The Vatican authorities that investigate such movements have high standards. There must be concrete facts on the person in question and something more than just having lived a good and godly life.

In Mother Rafaela's case, that incident took place in

Roofs and trash the big draw at town meeting

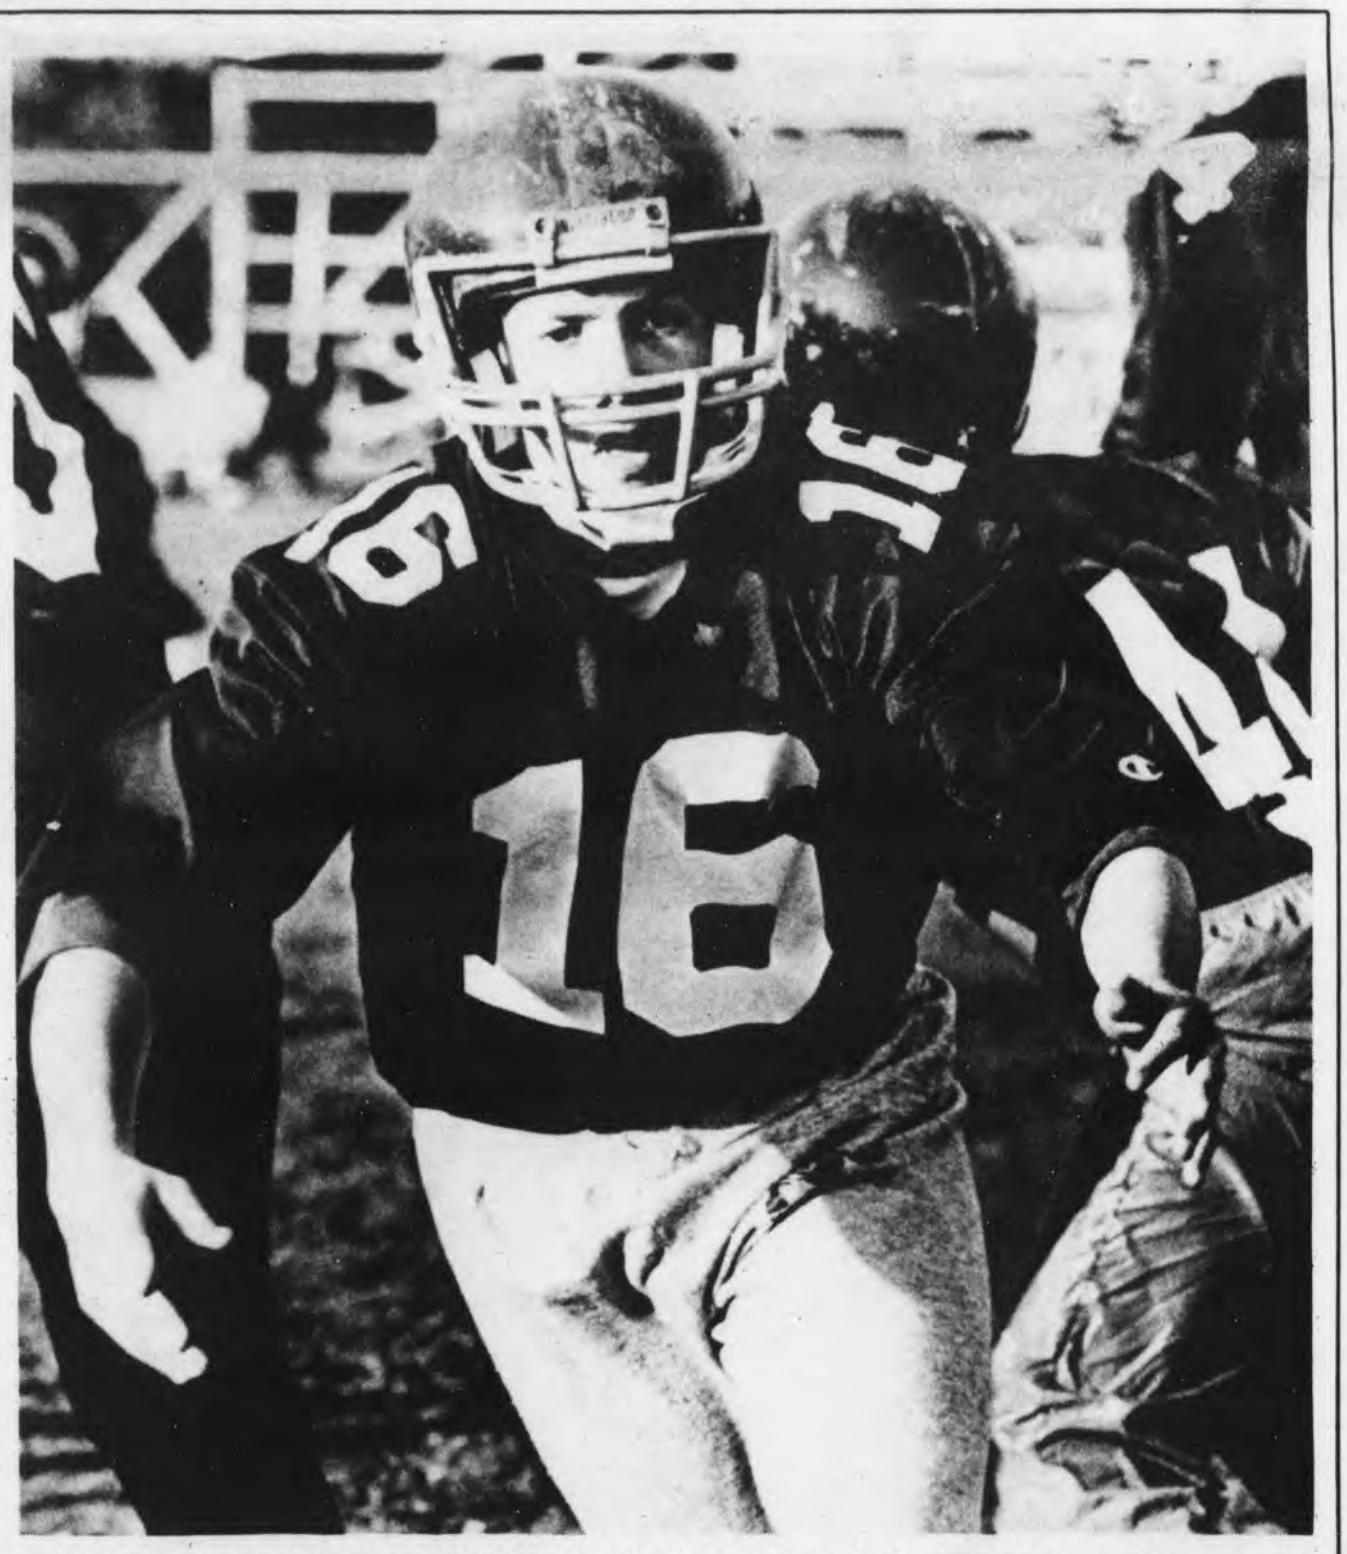
School roofs and trash disposal will be the big draws at Monday night's special town meeting.

The question of whether the town should appropriate a quarter of a million dollars to complete repairs to the high school roof will highlight the 12-article warrant.

And a decision must also be made Monday night whether the town will sign a 20-year contract with SEMASS, the trash-to-energy disposal system studied for the past 15 months by a special town advisory committee.

The school committee and Supt. Eugene Crowell have spearheaded a drive to complete the repairs to the high school roof. The town appropriated $551,000 last June to finish many of the repairs. And although those repairs are well under way, the project's architect, Frank Bagge, had to substitute some pre-determined roof areas for other more deteriorated sections. Those sections not included in this fall's repairs are leaking and could fail any time now, Supt. Crowell has repeatedly explained to town committees.

The crucial point now is whether the state Department of Education will approve a fifty percent funding package for the on-going repairs, and whether an application for additional state funding can be piggybacked atop Cohasset's initial request.



The advisory committee, which has been continually monitoring the school department's request, was told by Supt. Crowell last week that state funding has been assured. With that information in hand, the committee may be reconsidering their negative recommendation on Article Seven.

The SEMASS proposal has been one alternative studied by the Disposal Area Study Committee for the past year and a half. This group, along with selectmen and the advisory committee, have agreed that the SEMASS solution is the best choice the town could make for its long term solid waste disposal needs.

Committee member Donald DeMichele will argue Monday night that a 20-year contract with the Rochester-based trash facility will save the town hundreds of thousands of dollars into the future. The savings with the SEMASS contract can not accurately be projected because of the unknowns involved, he noted, including the future purchase price of a new landfill site after the current site is filled by 1995.

DeMichele explained that the SEMASS contract will not initially cost the town any money. It is not known immediately whether Cohasset, if town meeting

Two complaints against Litchfields

The town has filed two separate complaints against the owners of Litchfield Express Inc. of Bayberry Lane, seeking removal of commercial trucks from the residential, town-owned property.

A zoning lawsuit against Barron Salvador Sr. has been filed by the town in Norfolk Superior Court. The complaint is solely a zoning issue, seeking to have the commercial trucks removed from residential land. According to the town's zoning bylaw, not more than one commercial vehicle may be stored on residential property. The Salvadors store several trucks on a small parcel of land adjacent to their home.

In a second complaint against Litchfield Express Inc., the town is seeking to recover the Bayberry Lane lot from use by the privately-owned company. A statutory notice was sent to the Salvadors last month, demanding the company vacate the land within 60 days.

It is expected that a summary process complaint will be filed by town counsel by the end of the week in the Quincy Division of the District Court Dept. The complaint was filed after the Salvadors failed to remove the company trucks from the property. According to Town Counsel Richard Henderson, a hearing on the summary process complaint will probably be heard early December.

In the meantime, Litchfield Express owners Barron and Isabel Salvador said their attorney, Joseph D'Agostino of Marshfield, is expected to file an

Telephone expansion

New England Telephone is expanding and improving local telephone facilities in Cohasset.

Public relations Manager Jacqueline Jung said NET cable technicians are placing about four miles of new aerial and underground cable along with associated apparatus in eastern Cohasset.

The work — begun earlier this year — is expected to be completed by April of 1985.

"The new facilities will provide additional cable capacity and improved service to meet the present and future calling needs of Cohasset (383) telephone customers served by the Hingham exchange," Jung said.

This is one of many such projects New England Telephone is undertaking this year as part of its multi-million dollar construction program to expand and improve telephone service in Massachusetts.

Bartow named league developer

The Social Service League of Cohasset announces the appointment of Karin Bartow as developer for a multi-purpose senior center in the town.

This project represents a collaborative effort by the Cohasset Council on Aging and the League to assess the needs of Cohasset's senior citizens.

Funds were received from South Shore Elder Services through a federal Title III B grant and Council on Aging formula grant monies to hire Bartow for the part-time position.

South Shore Elder Services is the area agency which is responsible for planning, coordinating, monitoring and funding services and programs for older people in the eleven-community South Shore region.

Bartow will investigate how the needs of the senior population may have changed and whether or not a senior center in their own community would be suitable. She will be assisted by an advisory committee consisting of members from the community, the Social Service League and the Cohasset Council on Aging.

The League initiated this project and will act as project overseer. They feel that Cohasset's senior citizens might benefit from a multi-purpose center which would offer a focal point for social, recreational, educational, health and nutritional programs. It could also consolidate existing services which now take place at various locations.

The Social Service League is a voluntary, non-profit organization funded and incorporated for the purpose of providing skilled nursing, professional counseling, and other health and community services for the residents of Cohasset.

Bartow, formerly a news reporter and columnist for the Cohasset Mariner, has been involved in fund raising and program development for the arts in the schools for the past five years. She has most recently assisted in the development of an arts policy for the schools. She is a member of the South Shore Art Center Education Committee.

During the initial weeks for the project, Bartow will be talking to individuals, committees and organizations in the town to gather information, facts and opinions pertaining to the needs of senior citizens.

Health board decision

The planning board will wait for the Board of Health's input before rendering a decision on a proposal to construct 34 homes within the town's watershed district.

The board told developer Edward Britt last week that no decision would be forwarded until the health board rules on the proposal to construct the homes along Lily Pond on King Street.

It is within the jurisdiction of the health board to determine whether any development may occurr within the confines of the town's water supply area. The board recently imposed a moratorium on building septic systems within the watershed surrounding Lily Pond and the Aaron River Reservoir.

Although the developer would prefer to develop 34 homes under the cluster zoning bylaw, with space provided for tennis courts and a swimming pool, there is a possibility Britt may submit plans for 11 single-family homes.

Plaza opposition

Developer Donald Staszko, who months ago presented plans to construct a shopping plaza on Chief Justice Cushing Highway, has run into additional opposition.

Fairoaks Lane residents presented the planning board last week with a petition signed by 700 residents, expressing their opposition to the plaza. The planning board has yet to render a decision regarding the proposed plaza.

Atty. Charles Humphreys, representing the developer, asked the board last week to delay a decision until the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) rules on whether the plan is environmentally sound. The DEQE had previously overturned a Cohasset Conservation Commission approval of the plaza plans, and Staszko subsequently appealed the state's decision. The DEQE should complete its finding by the end of this month, according to Atty. Humphreys.

Atty. Humphreys also explained last week that he will need additional time to respond to objections forwarded by Atty. Michael Puzo, counsel to abutter Jane Cook of Sohier Street.

The planning board agreed to delay its decision in order to further review the plaza plans, and to study the objections raised in the Fairoaks Lane petition.

Fairoaks opposition

An attorney representing several Fairoaks Lane residents has requested that an additional area be included in the town's proposed watershed protection district.

Atty. Christopher Sullivan, representing several families on Fairoaks Lane, has requested that selectmen approve expanding the boundaries of the watershed by 400 feet north along Route 3A to Sohier Street.

"The area is unquestionably wet: a brook runs through it to Sanctuary Pond. Although the pond is not used for drinking, the day when it is pressed into service may not be far off, " the residents' attorney stated.

He suggested the town immediately include this area into the proposed Watershed Moratorium District, which the Board of Health has initiated to ban construction of septic systems in the watershed. The proposal should be enacted immediately, Atty. Sullivan suggested, in order to delay development "until the hydrogeological study pinpoints the actual extent of the watershed area."

Thanks to Geneva

Manuel Salvador, sewer treatment plant supervisor, has thanked Geneva Construction for its assistance in repairing sewer pipe breaks along Stockbridge and Margin Streets.

Actually, the pipe was not split along Stockbridge Street, as originally suspected. But there was leaking and the repairs were made by Geneva. The construction company has been completing a lengthy water main reconstruction project along this area, and is currently on Border Street.

According to Salvador, Geneva Construction cooperated with the town, and "the job was completed to my satisfaction, and SEA's (consulting engineers for the water main project)."

Health board okays plaza

The Board of Health this week approved the septic system plan for Cohasset Plaza, the shopping center proposed by developer Donald Staszko.

The board members noted that this plan was submitted to prior to their initiating a ban on construction of septic systems in the watershed protection district. It is therefore protected from the ban, although it is within the proposed watershed area.

In October, the board reviewed the detailed plans to provide a septic system for the Route 3A mall. The board's engineer, John Modezelewski, also reviewed the plan, noting it was "generally acceptable," but he listed several revisions which should be submitted prior to approval.

Engineer Fred DeFeo, representing E.J. Flynn Co. for developer Staszko, made the required revisions to the septic plans.

The board approved the plans with the provision that the floor plans with designated office and retail space be reviewed at a later date.

In other business Tuesday night, the health board voted to deny a request to construct a septic system within the floodplain at 392 South Main Street. Gary Sisson has applied to the Zoning Board of Appeals for a special permit to build upon the property. That request was denied by the board this week, Sisson told the health board.

The Board of Health members said without the special permit, they could not grant septic system construction approval. According to the board's regulations, they could not grant approval when another town board denied construction within the floodplain.

The board members suggested that the Sisson's continue to seek approval from the Conservation Commission, and appeal the zoning board's verdict. If that appeal is successful, then Sisson could present plans to the Board of Health.

Later in the meeting, the Sisson's engineer, Neil Murphy, took issue with the board's decision. He insisted that the Sisson's have remained in compliance with the health board's bylaws because they are appealing the zoning decision. "We are in compliance by virtue of the fact we have filed with the Zoning Board of Appeals and we are appealing that decision," he said.

When the board re-emphasized they would not approve plans for construction denied by another town board, Murphy answered, "for you to look for approval by other town boards goes beyond your authority and the purpose of your regulations. It is not fair to the people who come before this board."

Health board member Barbara Kern stated she would not grant approval for a septic system within a floodplain, regardless of the zoning board's decision to to deny a special permit.

Murphy told the board the Conservation Commission has approved the plans, and official notification was being sent to the health board. The appeal of the zoning board's decision is also being submitted, he added. He requested permission to review the septic plans before the health board once the Conservation Commission approval is verified.

In the meantime, the health board will request town counsel's interpretation of their regulations pertaining to approval of a plan which is not in compliance with the town bylaws.

The health board also discussed a proposed plan presented by Arthur Pompeo, to convert a garage at 11 Ripley Road into a guest house. Board members decided that a totally new septic system would be necessary, separate from the existing system for the home.

Perks tests and engineering plans will be necessary for review by the board prior to construction of a second separate system. Pompeo opposed that requirement, and stated he would prefer dividing the property into two lots. That would be allowable under the zoning bylaws, he said.

The board voted to require new separate systems for the guest house and the main home, in order to meet its requirements. A review of those plans would be necessary before construction.

Pompeo objected to that decision, and said it was in conflict with the board's supplemental rules which state there can't be two septic systems on one lot. Board member Kern said the rule allows two systems when there are two residences on the lot.

In other business, health board members held preliminary discussions with David Bowering, who outlined plans to move the carriage house at 296 South Main Street further along the property near the river. Board members discussed alternatives methods of constructing a new septic system for the two-family residence.

Tax bill news

Home and business owners should have found a little something extra in their mailboxes today. The new tax rate has been set and the bills were scheduled for mailing yesterday.

Town Accountant William Signorelli said the tax rate has been certified by the state Department of Revenue, and everything was set for a Wednesday mailing.

The new rate is $19 per thousand, a mere 40 cents more than last year's bills. And that rate is the same for all residential, business and open space property throughout town.

Anyone interested in filing for abatements, must fill out a form in the Assessor's office within 30 days. A hearing date will be scheduled after the form has been completed.

According to the Board of Assessor's the tax increase means that a home valued at $90,000, the median value of a Cohasset residence, will cost $1710 in taxes this year. That is $36 more than the homeowner paid last year.

Both selectmen and assessors agreed that a flat rate for both residential and commercial was the best alternative. A higher fee would discourage businesses from locating in the town, they agreed.

Beatification . . .

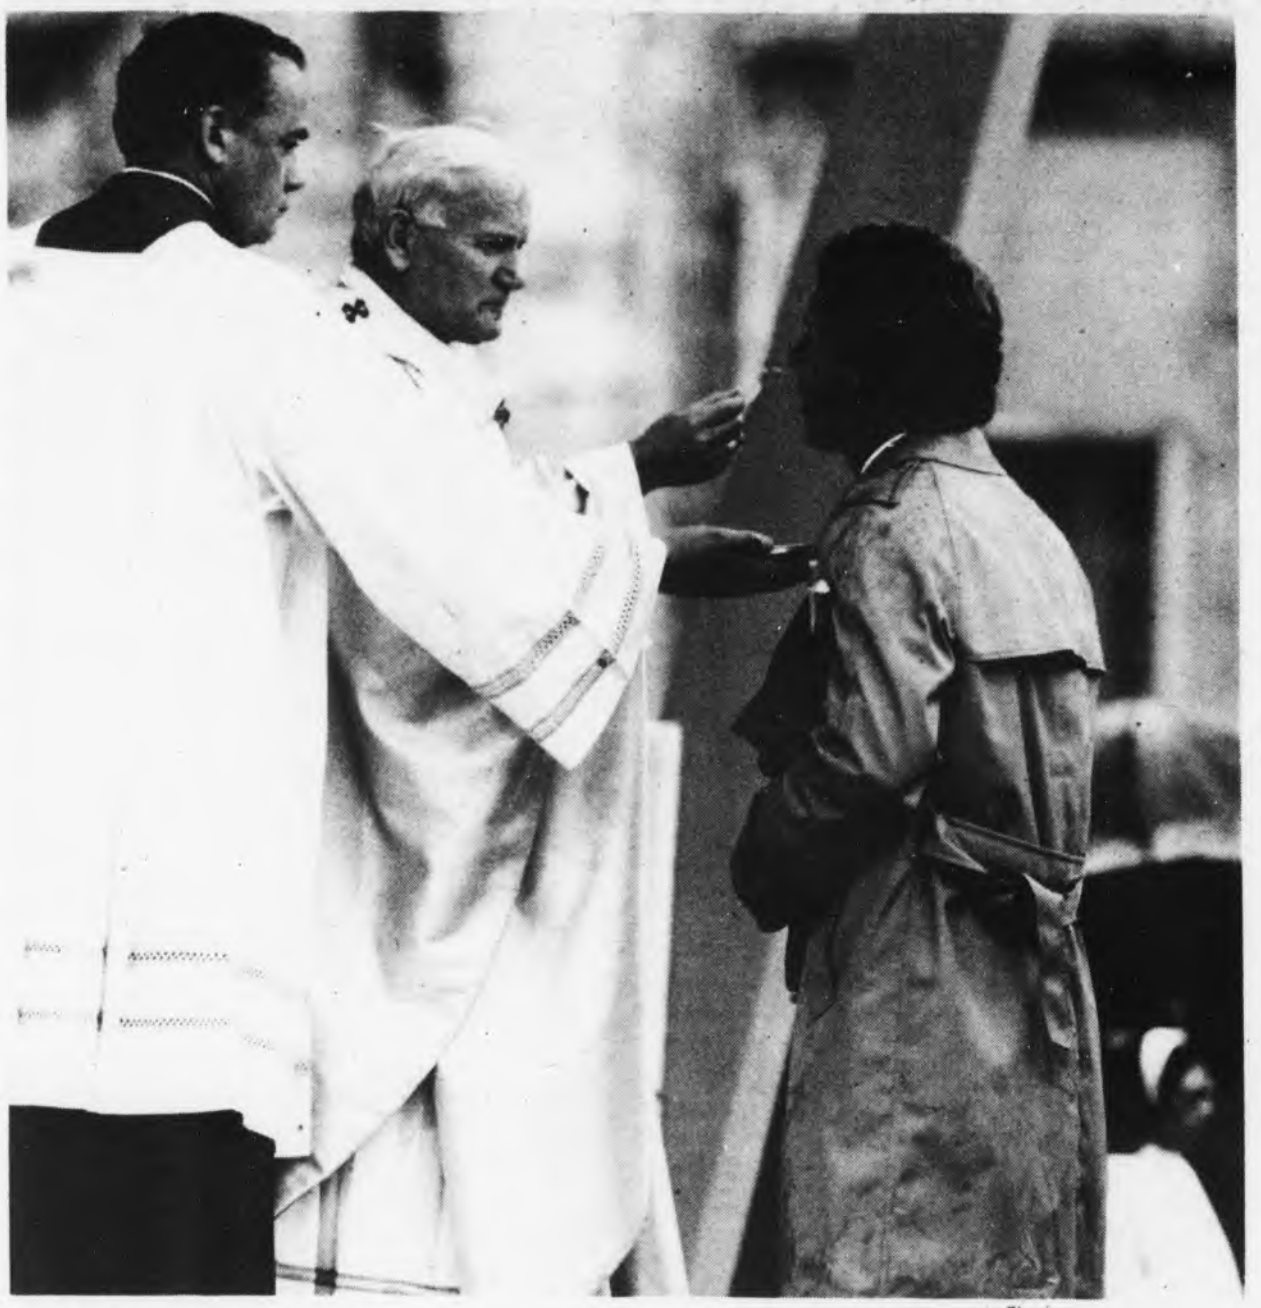
South America, when a member of the order was diagnosed as having the fatal disease meningitis. The doctors shook their heads and said there was no hope of recovery. But the members of the order prayed for nine days to their founder. At the end of the nine days, the nun was not only well again, but there were no traces remaining that she had ever had the meningitis.

But it took 53 years to assemble the necessary facts before the Vatican gave the go-ahead to this very special designation.

"The ceremony was originally scheduled for February," Chick said last week. Then the date was switched to the end of September, and the wheels were set in motion, not only for the beatification ceremony itself, but also for a gigantic family reunion.



The night before the beatification ceremony, 300 direct descendants of Mother Rafaela de Ybarra gathered in a Rome hotel ballroom for a family meeting. The Pyles, their children Katie and Greg, and Chick's mother, sister, brother and sister-in-law, were the only Americans there. There were some cousins from France, but most hailed from Spain—a few from San Sebastio and Madrid, but most from Seville and Bilbao, Mother Rafaela's home city. Some of the Bilbao cousins had never met, though they'd lived in the same city all their lives.

The next day dawned as a partly-cloudy day, but it wasn't to remain that way. The Pyles arrived with the rest of the invited guests in St. Peter's Square. Security was tight. All guests were issued specially-coded cards, with seating separated by colors. Chick was seated on the steps of the Basilica, as one of the family members designated to receive Communion from Pope John Paul II.

"It was just an overwhelming experience to be there and to be a part of the whole thing," Chick said. "Just seeing St. Peter's is an experience in itself. And the rows of cardinals seated, the foreign ambassadors and other dignitaries, the banners covering the front of the Basilica, the Swiss Guards at attention..."

Promptly at 9:30 a.m., the bells of St. Peter's began to ring, the great central doors of the Basilica swung open and a long procession of brilliantly-robed clerics began to stream out, followed, at the rear, by His Holiness.

Beatification an 'event'

The beatification of Mother Rafaela had begun.

It was a two-hour ceremony, combining a High Mass with the ceremony in which three men as well as Mother Rafaela were honored. And, as each was mentioned, the covering over the tapestry of the beatified's portrait was rolled up to be displayed not only to the guests but to the public attending Mass in the far area of the square.

The weather, however, did not cooperate. A violent rainstorm descended, complete with high winds and bolts of lightning. Only the Pope and those priests attending him at the altar were under a canopy were protected. Umbrellas were blown to pieces and the entire congregation was inundated. "And it was amazing," Jan Pyle recalled. "Half an hour after the ceremony, the sun was out and the puddles were drying up."

The Pope delivered his homily or sermon in Mother Rafaela's native Basque. Other participants translated into a variety of languages, including a cousin from Paris, who delivered the French version.

Part of the ceremony in included the presentation of a family gift to the Vatican. This duty was carried out by an uncle, resplendent in white tie and tails. The gift was to be a symbolic rather than a valuable one and represented the Basque country in a bottle of wine, a jar of olives, a ceramic figurine, and a crucifix wrought from iron from the Ybarra family mines.

When it came time to proceed up to the altar to receive Communion from the man who is the living link with St. Peter, the first bishop of Rome, Chick had resolved, "I was going to look into his eyes." It was, after all, in all probability, a once in a lifetime experience. "But when I got up there, I couldn't keep them open." The official Vatican photograph of the occasion bears this out. But Chick did gather a personal impression of the Pope: "a gentle, unassuming man, a common man."

After the Mass was over, Chick's mother was one of the family members to have a private audience with the Pope, before he appeared in his traditional Sunday morning gesture on his private balcony overlooking St. Peter's Square to greet the public.

Mother Rafaela is the only person from the Spanish province of Vizcaya to be beatified, and the Spanish government took proper note of this. That evening, there was a glittering reception for 1,000 guests at the Spanish Embassy, where Mother Rafaela's descendants were the guests of honor. Also in attendance were all the Spanish cardinals and the president and vice president of the Spanish senate, who had flown in for the ceremony. The senate president is second in command to the Spanish prime minister.

The ceremony was carried on live television all over Europe and was rebroadcast to other Spanish-speaking countries later in the day. And L'Osservatore Romano, the official Vatican newspaper, had full-page features on Mother Rafaela on the day preceding and following the ceremony.

"We all went back to St. Peter's the next day, and the contrast was tremendous between the site of the ceremony and its everyday look," Chick said.

Jan, though, was most struck by the personality Mother Rafaela must have been. "To have given up a comfortable lifestyle and to take in poor people, unfortunate people that the rest of society looked down on—that must have taken a lot of courage," she said.

And, indeed, that personality gazes out at the casual visitor in the Pyles' Atlantic Avenue living room, not only from the photograph of the beatification tapestry, but also from a small portrait done while she was alive. The eyes are alive, larger than life, and seem to speak volumes. This was, indeed, a woman who left her mark on the world and who has been recognized.

injunction against the town's eviction complaint.

And, the owners have stated, they have no intention of removing the trucks and disbanding the company.

The basis of their legal argument has been that previous Boards of Selectmen have granted permission for the Salvadors to use the land. Since the mid-1960's, the Salvadors have used the land to park their commercial vehicles, with approval from selectmen.

Atty. D'Agostino has repeatedly argued that according to state statute Chapter 40A, Section seven, the Salvadors may remain on the property. Because 15 years ago selectmen granted permission to use the property, any current action against that permission is inproper. Permission was granted by the town more than six years ago, thus the Salvadors should be allowed to remain, according to their attorney.

The town has countered that the Salvadors never obtained a variance from the Zoning Board of Appeals and are therefore classified as trespassers on the land. No section of state law is applicable when the company owners are in violation of the town's zoning bylaws, according to arguments presented by town counsel.

The town has gone to great lengths to retrieve their property. Although the bills for October have not been prepared, the town has expended more than $1800 in its attempt to evict the Salvadors and recover its land.

With new complaints and court hearings to be scheduled, the price for removing the company trucks from the residential neighborhood will increase this month. The town counsel's office is paid $65 per hour by the town.

According to the bills filed by Atty. Henderson's office with the Town Accountant, the legal process began in Februrary, 1984. At that time, Atty. Henderson researched the question of whether the town can exempt an individual from complying with the zoning bylaws "with regard to the Salvador matter."

The bills continue in progression, with phone calls, meetings with selectmen, the Salvadors and their attorney, and with court complaints.

In March, Atty. Henderson held telephone conferences with "a member of the Board of Selectmen" in regard to the Salvador issue. And in May, the town counsel attended a joint meeting with the Salvadors at their attorney's office to discuss the matter. Later that month, Atty. Henderson held brief telephone conversations with Selectman Frank England and the Executive Secretary.

Several hours of research to prepare a Motion to Dismiss a previous motion made by Atty. D'Agostino, was filed by Atty. Henderson in June. That motion was denied by the Norfolk County Superior Court late this summer.

Several hours of research work has also been billed to the town regarding state statute Chapter 40A Section seven, being used by the defendants' attorney.

And in August, there was a bill for a brief telephone conversation with town counsel and an abutter to the Salvadors, "with respect to the town pursuing legal action against Litchfield Express."

State energy conservation effort

State Energy Secretary Sharon M. Pollard announced the formation of the "Innovative Energy Conservation Grants Program," a new state energy conservation effort funded by the Executive Office of Energy Resources (EOER).

The program is designed to encourage the development of creative new energy conservation and renewable energy promotion projects, and to encourage the active participation of local community organizations in state energy policy efforts.

Secretary Pollard announced the "Innovative Energy Conservation Grants Program" has $100,000 of funding available to support local energy projects. The money will be issued through two funding cycles of $50,000 each over the next year.

EOER is currently accepting proposals from local organizations for the first cycle of funding. During this cycle, the energy office hopes to award up to three grants to community applicants. The minimum grant award is expected to be $10,000.

Applications for grants under the new program must be received in the state energy office by Nov. 28, 1984.

Inquiries should be directed to Carol Topjian at the Executive Office of Energy Resources (727-4732).

Weddings

Hathorne - Wall

Sharon L. Hathorne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald L. Hathorne of Norwell, and Gregory F. Wall, son of Mrs. Alfred Faria and the late Joseph T. Wall, Jr., of Mattapoisett and North Scituate, were married on Oct. 6 at the First Parish Church.

The bride was attended by Virginia Pizzella of Martha's Veneyard, maid-of-honor; Sandra Webb of Needham and Susan Hathorne of Los Angeles, bridemaids and sisters of the bride.

Steven Baxter of Weymouth served as best man. Daniel Wall, brother of the groom, and Richard Wall, nephew of the groom, were ushers.

Following a reception at the South Shore Country Club, the couple honeymooned in Bermuda. They now live in Cohasset.

The bride is a graduate of Norwell High School and Laselle Junior College. She is currently employed as an executive secretary at Ultramar Petroleum, Inc., Dorchester.

The groom is a graduate of Scituate High School and Buffalo State University. He is the proprietor of the Wooden Nickel in Cohasset.

Mr. & Mrs. Robert Zelms

Zelms — Ritter

Lynn Marlane Ritter, daughter of Marjorie and Harry Ritter of Cohasset recently became the bride of Robert Paul Zelms son of the late Eileen and Alfred Zelms of Norwell. The wedding was at the Second Congregational Church, Cohasset.

Rev. Donald Orcutt, performed the double-ring ceremony. A reception immediately followed at the V.F.W., Marshfield.

Donna Hoelschen was matron of honor. Lisa Glynn and Ann Reardon were bridesmaids. Jenny Figueiredo, second cousin of the bride, was the flower girl. Nichole Curtin, niece of bride,was guest book attendant.

William Myers, step brother of groom served as best man. Joseph Szweda and Robert Bilodeau shared ushering duties with junior usher Robert Warrall. The ring bearers were Harry and Jason Curtin, nephews of the bride.

Following a trip to the Poconos for the honeymoon, they are living in Cohasset.

☐ Had some news on Cohasset High grads last week, and it's fun to share with you (if you enjoy it, why not send in your news to share with townspeople, classmates and friends...it is amazing how many students get the Mariner at school, and they sure love to read it!). Dave Barcomb and Brett Wetzell, both 1984 grads, played football against one another a few weeks ago. The game was a Williston, where David is the quarterback (and having a sensational year); Brett attends Suffield Academy, and starts at guard-linebacker. After the game, it was parents weekend (Suffield Academy won 20-6, with Barcomb scoring the only points), and a super reunion topped off the day.

☐ Gaye Ripley, a 1979 graduate, graduated from Wheelock College (in 1983, if you can believe it!) and is now teaching kindergarden in St. Petersburg, Florida. Brother Scott, CHS 1982, is a student at Southern Connecticut State University, majoring in physical education. Scott is still playing hockey, goalie of course, and their team finished in first place last year in the Metropolitan League. Everyone remembers "Rip" in net, sounds like he's keeping up his good work.

☐ Congratulations go to David W. Bishop, who has been named vice president and branch manager of Gordon Hoyt Associates of New England, a specialty insurance underwriting company.

☐ Chris Keating, son of Gerard and Margaret Keating, was in town last week. Chris is a member of the Buffalo Bills, the team that the Patriots played. Chris has been on the team for six years, and has been outstanding. To cap off the year, he has another distinct honor...he has done so much good in the town in which he lives, he has been nominated for the Miller Lite NFL Man of the Year award. He is one of three Bills nominated, and I'll be sure to keep you informed. Chris is also one of the most popular members of the team, a real Keating trait.

☐ Paul and Debra Krupczak almost had a Halloween baby...congratulations to them on the birth of their son, born Oct. 30.

☐ It's hard to believe, but vandals have hit again, this time at the Historical House. Anyone who has walked by will notice part of the fence missing in two places. That is because someone deliberately knocked them out, forcing the Historical Society to have to get them repaired. The fee is certainly a hefty one, and it's a real sin to let go unnoticed. When so much time and effort is put into something, it behooves the rest to enjoy it, not ruin it. Anyone who has any information should get in touch with Connie Parker, one upset gal who always does her best for the town, the Historical Society in particular.

☐ Cohasset can certainly be proud of our athletes in the high school. We have one of the smallest enrollments in the league, yet we made it to the States in three sports. We also had 11 players make all-star teams...in girls soccer, Amy Duncomb, Sara Seavey, Tracy Fitzpatrick, Tara Stanford and Janet DiGirolomo are all All-Stars! In boys soccer, the All Stars announced were: Bob Shultz, Mike DeSantis, David MacDonald, Mason Sandell and Bill McKenna. And in field hockey, Maria Cahill made the All Stars. A huge round of applause for all!

☐ While on the subject of applause, give Harry Ritter a special bow when you see him. Harry shot 84 in golf last Saturday and his feet haven't hit the ground yet. It will probably be written up in Golf Magazine. That's how excited everyone is for Harry.

(Carol McCann)

☐ That's the new for this week, keep it coming!

Once upon a time, not so far away,

a brave Copper King built an enchanted kingdom in a land by the sea.

There in Scituate, he surrounded his mansion with idyllic pastures and formal gardens. Then built a fairy tale tower to watch over his dream.

Some said he was eccentric. Others said he was vain. But in truth, the legendary millionaire, Thomas Lawson, was building a beautiful haven as a gift for his beloved family. And in 1903, Dreamwold came true.

Now it's coming true again.

All the majesty, privacy and splendor that was Dreamwold. In twenty-six unique Victorian condominium residences encircling a spectacular rose garden and beautiful swimming pool.

Dreamwold. A magnificent blend of historic restoration and new construction as only Boston's premier developer, Parencorp, could do.

This fall, Dreamwold is available at pre-completion prices, starting in the mid-100's. Visit Dreamwold between 11:00 AM and 6:00 PM daily for a personal presentation. Or call 545-0222 or 731-5570 for more information. It's coming true again. The new Dreamwold. Soon to be a legend of its own.

It's happening in Cohasset

"Cinderella" recalls another pantomime

The Cohasset Dramatic Club's forthcoming Christmas production of "Cinderella" to be done in the English "panto" style, will bring to the Town Hall stage an introduction to this particular type of traditional English theater.

However, Cohasset's historical records show that the town once was the location of a unique professional theater company specializing in another but perhaps related type of pantomime, also having its origin across the Atlantic. Bertram Pratt's definitive book "The narrative History of Cohasset, Volume Two" describes the activities of a turn-of-the-cenutry theater venture called "Hanlon Shows." Hanlons' was a professional touring stage company specializing in the production of spectacular pantomime shows for nationwide American audiences, and its headquarters were located at the corner of Ripley Road and Smith Place.

Today's South Shore Art Center building was one of the Hanlon studios, and across the street, where now may be found an antiques shop, the main Hanlon studio building, an enormous structure once dominated the view of Cohasset center. In the year 1889 six brothers of the theatrical family of Hanlon arrived here from England and began a tradition of touring pantomime theater which was to spread nationwide and would last for some fifteen years.

The six brothers were Thomas, George, William, Alfred, Edward and Fred Hanlon. William purchased an old home on Jerusalem Road and resided in Cohasset for a number of years. At their Ripley Road studios the Hanlon Brothers company, numbering about two hundred, spent each summer planning and rehearsing intricate pantomime shows which featured a combination of music, dancing, acrobatics and rapidly changing scenes.

Hanlon pantomime was a combination of theater and circus, all performed without spoken words, but with action aplenty. Of the Hanlon productions perhaps the best known were two spectacular extravaganzas called "Superba" and "Fantasma." Following the summer's preparation in Cohasset, the shows would go on the road across the country each winter, to perform their pantomime spectacles before nationwide audiences.

The company's return to Cohasset each spring was an event eagerly awaited by Cohasseters young and old alike. Although Hanlon shows never were presented in their entirety in Cohasset, parts could be viewed by local audiences and were greeted with great curiosity and excitement. The whole show could be seen when the annual road tour began its winter season in Boston.

Hanlon Shows lasted until the death of George Hanlon in 1905. Shortly afterwards the huge studio on Ripley Road became vacant and finally was removed in 1915, bringing down the curtain on the era of pantomime spectacle which had become as much a part of the life of Cohasseters of all ages.

This year, Cohasset's Dramatic Club revives the art of English pantomime, in a somewhat different form, as it presents author Rushworth Kidder's panto version of the Cinderella story, to be done on the Town Hall stage with spectacle and good humor. Performance dates are Friday and Saturday evenings December 7 and 8, with a matinee Sunday afternoon December 9 then again on Friday evening December 14, and a final matinee Saturday December 15. The Director is Hingham's Judy Holmes.

Tickets will be available at the door or in advance at Fleming's, Cohasset Center. Plan now to see one of the Cohasset presentations of this unique "Cinderella" done in the traditional English "panto" manner. It will be entertainment for the young at heart of all ages.

Snowflake Fair

The Beechwood Congregational Church, 58 Church Street in Cohasset will hold its annual Snowflake Fair, December 1 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The aroma of fish chowder, fried bread dough and the smell of fresh pines will greet you as you enter the fellowship hall.

Once again our famous "Beach Glass Candy" will be on sale. Flavors will include spearmint, wintergreen, licorice, clove and peppermint. Samples will be provided in case you never tasted it before.

Another speciality on display and for sale will be Cabbage Patch clothes suitable for any occasion for those "Cabbage Patch Kids." Fish chowder luncheon will be from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Fried bread dough, coffee, cold drinks and the snack bar will be open all day. Also May Merrit's Harvard beets (a speciality at our Harvest Supper) will be available for take out along with our fish chowder.

On a Christmas tree will be a wide selection of new and different ornaments made by church members. Wreaths (decorated or plain) will also be available. Our fancy table will display the handiwork of the different "Church Crafters." Everyone's favorite is the White Elephant where one is sure to find a bargain. Homemade pies, cookies, cakes, breads and candy will be available at our Food Table.

No Christmas Fair would be complete without a visit from Santa. Santa will arrive at 1 p.m.

Mark your calendar and call your friends for December 1. Be an early bird shopper.

Airfares to many parts of Europe are frequently their lowest through the fall and winter. Hotel rates are also considerably lower during these seasons. Yet the weather can be pleasant enough for traveling, particularly in the south. There is also the added bonus of not having to contend with hordes of foreign travelers during this time of year. Ask your travel agent about bargain tour packages, many of which start in the U.S. As many consumers already know, the trick to buying nearly anything is to buy it in the "off-season", when the demand is not so great. Town meeting

It's time to dust off the old, weary editorial and tell everyone to attend Monday night's special town meeting.

The future of the town may, or may not, be decided in the few warrant articles to be voted upon that night. But our participation is necessary. regardless.

We look around at other neighboring towns, and see important municipal decisions being postponed because of lack of a quorum. Our meeting November 19 revolves around some financial requests that town officials have decided really can't be held off any longer.

Unpaid bills, soaring legal expenses and needed town equipment are some of the requests to be made at the high school auditorium Monday night.

The spotlight has been turned on the school committee's request to appropriate $225,000 to complete the high school roof repairs. Pros and cons have been bantered about for months as the school committee, administration officials, selectmen and advisory committee attempt to form a concrete opinion. Even the school committee has yet to vote on this one, waiting until a few minutes before town meeting to formally decide on the issue.

The other article gaining a majority of the headlines is the proposal to join the trash-to-energy corporation known as SEMASS. The figures on this one are flying back and forth, depending on whom is speaking.

But the Area Disposal Study Committee, which has been looking into landfill alternatives for six years, has been a steadfast proponent for the SEMASS plan.

This group of volunteers has determined that SEMASS is the only alternative of the future, and it is imperative we join immediately.

Solid waste landfills are a thing of the past, according to many, and a trash-to-energy, revenue-producing alternative is the only viable solution. What revenue, and what the actual costs of joining SEMASS will be, really won't be determined in the near future. Some say the $12 or $15 tipping fee, our cost for having SEMASS dispose of our trash at its Rochester facility, is a pipe dream - that the actual costs to participate will be much higher.

Regardless, it does appear that the traditional dump is a way of the past. We are running out of space. The SEMASS method seems to be our only present solution.

Remember, attend the Special Town Meeting Monday, Nov. 19 at 7:30 p.m. We can not criticize the direction of our town government without an attempt to participate.

Coping with supermarket gremlins

By Claire McDonough

The young woman in front of me at the checkout counter was startled to find smoked oysters, escargots, a potted plant, 12 plastic racing cars, five bags of jelly beans, imported biscuits and a half a dozen packages of animal crackers in her shopping cart.

Two aisles over an elderly gentleman tried to figure out why the delicacies he had selected had disappeared and why the clerk had just rung up a box of Pampers and handed it to him in a bag.

A harried store employee scratched his head and wondered why the tornado that had wiped out a display of toys had left the soaps untouched.

Surveying it all with an air of detached innocence was an adorable 18 month old, his angelic four year old brother, and their fiendishly grinning six year old sister.

"Motherrrr," the 6 year old announced loudly, "Billy took everything out of that man's basket and put it in that lady's. Then he knocked over all the toys, and now Peter's bowling with the onions.

The mother was clearly a veteran of shopping with children. Deftly she covered her daughter's mouth with one hand, while with the other she scooped the unwanted items from the young woman's cart and proffered them to the elderly gentleman.

A few minutes of dialogue were necessary to determine that neither of them wanted the racing cars, jelly beans, or potted plant and that the Pampers belonged to another shopper three aisles over.

By that time the four year old, looking slightly less angelic, had abandoned the onions, toppled a barrel of peanuts and was advancing toward the glassware with a determined glint in his eye.

His mother headed him off, tucked him under her arm, and returned to her shopping cart. By that time the two year old had added five different brands of breakfast cereal — all heavily sugared and most an improbable shade of pink — several bags of marshmallows, and four copies of TV Guide to her purchases.

I smiled at her sympathetically. "Isn't shopping with children fun?"

She returned my smile through clenched teeth. "Please don't say these are the best years of my life," she begged.

"I wouldn't think of it. It could be worse, though. One of mine once lost his lunch all over a lady's freshly groomed poodle."

Her smile became genuine. A fellow sufferer - someone who understands! With the instant sisterhood that springs up between those who have shared a disaster, we embarked on several spirited rounds of one-downsmanship.

"One of mine once took the prices off all the cleansers."

"That's nothing. One of mine took the labels off all the cans of vegetables."

"My son pushed a shopping cart into an elderly man and bruised his shin."

"My daughter knocked an elderly lady down with a shopping cart. And broke her cane."

"Speaking of breaking, you know that display of china they have at the front of the store?"

"My kid did the same thing. Only in Welch's."

She sighed. "When do they outgrow it?"

We watched as Skip approached. Smiling broadly, he added five varieties of granola bars, a surfing magazine, several containers of yogurt and eight packages of cookies to my shopping cart.

"If I ever find out," I assured her, "I'll let you know."

Distressed over lack of school support

Letters

To the Editor:

Last week, three Cohasset High teams went to the state tournaments to compete in field hockey, girls' soccer and boys' soccer. It was a startling accomplishment given the size of our enrollment, and one that reflects the growing pride and dedication of our young athletes and their coaches.

It was disheartening, however, to observe the lack of support these students received from school personnel. Granted, Cohasset is not accustomed to a "jock mentality", and granted, it was the closing week of the academic term. Nevertheless, I believe accomodations could, and should, have been made. Teachers grumbled to students about class time missed, athletes were penalized for work not done, no rallies were held, no buses for fans arranged, and cheerleaders missed the boys' quarterfinal soccer game for fear of sacrificing their grades. Surely the kids deserve better than this!

The timing of these tournaments was admittedly inconvenient, with the term ending. But there was inconvenience for all of us. Business appointments were cancelled, time taken off from work, scrambling for babysitters, late dinners, neglected siblings and no one to rake the leaves. The kids themselves agonized over whether to get to bed early to be well-rested for the game, or to burn the midnight oil and ace that test (or two or three) the next day. No, it was not convenient. But it was a good opportunity for teachers and administrators to show a spirit of cooperation and support - and just plain pride! The opportunity was lost. (I did see Mr. Di, Mr. Chatterton, and Mrs. Gjestelry at a soccer game and thank them, at least, for caring.)

In [the] future I hope school personnel will remember that preparation for life is not found only in the classroom. Last week was an experience our students will always remember. There was tension and anxiety, there was comaraderie and exhilaration, disappointment and triumph.

Lastly, thanks to all our sons and daughters for the hours of sacrifice and dedication you've shown on the playing fields, for the hours of enjoyment and pride we have found in watching you play. Take pride in going as far as you did, and satisfaction in knowing you'll have the chance to do it again next year. You're terrific!

Dee DeSantis
Forest Ave.

Thanks from Goodwill

To the Editor:

With Thanksgiving approaching, we stop to reflect upon the past year and express gratitude for the blessings in our lives. At this time, we at Morgan Memorial Goodwill Industries want to say a special "thanks-for-giving" for your generous support all year.

Through your donations of clothing, household goods, time and money, Goodwill Industries is able to provide comprehensive vocational rehabilitation services and job training to the disabled in our community. Once supported by taxes, disabled people become taxpayers and contributors to society.

All during November — our "Thanks-for-Giving" month - we are attempting to thank everyone in the community who has given us support to help disabled people as well as individuals in our other programs: Morgan Memorial Fresh Air Camps, Hayden Goodwill Inn School, Clinical Pastoral Education, and our hot lunch program for needy senior citizens.

Through this letter, we hope to reach all of you whom we cannot see in person and express our heartfelt "thanks for giving" to Morgan Memorial Goodwill Industries.

Dennis R. Midgorden, President
Morgan Memorial Goodwill Industries

Energy conservation by Edison Co.

A cooperative effort to encourage area residents in their energy conservation efforts was announced today, by the Eastern Edison Company and Mass-Save, Inc.

The program, based on a $10 Mass-Save Home Energy Survey, offers the purchase and installation of attic insulation of Eastern Edison Company customers at substantially reduced prices through a group bidding process.

The Eastern Edison Community-Save program is being conducted throughout their entire service area in three phases. The initial phase, which included the communities of Abington, Avon, Bridgewater, Brockton, East Bridgewater, Easton, Stoughton, West Bridgewater and Whitman, met with even more success than was expected.

Today's kick-off of the second phase will include the towns of Cohasset, Halifax, Hanover, Hanson, Norwell, Pembroke, Rockland and Scituate.

All contractors interested in participating in this program should call Ron Moreira at Mass-Save, 1-800-642-7542.

Eastern Edison customers in the Phase II communities will be receiving details about the Save program in the mail. To participate in the Community-Save Program homeowners simply fill in the postage-paid request card and mail it before November 23, 1984, in order to be eligible.

If you have any questions about the program, contact Tom Petrouski between the hours of 9 a.m. and 5 p.m.

Chief remains on sick leave

Fire Chief Martin Dooley, who was injured in a fall Nov. 18, remains out on sick leave. He is expected to return to duty next week.

The chief was injured four weeks ago while inspecting a water main reconstruction site on Jerusalem Road near Hull. He was taken to South Shore Hospital where it was determined he had severely strained a neck and shoulder muscle. Last week Chief Dooley appeared at the selectmen's meeting and said he was officially back on duty. When selectmen questioned whether his return had been sanctioned by a physician, the chief said he received permission to return on a limited basis.

Dr. Stephen Golden said Chief Dooley could return to work, but if he felt fatigued, he should rest at home.

Selectmen then ordered the chief not to return to duty until a written notice had been received from his physician.

Chief Dooley said Wednesday morning that he has a Thursday appointment with Dr. Golden. Saying he was feeling "much better," the chief expects he will be given permission to return to work next week.

Since his absence from work, Capt. Mark Trask has served as Acting Fire Chief.

Cohasset Village Fair, Dec. 1

In church meeting rooms and private homes around the town, talented energetic workers are busy crafting scores of hand-made decorations and gifts for the upcoming holiday season, readying them for sale at the 44th annual Cohasset Village Fair to be held in buildings around the town Common Saturday, Dec. 1, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The village center of Cohasset will radiate the holiday spirit on that day when local shoppers are joined by throngs from neighboring towns, drawn to this traditional joint fund-raising effort of five Cohasset churches.

Focal point of the day's activities will be the Town Hall where booths and tables will provide a holiday shopper's bonanza. Traditonally, lines wait outside the door for the 10 a.m. opening and crowd into the busy scene inside.

Central attraction of the day in there will be the Boutique, where a range of appealing out-of-the ordinary hand-made gifts and novelties will be offered for sale. For weeks now, workers on the Boutique have been meeting at the Congregational Church and elsewhere, bringing ideas and willing hands to the common enterprise. Carol Sandblom heads the active group, assisted by Marsha Silvia, Lucy Marsac, Barbara Kiriakos, Norma Robbins, Karen Ford, Mary O'Brien, Linda Campbell, Dot Parmenter, and many others.

The Boutique now embraces several other standard features of the Fair in the past, taking over the roles played by the apron table, the Kitchen Crafts table and others. The popular gifts will now be on sale under the Boutique.

While the Boutique workers have been busy with their preparations, other parishoners of the five churches involved, have been doing the preliminary work in the fabrication of scores of wreaths, swags and other holiday decorations that annually attract many buyers to the Fair.

Jean Manganaro heads the wreath committee and has been assembling in her barn the "makings" and adornments of wreaths, including evergreen cones, bows, dried flower pods, rose hips and the like that will be added to make the finished products very special. During November the group has been meeting in preliminary workshops at Marie Kelley's home, 211 Fairoaks Lane. Meetings there are scheduled on November 15 and 19 from 10 a.m. to noon. All this is in preparation for the final production push in the week preceeding the Fair, when, from November 26 through 29, the wreath-makers will take over the vestry of the Congregational Church from 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. to get the wreaths ready and fresh for the Fair Day.

Sharing the spotlight with the Boutique and wreaths in the Town Hall will be the Children's Table, featuring items of interest to children, as well as clothing and gifts which parents can buy for tots. Claudia Story's group has been meeting weekly in preparation for this offering. Workers include Annette Sawchuk, Meagan Phillips, Andrea White, Kathy Pratt, Gail Seavey and Stephanie Williams.

Another Fair feature which requires much work long in advance is the sale of potted plants. This year this popular attraction has been re-christened "The Potting Shed" by co-chairman Mary Campbell and Fran Walton. They have enlisted a small army of indoor gardeners who have been potting cuttings of their favorite plants to have the plants ready for December 1. In addition to the flowering and green plants that will be offered will be a variety of dried arrangements.

Jeanne Syrmopoulos of the Greek Panagia church is general chairman of the Fair this year. Other participating churches are the Second Congregational, First Parish, St. Anthony's and St. Stephens.

Murray named committee chairman

State Representative Mary Jeanette Murray, third Plymouth District, stepped aside as the first woman president of the Massachusetts Legislators Association to be the junior past president and chairman of the important Nomination Committee.

The Cohasset, Hingham and Hull legislator has worked for the Association the past several years.

The Legislator's Association membership consists of over 700 past and present legislators. Representative Murray's father, the late Nathaniel M. (Nate) Hurwitz, was a member of the Association. Hurwitz was a member of the Massachusetts House of Representatives for 13 years and represented the same district (plus Norwell) which Mary Jeanette serves.

Parker Ave. feud continues

Parker Avenue resident William Figueiredo said he not only received verbal approval from the Conservation Commission to fill potholes in front of his property, he also has a letter signed by the members.

Last week, Figueiredo appeared before the commission requesting permission to use the gravel he obtained from Geneva Construction, to fill potholes in front of his property on Parker Avenue. The commission determined that Figueiredo must file a notice of intent and come before the board for a formal review of his plans.

Harbormaster Harry Ritter, who has tangled in the past with Figueiredo, requested the formal hearing be held before commission. He argued that although five truck loads had been approved for deposit on the property, it appeared much more had been left off at the Figueiredo land.

Figueiredo said this week he has a letter signed by a representative of Geneva Construction, attesting that only five truck loads had deposited the material at the Parker Avenue property. He also noted that the crushed gravel and asphalt had not been spread into the potholes, but was being stockpiled until he received permission from the Conservation Commission to spread it into the holes. "I've always gone by the book in this town, and I'm not about to change," he said this week. He said he will be presenting an engineering report to the commission, outlining his plans for the gravel, at its December meeting.

In the meantime, Figueiredo has complained to Building Inspector Edward Poskus about a zoning violation by Harbormaster Ritter. He said that Ritter, who owns a residence on Chief Justice Cushing Highway, converted the single-family residence into a multi-family dwelling without a permit from the town.

According to Inspector Poskus, his original opinion was that Ritter was not in violation of the town's zoning bylaw because the owner received a building permit for the conversion 15 years ago. Under state law Chapter 40A Section 7, Poskus originally determined that Ritter was within the law, having received a building permit, and completing the construction work more than six years ago.

But on a second look, Poskus found that Ritter never filed for a building permit. He later informed Ritter that he is not within the limits of the law. Ritter must apply for a zoning variance for the multi-family home which he has rented and advertised as an apartment for several years.

Poskus told Ritter he must apply for the variance with the zoning board. According to the Town Clerk Ritter has not yet filed for a hearing with the zoning board of appeals.

Osgood School Book Fair

Come help us celebrate Children's Book Week with a Book Fair at the Osgood School Library. Parents are invited to examine the books on Tuesday, Nov. 13. The books will be on sale Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, Nov. 14, 15 and 16. Sponsored by the PSO.

Puppet Show

"Jack and the Beanstalk" will be presented by the Cape Ann Puppeteers Saturday, Nov. 24. Presentations are at 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. Admission is $3.

Study of pilgrims

Mrs. Collins' kindergarten classes are studying about the Pilgrims and their native American friends. They have tried their hand at weaving, sewing head coverings, and jewelry making. The children are fascinated by the way things really were, the hardships of the voyage on the Mayflower and life in a new land.

Calendar donations

PSO treasurer Carole Proodian reports that donations for the PSO calendar have been coming in at a steady rate. Parents have been very generous in their support. If you have not made out your check, please do it today and help the PSO continue its efforts on behalf of all our children. Thanks to all who have put their checks in the mail!

Photo identification

November 27, the Parent School Organization will sponsor a photo identification card program at Cohasset High School. Junior and senior high school students will be able to obtain a laminated I.D. card with color photograph to use as a primary means of identification or in addition to a driver's license.

Because of the variety of reasons one needs proof of identity such as check cashing, charge card purchases, academic examinations, personal safety in an accident, etc., the PSO is making this card available to all town residents.

Parents of high school students have received a letter about the program; flyer wil be attached to tomorrow's menus at Deer Hill and Osgood Schools.

If you do not receive either communication and would like more information, Denise Conant (383-0781) who is coordinating the project for the PSO will answer any questions.

Eighth grade trip

The eighth grade is planning a ski trip to Crotched Mountain after the holidays Sunday, Jan. 6, 1985. This chaperoned adventure is open to all eighth grade students and will cost $25, which includes transportation, lift ticket and lessons. For an additional $5, students may rent skis and equipment. Permission forms have been sent home and should be returned with your check payable to Cohasset High School by Tuesday, Nov. 20.

Lecture series

During the month of November, many distinguished and celebrated guest lecturers will be appearing in the English classes at the high school.

Under the auspices of the Career Lecture Series, jointly arranged by Ed Leonard, guidance counselor, and Linda Starmer and Bob Davenport, senior high school representatives on the PSO Board, students will have the opportunity to hear how these talented people make creative use of English in their chosen fields.

Some of the lecturers who will speak to grades nine through 12 include: Betty Isele, publisher at Little, Brown and writer of children's books; Peter O'Loughlin, corporate lawyer; Ubi DiBenedetto, professor at Harvard and writer; Lincoln Bloomfield, professor at MIT and screenwriter; Tanna Kasperowicz, columnist, reporter, and operator of a resume writing service; Tim Schramn, marketing executive at Gillette; Dick Mantz, publisher and former admissions director for Curry College; Pamela Cross, news reporter for WCVB-TV in Boston; and Linton Young, national account manager for Gillette.

The series will focus on mathematics in January, drawing lecturers from business and industry; social studies classes will have their turn in February. The lectures will be videotaped for a career resource file and for use on local cable television.

Cohasset is a rich resource to draw upon for these lectures. You may have recognized your neighbor's name in the list above. If you or anyone you know would be willing to develop a talk about a specific field and how your expertise relates to an academic discipline, please call Linda Starmer (383-0617) or Bob Davenport (383-1932) for more information.

School committee briefs

Summer school policy

A new Summer School Policy which will give full credit for Summer School courses was approved by the school committee Wednesday, November 7.

In order to take summer school courses, the student must achieve a grade of at least fifty percent in the course during the year and attend at least eighty percent of those classes.

School Committee member Diane Kornet stated that the policy was a "very good synthesis of our thoughts and hesitancies". Those who wish to earn more than ten credits through the summer school program must pass a departmental exam in order to validate knowledge gained through these specific courses. This policy is to insure that students do not abuse the program by not working throughout the school year because they could make up their work during the summer.

Liability claim

An Asbestos Liability Claim against Johns-Manville Company was filed with town counsel by the school committee in order to protect the town against any possible claims made against the town. Johns-Manville Company supplied many of the materials used to build the schools.

New coach

Richard Izzo was appointed the new head ice hockey coach by the school committee. He will receive a salary of $1941.

Ski club

Robin Suhrbier was given permission by the school committee to investigate a parent-initiated and controlled ski club. The school committee agreed that no liability should rest with the school system, and that the club will receive no transportation services or finances from the school. Like the sailing team, the ski club can say that it is from Cohasset High School, and as member Richard Conley said, "will be able to race under our colors."

A new art policy was approved by the school committee, with the concern that a fair share of resources be allocated to the arts in the schools.

Member Kornet stated that this new policy "encourages people to be cognizant of the arts." Art teachers expressed their concern that the impetus should grow within the school system and not continue to come from the outside: as stated in the policy, "the strength of the policy depends on how much coordination comes from the schools."

Member Jack Langmaid suggested that the committee nominate a School Arts Advisory committee to be made up of representatives from the Parent School Organization, the School Committee, and other groups as well as interested parents.

CHS musical

Dec. 8, 14, and 15, Cohasset High School will present the musical, "Snoopy." As the cast and crew of "Godspell" proved last year, this all-school musical promises to provide excellent entertainment for the whole family and for the whole community.

Proceeds will benefit the Performance Arts Awards Program. This revolving fund has been established to provide "seed" money for future all-school musicals and awards for deserving Cohasset High School seniors who have demonstrated talent and dedication in the performing arts.

The PSO, in cooperation with the high school, asks that you consider serving as a patron for "Snoopy" and, in so doing, make a very worthwhile contribution to the Performing Arts Fund. Contributions are tax deductible and will be earmarked specifically for awards. Patrons will be listed in the program. For businesses, space for a small advertisement is available.

Please consider this worthwhile cause and the creative aspirations of our students. To become a sponsor, please send your contributions (checks payable to Cohasset High School) to Mrs. Sue McNamara, 45 Fair Oaks Lane, Cohasset, 02025, by Wednesday, Nov. 28. Donations are welcome at any time; however, only patrons responding by Dec. 28 can be included in the "Snoopy" program. See you at the show.

Cohasset fall sports scene

(The Mariner has, and will continue its attempt to provide coverage of school and community sports. However, our staff is limited. We commend Lisa Shumaker for the terrific job she has done this year. School sports coverage would be impossible without her efforts. For those who would like more publicity of the junior varsity teams, all we can say is - just wait until they make the varsity team! Ed.)

Boys' Varsity Soccer

The boys opened the tournament Tuesday with a victory over Sacred Heart, 3 - 0. Kevin Leary, Mark Crough, and Mike deSantis all scored for Cohasset. Bobby Shultz, Mason Sandell and Kevin Leary all picked up assists.

Billy McKenna had a great game in net for the Skippers. Kevin Leary had a superb game as well. Cohasset outshot Sacred Heart 20 to 16, and played very well in the second half.

Wednesday, Cohasset continued their winning streak by beating Jerimiah Burke, 4 - 1. Geoff Christensen scored first on a pass from Mike deSantis; who then scored off a penalty kick followed by Mason Sandell who was assisted by Mark Crough. Kurt Weisenfluh scored the Skipper's last goal, assisted by Mike de Santis. John Reidy led Cohasset's defense with his outstanding play. (Unfortunately, Cohasset faced a tough Medfield team Friday and lost 3 - 0. This loss knocked Cohasset out of the tournament.)

The Skippers held their own and played with intensity the entire game. Both Mike deSantis and David MacDonald had strong games for Cohasset. Despite the loss, Coach Jon Anderson was very pleased and proud of his team's performance.

Overall, the boys had an excellent season, becoming the first boys' soccer team from Cohasset High School to make the state tournament. Anderson is extremely happy with the season and feels his team went far beyond their goals. Anderson also believes the team's success was because of leadership and great performances by seniors Mike deSantis, David MacDonald, Mason Sandell and Greg Igo.

Cohasset also had five all stars picked from its team. They are Mike deSantis, David MacDonald, Mason Sandell, Bobby Shultz and Billy McKenna.

Varsity Field Hockey

The Skippers were eliminated from the state tournament in the first round by losing to Harwich, 3 - 1. Cohasset scored first early in the first half, when Ginny Nussdorfer shot one in from the corner. However, Harwich came back to score twice in the first half and once again late in the second half.

Maureen Farren played very well offensively and had several breakaways. Both Lee Sullivan and Maria Cahill played extremely well. Seniors Vicki Spooner and Dina Potoliccio also turned in outstanding efforts. The whole team played exceptionally well and controlled almost the entire second half. Unfortunately, Cohasset ran out of time and was unable to score.

Showing tremendous improvement, Cohasset had a remarkable season and is the first Cohasset field hockey team to play in the state tournament. The Skippers had five times as many victories as last year and promise to improve even more next year. The team will be losing senior co-captains Vicki Spooner and Dina Potoliccio as well as Kim Harrington, Chris Moore, and Kathleen Buckley whose leadership qualities have been a great asset to the team. Despite losing these seniors, most of this year's team will be returning next year. The Skippers are looking forward to next fall and hope to have even a better season than this year.

Girls' Varsity Soccer

The girls began the tournament Wednesday by defeating Marian, 2 - 0. Sara Seavey picked up Cohasset's two goals, assisted by Carla Lucas on both. Amy Donovan played very well and Tara Stanford also had an excellent game shutting down Marian's best player. The team looked very good and played with much intensity and enthusiasm.

Saturday, Cohasset was eliminated from the tournament, losing to Foxboro, 3 - 2. Janet Bagley scored both of the Skipper's goals, one off a corner kick, the other off a pass from Carla Lucas. Tara Stanford, Janet Digirolamo and Caroline Lord all played very well for Cohasset. Coach Kennan Startzell is very pleased with his team's effforts in this game.

Overall, Cohasset surpassed their expectations and became the first girls' soccer team from Cohasset to make the state tournament. Startzell feels his team has developed very well during this two year period, and the key to his team's success has been the willingness of the kids to learn and their ability to apply their knowledge in games. Amy Duncombe, Joanie Chisolm and Sara Seavey all played consistently the entire season and were major factors contributing to Cohasset's successful season.

Varsity Football

Monday, Cohasset was defeated by Rockland in a close game, 18 - 14. Floyd Hardwick scored on a 16 yard run off a well-executed block by Jeff Aaron to put Cohasset ahead, 7 - 0. Rockland then went on to score a touchdown and a field goal to lead going into the fourth quarter. In the fourth period, Bobby Durkin scored on an eight yard run, and Cohasset captured the lead. However, with 1:05 remaining in the game Rockland came back to score and stay ahead for good.

"This was definitely Cohasset's best game of the year, and they played both tough and agressive," accoring to Coach Phil Pisano.

Troy Chatterton led Cohasset defensively with two interceptions and a fumble recovery. Bobby Durkin, Mark Lahive and Jay Contisall had strong games on defense as well.

Thursday, Nov. 22, Thanksgiving Day at 10 a.m., the Skippers will play their last game against Duxbury at Milliken Field. The Skippers are ready for the Dragons and this will be a very exciting game.

Boosters Club

There will be a meeting of the Cohasset Basketball Boosters Club Sunday, Nov. 18, 7:30 p.m., at the home of Tom and Sue Trautwein, 61 Surrey.

Parents and supporters of basketball players are urged to attend.

White Christmas in Cohasset

It is going to be a white Christmas in Cohasset even if it doesn't snow.

The town's Chamber of Commerce plans a major event "White Christmas in Cohasset". Sunday, Dec. 9, businesses will don white lights and balloons, and will serve refreshments to welcome Santa and his elves. At noon, they will arrive by helicopter and tour the town on a camel named Becky.

From Rte. 3A to Cohasset Harbor, the town will sparkle with white lights and the enchantment of Christmas. Join Cohasset's businesses as we celebrate this joyous occasion.

For more information on"White Christmas in Cohasset" or the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce, contact John Hagerty at 383-0110.

Palana at Coffee House in Square

Jim Palana of Rockland will be featured Nov. 17, at 8 p.m. in the Coffee House in the Square of Hingham's First Baptist Church, Fellowship Hall, 85 Main St., Hingham.

A contemporary folk writer and singer, Palana is known for his troubadour style. His recent album, "Back in Town," speaks stories in a musical fashion for today with both mood and feeling.

Also featured for this very special evening of music will be Sue Krueger, guitar soloist, heard regularly at the Coffee House and in concerts throughout Massachusetts.

Proceeds from the $2.50 admission and snack bar will be donated to Central American Relief. Advance tickets may be purchased at the Hingham Square Bookshop.

Christmas party

Once again, the American Legion Auxiliary, Cohasset 118 will be having their Children's Christmas Party.

This year, it will be held Dec. 15 from 1 to 3 p.m. at the Post's function room.

Members' children and grandchildren, ages 12 and under, are invited to attend.

Please call Linda at 545-6486 after 5 p.m. with names and ages of children attending. (No later than Dec. 5.)

Cohasset chess meet

Arne Gjesteby of Old Pasture Road, knocked the socks off Ed Cox of Beechwood in two straight games last week.

Gjesteby is now ranking number one player in the nine-member club. Cox will try to regain his standing at the club's next match, tonight. If you'd like to join the club, call 383-9115.

Archaeological Society meeting

The North River Chapter of the Massachusetts Archaeological Society will meet Monday, Nov. 19 at the South Shore Natural Science Center on Jacobs Lane, Norwell, at 8 p.m.

John Shea of Harvard's Stone Age Laboratory will present a program on making stone tools. Shea is an alumnus of Boston University, a staff member of Belize Archaic Archaeological Reconnaissance Project and an instructor at the Center of Archaeological studies at B.U.

Childbirth classes

A series of eight classes for expectant women and couples who seek a safe, fulfilling birth experience, in a hospital or at home, are offered continuously throughout the year.

Classes cover thoroughly the physiological and emotional aspects of pregnancy and childbirth.

Please call to register for the next series, beginning in mid-November. The classes are sponsored by Birthchoice, Inc. For more information call 383-6540.

Girls field hockey team strikes a winning pose

By Lisa Messersmith

At the beginning of this year's fall sports season, the girls varsity field hockey team seemed to have a slim chance of winning half their games. They were definitely the underdogs of the South Shore League.

Not only is Cohasset the smallest team in the League, but according to its coach, it also has the smallest and worse-conditioned field. To top it all off, only two seniors, Dina Potolicchio and Vicki Spooner, started for the team. All in all the girls appeared to be inexperienced and far from a winning season.

Well, the girls proved that underdogs can play with the best of teams and win. This year the girls varsity field hockey team finished with quite a respectable record of ten wins, seven losses, and two ties and qualified for the state tournament.

According to coach Gino DiGirolamo, the girls have incredible heart. "With all these young kids we never thought we'd have a winning team." Now the girls are talking about winning the state tournament next year and the year after.

The younger girls have already proved their ability. This year six sophomores, three juniors, two seniors and one freshman started for the team. Sophomore Maureen Farren was high scorer finishing the season with fourteen goals and two assists under her belt. Maureen scored more points this year than the entire team made last year. With younger girls like Maureen, coach DiGirolamo believes the team has a winning future.

"The freshmen and sophomore classes as well as the junior class have tremendous athletes," DeGirolamo said. He also attributes a winning season for other sports to a new spirit in the school. In October, the school held a Spirit Week, and each day the kids dressed with different themes in mind. According to DiGirolamo, Spirit Week and pep rallies "brought more spirit to the school — something we've lacked for ten years."

The girls' attitude toward the sport as well as their physical ability seemed to push them forward to reach their goals. Whether they win or lose, "the girls know they've done the best they can," DeGirolamo said. If they lose the girls acknowledge their defeat, move on, and look forward to winning their next game. "We play to have fun as well as to win," he added.

When Mr. DiGirolamo started coaching the girls field hockey team four years ago, he had had experience coaching football, basketball, and ice hockey, but knew nothing about the game of field hockey. Since then he has studied the rules and has become an avid fan as well as coach of the team.

The Cohasset girls field hockey team in action against Scituate. (Rose Cundari)

The girls started out in August and ran for a week without sticks. After this conditioning, they began hitting the ball and then going through drills which were often the same used in ice hockey.

Coach DiGirolamo acknowledges that there is a difference between coaching girls and coaching boys. "They take the game as serious as the boys, but will get over a loss faster." He also added "you can kid with girls more . . . but they play as hard, if not harder, than the boys."

According to their coach, the two senior captains, Dina Potolicchio and Vicki Spooner, can play college field hockey. "They helped the team tremendously with their attitude and inspiration. They did a great job," he added. The younger girls really respected their captains who lead the team to their first state tournament in ten years.

Despite their forward-looking attitude, the girls do have disadvantages, some they can change and some they cannot. The small bumpy field on which the girls play puts them at a disadvantage because they "run out of gas in games held in other towns," stated Mr DiGirolamo. The high school field is only eighty yards long when it should be 100 yards and forty yards wide when it should be sixty. Hopefully, the fields at the high school will be rearranged soon so that all the fields meet the required sizes, he added.

The team's status as the League underdog will probably remain the same because of the various disadvantages they face within the League. Yet their message to other teams is to be wary — the underdogs are usually the crowd's favorite to win.

And watching this field hockey team's impressive record this year, they just might win that state championship next year.

Second Congregational Church

Food For Hungry People: The point for Christian persons horrified by the image of people needlessly starving (in Ethiopia or elsewhere) is that we must share what we can with those who need it, regardless of the political persuasions of their leaders. With this thought in mind, each family in our church is invited to make a special Thanksgiving-season contribution for famine relief in Ethiopia. Checks payable to the church but labeled "Famine Relief" will be directed through our church's relief agency, which is already at work in Ethiopia. The "Famine Relief" envelope may be mailed to the church or brought to any service from now until Thanksgiving.

Hunger is not always on another continent. Our annual Thanksgiving offering of non-perishable food will help hungry people who are our nearby neighbors. Each family is requested to set aside a grocery bag and fill it with nourishing food (skip the twinkies) for hungry people. Take the bag to church Thanksgiving, Sunday, Nov. 18.

Messiah Sing: Mark your calendar! The annual Messiah Sing will be at 3 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 25. Hallelujah!

Community Thanksgiving Service: The seven religious communities in Cohasset will share in the Community Thanksgiving Service, Wednesday, Nov. 21, at 8 p.m. in First Parish Meeting House. Musicians, choir members, and lay and clergy representative will lead the service, to which everyone is invited. "Come ye thankful people, come."

Secret Room: Do you know what makes the Secret Room secret?? It is having the purchases wrapped before they leave the room. We are in need of wrapping paper, tissue paper, stick on bows and Christmas tags to ensure the secrecy of the room. If you can help, please call Lee Jenkins, 383-0024, or Barbara Hislop, 383-6085. Thank You!

Tired of looking at wrapped leftover Halloween Candy?? The Grab Table of the Village Fair can eliminate this problem for you. If you have any to donate, please call Betty Madden, 383-0246, or Ginnie Nast, 383-1507.

Stewardship Time Is Here: The 1985 pledge drive is under way, and will continue through November. The first "haul of the lobster trap" was made last Sunday.

Pledge cards and envelopes are available in the church foyer and Bates Hall after each service.

Your support is needed to continue our church's work in this troubled world.

If you have any questions or concerns about the pledge drive, please feel free to contact anyone of us.

Area soloists in "Messiah"

The Christmas season will open on a joyous note as the Cohasset Second Congregational Chuch hosts the annual "Messiah Sing" Sunday, Nov. 25, at 3 p.m.

This year's concertmaster is Angelo Alabiso of Hingham. There will be an 18-piece chamber orchestra. Ted Haines of East Bridgewater is the trumpeter. Carolyn Curtis of Marshfield will play the organ. The conductor is Ellen Fryling of North Scituate. Mrs Fryling is also the Director of Music at the Second Congregational.

Paula Blackmur Young, the soprano solist, is a former resident of Cohasset. Paula attended Oberlin Conservatory in Ohio and graduated from the New England Conservatory of Music. She has done extensive solo work in churches of all denominations. Her favorite solo performance, since she was 20 years-old, has been her summer soloing at the Second Congregational Church in Cohasset.

David Norris will sing the tenor solos. Mr. Norris resides in Marshfield. He is a soloist with various choral groups in the Boston area.

Rev. James O'Brien will be the bass soloist. Formerly of Massachusetts he now is the minister of a church in Maine. Rev. O'Brien has participated in the "Messiah Sing" since its beginning in 1961 in Brockton. He has been a popular soloist in both oratorio and the theater productions on the South Shore and some Rhode Island areas.

The contralto solos will be sung by Mrs. Whiting, a Scituate resident. Mrs. Whiting comes from New York, where she studied music at the Crane School of Music in Potsdam and Syracuse University. Mrs. Whiting also has sung with the Unicorn Singers and the Broadcove Choral.

Ellen Fryling is celebrating her 23rd year as director of the "Messiah Sing," which has been held in Cohasset since 1974. She is a well-known organist, cellist and conductor in the South Shore area.

THINK NOW ABOUT CHURCH THIS SUMMER

Summer seems a long way away but it will come.

The Parish Committee requested us to develop plans to keep the Meeting House open for the nine Sundays when regular services are suspended.

All interested members and friends are urged to join us this Sunday, November 11 in the Meeting House following the service for a brief discussion of this summer's programs.

We need and welcome your input whether or not you plan to attend in July and August and look forward to your participation and comments.

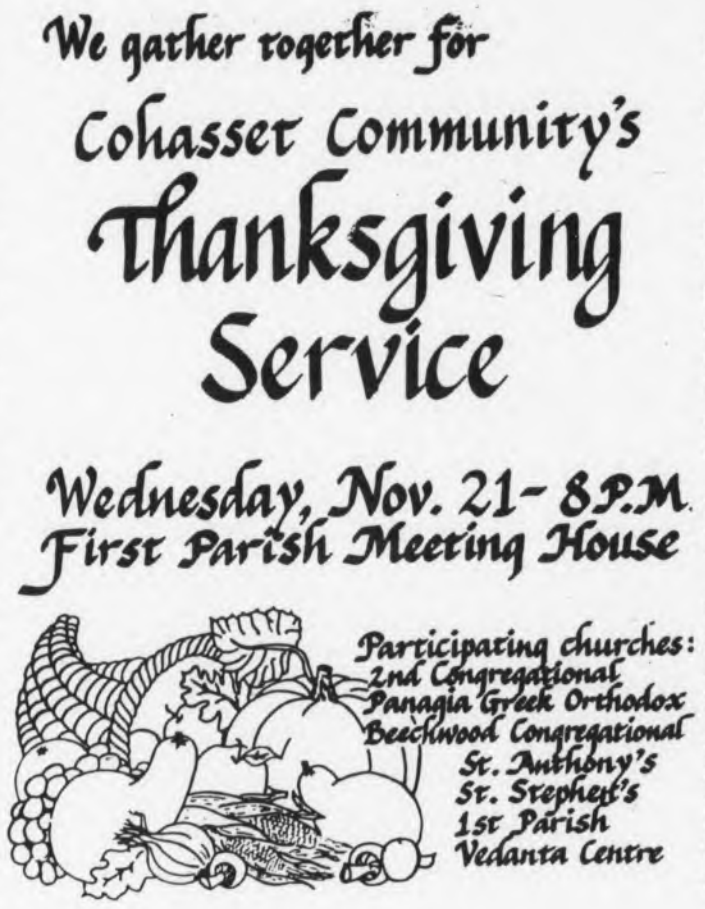
RELIGIOUS EDUCATION NEWS

What a busy week we just finished! Now we look forward to the Thanksgiving Celebration November 18. It is our tradition to come together to prepare a meal, worship together and share the meal the Sunday before Thanksgiving.



Thanks to all those who helped with the Halloween party: Bill Langmaid, Bill Lean, Jamie Langmaid, Kristin Contis, Ingrid Anderson, Sarah Atkinson, Tammy Lee and Todd DeCruz.

COMMUNITY

Wednesday, November 21, at 8 p.m. in First Parish Meeting House, the religious communities of Cohasset will join for a Community Thanksgiving Service. Lay and clergy leaders, musicians and choirs from each of the churches will participate.

The Thanksgiving Offering received during the service will be given to Project Bread, the Boston agency which serves as a clearing-house for a large number of programs for the hungry in the local area.

Participating churches include Beechwood Congregational Church, First Parish (Unitarian Universalist) Church, Panagia Greek Orthodox Church, St. Anthony's Roman Catholic Church, St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, Second Congregational Church, and the Vedanta Center. The public is invited to share in this community-wide service.

Thanksgiving Service

The members of all seven Cohasset churches — St. Anthony's, St. Stephen's, Panagia Greek Orthodox, First Parish, the Vedanta Centre, Beechwood and Second Congregational Churches — will gather together for a community Thanksgiving service next Wednesday, November 21, in First Parish Meeting House at 8 p.m.

The brief service, led by lay and clergy leaders of the churches, will feature music by a combined choir and by the Vedanta Singers, along with prayers of thanksgiving in several languages. An offering will be received for the Massachusetts agencies served by Project Bread, so that our gratitude can be made tangible in food for the hungry. The public is invited to share in this community celebration.

Thanksgiving baskets of food for the needy will be prepared within the next two weeks. Food items (non perishable) may be brought to the rectory (side door). All classes are invited to participate in this worthy cause. All teachers and their assistants are invited to Brunch at the rectory following the 11:30 Mass Sunday, Nov. 18. There will be a Teacher's Meeting on Monday, Nov. 19 at 7:30 p.m. in the Church conference room.

Cohasset Community Thanksgiving Service: Wednesday, Nov. 21, 8 p.m. First Parish Meeting House — all churches will participate.

Christmas Village Fair: December 1 — help is needed from our parish. Wrapped penny candy is needed for the Candy table. If you are tired of looking at left over wrapped Halloween candy, the Grab Table will gladly take it! Please call Betty Madden at 0246 or Ginnie Nast at 1507. Attic treasures and bargain bazaar items are also needed. On the day of the Fair, extra help is needed on various tables. If there is someone with a truck who can transport tables and chairs before and during the Fair, please contact Kathy Brennock at 1274 or Terri Smith at 1606.

Claudia Story is holding Ornament Workshops every Wednesday at 9:30 at the Second Congregational Church. Old and used jewelry is needed. Call 383-6976. Good used books are needed for the Book Table (no texts). Call Alice Daunt at 1163 or bring them to the rectory basement.

Wreath Workshops continue on Thursday, Nov. 15 and Monday, Nov. 19 from 10 a.m. to noon at 211 Fairoaks Lane. Call Jean Manganaro at 9337. Thank you.

Do you know what makes the Secret Room secret? It is having purchases wrapped before they leave the room. We are in need of wrapping and tissue paper, stick-on bows and tags to ensure the secrecy of the room. If you can help call Lee Jenkins at 0024 or Barbara Hislop at 6085.

Thank You: Your generosity to the Ethiopian appeal last Sunday amounted to $2,041. We remember those destitute children in our prayers today.

S.S. district school board review '85 budget

By Audrey Louison

A coincidentally red-colored ring binder stuffed with exhaustive information detailing each department's budget request was the focus of attention as members of the South Shore Regional District School Committee took their first look at the proposed 1985-86 budget.

The budget review process, which must be completed by Feb. 1, will commence in earnest next week when the committee begins hearing 15-minute presentations from each department justifying its recommendations. The presentations are scheduled to be heard during nine specially-convened meetings leading to final approval.

This is the first year that the individual departments will directly address the school committee. Though it promises to be a painstakingly laborious process, members seemed to agree that it was the fairest and most thorough approach.

Supt. Clifford Easton explained to the committee that the document before them was just the starting point for discussions, but warned members to be ready with some tough questions because teachers will "fight tooth and nail" for their budgets. Easton said it will be important to assess the impact of any changes in proposed funding. This initial proposal suggests an overall 14.2 percent rise in salaries and a 39.2 percent rise in total operating costs.

Easton admitted that the administration has become the champion of teacher's needs rather than a defender of tight, Prop. 2½-era budgets.

"We give students a quality education here," he said. "but it's time to stop cheating our students. Things have been too tight for too long."

What is not factored into the current proposal is the amount of grants and state reimbursements the school will receive. These figures will not be available until the middle of December. Once released, those figures are deducted from the budget to indicate the actual cost to the region. Treasurer Robert Kelley conjectures that because of the school's growth, reimbursement may be higher this year than in the past. "You try to scrub down as much as possible. Then, when the reimbursement figures come out, and if they are favorable, you can add some things back in," said Kelley.

Kelley reminded members that the regional budget is not subject to Prop. 2½ limits. "When Prop. 2½ was written, they forgot about regional schools. As long as the towns approve the budget, we are under no Prop. 2½ constraints," he said.

John Doyle of Rockland said that he was sure his town would not agree to an increase above five percent, and several members noted that they would have a tough time getting approval for massive increases. The budget requires approval by six of the eight participating towns. Towns' contributions to the budget are assessed based on the number of students from that town attending Vo-Tech.

HOUSE CONSIDERS INCREASING FUNDS

Supt. Clifford Easton urged members of the Vo-Tech School Committee to write letters to their state representatives in support of House Bill No. 63, which would increase the state's reimbursement to schools for building and maintenance costs from 58 percent to 90 percent. The measure would relieve local taxpayers of the burden posed by regular upkeep and improvement.

The Vo-Tech building is 20 years old and badly in need of a new roof. Easton said he would like to hold off on that repair and on a new addition to the school until the bill is passed.

The bill has been recommended for passage by the House Ways and Means Committee.

Vo Tech students refurbish schools

Students from the South Shore VoTech School recently pitched in to refurbish the old Salmond School in Hanover, where the Stepping Stones Day Care and the North River Collaborative early childhood pre-school center are located.

During the week of Oct. 22, several students from the painting and wall finishing program at VoTech worked at the Salmond School, repairing and refinishing the interior of the classrooms which serve nursery and special needs pre-school students.

The on-the-job training program was developed by instructor John Clark for third-year students in the school's new program. The course is taught by Clark and Michael Sullivan and gives students experience in all phases of painting, staining, wall papering and wall and furniture refinishing.

Students involved in the Salmond School project included Dwight Conklin of Scituate, Joe Lagrotteria of Cohasset, Kevin Carol of Hanover, Paul Smith and Greg Mardirosian of Rockland, Frances Hill and Dave Webber of Whitman and Pam Hansen of Hanson.

Local support eases Pembroke Hospital start-up

By Moira McCarthy

Marking their fifth month in operation, administrators of the Pembroke Hospital say they almost can't believe how smoothly things have run.

"We've had a lot of cooperation locally, and that's what's making things run more smoothly than we ever dreamed they would," said hospital administrator Sherwin Goodblatt. "There are days when you shake yourself, because you can't believe things are going so well."

Last week, the hospital opened another wing, bringing their total capacity to 75. Right now, they are at 50 patients, and growing daily.

The key to their success, Goodblatt said, is a strong, tight-knit staff, and a theme of total dedication to the mental patient.

"We're new here, but we're not new in the business," he said, noting that the same company owns the Westwood Lodge Hospital, "We are the only autonomous psychiatric hospital in southeastern Massachusetts. There's a terrific need for it in this area too. Before this, people had to go in town, and the doctors there wouldn't know the resources available in this area. We are hooked into all the support services in the area."

The hospital serves about 60 percent very local people. Goodblatt said that if you drew a circle raduis from Braintree to Plymouth, that would account for most of the patients in the hospital. Another 10 percent or so come from the Cape area, and the rest from diversified sections of the state.

There is no stereotypical patient, according to Janet Sennett, director of nursing services. patients range in age from 13 to 100, men and women, with all types of psychological disorders.

From the time a patient is admitted to the hopital, a program is tailored to fit his or her needs specifically.

The first step to admitting a patient is, believe it or not, planning a discharge program.

This, Sennett explained, is because their goal is to get people back out into the world, coping with life, as soon as possible. The average stay for a patient is three weeks, and during that time, patients attend classes, counseling, and even school programs that suit just them.

Special needs teachers are in touch with any youth's schools right away, and set up an educational program for the child that coincides with the one he or she was in at their regular school.

Every patient is admitted first to the lock-up unit, where they are evaluated by doctors, and then either kept there until they are considered able to deal with a more open environment, or are moved right away to the open environment.

In the lock-up unit, colors are sedate, and furniture is rounded, without nails so that patients can't use anything to harm themselves.

The open unit, in contrast, is a study in interior design. Each room is immaculately designed with its own pattern and colors. Photos and paintings hang on walls, and plush, warm furniture fills the hallways. Colors are deep, warm pastels, leaving even the passerby feeling at ease.

The idea, Goodblatt said, is to make the patients feel comfortable, relaxed, and ready to deal with their illnesses.

In the TV rooms and the lounges, they certainly do seem to be just that. A bulletin board in each hallway tells patients where their specific groups meet. There are alcohol, drug, anxiety and any other type of group you can think of. Patients are assigned groups, and required to attend at least three groups a week. Patients also meet daily with their doctors, and each patient's progress is discussed daily between doctors and nurses. No one is missing a step.

Every day, the patient goes to therapy with a doctor, group therapy, one of the alternate therapies, and a specialized therapy.

"This is contemporary good patient treatment planning," Goodblatt said, "We cater to meet the needs of each individual patient."

However, Sennett pointed out, they are not a rest home, or simply a place to escape.

"If someone thinks this is a free ride, they are wrong. We don't fool around with people who aren't serious about getting help, because we are. We don't want someone in here just to get away. We want them here to help themselves get back out."

Once a patient leaves the hospital, he isn't thrown out on his own, she added. Six post-stay visits to the hospital are free of charge, and patients are automatically hooked up with social services and outside programs to help them out.

Families are helped to cope and prepare as well, and are included in much of the therapy while a patient is at the hospital.

"A patient is not isolated, but a part of a system." Goodblatt said, "we work with that whole system."

Although patients are referred to social services, the hospital stresses confidentiality, and goes by it as a law.

"We stress patients' rights, and we're very tight on it," assistant administrator Ray Robinson said, adding that a patient's name won't be given out on the phone to anyone, and that information about the patient won't be given to anyone without the patient's written permission. Employees are strictly forbidden to speak of patients outside the building, and to anyone other than a staff member. Breaking that rule, he said, is grounds for immediate dismissal.

But they don't have a problem with their staff.

According to Robinson, close to 95 percent of the staff are local residents, a quota Goodblatt points out backs up their promises to create jobs for the area.

A structured, experienced staff from Westwood Lodge heads the staff, and the remainder are all area residents.

"We have a close staff, one that cares," Goodblatt said, "I'm not just saying this--I really believe that's a main factor in our success. They really can work together.

Indeed, in the staff area of the dining room, members can be seen discussing cases, finding ways to make things work.

The dining room is large, open, and very sunny. Patients and staff alike are served large meals--even shrimp for lunch, and can eat in the dining room, or in the court yard under an umbrella. It does actually look like a country club.

The courtyard was designed to give patients the free feeling of being outside, and yet confining them at the same time. The same philosophy is behind the baseball field currently under construction.

The brightness that seems to envelope the building is one reason the company chose Pembroke for their location. Another is the accessibility off Rte. 3. Also, the reaction of the town from the beginning convinced them this was the place to be.

"The help and cooperation of the town has been outstanding," Robinson said, "The fire department has come here for a lot of false alarms, and they've been so helpful. Everyone's been fantastic.

Next month, the hospital will go for the gold, that is accreditation with the Joint Commission on Accredited Hospitals. Does Goodblatt feel confident about that?

"I'm applying the first day we can," he said simply.

The next step for the hospital will be completing the office wing,and then the 20-bed children's wing. From there, they'll be in full service. They expect to be completely open by Jan. 1, 1985.

Vo Tech offers services to local government

The shops at the South Shore Vocational Technical High School offer a variety of services to government agencies in the region, usually saving local towns a significant amount of money.

The VoTech School recently reminded town officials of the services available to government and citizens alike. Special conditions must be associated with the provision of the services. Prices are based on cost of materials and a service charge which reflects a reduced labor charge. All work and service is performed by students at South Shore VoTech under the supervision of qualified technical instructors.

COSMETOLOGY

Instructors: Beverly Mahony, Rita Ferreira

Services are available in all phases of cosmetology including hair, skin and nail care. All work is done by students and the cost covers supplies. Services are offered from 8:15 to 11 a.m.; appointments are preferred. A 24-hour patch test is required for color application for the first time.

BAKING

Instructor: Gerald Perriello

The baking program can provide baked products for any senior citizen group, school function or other public function. A retail bakery at the Abington campus is open from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Tuesday to Friday. Requests can be accepted only according to the students' abilities.

PRECISION METAL FABRICATION & WELDING

Instructors: Burton Leone, Richard Howe, Eugene Dussault

The school offers fabrication or replacement parts for fire apparatus (e.g., rusted out water tanks), various parts that need replacement for water or sewerage plants, new parts for truck bodies, brackets or other items needed for modification of any equipment, welding of broken or cracked parts, and sheet metal chassis and boxes for fire alarm systems, etc. No emergency work is done. There is a charge for time and material costs.

MACHINE SHOP

Instructor: Eugene Hickey

The Machine Shop can be useful in planned or periodic maintenance replacement systems. Services could be provided to those departments where constant use of machinery and equipment results in predictable worn parts which need to be replaced, such as constant running pumps with wear rings or shafts which are replaced systematically as in water treatment plants, or parts which wear in trash compactors or snow removal equipment. The school can also manufacture items on older equipment where replacement parts are no longer available. Generally speaking, the service is useful where parts are low-volume or specialty items; stock items such as nuts or bolts are less expensive to simply purchase. The customer should provide special order material such as tool steel, stainless steel or brass, or a large quantity of materials. Completion times will vary from a couple of days to a few months, depending on the involvement of the job, which is why planned maintenance is best. The school handles minor rush jobs but major emergency projects should be handled commercially. A service charge for work performed is based on a rate of $5 per hour.

CULINARY ARTS

Instructors: Linda Kislowski, Isithoros Rozaski

The culinary arts department can provide buffets, light lunches and dinners on Mondays, as well as take out orders. A restaurant at the Abington campus is open Tuesdays and Fridays from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. when school is open. The services are provided during school hours and if the function requirements pertain to the approved curriculum.

ELECTRICAL

Instructors: William Laidler, Richard Murray

Some limited electrical maintenance services are available, such as ballast changing and SW8 Rec. replacement. Customers must be willing to wait, and the school does not wish to take work away from local electrical contractors.

GRAPHIC ARTS

Instructor: George Clemmey

The graphic arts department offers collating (up to as many forms as desired), stitching and folding (limited to two folds). Printing can be done if the work provided is camera-ready text or art material. There is a reasonable amount of turn-around time needed, and no emergency work is done. The minimum cost is $5.

HEATING, VENTILATION & AIR CONDITIONING

Instructor: Carl Sousa

Students can provide services on commercial refrigeration, installation and service, air conditioning service and installation, heating (light oil #2), gas and heat pumps. Services are offered only during school hours (8 a.m. to 2 p.m.). No emergency work is done.

PAINTING & WALL FINISHING

Instructor: John Clark

Complete painting and wall covering projects, including interior and exterior work, is offered. Exterior work is limited to weather and not to exceed 20 feet in height.

Chemical People

By Ruth Kelly

What's in a name like Chemical People?

One of the major thrusts of the Chemical People Project has been to use mass media; television, radio and newspapers to communicate the following message: there is a serious drug and alcohol problem which is threatening young people, and through a major campaign started in November, 1983, active Chemical People Task Forces have formed across the nation.

We are dealing with hundreds of thousands of people who: aren't convinced of the problem, think it won't affect their children, aren't concerned and don't have teenagers.

Chemical People may not be your favorite choice for a name or reference - but it's what is in the name today that reflects the strength of united efforts to stop the abuse of drugs and alcohol among our youth today.

The Scituate C.P.T.F. meets the first and third Monday of every month at 7:30 p.m. at the Scituate Town Hall. We need you!

Fuel assistance program

Joseph Kennedy, II, of Marshfield, president of Citizens Energy Corporation, has announced a new brochure containing information about the Fuel Assistance Program and home energy conservation is available.

Citizens Energy Corporation is a non-profit energy company that provides low-cost oil to the state of Massachusetts. This oil is distributed by Community Action Agencies through the Federal Fuel Assistance Program. Though hundreds of thousands of families in Massachusetts receive this assistance, there are still many who are eligible but who have never applied.

"This free brochure will help the tens of thousands of families across the Commonwealth who feel they might be eligible for assistance but do not know how or where to apply for it," says Kennedy. "The Fuel Assistance Program is not welfare; it is a program designed to help people get the heat they deserve."

In addition to describing the fuel assistance program, this brochure provides low-cost and no-cost weatherization tips for the home. These conservation ideas are easily implemented and can save the average homeowner a few hundred dollars each year with little or no capital investment.

For a brochure write: Joe Kennedy, Citizens Energy Corporation, P.O. Box 1900, Boston 02205.

Captains subject of new reprint

The Cohasset Historical Society is offering a reprint in paperback book form of Edmund Pomeroy Collier's "Cohasset's Deep Sea Captains", originally written as one of the historical chapters added to the 1909 printing of Davenport's "Genealogies of the Families of Cohasset".

During the 18th and 19th centuries, there existed in Cohasset a group of men known as "Deep Sea Captains". At that time the town was a seafaring community and fishing port. It also was the home for numerous ship-masters whose vessels were among the large square-rigged merchant fleet sailing from Boston to ports all over the world.

While not much information is available about Cohasset's earliest seafarers, it is known that there were a number of deep sea captains whose careers pre-dated the Revolution, and Cohasset captains were active during the War for Independence. Of those whose lives spanned the last part of the 18th and the 19th centuries more is known.

At the turn of this century , biographical information relating to their lives and careers was written down by Edmund Pomeroy Collier, himself the son of one of Cohasset's foremost sea captains, Capt. James Collier. E. Pomeroy Collier, born in Cohasset in 1858, grew up here during the years in which America's great "Age of Sail" reached its zenith and then began its slow decline which ultimately was the supplanting of sailing vessels by steamship.

Collier's generation was the last one to know the town's Deep Sea Captains and the last to hear from them the stories of the great sailing vessels and their voyages to far distant lands. At the urging of Cohasset's Committee on Town History, Collier compiled the available information about their lives into a series of biographical sketches of the sea captains.

In some cases, Collier's biographical sketches are fairly brief, but in others, they are more extensive. In his 80 pages of writing, the author recounts the story of more than forty of Cohasset's world-travelling ship-masters from the late 1700's to 1909, beginning with Capt. Aaron Pratt who had been born in the year 1760 and ending with the last of the town's Deep Sea Captains, Capt. Harrison P. Snow, still living at the time Collier wrote. Particularly well detailed is the life of the author's father, Capt. James Collier, Jr., whose career began at the age of nine in 1822 and ended at the age of seventy three.

Capt. James Collier, Jr. "probably commanded more ships and sailed more long voyages than any seafaring man who ever went out from Cohasset". Also well documented in Collier's writings is Capt. Philip Fox of Cohasset, a transplanted English seafarer who twice set the record for port-to-port crossing between Liverpool and Boston, with the packet "Herald" in 1819 (17 days) and again with the packet "Emerald" in 1824 (16 days). "Emerald's" record Atlantic crossing stood for many years until broken by a later generation of ships, the famous clippers. Cohasset's Capt. John Philip Turner Percival went to sea when he was eleven years old in 1829 and retired in 1863.

His career is covered in Collier's book, and his memoirs can be found in the archives of the Historical Society. The last surviving Deep Sea Captain of Cohasset when Collier wrote was Capt. Harrison P. Snow, son of Capt. Ephraim Snow who had owned one of the fleets of mackerel schooners so numerous in Cohasset. Harrison Snow, at the time of Colier's writing, had retired from the sea and was a wharf agent with the Nantasket Beach Steamship Company. He was one of the few of the old time sailing captains who made the transition from sail to steam, ending his 19 year career as shipmaster on the steamer "Gulnare" before his retirement in the year 1882.

These and others of Cohasset's Deep Sea Captains appear upon the pages of E. Pomeroy Collier's fascinating and unique book as reprinted from the original by the Cohasset Historical Society. The new paperback edition is well worth considering as a holiday gift and can be obtained from the society (please call 383-0773 or 383-6930) or at Fleming's, Cohasset Center.

Quilt raffle

A quilt raffle will be held at the Scituate-Cohasset Newcomers Club holiday fair Saturday, Nov. 17, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Second Congregational Church in Cohasset, 43 Highland Ave.

Admission is free.

Surplus cheese program

The Federal Government Surplus cheese and butter will be distributed by the Social Service League of Cohasset in early December. All recipients must demonstrate participation in any of the following in order to qualify: food stamp program, A.F.D.C., Welfare, S.S.I., Medicaid, Head Start, Fuel Assistance, W.I.C., Veteran's Aid or unemployment.

You must call the Social Service League office in advance, 383-0771 or 383-0821 to request the cheese and butter by November 23 and to arrange for pick up or delivery.

Legislation discussion

The Cohasset League of Women Voters invites the public to attend a forum on the omnibus education bill HB5704. This bill is a long range plan for education reform.

It covers issues such as mandatory school attendance from age 5, regular remediation programs, upgrading teacher certification, bi-annual teacher evaluation, minimum salary of $18,000 a year.

Representative Mary Janette Murray, School Superintendent Eugene Crowell and State League Representative Mary Ann Hartenburg will present their position on this bill. A question and answer period will follow the panel presentation.

The forum will be held at the Unitarian Parish House, 23 North Main St., Cohasset, Nov. 29 at 9:15 a.m. Coffee will be served from 9 to 9:15. Babysitting is available for a charge of two dollars per child. Please call 383-6017 for babysitting reservations.

Dinner dance

The Friends of South Shore Hospital will sponsor a dinner dance Saturday, Nov. 17 at the Neighborhood Club of Quincy. Proceeds from this fundraiser will be used toward the purchase of medical equipment for a renovated trauma room at the hospital.

The dinner dance will begin with a cocktail hour from 7 to 8 p.m., followed by a dinner of prime ribs at 8 p.m. Dancing will be held from 8 p.m. to midnight to the music of the Earl Hannafin Orchestra.

Mrs. Terry Asher of Weymouth, president of the Friends of South Shore Hospital, said that the new trauma room will greatly benefit area accident victims and heart attack patients brought to the hospital. "Members of the Friends feel that the renovated trauma room will offer a very important addition to the hospital's capabilities in emergency medicine. For this reason the Friends have pledged a donation of $125,000 over a three-year period for the trauma room."

For dinner dance ticket information, please contact Bridget Blasser at 337-7011, ext.242.

Turkey shoot

What's the big deal about turkey shoots? Well, for one thing, turkeys! America's favorite bird will be presented as prizes during the Annual Turkey Shoot at the Scituate Rod & Gun Club on Sunday, Nov. 18, beginning at 10 a.m.

These turkeys will be of the frozen variety but they will still end up on the dinner table for many people this Thanksgiving. The birds will be awarded to the winners of several different shooting events, including Lucky Target, Swinging Target, Silhouette Shoot, Archery Shoot, A Fun Shoot and more.

All activities are fun and safe for the whole family. The turkey shoot will run from 10 a.m. to dark Sunday, Nov. 18, rain or shine. The Scituate Rod & Gun Club is located on Route 3A in North Scituate, near Booth Hill Road.

Funds available

The state legislature has agreed to fund a special technical and financial assistance program through the Massachusetts Conservation Districts to aid municipalities in developing conservation and recreation plans.

The Norfolk County Conservation District is pleased to present this assistance to the cities and towns of Norfolk County. In order to provide more details about this program, an introductory meeting will be held Tuesday, Nov. 20 at 7:30 p.m. in the Conference Room of the Norfolk County Agricultural School, 460 Main Street, Walpole.

At that time the District will describe the planning process, specific conservation/recreation planning requirements, the types of assistance available and distribute applications for the program.

THIS WAY OUT.

When we were growing up, most of our medical problems were solved by the family doctor. But that was yesterday.

Today, finding good medical care is a lot more complicated.

The whole medical landscape is changing dramatically. And along with it, the decision to join a health plan has never been more difficult.

Today, there are well over a dozen health plans in the Boston area, and all of them have something to offer.

But how do you find the one that's right for you?

For this medical problem, understanding is the best cure.

MultiGroup has prepared a simple booklet that can help you tell one plan from another.

Write us, and we'll be happy to send it to you. Or call.

These kids have the whole town hopping

By Jane Lane

The entire town is excited about these young kids. The superintendent of schools is one of their biggest fans.

Possibly the only ones more enthusiastic than the players themselves, are the two coaches of the freshman football squad. Bobby Silvia and Kevin Dooley have been coach, friend, and cheerleader for the freshman squad. It's a position they will not soon relinquish.

This freshman team had a record of eight wins and one loss going into Wednesday's final match against Fessendon Academy. In the words of Coach Silvia, "let everyone know we have laid claim to the Small Schools Division championship - whatever happens Wednesday."

That's a great title - champs. And Silvia and Dooley will willingly tell anyone "these kids deserved it."

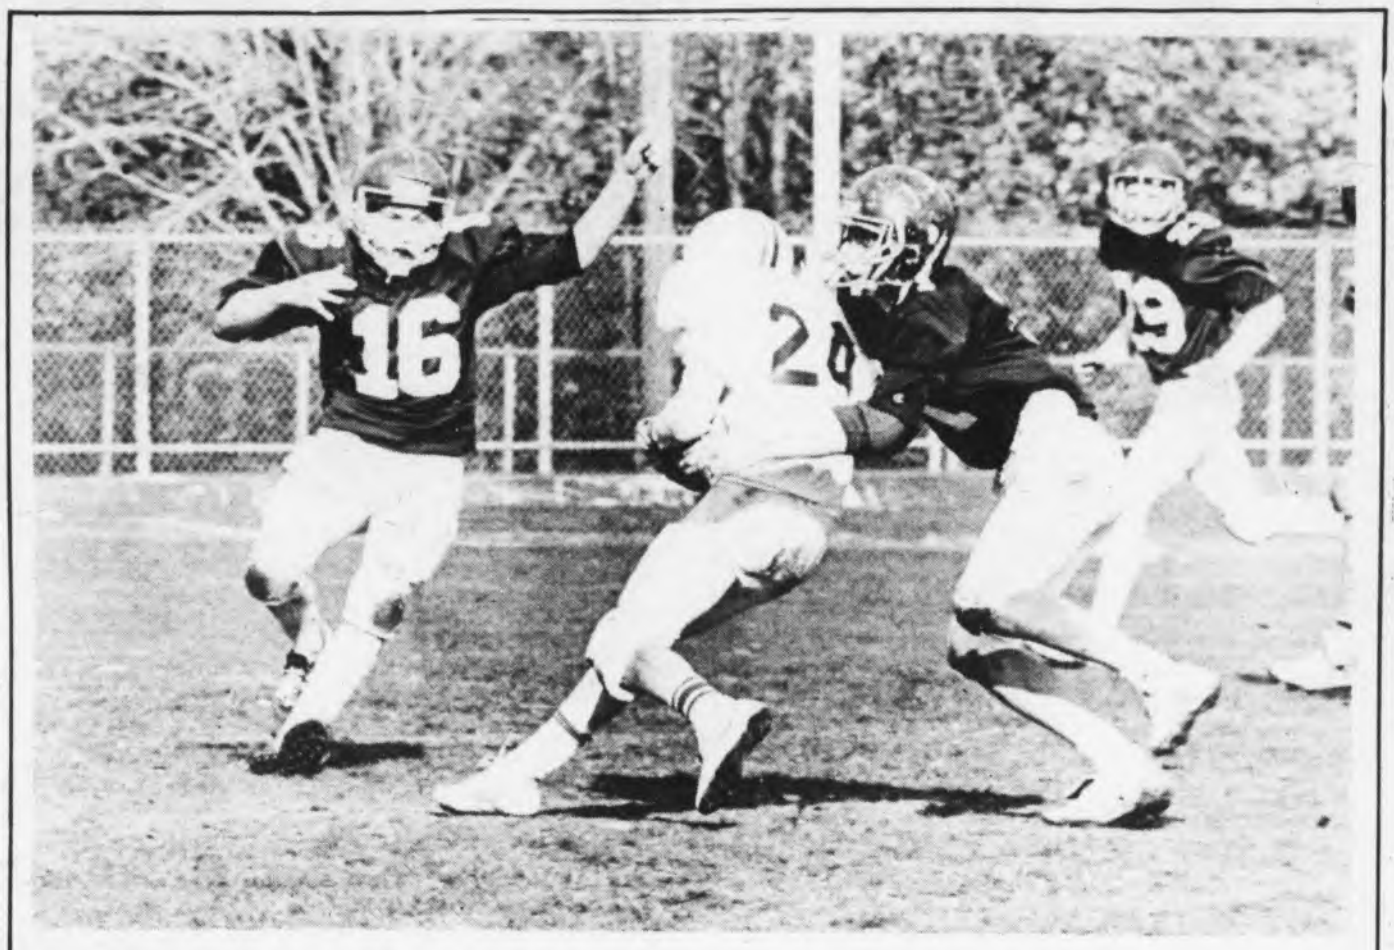
Silvia explains, "the Cohasset team is just about the only bunch around without prior football experience. More than 90 percent of this year's team never played organized football before. It's their character that has allowed them to do as well as they have."

Like two proud parents, Silvia and Dooley are anxious to show off their offspring to everyone. Although it's certain to be an item they would wish to keep unpublished, the fact is, they split the one coaching salary so they could continue with the team. The previous two years they worked as assistant coaches without a salary.

What they want to highlight is the startling exuberance this team has shown throughout the year. And although the season has concluded, their spirit has not.

The thirty eighth and ninth grade students who comprise the freshman team will be initiating a weight-training program next week. Building better and bigger bodies will be the order for the upcoming year as these youngsters seek starting positions on next season's freshman and junior varsity squads. The weight program will be supervised by their two coaches.

The large number of students who came out for the team is also indicative of the enthusiasm generated for this sport. Two or three years ago, Silvia explains, the team was lucky to have 20 members. Last year, 19 boys played on the freshman team.



"I think the Cohasset football program is coming around, " Silvia says. "There's a lot more interest, especially when we're winning like this season."

Coach Dooley continues, "as late as two weeks ago, there were kids coming up to us at practice and asking to be on the team. We let any freshman who asks to be on the team, join us. We get him a uniform and equipment and we're all set."

One youth who just recently joined the squad, started the last three games and was a big scoring factor for the team, Dooley added.

Some of the boys who have left this freshman squad for the senior high teams, have skipped over the junior varsity team. As Coach Dooley explains, several kids have moved directly from the freshman team to a starting position on varsity.

The exuberance generated from the kids and their coaches has spread throughout the town. But even they can't explain the crowds who often attend the afterschool matches.

Freshman players get tough against Rockland.

"Supt. Eugene Crowell has been one of our biggest fans. He comes to a lot of the games, and gets a big kick from seeing these kids play. They play to win, and people like to see that. The kids love the crowds. The more people there, the better they play," Dooley notes.

It's nice for the kids to be appreciated by their peers and parents, but the coaches are amazed at the community's support. "To tell the truth, it's kind of a shock to get the kind of crowds we get at the games - at least at this level of the sport," Dooley adds.

The team's record this year is an even greater accomplishment, Coach Silvia explains, because the Cohasset team members have never played Midget or Pop Warner type junior football programs. "They have learned a lot in a short time. The two and a half months they train and play is not a very long time, compared to some of the boys they play against," he adds.

As the proud coaches readily admit, "win is the cure all." Although only 13 kids came out for the team in September, their reputation proceeded them and they quickly gained more members. Last year, only five veteran team members rejoined the squad. This year, all nine eighth graders have enthusiastically agreed to return for a second season.

"After our first loss this year, they all felt bad. So did we," Dooley says. "But they were 'up' again for the next game. They are very anxious kids - and they're eager to end the season on a good note."

The coaches also praise the efforts of team captains, Glen Froio and Adam Whitman as "good leaders who have been fun to work with and have worked very hard."

The ninth graders who participated on this season's championship team include: Danny Pompeo, Jimmy Maguire, Craig Mulcahy, Doug Bennett, Dennis Jones, Peter Sandblom, Brett Lincoln, leading scorer Derek Lacks, Ronny Massa, Chris Conley, Steve Carroll, Ian Sullivan, Jamie Davenport, Glenn Froio, Stephen Ford, Adam Whitman, Matt Maloney, Mike Smith, Greg Baker, Sean Fitzsimmons, and Andy Nawn.

Eight grade team members include: Mark Corkery, Paul Froio, John Lanata, Mike Meers, Chris Froio, Michael Figueiredo, Michael Coleman, Craig Carter, and Matthew Deveney.

And as the two coaches emphasize, "we'll be back next year."

Area soloists in "Messiah"

The Christmas season will open on a joyous note as the Cohasset Second Congregational Chuch hosts the annual "Messiah Sing" Sunday, Nov. 25, at 3 p.m.

This year's concertmaster is Angelo Alabiso of Hingham. There will be an 18-piece chamber orchestra. Ted Haines of East Bridgewater is the trumpeter. Carolyn Curtis of Marshfield will play the organ. The conductor is Ellen Fryling of North Scituate. Mrs Fryling is also the Director of Music at the Second Congregational.

Paula Blackmur Young, the soprano solist, is a former resident of Cohasset. Paula attended Oberlin Conservatory in Ohio and graduated from the New England Conservatory of Music. She has done extensive solo work in churches of all denominations. Her favorite solo performance, since she was 20 years-old, has been her summer soloing at the Second Congregational Church in Cohasset.

David Norris will sing the tenor solos. Mr. Norris resides in Marshfield. He is a soloist with various choral groups in the Boston area.

Rev. James O'Brien will be the bass soloist. Formerly of Massachusetts he now is the minister of a church in Maine. Rev. O'Brien has participated in the "Messiah Sing" since its beginning in 1961 in Brockton. He has been a popular soloist in both oratorio and the theater productions on the South Shore and some Rhode Island areas.

The contralto solos will be sung by Mrs. Whiting, a Scituate resident. Mrs. Whiting comes from New York, where she studied music at the Crane School of Music in Potsdam and Syracuse University. Mrs. Whiting also has sung with the Unicorn Singers and the Broadcove Choral.

Ellen Fryling is celebrating her 23rd year as director of the "Messiah Sing," which has been held in Cohasset since 1974. She is a well-known organist, cellist and conductor in the South Shore area.

Get ready for the flu

The Massachusetts Department of Public Health (DPH) has distributed 233,000 doses of influenza vaccine to local boardsof health statewide, and immunization clinics will begin in most towns and cities across Massachusetts this week.

According to State Epidemiologist Dr. George Grady, "We expect to see three different strains of influenza circulate in the state this year. Two of them are new to us, the A-Chile and B-USSR strains, and one will be a return from last year, the A-Philippines. Because exposed populations will not be resistant to these new viruses, we expect a fair amount of flu activity come mid-winter."

The following people should consult their physician before receiving a flu shot: those who are allergic to eggs, those who are receiving anti-cancer medication, those who are experiencing an infectious illness more severe than a cold, and those who have received another type of vaccine within the prior two weeks.

People interested in receiving the influenza vaccine should contact their local board of health, community health center, or private physician. There is no charge for the vaccine, although private physicians may charge a fee for administration.

Towns still fighting to save North River

By Lisa J. Messersmith

Whatever happened to those bumper stickers that read "Save the North and South River Watershed?" Whatever became of those feisty individualists who vowed to save the rivers and the wildlife which depended on them?

The bumper stickers have certainly faded, but the people can still be found fighting for the river at town boards or seen canoeing, fishing, and, yes, even swimming in the North River.

In response to coliform pollution test results, members of various boards from the North River area met to propose a sound, workable Pollution Management Plan.

Representatives from health boards, conservation commissions, the North River Commission, the Metropolitan Area Planning Council, and the Marshfield Rod and Gun Club met at the Norwell Public Library Nov. 8 to discuss what steps to take next in order to save the river.

Marshfield Conservation Agent and alternate member on the North River Commission, Warren Harrington presented a rough draft outline of a Pollution Management Plan. This report will be examined by scientific experts before submission to the State Dept. of Environmental Engineering. The DEQE ordered a management plan must be submitted by Thanksgiving or the towns of Scituate and Marshfield would see their clam flats shut down.

Warren Harrington suggested only the clam flats be tested because in "the rest of the river you may have a problem that's too great."

Clam quality, he said, is like "drinking water quality." Harrington stressed the pollution is an old problem; when the clam flats were tested in 1966 the same results were obtained.

Jerome Cohen, chairman of the North River Commission, disagreed with the idea that the other end of the river is too far gone to be helped.

"We don't have to accept exceedingly high levels of coliform. It behooves us to do as much as we can," he added. NRC alternate Patsy Proctor agreed with Cohen: "Every town wants to be able to use the river for recreational purposes."

The purpose of the Pollution Management Plan will "determine cause(s) of coliform counts and pollution; and institute steps to correct the problem; continue to monitor the river in order to prevent new or old problems from affecting the rivers' quality."

Ralph Sanborn of the Marshfield Rod and Gun Club mentioned the usual suspects in regard to the high coliform count such as sewage plants in Rockland and Scituate.

Sanborn said that the Scituate sewage plant "can be perfectly all right, but at other times is not, especially as a result of heavy rain." Scituate Health Department Agent Walter Walsh said the system must be by-passed in heavy rain because of the quantity of pure water.

"Sometimes the water gets treated with chlorine" but at other times, it does not.

Walsh said the water was "so diluted it should not be a significant problem."

Members also discussed violations by private property owners. Chairman Cohen stressed town boards "have to rely on input from the public to get information" on possible health violations which are "dangerous to public health and must be reported."

It was also suggested health boards could assist their health agents in the inspection of private property.

Cohen said that he would like to see a full-time overseer of the management plan, and added the NRC should stay clear of dictating the plan and instead function as a coordinator to keep the lines of communication open between the various individuals and boards involved.

Despite the publicity and pleas from the North River Commission to attend these meetings, several towns have failed to respond.

At neither meeting has there been a representative from Pembroke, and at the last meeting no one from Norwell was present.

As several members agreed, Scituate and Marshfield have more reason to consider funding because of the income these towns receive from clamming licenses.

As a supplement to the management plan, the Metropolitan Area Planning Council suggested the members incorporate these actions into their plan. These actions are: gather all existing data on water quality and pollution sources; establish full-scale field testing and dye testing lab analysis; identify sources of pollution; analyze land and water uses; analyze all local regulations and compare the town regulations and determine where major inadequacies exist, and analyze septic system problems and possible upgrading.

The MAPC also added under the State Executive Office of Community Development Incentive Aid Grant, a staff person could be hired in order to oversee the project on a full-time basis.

Cohen said, there is no one on the NRC, boards of health, or conservation commissions "totally qualified to supervise this kind of testing."

All individuals at the meeting agreed finding the sources of pollution in the North River cannot be done in a short length of time.

Cohen added the plan needs a one-year survey and analysis in which the North River can be broken up into small segments for intensive study.

The funding for the plan is expected to come from the towns bordering the North River, the state, private donations, organizations, volunteer help, and grants. The NRC has already received $2000 in contributions and the commission would greatly appreciate any donation for the project.

Members will consult with Dr. Thomas Hruby, who has been studying the pollution problem in the Annisquam River at Cape Ann, and Terry Birch, who worked out a pollution management program for Lebanon.

Hruby's and Birch's comments will be implemented into the outline of the plan and the entire plan will be submitted to the DEQE by their deadline of Thursday, Nov. 22.

Chairman Cohen said, "with the understanding that this plan is a rough draft outline...we're attempting to submit something to the DEQE to show that we've been doing something on the project."

Cohen added, "participation from as many different groups as possible" is extremely important if the North River is ever to significantly reduce the coliform levels.

I don't think we can reach shellfish pollution levels in the entire length of the river, but we can bring the pollution levels down along the entire length of the river."

Visit Plimouth

Pilgrims prepare for winter

Visitors to Plimoth Plantation during November will see for themselves how the early colonists preserved food to survive the long winter in the wilderness.

Threshing of grain, parching of corn, baking, drying herbs, butchering hogs, curing hams and bacons, salting fish, making sausage and rendering fat for soap are a few of the activities that will be going on each week in the 1627 Pilgrim Village.

In addition to routine chores, women will do laundry and bake breads, and men will repair chimneys, wattle and daub the Cooke House presently under construction, make nails and hold court sessions. There will be militia musters daily.

Plimoth Plantation is the outdoor living history museum of 17th century Plymouth, and is open daily from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. through Nov. 30. Its exhibits include a full scale replica Mayflower II docked at State Pier in Plymouth Harbor and the 1627 Pilgrim Village. A special exhibit, "Four Centuries of Wampanoag Clothing," is located in the Orientation Center near the Village.

Admission to Mayflower II is $2.50 for adults, $1.50 for children (ages 5 to 13). Admission to the Pilgrim Village is $5.50 for adults, $3 for children. Children under age 5 are admitted free.

Rail restoration movement picks up speed

The drive to restore rail passenger service between South Station and Plymouth County communities is gathering momentum, according to Brooks Kelly, executive director of Plymouth County Development Council (PCDC).

"Two separate feasibility studies are nearing completion," Kelly said. "Both are coming up with comparable cost and ridership data for the Plymouth and Middleboro lines."

Restoration of commuter rail service on the two lines would involve an estimated $72 million worth of construction, including a new bridge over the Neponset River. While acknowledging that "this is a lot of money," Kelly urges a comparison with other regional transportation projects.

"For $72 million, we can rehabilitate 59 miles of track; complete a comprehensive commuter rail network that serves all of Greater Boston; and increase the capacity to handle additional commuters," Kelly said. "By comparison, the state is currently spending $65 million to reconstruct a mere eight miles of the Southeast Expressway. And, when that is completed, capacity will be no greater than it is now."

The PCDC executive director also cites the "hundreds of millions" being spent on MBTA improvements, including a reported $300 million in Harvard Square alone.

In addition to the construction costs, the new rail system would need to invest an estimated $50 million in rolling stock and related equipment.

When finally in operation, the Plymouth and Middleboro lines would handle an estimated 7,700 commuters daily.

According to a recent MBTA newsletter, ridership on MBTA Commuter Rail routes has increased 34 percent since 1979. The MBTA currently operates 250 miles of rail lines serving north, west and southwest suburbs of Boston.

We're advocating a 24 percent expansion of the current systems," Kelly said. "By adding the 59 miles of track to the system, the MBTA can complete its Commuter Rail network and provide service to the only region not currently served."

A portion of Kelly's argument is based on "a question of equity...equal economic opportunity...and basic fair play."

"Why," he said, "should our region be the only area without rail service? Are we second class citizens? Are the good folks in Brockton and Plymouth somehow less equal than the residents of Framingham, Franklin and Pride's Crossing?"

The RRAILS coalition, which advocates restoration of rail service to South Station, has outlined a three phase plan for advancing the project:

1. Administration Support

According to Kelly, the first priority is a commitment from the Dukakis administration "that they do, in fact want to restore rail service to our region. Without leadership and a strong resolve, nothing can happen."

2. Environmental Impact Studies

Some 17 separate action steps must be taken by the MBTA before the project can become reality. One of the most important is the required environmental impact studies. The estimated cost is $700,000 and, according to Kelly, funds are already available from the last state Transportation Bond Issue.

"With Secretary Salvucci's approval, these funds could be put to work almost immediately," Kelly said.

3. Regional Transit Authority

The Plymouth County Commissioners are already considering a proposal to establish a regional transit authority. The new unit would be eligible to make direct application to the federal government for construction and equipment funding. It is expected that the MBTA would handle passenger operations on the new rail lines.

The current MBTA Commuter Rail system is subsidized at the state level. Individual cities and towns are not assessed for any portion of the commuter rail deficit.

Advocates of the new rail system expect that operating losses will also be covered at the state level.

The RRAILS coalition plans to meet with MBTA and state transportation officials prior to seeking a meeting with Governor Dukakis.

Straits Pond committee

Selectmen are seeking a member for the Straits Pond Management Committee.

Members of the committee include two neighborhood residents, the executive secretary to the Board of Selectmen, and the health agent. Since there is currently no executive secretary and the health agent is new to the position, there has been no recent meeting. One resident remains on the committee.

Selectmen said anyone interested in serving on the committee should contact their office.

Guided Imagery

Guided Imagery for the Health Professional will be presented Friday, Nov. 30, from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m., at the Fitness Connection in Plymouth.

The workshop is approved for 7.2 contact hours by the M.N.A. and The L.P.N.'s of Mass., Inc. The workshop introduces the principles of imagery, facilitating relaxation and the use of guided imagery for pain management.

The workshop fee of $40 includes lunch. Preregistration is required for registration information, please call 748-2199 or The Fitness Connection at 747-1619.

☐ Ann Courtney has joined the Cohasset office of Gallery 360 as a sales associate, according to principal Tom Hamilton.

A graduate of Framingham State College with a degree in liberal arts. Mrs. Courtney has worked as the assistant to the art director of a major New York publishing company and was assistant buyer for a Boston based department store. She was associated with the Rutledge Gallery of Homes in Wellesley before moving to Cohasset recently. Mrs. Courtney is a million dollar broker and in 1983 earned the national Gallery of Homes award in the firm's Million Dollar Club.

☐Mary Pecce has been selling a lot of real estate for a long time at the Cohasset office of the Jack Conway Company. So far this year she has sold in excess of $3 million, qualifying for a company-sponsored trip to Antigua.

Mary is a graduate of the Real Estate Institute and is a Certified Residential Specialist (CRS). She has served as treasurer of the Plymouth County Multiple Listing Service and is state director of the Board of Realtors. She has served as hospitality chairman and on the grievance committee of the Plymouth County Board of Realtors.

She has three children: Elaine Bongarzone of Scituate; Jay, who is employed at G.E. Aerospace Division near Washington, D.C.; and Christopher, a Nichols College graduate who is employed at Leading Edge Company, a computer firm in Canton.

☐Alf Lindsay Carroll, III, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Lindsay Carroll of North Main Street, Cohasset, was married to Nancy Joyce Therrien of Needham at 11 a.m. in St. Joseph's Church, Needham. A reception was held at the Lantana, immediately after the ceremony — a host of friends and relatives attended. Included as guests were Mr. and Mrs. Alf L. Carroll of Beaufort, South Carolina, grandparents of the groom.

Alf was graduated from Cohasset High School, Northeastern School of Engineering, and has a Master's Degree in Engineering from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in Cambridge. He is employed at the Draper Laboratories, Cambridge. Mrs. Carroll graduated from Needham High School and Roger Williams College in Bristol, Rhode Island. After a trip to St. John, Virgin Islands, the couple will be at home in Weymouth.

☐ At the 70th meeting of the Mass Federation of Planning Boards, Dan Cotton was elected a director of the Federation's Southeast regional area. Mr. Cotton has served our town as a member of the planning board for four years.

This was the second educational seminar of the Parker Foundation that Dr. Neill has attended in two years. Dr. Neill is a graduate of New York Chiropractic College in Old Brook Ville, New York. His office is located at 760 C.J. Cushing Highway, Cohasset.

☐Joseph R. Godzik, V.M.D., Health Agent for the Cohasset Board of Health was elected to the Board of Directors of the Norfolk County-Newton Lung Association at the organization's recent Annual Meeting. Popularly known as the "Christmas Seal People," the lung association seeks to prevent and control lung disease.

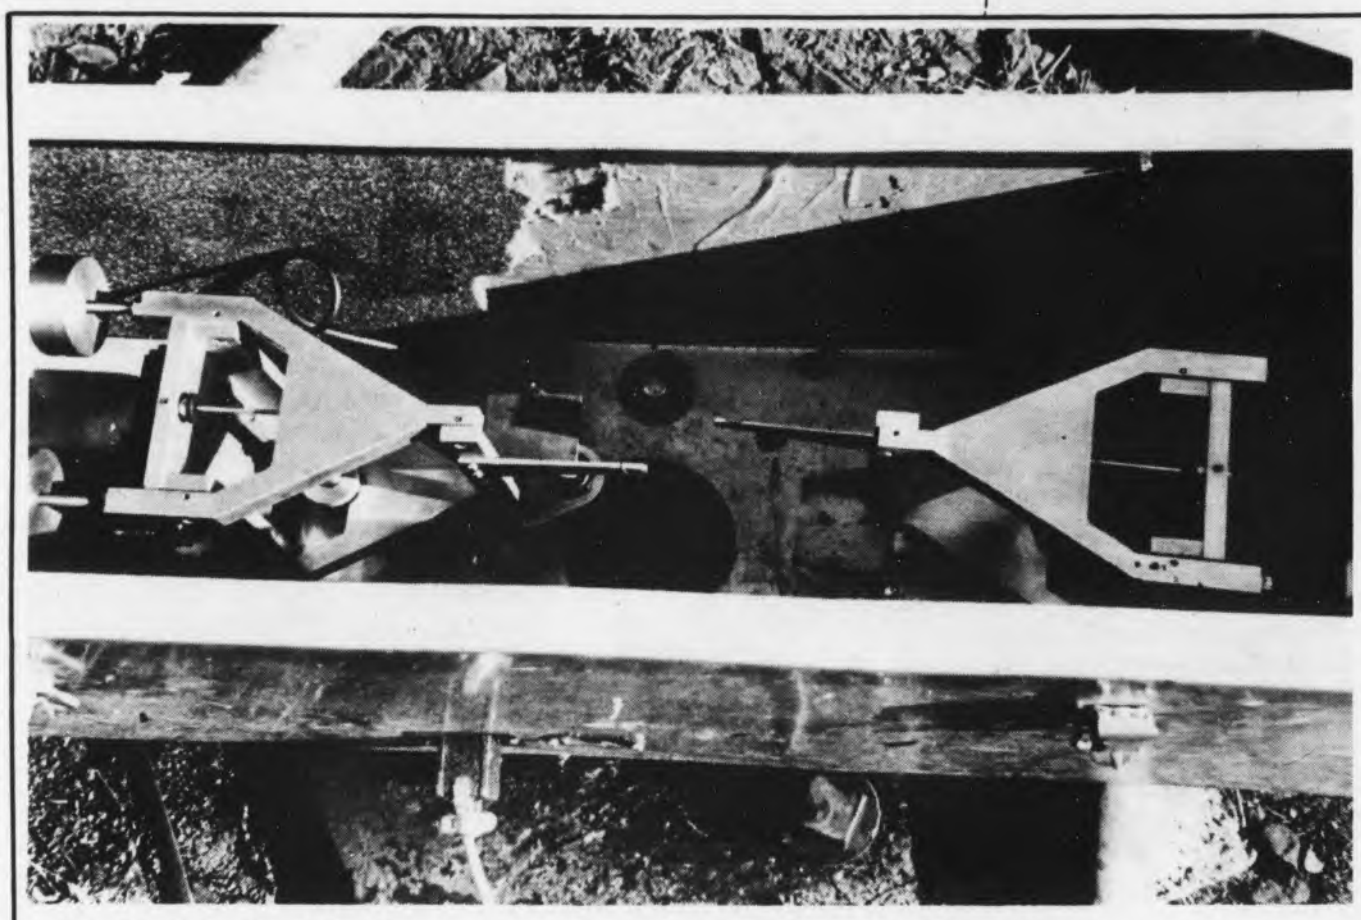
Local business monitors hazardous waste

By Judy Gilman

Leaking underground storage tanks, particularly those that store petroleum products, have been uncomfortably in the local news lately. But a trio of local engineers and businessmen think they have the answer to a quick and simple tank checking device that not only takes less than half the time conventional monitoring systems take to get a readout but also that is far more accurate than what is currently available on the market.

Leak Detection Systems, Inc. is based in Hingham Square, the brainchild of a Scituate and a Cohasset engineer who were later joined by a Cohasset accountant.

Peter Tolan of Scituate and William Baird of Cohasset were driving back from a Pennsylvania hazardous waste convention just a year ago when they began to discuss the sad state of the tank measuring industry. There really hadn't been any changes in methodology in 20 years. And accuracy was such that the only sure way to know if a tank was leaking a small amount of material (and with materials like gasoline, even 100 gallons can cause significant environmental damage) was to dig it up—a costly an time-consuming way that would also shut down the business involved while the investigation was going on.



And Tolan had had a puzzling underground tank happening of his own. In his cellar he had "lost" 250 gallons of fuel oil from a tank. It had just seemed to disappear into thin air.

So it was in that same cellar that the prototype for the Tank Auditor was designed. It is described as a set of frictionless pivots in a parallelogram. To a layman, it looks like two stainless steel triangles facing each other that are housed in an aluminum box. By inserting a metal probe into the tank and then having a reading printed out on a strip chart similar to an EKG reading, the tank can be very accurately "read" for leaks.

How accurate? According to Baird, the current industry standard can measure a leak of 0.02 gallons per hour, the National Fire Protection Association (NFPA) standard. But the standard was set by the degree of accuracy the measuring industry could achieve, 15 years ago when the so-called Kentman system was set up, based on a lab balance beam.

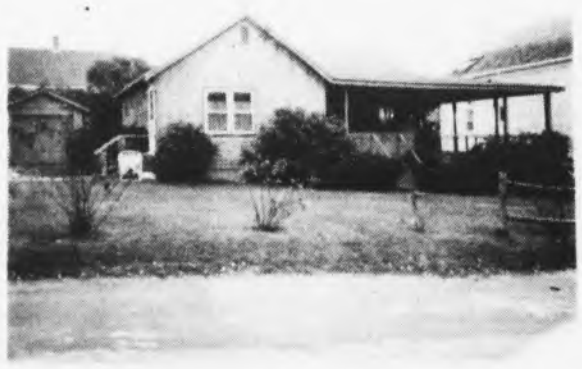
But the Tank Auditor can measure a leak of 0.002 gallons per hour. What that means, Baird says, is "we're literally looking at drops." Patents are pending on this creation, the joint product of Baird, an oil refining engineer and Tolan, a mechanical engineer who has specialized both in measuring systems and in designing booming systems for oil and debris containment.

So Leak Detection Systems, Inc. moved to Hingham and was shortly joined by Ernest Grassey of Cohasset, who left the daily commuting hassle to Boston as a vice president of Tucker, Anthony for the more suburban delights of the South Shore.

The Tank Auditor's basic components for measuring the leaking of underground tanks.

Very simply, Leak Detection's machinery can measure an underground tank in "half the time at ha the price," according to Baird.

Well, what about underground tanks? Who thinks about them?



A lot of people are beginning to give them serious thought. For it's a rather alarming statistic to quote that there is, in this country, one underground tank of at least 100 gallons for every 1,000 people. That adds up to approximately two and a quarter million tanks in existence. And a number of states, Massachusetts among them, are working on legislation that would require all tanks over 10 years old to be tested within two years, then have every tank in existence tested every five years.

For it has become obvious that chemicals and other materials cannot be stored in a haphazard fashion in underground tanks without strict monitoring and control. "Industry is no longer blithely disposing of their materials in scattergun fashion," Baird commented recently. "Everyone has become concerned with the environment, and the cost of disposal is just part of the cost of doing business."

For water, that commodity New England took for granted for so long, has become a premium. "Just look at Cohasset and think about Lily Pond or the problems at Wompatuck State Park," Baird said. "Tons of money are being thrown at the problem. How do you recycle it to keep it in the system? How do you use less? An industry that might have used 10 pounds of solvent in the past without thinking about it is now using a pound instead.

The three partners of Leak Detection see themselves at the very beginning of a new trend in tank monitoring that is in keeping with current philosophy to keep a sharp eye on all chemicals that are stored in the environment. Their good news this week was that the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering had put them on its list of approved tank measurers. And the feedback from the numerous hazardous waste conventions they attend has been favorable, as well. Because the rule is no longer "out of sight, out of mind." It matters too much to all of us what is underground in our ecosystem.

Fall '84 Cohasset High School

The Day The Music Died

By Glenn Hochkeppel

1966: A musical innovator named Walter Carlos collaborates with a fellow musician/electrical engineer named Robert Moog in hopes of creating a piece of electrical hardware that could be called a musical instrument. The result is the synthesizer. One can play a keyboard with several sound-manipulating possibilities, including the distortion , beautification, or even duplication of the human voice. In addition, one can program the synthesizer to play certain pre-set background harmonies to accompany the musician.

LATE 60's: A group is formed featuring Greg Lake on bass and vocals, Carl Palmer on drums, and Keith Emerson on a new instrument- the synthesizer. Emerson, Lake, and Palmer have many years of success, Emerson's intricate solos oftentimes the group's hub.

EARLY 70's: Popular bands generally stay away from the synthesizer as anything other than a potentially handy embelishment.

1970-1980: A new form of music arrives on the scene, soon to be termed "New Wave." Lyrics are sung in a more subdued manner, often without emotion. Synthesizers are usually the central equipment. As this quirky new style gains some cult status, Rock and Roll shrugs.

1980: Electronic drums are now available to interested parties. New Wavers are delighted (in a "punk" way, of course). To produce a sound almost as good as a coffee can being hit with a drop of water, they need only exert a force comparable to inserting a safety pin into one's nose.

EARLY 1980's: There are two rival schools of synthesizer use. On one hand are the modern rock groups, which primarily rely on strings, with fingered keyboards enhancing the background sound. On the other hand are the millitant New Wavers, who detest guitars and regular drums. They wear obnoxious clothing and have taken to programming virtually all their recorded music. (This includes percussion, making even sythesizers obsolete!) They sing lyrics of profundity that could once be experienced only by eating at a very expensive Chinese restaurant.

1986: The music fans of the 70's are fast aging and are no longer considered a major force in the record-buying industry. The teens of the day have an even shorter attention span and have become used to the simple, undemanding sound of completely synthesized music. Once the cult novelty, New Wave appears to be taking over.

1990: Most of what is heard on the radio is completely synthesized. The newest heartthrob of teenage girls, and boys, too, is Phlegm Phluct. (A neutered New Waver whose stage show consists of an IBM computer). Phluct, whose only body hair is a puke mauve mohawk, is costumed as an androgenous android. The climax of the show is when Phluct inserts his/her disk and types, "Run X." It is said that sometimes stray audience members will stand up and applaud.

1995: Music is no longer written or played. Radio stations hook up their computers with "TUNES-R-US," central in Greenwich, England. The massive data bank continually formulates chord progressions and melody lines. These have proven to be aesthetically pleasing to the discerning New Wave ear. All the kids are catatonic and blissfully content under their headsets (in a "punk" way, of course). Their aged parents are trying to recall who Buddy Holly was.

2000: An old man named Dylan is spotted in a tumble-down shack strumming a homemade acoustic guitar. He is shot.

The treatment is complete.

N·C·T·E· Achievement Award

Christine Munro of Cohasset High School has been cited for outstanding performance in writing. The National Council of Teachers of English has named her a winner of a 1984 NCTE Achievement Award in Writing. The NCTE writing contest is held annually beginning in February.

Over 7,000 students were nominated last February by their English teachers for the NCTE Achievement Awards in Writing. Each nominee submitted a sample of her best writing and an impromptu essay. These compositions were evaluated by state judging teams of both high school and college teachers. The approximately 850 finalists selected each year represent high schools in all 50 states, the District of Columbia, and American schools abroad. The number of possible winners for each state is keyed to state population.

The Council recommends those cited, now seniors, for college scholarships in 1984 should they need such assistance. Names of the students are sent to admissions officers and English department chairpersons at U.S. two- and four-year colleges and universities.

The National Council of Teachers of English is a professional organization of individual and institutional members at all levels of instruction. Its goal is to increase the effectiveness of the teaching of English language and literature in the nation's schools and colleges. NCTE furnishes such teaching aids as books and recordings, and publishes several professional journals, among them College English and English Journal.

Who Are They?

By Staci Stobart and Julia Sechen

Two new teachers are temporarily filling in at C.H.S. this year. The first is Mrs. Lalumiere, who will be here until Mr. Dunn returns. The other is Mrs. Trainor, who will be here until Miss Coultrip returns. Both teachers make interesting oberservances about C.H.S. and its students.

Mrs. Lalumiere has returned to classroom teaching after thirteen years. She taught math at Scituate H.S. and Wilmington H.S. after getting her Masters' degree at Bowdoin College. She then left those jobs to work as a math tutor. Last year Mr. Davis offered her a job in the Math Lab , and she accepted.When illness forced Mr. Dunn out of teaching for a while, Mrs. Lalumiere was chosen to replace him until he returns.

The biggest difference between C.H.S. and other jobs Mrs. Lalumiere finds is the size of the high school; Cohasset has "fewer students and a smaller scale." Still, Mrs. Lalumiere feels that things have basically remained the same since she taught last. "By the second day back, I felt I had never left. Kids ask the same questions as they did thirteen years ago." However, there are some notable exceptions to this feeling. Mrs. Lalumiere says that she recognizes a lessening of respect and support in the community toward the schools. Still, she also sees a more serious attitude in the students toward learning.

Mrs. Lalumiere and her husband are residents of Scituate, and have a thirteen year old daughter. In her spare time, she knits and sews as well as walking for exercise.

Commenting on education in general and its future in coming years, Mrs. Lalumiere states happily that the courses offered in high schools are now "more broad and more challenging." However, she admits that fewer intelligent young people are entering the teaching field because the pay is so much less attractive than in other professions. Mrs. Lalumiere predicts that qualified people will become teachers if the highly qualified ones aren't lured to teaching by good salaries.

On the whole, Mrs. Lalumiere is thrilled to be teaching at Cohasset High. She is a highly practical and realistic teacher who realizes that not all her students will be excited and interested in math. "There are those," she says, "who simply refuse to learn." Still, she obviously receives pleasure from her work. As she says, "To me, the most rewarding thing about teaching is the feeling that I am helping people on their way toward achieving their goals. I play a small part, but watching their progress is very satisfying to me."

Mrs. Trainor, who is now teaching Miss Coultrip's English classes, described the atmosphere in Cohasset as "warm and materialized." She is especially pleased with the students whom she calls "genuine, nice people." Now in her twelfth year of teaching, Mrs. Trainor says that she loves the small size of C.H.S. because it makes the classes more intimate. Previously she taught in Randolph and in Duxbury.

Mrs. Trainor studied at Albertus Magnus College and initially debated whether to become an English or a German teacher. Her love of English eventually won out. She claims that she became a teacher because "I always have so much to say and in teaching, I'm guaranteed an audience." Mrs. Trainor says that she teaches because of the interaction with the students. If someone rewards her by showing that he/she learned something, she considers that a "bonus."

Mrs. Trainor has a husband and a six-year-old daughter, Kelly. In her spare time, she likes to read, cook and do crossword puzzles. Like many other working mothers, she finds working full-time difficult sometimes. As she puts it, "In my twenty-four hour day, I divide my time into schoolwork, housework, family and hopefully, one minute for myself."

Mrs. Trainor shares the view that the general public doesn't fully support teachers. She also fears a decline in the caliber of teaching because she thinks the brilliant teachers will choose other professional careers rather

A Word From God

By God and J. Kuntz

The world is full of problems. Tell me about it. you think you have problems? Ha. Just remember, if I hadn't started this popsicle stand, there wouldn't be any problems at all.... In fact, there wouldn't be anything at all. So, keeping that in mind, there are a few things I'd like straightened out down there. I'll give you credit — you're trying hard with the Big problems, like famine and nuclear waste and all that, but there are so many little problems right in American society. This makes me want to start over on Venus or Mars or somewhere. First of all, I wouldn't have given you parking lots if I had known all these "break dancers" would be rolling around in them. What good are they? don't let this alarm you, but Bob Barker is an alien from a far away planet! (Their force of nature is a good friend of mine.) He was sent to Earth to observe human life forms and wound up on "The Price is Right."

Lots of famous people come from other planets. Where do you think the Brady Bunch came from, or the audience of Solid Gold, or the guests on Dance Fever? Where did you get the idea that aliens were any different from you anyway? And speaking of aliens, if I see another cute, watery-eyed, commercial creature, some major body of water is going to dry up. Everything is cute: Gremlins, E.T., Ewoks, Cabbage Patch Kids, Smurfs. Sure, they're cute, but so was Cujo before the bat bit him!

Of course, there are things that even I can't explain! Like, why Mrs. Butterworth pours so thick, how anyone could get trampled at a Menudo concert, why Harold Robbins writes books, why John Travolta acts! Who knows?! Anyway, try to fix up a couple of these things. You wouldn't want all life to cease, would you?

Now that all of us seem to be back into the swing of things, we sometimes tend to phase out to memories of the summer. You know, all of a sudden in the middle of Algebra class we stare off into space on a wild carpet ride back in time. Our poor teachers think we're just unintelligible fools, but we all know different, don't we??

Though summer obviously had its good points—late nights, warm days, and glowing suntans—it also has its faults. Like the times you stumble in at two in the morning to find Dad waiting up, the first time in his life! Do you remember the look that Dad had on his face?? The expression was something like, "If you live through the punishment, it will be a God sent miracle." Of course you survived; after all, a week's grounding may seem traumatic to them because they have to put up with you hanging around the house and driving them up the walls. After two days of loud music they let you off so that their Excedrin headaches will cure quicker.

Towards the end of the summer, jobs cut down or end completely and the infamous School Shopping begins. Sure, the guys have it easy, Mom does it. For us girls it's quite a task and I know a few people who aren't finished yet. Sometimes I wonder if school shopping is an on-going thing until it changes into summer shopping. There is the possibility of that.

As for school in general, the first day is the only one worth looking forward to. new teachers and all. The underclassmen, I'll admit, have it a little tougher. They have to report to a classroom for study while the seniors can go take a nap in the courtyard or the cafeteria. Remember though, that the seniors have college applications to prepare and they've been underclassmen, too. Speaking as a senior myself, apart from the casual studies, preparing for college is a long and tedious process. I wish all the up-coming seniors the best of luck and easy college applications.

New Kid On The Block

By Lisa Brown

After Mrs. Porter decided to accept a two-year guidance position at the American School in Greece, CHS needed a new guidance counselor. Mr. Leonard, who learned about the position from Mr. Leary, has been recently hired to fill the opening. Despite the fact that his stay is limited to two years, Mr. Leonard has the qualifications and dedication to treat the position as permanent until Mrs. Porter returns.

Before coming to CHS, Mr. Leonard began teaching as a special education teacher in 1974 for approximately five years. At the end of the five years, he held a three-year position at Hanover Junior High School. Proposition 2½ ceased his employment at Hanover. Mr. Leonard later worked as the guidance director of Sacred Heart High School in Kingston.

Mr. Leonard comes to CHS with a master's degree in guidance and is presently studying at Northeastern University for a Certificate of Advanced Study (CAS). With these qualifications he intends to accomplish three primary goals. Cohasset's newest guidance counselor believes that doing his best to advise the students assigned to him is one of his most important goals. He also intends to start a career education program in the near future. Of equal importance, however, is working with Miss Babaian in the Peer Counseling program, which is designed to advise students in the junior high. Clearly, in spite of his two-year limit at CHS, Mr. Leonard looks forward to working with both the students and faculty.

Prayer In The Schools?

By Michael A. Greiner

"Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof....."

That is a direct quote from the First Amendment to the Constitution of the United States of America. It outlines one of the most cherished rights of all Americans: the right to worship as one sees fit. President Reagan, however, riding high on the Conservative sentiment that elected him, has repeatedly proposed a bill to create legislated prayer in the schools of the United States. This is a clear violation of one of the most fundamental political ideals of our democracy, and that is the doctrine of the separation of church and state.

Why has this suddenly even become an issue in our government? Ms. Robbins, history teacher at Cohasset High School, is convinced that it is due to American society's current trend to the right. Mr. O'Neil, Latin teacher at the high school, feels that this is due to the inherent fears of the older generation; thus, they want to impose their childhood values upon the students of today; they are making an attempt to turn the clock back. Mr. O'Neil goes on to say that such an idea is an "illusion," since one cannot go back. Basically, though, everyone interviewed feels that the real answers to this question are many and not perfectly clear.

When interviewed, all the teachers mentioned the fact that one of the problems with legislated prayer is the position into which it places the teachers. Mr. Fortin, French teacher at the high school, brings up the predicament of a student misbehaving during prayer. The teacher would be placed into a serious dilemma as to how to "force" the student to pray.

Thus, the issue of prayer in the public schools is not just an issue for politicians to play with, it is actually a serious issue, with possibilities for danger if implemented. Mr. O'Neil brings up the historical fact that every time government becomes involved with religion, persecution thrives. He brings up the Roman persecution of the early Christians. Perhaps, Mr. O'Neil, we will be able to learn from history and put this potentially dangerous issue to rest.

than "altruistically" work for the pay now being offered. She also sees problems in education because of the "go with the flow" attitude of students across the country who are less disciplined than those of the past.

In short, Mrs. Trainor is grateful to be teaching at C.H.S. even for so short a time, and she is pleased that the students and faculty have accepted her so well.

Another new teacher, Mr. Izzo, has more lasting plans. He became interested in biology and chemistry in college and is now working in the science department. He was previously teaching at Wellesley High School, and states that the students here at C.H.S. are basically the same as in Wellesley. They come "from the same kind of community, well-educated, upper middleclass." The one difference between the two communities, he points out, is that Cohasset has an ocean. After teaching in Wellesley, Mr. Izzo ran for a political office, Boston City Council. He took a year off for a campaign that unfortunately turned out unsuccessfully. Subsequently, Mr. Izzo found an opening for a teaching position in Cohasset. He likes the Cohasset school system, yet points out that Wellesley was a lot more "liberal." At Wellesley, there were no homerooms, bells between classes, study halls, or detention. In comparison, Cohasset is "very strict." It is a totally different environment.

In his extra time, Mr. Izzo likes to ski, sail, and play ice hockey. He is very pleased with C.H.S. and finds it a different experience because he now has to deal with older students.

We welcome Mrs. Lalumiere, Mrs. Trainor and Mr. Izzo and hope that their positions and C.H.S. continue working out well. Good luck and welcome to Cohasset High School.

★ A·F·S· Update ★

Maria Alejandra Castro

Maria Alejandra Castro (Alejandra) arrived in our town on July 27 this summer. She is Cohasset's only A.F.S. student for this year. At age 18, she has finished school in Honduras and has begun university in her city, Teguciagalpa. She decided that now was the best time to visit the United States.

Alejandra is staying with the Rossi family of Cohasset. She is used to being the youngest of three children but is now the eldest. She is attending CHS as a senior and seems to be enjoying it. Unlike our high school, students in Honduras study eleven subjects but graduate in the eleventh grade. Their first year in university is similar to our senior year in terms of academics. Alejandra is studying to be an electrical engineer and, therefore, her course load at CHS is geared toward engineering.

Those students that know Alejandra have discovered that her English is extremely good. She has studied English for five years in high school. At age five, she and her family moved to California for two years, which obviously aided her proficiency in the language.

Tegucigalpa, the capitol, naturally differs from the Cohasset village. Alejandra is very happy to be here even though there are so many new things to adapt to. "I like the way of life; because it's small, you get to know and learn more about the people." Alejandra likes to be out with her friends and to talk about everything and anything. She finds in Cohasset, like the rest of us, that activities out of school are limited in number, but she says she has no regrets coming to our little town.

COLLEGE INFORMATION AND PLANNING CALENDAR FOR SENIORS

NOVEMBER

OBTAIN the appropriate financial aid forms from your counselor and start to fill them out. Ask for the College Board's Financial Aid Form (FAF), the American College Testing Program's Family Financial Statement (FFS), and other forms you need.

Complete the first draft of your essay this month, and give yourself plenty of time to revise it.

November 1 to 15: Test scores and applications are due at most colleges that use "Early Decision" admissions.

There are two types of policies. In one, a student must withdraw applications from all other colleges as soon as he or she is accepted by the first-choice college. In the other, a student applies only to the first-choice college unless rejected by that college. Students must apply by November 15 and are notified by colleges by December 15. ■

DECEMBER

YOUR family should complete the required financial aid application forms this month, for mailing on (but not before) January 1, 1985. To avoid delay or rejection, be sure you sign the form and provide your social security number and correct income information.

If you are applying for special tuition assistance from your state, be sure you know the deadline for application.

Complete your essays. They should be typed, and be clean, neat, attractive, interesting, easy to read, and complete. Be sure to keep copies.

Submit college application forms early. Give your counselor, principal, or designated office sufficient time to complete the "Secondary School Report" section of the application.

December 15: This is the usual deadline to apply to some selective colleges. Others have deadlines in February or later. Be sure you apply on time to colleges you have selected. ■

JANUARY

JANUARY 1: Mail your financial aid application forms today. Some states have special tuition assistance plans whose deadlines vary. Inquire from state education agencies. For more information, see Meeting College Costs and/or The College Cost Book. ■

FEBRUARY

MEN who are 18 years old or over must prove draft registration in order to receive federal financial aid. Inquire at the local post office. ■

MARCH

IF you are applying to more than one college, rank your preferences by location, academic program, social and cultural environment, opinions of parents and friends, costs, and other criteria. Do your totals match your general feeling?

Analyze how you can take full advantage of the resources of colleges to which you have applied. What steps can you take now and in the near future to prepare yourself better to take full advantage of these resources? Seek out college alumni and students for tips. ■

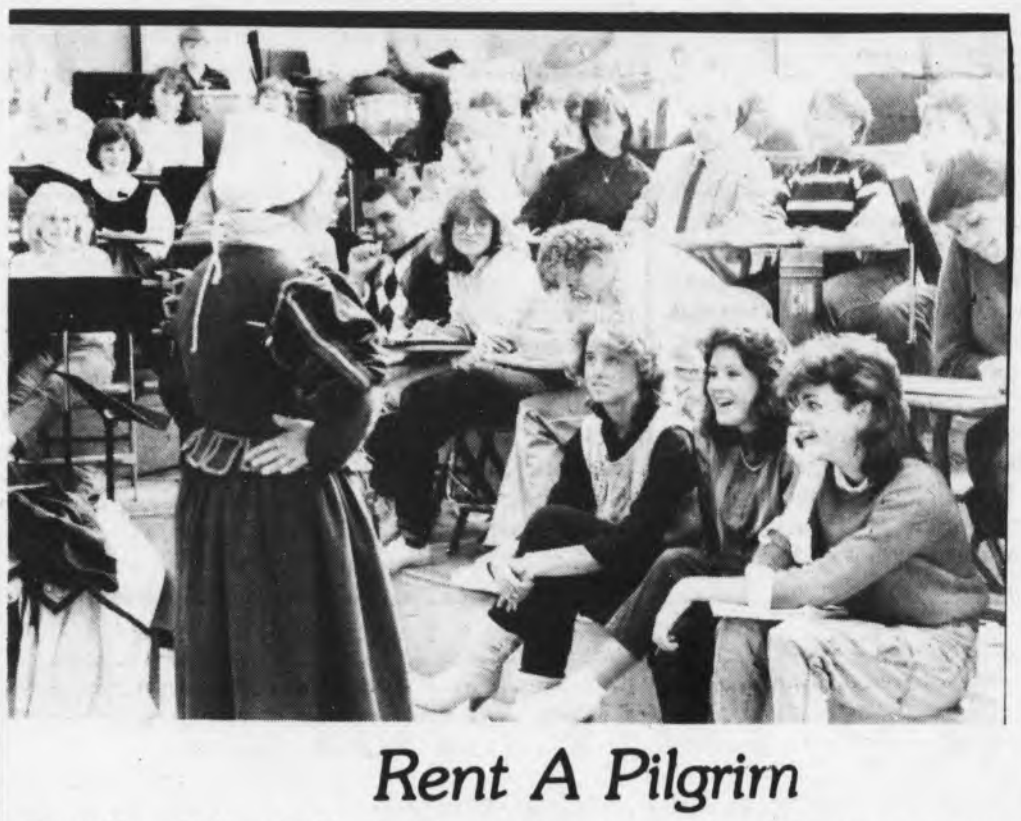
APRIL

APPLICATION deadlines for many colleges occur in April.

Most selective colleges start to announce their decisions this month. If you are accepted at more than one college, you must decide which one is best for you. Talk it over with your parents, counselor, and others.

If a college has requested a nonrefundable deposit before you have heard from other colleges, ask your counselor for advice. ■

MAY



MAY 1: Today you must announce your decision about which college to accept, in keeping with the Candidates Reply Date Agreement. Be fair to all of the colleges that have accepted you, and to students who have been placed on a waiting list. Notify the colleges and your college advisor of your decision.

If you are "wait-listed" by a college and intend to enroll if accepted, call, visit, or write to the director of admissions to state your intention and to ask how you might strengthen your application. Recent evidence of notable academic or other achievements may help. ■

JUNE

RESPOND promptly to all requests from the college you have selected.

During the summer, plan to read widely and review mathematics. You also may need to work to help finance your college education. ■

Rent A Pilgrim

Two of her children died before the age of eight; the authorities took away one child before she spoiled it with too much love; she must work six hours in order to grind enough flour to make four loaves of bread. Such were some of the harsh realities that Mistress Elizabeth Hopkins revealed to the 10th grade American Studies classes on Wednesday, October 3. Troy Creane, a guest lecturer from Plimoth Plantation, delivered a presentation dealing with the unglamorous facts of survival faced by the pilgrims. Because budgetary limitations prevented a scheduled field trip in which students were to interview Pilgrim craftspeople, arrangements were made to bring part of the experience to Cohasset.

Dressed in the period costume and speaking the 17th century dialect, Ms. Creane assumed the role of the twice-married woman who lived at the crossroads in Plimoth Plantation in 1627. Included in the presentation were a discussion of a typical day in the life of a young child, a revelation that baths are unhealthy and should be avoided, an explanation of the foods available to the colonists, and many other aspects of life in the early colony. Artifacts such as dinnerware, salted fish, and a smoked pig's foot were passed around for the audience's "enjoyment." Chuck Henry, Phil Mahoney, and Erin Picton-Quinn volunteered to model the heavy woolen clothing of the era.

The presentation was intended to supplement the study of colonial American history and literature in the 10th grade team-taught program. As a follow up, students researched skills necessary in early America and demonstrated such activities as candlemaking, soapmaking, and food preserving for their classmates.

Ch- Ch- Ch- Changes...!

By Robert Corkery

The autumnal equinox has brought the inevitable. Students are back in schools, athletes are out on the playing field, and trees are in the midst of changing colors. At schools everywhere across the nation, former underclassmen return to their school unchanged from the previous year.

Such a thing isn't true at Cohasset High School. There have been some changes. The minute ones, you may miss. For example, did you notice the new study hall paint job or the boy's and girl's rooms' interiors, or even the exterior in the courtyard?

There is one alteration that we all will be affected by. The subtle, yet important modification is the new student council. Yes, your student council has changed and it wasn't just the change of faces. No, it goes deeper than that.

President of the Student Council Joanie Chisholm has instigated a new wave of ethics for the school's representatives. Under Joanie's leadership, the council has set many goals and strives to reach them.

The most important goal, of course, is to support student class activities with funding to accomplish this feat. There are a number of methods of fundraising. One of the most frequently used methods is holding dances. This is often a make-it-or-break-it attempt because students can either lose alot of money, or make it big. For the Homecoming Dance, the student council will be selling flowers. With many creative minds, our school should be financially sound in the future.

The crux of any Homecoming is school spirit. In an attempt to arouse this spirit, Joanie has proposed a "spirit week." It entailed specialty days. The specialty days were: Wednesday — Beach Day; Thursday — Clash Day, and Friday — Blue and White Day. A pep rally Friday marked the climax of "Spirit Week." Homecoming was a great success and due in part to the efforts of your student council.

Advisors review Monday's warrant articles

approves the contract, will be eligible to join with the SEMASS project. If Cape Cod towns agree to join SEMASS, Cohasset will be downgraded to a waiting list. DeMichele said SEMASS projections for each town have been estimated high, and therefore there is a good chance that Cohasset would not be forced on a waiting list for long.

What Cohasset is aiming for is acceptance into the first or second bracket of the SEMASS tipping fees. According to DeMichele, the town would then pay SEMASS $12 a ton to haul the waste to the Rochester facility. At an annual tonnage rate of 4000, Cohasset would be paying SEMASS $50,000 for the first year of the contract. If Cohasset is accepted into the second level of tipping fees, it will cost us $15 per ton of waste hauled to the site, or $60,000 for the first year. Each year after that, the cost is reduced for the town as energy is reproduced from the disposed waste and revenue is generated. By the fourth year of the contract, in essence the town will not be paying for the SEMASS service as higher waste-to-energy revenue is produced.

This plan is a direct alternative to the continuation of a solid waste landfill in town. Engineering projections estimate the dump will be filled by 1995. The disposal committee has determined that the cost of finding and funding a new landfill will far exceed the initial cost of joining SEMASS.

Another article which could draw crowds and some controversy to Town Meeting next week is a request for $30,000 to cover current and future Sewer Commission legal expenses. In its fight to bring an alternative wastewater treatment plant to Cohasset, the commissioners have engaged the services of special town counsel, the Boston firm of Goodwin, Proctor and Hoar.

The state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) recently outlined several objections to the town's proposed innovative plan, and has repeatedly stated its refusal to approve funding for a majority of the proposed system. The town has appealed that state ruling to the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), and the legal costs have spiraled. The advisory committee has recommended the town appropriate the requested finances, "to allow the town to go forward on the plan it approved at the last special town meeting," Advisory Committee Chairman Jacqueline Dormitzer stated.

Advisors have recommended all the appropriation requests in this warrant, she added. And, as Dormitzer explained, although these items are not of an emergency nature, they would likely appear as budget transfer requests later this year if a special town meeting had not been scheduled. Among the issues to be decided Monday night are: $5531 to pay some fiscal 1984 bills; and $2000 to hire a chemist to supervise a second Household Hazardous Waste Disposal Day. The first event, held in September, was so successful that it was decided a second should be scheduled so the remaining hazardous wastes will not be disposed in the town's landfill. Advisors expect that a designated day will be scheduled annually.

The advisory committee also recommended that town meeting approve $1965 for a computer terminal and software for the Town Clerk's office, and $3739 to renovate portions of that office, selectmen's office, and the treasurer-collector's office. Although plans to renovate the Town Hall are being studied, the advisors felt that improvements should be made within the year, so that the present functions of these offices will be streamlined. Any recommendations suggested by the Town Hall Study Committee will not be completed in the near future, advisors estimated, and some minimal form of renovations is an immediate need in these offices.

The advisory committee slimmed down a request by the planning board for $25,000 in engineering fees. The board and the advisors agreed with a compromise figure of $15,000 to expend on its engineering needs.

Fire Chief Martin Dooley is requesting $4080 in legal fees he expended when the Board of Selectmen conducted an investigative hearing against him in Nov, 1983. The hearing resulted in no action against the chief, and he is now requesting the town pay the costs of his counsel. The advisory committee has stated the town has a moral obligation to pay the expenses.

Town meeting begins at 7:30 p.m. in the high school auditorium.

Road to recovery

When one hears the word cancer, they tend to back-off in hesitation. This disease has an effect on all our lives. No matter what age, sex, income, or nationality, cancer has an effect on all of us.

An estimated 23,000 Massachusetts residents will learn that they have cancer this year. For many of these individuals and families affected by this disease there is treatment. "For many cancer patients there is a cure, but getting to it is a problem." says Carolyn Housman, South Shore Service Chairperson of the American Cancer Society.

For patients are treated with radiation therapy, chemotherapy or a combination of the two. Those who have cars often can not drive themselves home after therapy because of fatigue. Family driving can not always continue for daily treatments over a year's time.

Afflicted cancer patients need the help of the Road to Recovery Program, sponsored by the American Cancer Society. The Road to Recovery Program needs volunteers with just one free morning or an afternoon a month to help others on their road.

The schedules are flexible and the society can provide some compensation for driving expenses.

The telephone number to contact the Road to Recovery Program is 583-8515.

School board votes for repairs

Town meeting postponed to Wednesday night

By Jane Lane

Town meeting couldn't round up a quorum Monday night. Although 189 persons bundled up against the cold and completed the journey to the high school, it was 11 shy of the magic number.

The special town meeting was postponed until Wednesday, November 21 at 7:30 p.m.

Prior to the scheduled start of town meeting this week, the school committee met briefly to discuss Article seven of the warrant. Tha article requests an appropriation of $225,000 to complete repairs to the high school roof.

Although the issue has been debated to and fro for many months, the committee had not formally voted to recommend the appropriation.

And, despite strong arguments from her fellow members, committee member Martha Gjesteby was once again the sole dissenter on that board. The committee voted four to one, to recommend completion of all repairs to the roof.

Gjesteby maintained to the membership that she had not been informed, in writing, that the state Department of Education had indeed approved fifty percent reimbursement of the previous $551,000 roofing appropriation. A letter was submitted to Supt. Crowell from the state School Buildings Assistance Bureau, outlining the state's approval of the fifty percent funding. A formal vote of approval will be completed at the state Board of Education meeting next Wednesday.

"We don't need to beg the town (to approve the appropriations request). It is purely the most cost-efficient way to go."

And although Gjesteby said she had not understood how it was to be accomplished, school administrators would like to see the town apply for additional state funds. Crowell explained to Gjesteby that if town meeting approved the $225,000 to complete all repairs to the high school roof, he would prepare an application to the state by January. The application would serve as an addendum to the original request, although it would have to be studied and reviewed separately from the previously-approved funding request.

Gjesteby said she had wanted to see a firm confirmation of the funding request, but had been unable to do so. She was upset to see Dr. Crowell had such a letter, without informing her.

Other committee members argued that Dr. Crowell has continually provided school committee members with an update on the state's reaction to Cohasset's funding application. All along, they added, he has been cautiously optimistic of Cohasset's chances to receive the fifty percent reimbursement for the roof project.

But based on her continual concern for town finances, Gjestbey said she could only support an alternative option to repair a portion of the high school roof at a total estimated cost of $45,000.

Member John Langmaid argued that it wasn't the school committee's responsibility to determine the financial status of the town, nor its ability to appropriate such a sum. Those determinations are made by the "town meeting voters and the advisory committee," he said.

The advisory committee decided last week that, despite confirmation of fifty percent state funding for the previous roofing work, they could only recommend a $45,000 appropriation to finish a portion of the high school roof.

The brief meeting prior to town meeting also served

Schools initiate 'Safety with Strangers' program

In light of the daily reports of kidnappings and savage murders, it is perhaps more appropriate than ever that our schools become involved in a community effort to avoid such a tragedy.

Beginning next week, the schools will be incorporating a special "Safety with Strangers" program into the Health Education Curriculum. Each elementary grade teacher will have the program materials available, and will individually determine when the series will begin in that classroom.

The program was introduced to the community this past summer through the Recreation Department. Ted Carroll, a playground staff member, coordinated the program which was conducted by the Cohasset Schools-Health Education Coordinator Michael Gill.

The entire program, produced by the Adam Walsh Child Resource Center, is designed to increase the childrens' awareness and ability in determining who is a "stranger."

The Cohasset program will be geared for children ages four through 12.

(The following was written by Ted Carroll of the Recreation Dept.)

'Safety with Strangers'

As children our parents told us never to talk to strangers. But, for some reason this is not working today. Everyday you hear and read stories about sexual molestation and abduction cases throughout the country.

An estimated one in every four girls and one in every seven boys will be molested before reaching eighteen. It is also estimated that 50,000 children never make it home every year. Either abducted walking to school or even playing in the front yard, there seems to be no safe places for children anymore. Unless parents want to be in their child's shadow until they become adults, the only way to protect these children is to teach them about all the possible dangers.

In doing research on missing children last spring, I discovered the best child safety program available. The program is called 'Safety with Strangers' it is an exceptional slide show used throughout the country. It was produced by the Adam Walsh Child Resource Center, a well known missing children's agency in the U.S., and the basis for the nationally acclaimed movie "Adam".

In conjunction with the health education curriculum, this program will be available for the teachers' use as of Nov. 26. The teachers will separately announce to the parents when they will be conducting the program in their classroom.

Sitko to accept selectmen's offer

Gerald Sitko, Assistant Town Manager of Glastonbury, Conn. will likely accept a contract offer from selectmen and become Cohasset's third Executive Secretary.

Selectmen voted last week to offer the position to Sitko. He and Chairman Clifford Mitman talked this week to settle some contract issues. Although nothing had been settled as of mid-week, Sitko expected to have "everything ironed out very soon."

Sitko had not yet received a draft of the proposed contract, but expected to receive it by the end of the week. In the letter sent to him by selectmen last week, an annual salary of $25,000 was specified for a two-year contract.

Once all contract issues are resolved, Sitko said he expects to give his present Connecticut employer 30 days notice before he vacates his position. In the meantime, Sitko said, he will be "dropping by Cohasset from time to time to familiarize myself with the people and places of the town."

The 33 year-old Manchester, Conn. resident was selected from a field of 38 applicants. The position was vacated in September when Mark Lanza accepted a higher-paying post as Executive Secretary in Westwood.

In a telephone interview this week, Sitko said he applied for the Cohasset position "because I like the size of the community. I am relatively familiar with the South Shore, having traveled through there. I know Cohasset is a very attractive town.

"And career-wise, I thought this would be a good opportunity for me." Sitko said the move to the Cohasset area would also provide his wife, who is an editor and freelance writer, an opportunity to test the market in Boston.

Although he could not say decisively if they would be moving within the community, Sitko said he and his wife will be looking for a residence in the vacinity.

Prior to his present position in Glastonbury, a city with a 25,000 population, Sitko was City Administrator in Delaware City, Del. That community has 3000 residents, he explained.

He has a Bachelor of Arts from the University of Delaware, and a Master's degree from the University of Akron in Ohio.

When he applied for the Cohasset position, he talked with several persons acquainted with the area. "Everyone I talked with, said Cohasset is a well-respected town. Everyone had a good word to say about the community."

Although he will miss Connecticut, having worked there for the past six years, Sitko noted, "I felt this was the best move to make right now. I'm really satisified that I made the right choice."

Plans dissolve for car dealership

By Jane Lane

Plans to locate a car dealership near the corner of Sohier and King Street have been dissolved.

Although the attorney representing the proposed developers emphasized that the plans were not withdrawn from the Conservation Commission's review, they would not be submitting revised engineering plans as previously requested.

In a meeting Tuesday night, the commission denied the plans to construct the dealership within floodplain land, based on the plans previously submitted by the developers.

Atty. Michael Sullivan said his clients, Sam and Joseph Abba-Ezzi, have repeatedly emphasized they would not locate in an area "where they are not welcomed."

It had become apparent since the proposal was submitted to the Conservation Commission last month, that there would be strong arguments against locating a car dealership there. Fair Oaks Lane residents formed a homeowners association. They circulated a petition at the polls two weeks ago and gathered seven hundred signatures.

The petition asked the town to expand the boundaries of the watershed protection district to include 400 feet northerly on Sohier Street. This boundary would include the proposed car dealership, and the shopping plaza proposed by Donald Staszko across the street.

Sohier Street resident Jane Cook hired a team of attorneys and engineers to battle the two developments proposed near her residence.

At Tuesday night's meeting, engineer Pamela Kohlberg Vinal of Loring Jacobs Co., representing Mrs. Cook, stated their objections to the engineering plans

Officers Elected

The Cohasset Historical Society recently held its Annual Meeting for the year 1984. The following Officers and Directors were elected for the forthcoming year: President, Constance W. Parker; 1st Vice President, Osborne Ingram; 2nd Vice President, Noel Ripley; Secretary, Connie Wilson; Treasurer, Robert B. James; and the Board of Directors consisting of: John Campbell, David Chittem, Jane Cook, Conrad Ericsson, Drexel Gibson, Tinka McLean, John Mullett, Arthur Nilsson, Bertram Pratt, Raymond Remick, Joyce Sturdy, Edward Tower, Arnold Weeks and Fred Wood.

Additionally, the following were elected to be Honorary Directors: Betsy Hoopes, Linda Hewitt and James Patterson. The Society's Senior Curator is David H. Wadsworth.

At the Society's recent meeting a guest speaker from the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, David Hebert, presented an illustrated program describing the construction of and history of the Cape Cod Canal.

Included were slides made from numerous old photographs of the canal, taken in the early years of the century and showing the building of the canal. The canal's construction was a major engineering triumph for its time. At the Society's meeting a catered dinner provided by Cohasset's Strawberry Parfait was enjoyed by more than 100 members and guests.

Education discussion

Representative Mary Janette Murray, School Superintendent Eugene Crowel and State League Representative Mary Ann Hartenburg will participate in a panel discussion Nov. 29 on omnibus education bill HB 5704.

This bill is a long range plan for education reform and covers issues such as mandatory school attendance from age five, upgrading teacher certification, bi-annual teacher evaluation, minimum salary of $18,000 a year.

The forum sponsored by the Cohasset League of Women Voters will be held Nov. 29 at 9:15 a.m. at the Unitarian Parish House, 23 North Main St., Cohasset.

Coffee will be served from 9 to 9:15 a.m. Babysitting is available for a charge of two dollars per child. Please call 383-6017 for babysitting reservations.

Speakers panel

"How Parents Can Help Their Learning Disabled Child" will be the topic of a panel of speakers sponsored by the Special Needs Advisory Council of Scituate Wednesday, Nov. 28.

The focus will be on ways to help students with visual, emotional and listening difficulties.

Toni Jillson, Cohasset learning specialist, will focus on listening skills; Indra Mohindra, an optometrist practicing in Boston and Scituate, will address visual disorders; and Dr. Laurie Lax, a neuro-psychologist of Coastal Community Counseling Center will focus on the emotional aspects of learning disabilities.

The meeting will be at 7:30 p.m., Wednesday, Nov. 28 at the Scituate High School Library.

All night parking ban

According to Police Chief Joseph Kealey, it shall be unlawful for the driver of any vehicle to park on any street in the Town of Cohasset for a period of time longer than one (1) hour between the hours of 2 a.m. and 6 a.m. of any day, beginning November 15 and ending March 15, inclusive.

Variance denied

The Zoning Board of Appeals last week denied a request by Edward F. Goff Jr. to construct a third apartment in a home located at 87-89 Cushing Road.

Goff had filed for a special permit to convert a second and third floor apartment from one, six-bedroom apartment to two, two-bedroom apartments. Goff submitted his plans to the appeals board July 10.

According to the plans submitted to the board, Goff proposed the second floor include a kitchen, living room, bath, pantry and two bedrooms. A third apartment would be constructed using the northeasterly corner to the second floor for a living room and the entire thrid floor containing the kitchen, bath and two bedrooms.

The applicant requested relief in the form of a special permit in order to create the third apartment unit in the existing structure, as well as a variance from the lot size requirements.

The site plan, according to the appeals board, showed three parking areas to be utilized to service the building. Two of the areas did not meet the zoning bylaw requirements, because the parking spaces would require vehicles to back onto Oak Street. The appeals board did not approve of the parking proposal, stating "the proposed ingress and egress will (not) be reasonably safe and convenient."

The plan also lacks evidence, according to the board's decision, that the proposed third apartment and attendant parking is compatible with adjacent properties.

Other reasons for denying the proposal included: the attempt to create three apartments in a building situated on a lot of only 10,748 feet is not harmonious with the other properties in the immediate neighborhood. The board stated "when the applicant purchased the building it had two apartment units and it is the applicant who has created the condition of a third apartment, thus necessitating a variance. Any hardship is a result of the applicant's attempt to construct a third apartment."

The second condition for denying the permit was that the conditions and circumstances are not unique to the applicant's lot; and that strict application of the provisions of this bylaw would not deprive the applicant of a reasonable use of the lot in the same manner permitted by other owners in the same neighborhood and district.

Once upon a time, not so far away, a brave Copper King built an enchanted kingdom in a land by the sea.

There in Scituate, he surrounded his mansion with idyllic pastures and formal gardens. Then built a fairy tale tower to watch over his dream.

Some said he was eccentric. Others said he was vain. But in truth, the legendary millionaire, Thomas Lawson, was building a beautiful haven as a gift for his beloved family. And in 1903, Dreamwold came true.

Now it's coming true again. All the majesty, privacy and splendor that was Dreamwold. In twenty-six unique Victorian condominium residences encircling a spectacular rose garden and beautiful swimming pool.

School board approves warrant request

as a strategy session for the committee. Supt. Crowell outlined the numerous concerns people in the community have voiced to him about the roof repair request.

Number one concern was the lack of state approval to fund the fifty percent appropriations cost of repairs currently being completed. But since that approval has been confirmed in writing, and the state Board will meet next week to formalize it, the town will now be aware of the state's plans to fund the project, he explained.

Another concern from the community was that the secondary portion of the repairs would not be sent out to bid. Supt. Crowell assured the committee that if the total remaining repair package was appropriated, the bid for $180,000 of those repairs would be sent out to bid. The remaining $45,000 has been guaranteed by Titan Roofing, the current on-site contractor, as a low bid to complete three sectionsof the high school roof.

Crowell also noted it is the town's choice to determine whether the roofs are too new to replace. But as he has repeatedly told the committee, sections of the high school roof over a foyer and the Sullivan gym, which are only 17 years old, are leaking now. Delays in the repairs will only result in possible property damage, higher repair costs, and a likelihood of losing the opportunity to receive state reimbursement.

As he noted to the committee, if Cohasset delays approving the roof appropriations, the application for state funds will be delayed "and Cohasset will be one of 57 towns applying for the same state money." The superintendent explained that approval of Cohasset's previous funding request hinged on the ability to complete and submit lengthy application forms before other municipalities.

As committee member Diana Kornet explained, "we do not need to beg the town (to approve the appropriation request). It is purely the most cost-efficient way to go. If we put off (the repairs), very likely we're going to have some serious problems. There's going to be a serious cost inflation and the chances are the state would not pay for any of it."

Chamber request less parking

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce has requested that the town consider reducing the size and number of parking spaces allowed in new commercial developments.

Dan Leahy of the Chamber met with members of the Zoning Bylaw Study Committee to discuss the problem. The Chamber is concerned with the large number of parking spaces required by the town for new developments. Leahy claimed the ordinance is out of line, requiring an excess of unnessary pavement.

Leahy proposed that a mimimum of seven spaces per 1000 square feet of development should be substituted for the present regulation. Currently, a developer must provide 10 spaces per 1000 square feet of floor space proposed for construction. Leahy also proposed that for a new development, five and a half of the parking spaces be constructed immediately, allowing the builder room for additional expansion in the parking lot for future use.

Homeowners grateful for commission denial submitted by the Abba-Ezzi's to the commission. "The project design is not in compliance with the Watershed Protection Act regulations or Title Five. There is insufficient information provided to fully evaluate the impact of the project on statutory interests." She also stated the plan would have an adverse impact on Cook's property and on the Watershed Protection Act.

Atty. Sullivan stated that the Abba-Ezzi's are now looking for suitable land on which to locate a car dealership. Although they would prefer to limit their search to Cohasset, Atty. Sullivan admitted, "there's not much land left here or in Scituate." He also noted that the developers remain interested in residing in Cohasset.

Although it had been originally suggested that the developers locate in the vacant Ford dealership building on Route 3A, Atty. Sullivan stated Tuesday night, "they want too much money for that."

In the meantime, Fair Oaks residents who jammed the conservation meeting, were pleased with the decision. The Fair Oaks Homeowners Association had hired Attorney Christopher Sullivan to represent their case against the proposed development.

Resident John Bishop stated the residents are not opposed to future development on that property, but objected to the type of operation proposed there. He said the association would "assist any developer with our comments and feelings" regarding any future plans for the land.

The 42 homeowners would assist any developer proposing a "plan which would have a positive influence on the town of Cohasset."

The Conservation Commission denied the notice of intent to construct the dealership, based on the incomplete engineering plans. But the commission will further detail its objections in a written denial within 21 days. Among the most severe criticisms of the plan, was that it did not adequately demonstrate how 5000 square feet of wetlands, which was proposed to be filled, would be replaced elsewhere on the property. The retension of high water quality must be assured by a proper replacement of the wetlands, members argued.

John Modzelewski, representing the commission, warned the members not to repeat an approval granted a similar plan by developer Staszko. That commission's approval is being appealed by the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE). It's best not to repeat such an act while a similar case is being appealed, he stated.

After the meeting, Atty. Sullivan, representing the Abba-Ezzi's, said the only type of business which could legally locate on that property would have to contain a much smaller building, with fewer parking spaces than proposed by his clients. Although the car dealership facility had been decreased since its original design, commission members still felt too much wetlands was scheduled for filling.

Figueiredo to abolish property plans

Although arguments pro and con seemed to become confused at times, at the conclusion of Tuesday night's Conservation Commission hearing, Parker Avenue resident William Figueiredo said he will abolish plans to fill his property.

When told the commission would need more detailed engineering plans of his plans, Figueiredo first argued he would not comply, and later said he would. Finally, in exasperation after learning he would have to also apply for approval from the Zoning Board of Appeals, he told the commission, "if you deny this plan, you'll hear from my attorneys. I'll just put up a fence and that's it."

The issue began several weeks ago when Figueiredo was offered five truck loads of crushed asphalt and gravel from Geneva Construction Co. The Parker Avenue resident said he could use the gravel to fill in potholes in front of his property, a situation caused by cars using the road to the town boating ramp.

When contacted by Figueiredo, the commission okayed the deposit of the gravel onto his property. A stipulation was added to the approval, maintaining that Figueiredo must appear before the commission with full details on how he would resurface the potholes. Figueiredo agreed.

But when he came before the commission a few

True Value Moore PAINTS

He's a worldwide traveler

By Lisa J. Messersmith

Andrew Temple Ross, a sixth grader at Deer Hill Elementary School, has traveled to more places in Europe in his eleven years than most adults travel in a lifetime.

Until the age of eight, Andrew lived a fairly average life in Longmeadow, Massachusetts. When Andrew was in the third grade, his family was transferred to England where they lived in Esther, and his father worked for a paper company in London.

Two years later, his family was transferred again to Waterloo, Belgium where they lived for one year before returning to the United States.

During his travels in Europe, Andrew was exposed to cultures different than that of his native land, but Andrew found many similarities between the separate continents.

In England, Andrew studied many of the same subjects he does now at Deer Hill, including math, English, social studies, and history. Yet instead of studying presidents, Andrew read about the kings and queens of England. He also took French and was introduced to Latin, a language he is not required to take here in the United States. His first and best year in England, Andrew studied Greek mythology, a subject in which he is quite interested.

The Danes Hill School where Andrew spent much of his time is, by U.S. standards, a private school. He said that this school was by far the most difficult school he had ever attended: "They really expected a lot out of you," he says. The exams he took consisted of a "whole term's worth" of material. "You had to look over the whole book and all the notes you took during the year," he added, explaining the requirements to pass the exam.

Andrew felt that one difference between American and English schools was that English schools emphasized sports more than American schools. During the spring and summer, Andrew played cricket, his favorite sport.

In the fall, students play soccer, what the English call football, while in the winter they play rugby. Andrew still plays soccer in the U.S., although he still prefers cricket.

Andrew did not spend all of his time studying and participating in sports, he often traveled with his parents and six-year-old sister throughout the English countryside. On one special trip, Andrew and his family traveled for two weeks on what the English call a "narrow boat." It was labeled such because it was able to pass through all the locks in the various canals. During this trip, they traveled through a total of 132 locks in western England.

After two years in England, Andrew's family moved to Waterloo, Belgium where Andrew attended an international school with students from all over the world. Although Andrew enjoyed England, he "liked Belgium the most."

One person who was particularly special to him was a teacher named Mr. Peters, an Englishman who taught language arts and social studies. Andrew described him as "funny" and even interesting.

At the international school there were "more American sports," according to Andrew. There, he participated in baseball and basketball under the guidance of his father, the coach.

Living in Belguim was also an opportunity to test his language skills. Yet, he said, "I could not converse with people because I only had one year of conversational French."

Andrew Temple Ross

While living in Belgium, Andrew had many opportunities to travel. In the fifth grade, Andrew joined his classmates on a ski trip to Switzerland. "That was the best time I had," he said. Andrew also took several trips to Amsterdam and Paris where he visited his favorite places, the Eiffel Tower and the Louvre.

Andrew did not have to travel far from Waterloo to see many beautiful sites. "The countryside," he said, "was very pretty." While on visits to the capital of Belgium, Brussels, Andrew was struck by the medieval architecture of the Grande Place which is a market place with several shops and "the oldest cookie shop in Belgium."

Andrew feels that on the whole Europe is "a lot more open to different ways of life." The schools, he added, "concentrate more on language" than American schools, but the kids are not that different. While in England and Belgium, Andrew made many friends — English, Dutch, French — to whom he still writes.

The experience Andrew had in Europe seems to have been a positive one. In fact, Andrew vowed he would return to Europe in the future, possibly when he is in high school or college.

'Safety with Strangers' . . .

As parents, I strongly urge you to talk to your children before and after the program. With the Christmas season upon us, malls will be crowded, so discuss what your child should do if you become separated. Included in this packet is a set of safety rules for you and your children. Please go through them and answer any questions your children have.

We don't want to frighten the children, we just want to educate them. With our combined efforts, we could eliminate the terror of child abduction.

Safety with Strangers

(This was written by the Adam Walsh Child Resource Center.)

How safe are our children when they go out to play, walk to the store or engage in any of the other away-from-home activities that have always been a normal part of growing up in America? Today's answer, unfortunately, must be : not safe enough.

Not safe enough to do without their parent's help, even though no parent can-or should-stand guard over a child constantly. When the parent is absent and the child is temporarily on his or her own, what sort of protection is available?

The answer is "knowledge", simple principles of safety that the child can remember and make use of in potentially dangerous situations. It is this kind of knowledge that the Adam Walsh Center's safety with strangers program is designed to give among young children.

Safety with Strangers, which is presented to classrooms of 20 to 25 children, requires about an hour of time and is best suited to children in grades K through 3.

The program holds special appeal for children because it makes use of role-playing in conjunction with a set of slides with sound track. By acting out a response to a stranger's approach, the child develops a feel for the reality of the situation and so is better equipped to deal with it should it actually occur. Situations depicted in the slides are based on actual enticement techniques that have been used by convicted child molesters.

Recreation's Summer Program

(This explanation of the program was written by John Worley, Recreation Director. Ed.)

During the summer playground-1984, the Cohasset Recreation Department presented the Adam Walsh Center safety with strangers program to over 200 children and parents involved in the summer program.

Ted Carroll, playground staff member organized the program, and Mike Gill of the school department health program conducted the sessions designed to teach children awareness of potentially-dangerous situations related to abduction and identification of who a "Stranger" may be.

The purpose of the program was to educate children, generally aged 4-12, to various situations that could pose a threat to their safety and well-being. The program offered children a series of situations which were presented by slides and expanded upon by acting out roles by both children and staff members. A variety of situations were shown and developed in order to show the children that a number and wide variety of situations could be considered as potentially harmful.

By design, the program did not depict what could happen to a child, rather, it only presented situations to the child that he could interpret as a threat not unlike fire drills where children practice evacuating a building rather than learn what might happen to them if they don't. The Adam Walsh program teaches children how to counter specific situations that could prove harmful to them.

Identification and awareness of situations was the primary interest of the program — what to do about the various situations was expanded upon via role playing.

School support of program

The Cohasset Recreation Department presented the Adam Walsh Safety with Strangers program to over two hundred children participating in the 1984 summer playground program at the Joseph Osgood School.

Ted Carroll, a playground staff member and a 1984 Cohasset High School graduate, researched the subject and organized the program. Michael Gill, Cohasset Public School's Health Education Coordinator conducted the sessions designed to increase the children's awareness and ability in determining who is a "stranger". Most children are taught at a very early age that they shouldn't "talk to" or "take candy" from strangers. However, they are often not taught how to determine who is a "stranger."

The program is geared for children ages four through 12. It uses a combination of slide presentation and role-playing techniques designed to minimize the risks associated with abduction by strangers. Although the slides used in the program depict real situations they are presented in a positive, non-frightening manner, and the program has been determined to be psychologically non-damaging to children.

Gill states that the Adam Walsh Program which Ted Carroll introduced to him, will be a valuable addition to the safety awareness segment on the on-going health education program in the Cohasset Public Schools.

The Parent School Organization supports the Safety With Strangers program planned for the Osgood School by the Cohasset Recreation Department. The program deals with making our children safe in the presence of strangers. The PSO's current photo I.D. program which provides students with a laminated identification card should help to increase student safety.

Club Mediterranee opened its first "vacation village" in 1950. It offered a unique and relaxing "antidote to civilization." It freed its guests from daily distactions such as clocks, radios, television, newspapers and telephones. The initial 2,500 vacationeers slept in army surplus tents, helped prepare their own food and washed their own dishes. Since then, Club Med has enjoyed remarkable growth. Last year, it boasted 92 resorts in 26 countries. While the luxurious Club Med resorts of today bear little resemblance to the rustic environment of the original clubs, the fundamental philosophy has changed very little. Each Club Med village offers an all-inclusive vacation package including expert, free instruction in many activities.

New hair salon

A new hair salon, Hernán Salon, has opened in Cohasset Village at 41A South Main St., at the former location of Cohasset Clippers. The salon is owned and managed by Hernán Rodriquez, a long-time resident of the South Shore.

Hernán has been creating hair styles at Cohasset Clippers since 1979 and also at Giacomo Salon in Boston for the past ten years. He has had the opportunity to work with some of Boston's most innovative hairdressers, as well as attend many shows to help keep abreast of the latest fashions in hair design. Now devoting his creative energy and expertise full time to the South Shore, Hernán has opened his own salon.

Hernán Salon offers complete hair styling services for men, women, and children, and prides itself in taking the time to give individual attention and care to each client. For appointments call 383-1490.

Santa to arrive

Cohasset's businesses are decked with white lights and balloons. Merchants will have home baked cookies and warm cider. All set for noon Sunday, Dec. 9.

Santa and his elves will land their helicopter at Cushing Plaza and pose for photographs with Cohasset youngsters. Saint Nick and his helpers will journey to Tedeschi Shopping Center at 2:30 p.m.

By 3:30 p.m. they will ride into the Village on Becky, the camel. Horse and carriage rides, camel rides, carol singing, a Christmas Carillon concert and more will make Cohasset Common come alive with the spirit of the season.

Come and join the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce on this joyous occasion.

For more information on "White Christmas in Cohasset" or the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce, contact John Hagerty at 383-0110.

Christmas concert

The sixth annual First Parish Christmas Concert by the Broad Cove Chorale and Unicorn Singers under the direction of Margo Euler will be held in the First Parish Meeting House Sunday afternoon, Dec. 16 at 4 p.m.

The program will feature "Saint Nicholas" by Benjamin Britten. After five years, this event has become an important part of the communal celebration of Christmas, providing an enjoyable afternoon of music in the historic Meeting House and generating nearly $10,000 in gifts to UNICEF and DOVE.

The proceeds from the concert this year will again help the DOVE shelter for battered women in Quincy. DOVE's activities are much needed, even in Cohasset.

An opportunity is being offered to become a patron of this year's concert. Your gift of $25 or more will not only help ease the fear, pain and heartache of some of your neighbors, but it will also bring you by return mail two tickets to the concert.

Tickets at $3 will go on sale to the public beginning with Thanksgiving Sunday, Nov. 25. Seating is limited.

Cohasset Chess Club news

Arne Gjesteby of Old Pasture Road leads the Cohasset Chess Club in games won, holding a half point lead over his nearest rival, Ed Cox of Beechwood Street.

Gjesteby easily won against Cox last week and then lost a second match to Dee DeSantis. DeSantis pulled into fourth place in the standings, with two wins last week.

Standings are: Gjesteby, Cox, Tanna Kasperowicz, DeSantis, Gina Halloren, Chuck Halloren and Ginny DeBassio. Several other members of the club have not yet played for standing.

Chess club meets the second and fourth Tuesdays of the month at members' homes. New members and/or occasional players welcome. Call 383-911 for more information.

Booster Club meeting

The Cohasset Boosters Club will have their December meeting at the home of Roella Hobbs, 31 Elm Street, 383-1723 on Dec. 9 at 7:15 p.m.

☐ How many trivia enthusiasts from Greater Boston gathered Nov. 18 at Boston's Westin Hotel to raise money for the Massachusetts Easter Seal Society?

More than 160! The Trivial Pursuit Challenge for Easter Seals, sponsored by Selchow & Righter Company, the board game's U.S. manufacturer, is part of a nationwide effort to raise $1 million to benefit Easter Seal services for children and adults with disabilities.

Among the sponsoring corporations included are James Ferrera and Sons, Canton; Braintree Veterans' Taxi, Analog Devices, Norwood; and Adage, Inc., managed by Ed Raws of Scituate. Other teams, including one managed by David O'Connor of Weymouth attended to compete.

☐ Residential Mortgage Consultant John E. Brennan of Scituate has joined Northern Mortgage's Brockton office.

Brennan is a graduate of Massasoit Community College with an Associates Degree in Business Management and has credit toward a Bachelor's Degree in Marketing from Northeastern University. A Scituate resident, he has worked in sales and management positions at Business Data Systems in Hanover and Sports House in Dedham.

☐ Merle and Joanie Brown surely had exciting news from their daughter, Marcie recently. Marcie is a junior at Bryant College, and has been selected to spend her second semester this year in Salamanca, Spain. Marcie is an International Marketing major, and a dean's list student, also President of her sorority (she has carried on right from CHS where she was an active member of the class of 1982). Marcie will be spending six months in Spain; the only part of the trip that makes her Mom sad is that she will miss her dreadfully! Keep those cards and letters coming, Marcie.

☐ There are two reasons to send cards to Mrs. Marie Barnes. She is hospitalized at Vernon Manor Health Facilities, 180 Regan Rd., Vernon Ct., 06066. She will also be ninety years old Dec. 5 . . . she would love to receive a card and/or note from you.

☐ There was no razor blade shortage this week, nor did BIC go on strike . . . the football players decided not to shave as a way to "prepare' for the Thanksgiving game. They are psyching themselves to beat Duxbury, be there!

☐ Congratulations to Dianne (Kurtz) and Kevin O'Brien on the birth of their son recently. That baby will certainly be a popular one, he has more relatives living in Cohasset than most children ever see.

Emily Spencer rides high on the shoulders of Stephanie Eno at the Youth Soccer finals (Carol McCann)

Enjoy, everyone!

☐ Elizabeth Glasfeld, daughter of Rolf and Elizabeth Glasfeld of Cohasset, has been selected to the 1984 Philadelphia Assoc. of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women, Division III All-Star Field Hockey Team. Elizabeth is a student at Haverford College, and is a two-time varisty letter winner. Haverford was ranked both in Pennsylvania and nationally in Division III by the NCAA. Elizabeth played sweeper and was credited with nine defense saves.

☐ Heres hoping that Dick Lincoln is feeling "chipper" now. Dick had a heart attack recently, and is a patient at Quincy City Hospital.

☐ Congratulations to W. Lee Dixon, daughter of Margaret and Clifford Dixon, on her recent promotion. Central Operations of First National Bank of South Carolina has promoted her to data systems officer. She is living at Shaw Air Force Base.

☐ When you are walking through town, make it a point to look in Pilgrim Cooperative Bank's window. The items on display are for a silent auction, with the proceeds going to the Senior Citizen Bus. Go down and place your very generous bid (make check out to the Cohasset Council on Aging) and then wait and see . . . December 14 is the date that the high bidders will receive their item. Support our Senior Citizens, and get yourself a nice gift in the process.

☐ If you notice that a number of women look a little weary lately, it's for a good reason! They are busy working for the fairs that will be going on Dec. 1. The Common is always busy with the annual Village Fair, and Church St. is humming with activity for the Snowflake Fair. All of the ladies put tons of time and effort into these events . . . be sure that you support them. There are some great looking items that will be for sale, neat for Christmas gifts or "I owe myself that" specials!! Write the date on your calendar now.

☐ Ed and Ann Seadale had a super Thanksgiving, hated to return! They spent the time in Texas, visiting their daughter Lisa and her husband. Lisa surely knows how to entertain, ask her brother Edward. Edward and his wife, Marilyn, were recent visitors to Texas, where Lisa "took them everywhere, even to Mexico". Needless to say, all of the Seadales are a tired but extremely happy group.

☐ The senior gals really poured it on last Saturday, winning big over the Juniors in the Powder Puff game. They surely are a talented group of girls, so fast that no one could catch them once underway. The New England Patriots could use Tara Stanford and Sara Seavey for their speed, and the Pompeo cousins were "awesome" on defense. There is talk that the girls want to have a regular Powderpuff season next Fall. If so, which sport would Mr. Di coach? His coaching of both Field Hockey (went to the states) and Powderpuff (he coached the seniors, and taught QB Janet Di how to throw a ball further than the pros) were outstanding this year . . . would make for big decision time . . .

As part of the course, students tour Armstrong's Lancaster Floor Plant to study the manufacture of sheet vinyl flooring and resilient tiles.

☐ Here sto a happy Thanksgiving to all!!! Be sure to call with the news that is sure to be gathered this week, share it with all of us.

Annual festival

The second annual Festival for Children's Hospital, a public display and sale of professionally decorated trees and wreaths, opens Thursday, Nov. 29 and runs through Sunday, Dec. 2, at the Bayside Exposition Center, Exit 17, Southeast Expressway, adjacent to Morrissey Boulevard.

Festival hours are Thursday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m., and Sunday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Admission to the festival is $4 for adults and free for children, 12 and under. Special group rates are available.

All proceeds from the festival will benefit Children's Hospital of Boston. The event is being organized by the Children's Hospital League, which has more than 700 members throughout the Greater Boston area.

Last year the festival was underwritten by 26 individual corporate sponsors from the Boston area. In its inaugural year, it raised more than $100,000 for Children's Hospital, and event organizers hope to surpass that figure this holiday season.

In addition to trees and wreaths, visitors to the festival will find gift boutiques, "Sugar Plum Shop", and "Munchkin Hollow" - a childrens' activity area. Entertainment, provided by Boston area performers will run throughout the festival.

The artificial trees and wreaths will remain on display at the Bayside Exposition Center for the duration of the festival and then be delivered to buyers. The trees and wreaths are all decorated by prominent local designers who have donated their time and materials.

Sculpture Show

An exhibit of Rani Glick's sculptures opens Friday, Nov. 30 at the South Shore Art Center, 103 Ripley Rd. The opening reception is from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m.

The images and shapes she puts into her sculptures relate to the abstract forms and figure and the gestural movement of the figure in motion is the essential spirit. The materials she uses, clay and steel, represent both malleable and rigid elements; the rigidity of the steel combines with the malleability of the clay.

A graduate of Tufts University and Lesley College, Glick has shown in numerous group exhibits both in the New England area and in Europe.

Glick's work is represented in the collections of Tufts University and Hines Corporation, the Museum of Fine Arts.

Visitors are invited to view the South Shore Art Center's invitational show through Jan. 4 on Monday-Friday, 1 to 4 p.m. and Saturdays, 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. For directions to the Center, call the Center, 383-9548.

Auxiliary Christmas party

Just a reminder of the Cohasset No. 118 American Legion Auxiliary children's Christmas Party being held December 15 from 1 to 3 p.m.

Names and ages of children and grandchildren 12 and under of paid Post and Auxiliary members must be called in to Linda at 545-6486 no later than Dec. 5 for their final count.

Thanksgiving thoughts

Hope everyone had a restful Thanksgiving Day, surrounded by family and good food.

Now it's time to relax for the long weekend. While chewing on that leftover turkey bone, why not consider a few non earth shattering thoughts?

Why were there 17 write-in votes cast for Michael Kennedy in the Nov. 6 election? The son of the late New York senator gathered that number of votes in an uncontested race for the State Representative seat. Could it be some type of "movement" to spur Kennedy into local politics?

Here's hoping we get a quorum at Wednesday night's special town meeting. Two hundred residents isn't that many, and there are some important issues to decide. Call some neighbors and carpool together over to the high school at 7:30 p.m. You'll even get your face on cable television.

Remember the Dickens' tale about Scrooge? That old miser was so despicable he even made Bob Cratchet work Christmas Eve. What a horrible man.

Imagine, anyone working Christmas Eve (except at the stores we all us last-minute shoppers find all our 'bargains'). Well, it seems our public employees at the Cohasset Town Hall are required to work today, the day after Thanksgiving, and Chirstmas Eve.

Despite an outcry against it, there seems to be a town bylaw stating the Town Hall stays open on these days. Seems there should be a change in some of these town bylaws.

NEWS ITEM — Cable TV channel set aside for Scituate local programming also carrying programs produced in neighboring Cohasset, Norwell, Hanover and soon, Hingham, a source of pique for Scituate cable TV advisory committee. Fear loss of exclusive rights per intent of cable license. 'What's happening in nearby towns now fills programming gaps'

"...We get live coverage, First Thanksgiving-wise on Scituate cable TV, Elder, except of course Cohasset, Norwell, Hanover and soon, Hingham...
That cut into our three R's...ratings, reruns and residuals...?"

We share the pain

"Baby Fae was everyone's adopted daughter."

That's what someone said last Friday morning after we all woke up to hear the news of babies who'd died.

Baby Fae's baboon heart had been completely rejected with death the result of that rejection. Jeri Ann Richard of Pawtucket, R.I. had been found murdered in an alley. Three little children in Maine died in a fire in spite of a mother's efforts to save them.

America becomes a hometown when we lose our young. Thus comment seems irrepressible here, in a hometown newspaper.

Though the families of these children do not live among us, they are of us. Though we cannot ease their pain, we share it.

There was a story of historic courage in the fight to save Baby Fae . . . and odds were never promising. Even the fire whose origin is not named at this writing, seemed beyond our control.

Faith and time combined with loving support go a long way in getting people through pain of loss. There is one kind of death, however, that presents a seemingly insurmountable anguish. When precious, inoffensive little life is lost through the atrocity of a fellow being, we are wounded forever.

So it is that we here, we mothers and fathers, sisters and brothers, aunts and uncles extend our abject empathy to the family of Jeri Ann Richard, particularly. We are in your community of caring. We could not have such a loss without saying something.

Generally speaking

By Claire McDonough

"The trouble with parents," Patrick began, "is that they always think they know what's best for you."

"If we didn't think that," the Dragon reminded him, "you'd probably be an accomplished panhandler in Haight Ashbury right now instead of a college student. Where's Skipper?"

"He's in the kitchen," Breida volunteered. "He's going through the phone book looking for a toll-free number he can call to report child abuse. Because you wouldn't let him go out with his friends tonight."

I found Skip talking on the kitchen phone. "My mother and father hate me," he was explaining.

I grabbed the phone away from him. "He's recovering from mono," I yelled, "and furthermore if you saw his latest report card you'd realize he can't afford to be out even one evening. You'd arrest us for child absue if we let him go out."

Skip favored me with a glance of pure disgust. "I was talking to my girl friend," he informed me. "Why are all the adults in this house so paranoid?"

He regained possession of the phone. "I think they've always hated me," he continued. "Last summer they wouldn't let me hitchhike to California to go surfing. Before that they wouldn't let me serve Mass the time I let Billy Reid shave a bald streak down the middle of my head. Now they won't buy me a $300 surfboard just because my grades aren't good."

Breida looked at me curiously. "How come you never killed him?"

I waved my hand vaguely. "There's some archaic law..."

Patrick persevered. "Seriously. I read last week that Haight Ashbury has become a bastion of conservatism. If I had gone there I'd probably be selling stocks and bonds by now. I might even be a Republican."

"See?" the Dragon told him. "We know what's best for you."

I sighed. "How come our kids always think we're out to get them when we disagree with them. Were we that way with our parents?"

The Dragon pondered. "I don't think so. As I recall it, I always recognized their superior knowledge based on experience and learning. I was always grateful for their guidance and advice."

Breida started to giggle. "Then how come Auntie Anne still has a scar from where you stabbed her with a pencil? And when Nana said you shouldn't have done it, you said you couldn't help it because she was being a brat."

The Dragon cleared his throat. "I don't recall that it happened just that way."

"Yeah," Patrick interrupted, "or how about the time your father caught you smoking corn silk and tried to get you to promise you'd never smoke again?"

"You really appreciated the advice and guidance that time," I said dryly.

Skipper terminated his telephone conversation. "I know," he interjected eagerly, "how about the time Dad stayed out till one in the morning, and didn't call home and his father had to go looking for him?"

I was working," the Dragon objected. "I wasn't out having fun."

"So?" Breida looked startled. "You couldn't have phoned? You always told us there's no excuse for not calling. You said you didn't care what the other kids did, we should always phone if we weren't going to be home when we said we would."

"Listen," the Dragon said plaintively, "how come everyone's picking on me?"

"See what I mean?" Skipper said triumphantly. "Paranoia."

"No, really," the Dragon insisted, "how come none of you are picking on your mother?"

He turned to me. "Did you always defer to your parents' judgment? Always feel they were more qualified to make a decision than you were?"

I pondered briefly, then nodded. "Generally I did."

The Dragon pounced. "Ha! You said 'generally.' That means not always. When did you disagree with them?"

I smiled demurely. "When they told me not to marry you."

Caring and cooperation from teachers

Letters

To the Editor:

In regard to Dee DeSantis' "distress over lack of school support," I feel obliged to respond for myself, as well as my colleagues. I truly resent reading statements pertaining to the lack of caring and cooperation by teachers and administrators. I would not like to begin to tally the number of hours I have spent at sports events, not to mention other school related functions. This holds true for many other faculty members who give of their time in a variety of ways: sponsoring AFS, chaperoning dances, attending plays, coaching Powder Puff, and participating in Faculty-Student basketball, softball, and field hockey games. These activities should suggest that there is, in fact, no lack of voluntary (and often unrecognized) faculty support. Encouraging students in their extracurricular activities while maintaining academic excellence in the classroom is not as easy as it sounds.

Mrs. DeSantis speaks of camaraderie, dedication, and pride. Surely, a letter such as the one submitted does nothing more than undermine the positive feelings and strong rapport that does, indeed, exist among students and staff at Cohasset High School.

Figueiredo surrenders plans

weeks ago, he did not have detailed engineering plans to present to the board. He complained he could not afford an engineer to create any such plans.

At that time, Harbormaster Harry Ritter requested the commission deny the request to fill the Parker Avenue property which is within the floodplain.

The commission insisted Figueiredo submit more detailed plans at the next meeting.

At Tuesday night's continuation, Figueiredo quickly informed the commission members he would not be submitting any further plans. First he said he "might have the place sold" and also informed the commission "you will be hearing from my attorneys."

He claimed Tuesday night that it is the town's fault that the constant wear of the road has caused runoff and deterioration of his property. Because the town allows the cars on the road, it is up to the town to maintain the area. He also said a faulty catch basin for many years caused the gravel road to wash off in front of his home.

Commission member Robert Makie, who presided over the hearing, said the plans submitted by Figueiredo do not comply with the requirements, and must be denied.

"Well, I know if you gave it to me, then he (Ritter) would appeal it and I don't have the money to pay for that," the longtime Parker Avenue resident said.

Walter Ross of the town's Drainage Advisory Committee said although he is unfamiliar with the proposed plans, there is a problem with standing water on the property. He noted it was difficult to determine whether the problem is caused by a faulty drain, but added, "I don't see, without knowledge of his plans, anything wrong with grading."

Ritter urged the commission to deny the plans, based on incomplete information provided by Figueiredo. The town should also order the gravel to be removed from his property, he added.

"If you get a court order," Figueiredo countered. "Then I will remove it. My attorneys will be in touch. In this town, if you do something first, and then apply for a permit, you've got it made. Just a slap on the wrist."

Makie told Figueiredo the commission would have "little objection to the plans if we could be assured they would be engineered properly." Figueiredo then requested the board issue a continuation of the hearing " and I'll have engineers and attorneys here and we'll have everything settled."

"Definitely just one more time," Makie warned. "If you continue in good faith, we can put this in its proper perspective."

Figueiredo then answered, "I got wind that if I got the Conservation Commission permit, it would be appealed." He then agreed to submit a more detailed plan to the

When Ritter reminded the commission that this was "one of several stops" for Figueiredo before the commission and the appeals board, Figueiredo answered, "then deny it and you'll hear from my attorneys. This board will never see me here again."

The commission then voted to deny the request to fill, and will ask Zoning Enforcement Officer Edward Poskus to order the gravel removed from 33 Parker Avenue.

Report from the State House

Election day was a good day not only for the President, but also for Republicans in the Massachusetts House of Representatives.

After a steady decline from a majority in the House in 1954, Republicans have reversed the trend and turned the corner in this election. Republican membership will be increased from 29 to 34 for the 1985-86 session.

Not only was there a net gain of 5 seats for Republicans, but also eight new members. This is the largest group of Freshmen since the House was reduced from 240 to 160 members.

Republicans actually picked up 6 seats which were previously held by Democrats. One of the most stunning upsets was the election of 25 year old Peter Torkildsen, who defeated House Majority Leader John Murphy.

Future of Republican Party and Massachusetts

There has been some talk of the Republican party being dead in Massachusetts. This clearly is not the case, especially after the recent election. Although we failed to achieve a statewide office, our building base has been strengthened if one examines the numbers of votes cast for Senate candidate Ray Shamie.

One thing is for sure — Massachusetts is currently enjoying much of the same recovery that is occuring nationally. Our unemployment is among the lowest in the country. We are also experiencing increased economic prosperity.

But how do we keep the ball rolling? Certainly not by increased taxes and excessive spending. The Dukakis Administration is currently poised to give us another tax increase. Such factors that indicate this eventuality are the possible enactment of the of the Governor's legislation concerning Mass Bank, Education, Water and Sewer, Presumptive Sentencing and others.

Lame Duck Session a Possible "Feeding Frenzy"

Right now the lame duck session of the House is fertile ground for another "feeding frenzy." This is the same thing that happened two years ago when numerous substantive and special interest bills were rammed through the House in the wanning hours of the lame duck session.

For example, we took over the welfare system. Opponents of the welfare takeover argued that it would lead to a tripling of welfare costs. In fact, welfare costs have actually increased ten-fold.

We believe it would be in the best interest of democracy and the people of this Commonwealth for the legislature to hold off until January, when the newly-elected members have a chance to voice their views.

Undemocratic sentiments against free enterprise

Letters

To the Editor:

This is America, a country born out of a desire for freedom and a recognition of the individual's basic rights. Who has not heard stories of men and women who, armed only with inspiration and determination, have succeeded, thus giving rise to the adage "only in America!"

A letter in the November 8, 1984 issue of your paper by Mr. Guild recognizes that "free enterprise is one of the foundations of our society" but goes on to say, in effect, that the community should decide just which free enterprise is allowed in Cohasset. This sentiment seems to be echoed by the editor in the last few lines of the editorial in the same issue.

I find this sentiment thoroughly undemocratic and something one expects to hear only in a Communist Bloc Country. Because a car dealership has failed in the past does not mean that someone else might not be very successful. Because there is already one supermarket in town, this should not preclude building another supermarket, especially if the present market is judged to be inadequate.

It is important to have concerns about the environment and the conformance of structures to the various state codes and town by-laws. We have town boards elected to insure this. It is equally important that these elected officials are impartial and fair in their decisions.

I have talked with numerous people in town before deciding to go ahead with plans for the Cohasset Plaza. The overwhelming majority were dissatisfied with the present supermarket, citing its small size and lack of variety. These people were enthusiastic about a new supermarket. A larger supermarket with a larger variety ensures a larger volume of sales and therefore lower prices. It is this economic fact that has changed the emphasis in supermarket design, and is the reason behind our proposed 46,000 sq. ft. supermarket.

A great deal of thought has gone into the design of the Cohasset Plaza. The wetlands on the property are largely man-made, the result of blocking a road drainage culvert when a new water line was laid by the town. Flynn Engineers and the Conservation Commission have worked hard to protect the wetland areas and with the Board of Health to develop a septic system which is environmentally sound (which, in fact, exceeds Title 5 requirements by 80 percent). Great care has been taken in the architectural design and in landscaping to make Cohasset Plaza an asset to the community.

In your editorial November 8 you stated that although I had "turned in every direction to please planners and conservationists and the next door neighbors—the simple fact is that these developments aren't wanted." I take issue with your conclusion. It is true that Mrs. Jane W. Cook does not want the Plaza built next to her property. In actuality, the buildings will be over 1/4 mile from her house and separated by dense woods. It is also a fact that Mrs. Cook had both the opportunity and resources to purchase this property and chose not to do so. The residents of Fair Oaks Lane also oppose this development on the basis of traffic flow. They cite the potential danger of accidents at the intersection of Sohier St. and Route 3A but they oppose putting a traffic light at that intersection.

These same people set up a table outside the polls on Election Day and gathered signatures on petitions against the Cohasset Plaza. Despite what was described by one town official as "bullying tactics" and despite misrepresentation of statistics from our Traffic Engineer's Report, they managed to obtain approximately 400 signatures. When one realizes that 4,299 persons voted that day in Cohasset, this represents less than 10 percent of the voting population of the town. What about the "silent majority?"

In summary, I would point out that the land is commercially zoned and is in the business district. We are trying our best to make this project environmentally sound and aesthetically pleasing. I will continue to work with any interested parties to try and resolve our differences whenever possible.

New Features to Village Fair

New features are being added to the popular stand-bys in the agenda of Cohasset's Village Fair this year, as planners seek to give the Dec. 1 attraction an appeal to the widest possible interests.

Among the innovations this year, for example, will be a major program of children's activities to be centered in Walton Rodgers Hall of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m.

Designed to provide entertainment for "children on the loose" as well as a form of day care service for mothers who wish to shop the Fair, the program will include the making of hand prints, Christmas music and singing, face painting and refreshments.

At 11:30 there will be a showing of a children's movie, tentatively scheduled as "Walt Disney Christmas" and "Sound of Music". Admission to the movie will be 25¢ and no age limit is placed on the attendance at the total program. Linda Summers heads the group arranging this event, and she is being assisted by Meagan Phelps, Ruth Wilcox and Kate Abbruzzese.

Because the leadership of the Fair this year has been taken by the Panagia Greek Orthodox Church, it is understandable that some Greek delicacies will find their way into the menu of the Chowder Bar and on the Food Table, both of which will be in the vestry of the Congregational Church.

Bob Beggan, Chowder Bar chairman, is being assisted by Bill Billikas, and has announced that the popular chowder is being supplemented by offering souvlakia and Greek salad, while the food table is likely to present some of the traditional Greek pastries.

Another added feature this year will be a Silent Auction organized by Marie Johnston. Here Fair shoppers will have an opportunity to register their bids for interesting and valuable contributed items and then later learn whether their bid has been successful.

Local Cub Scouts and Boy Scouts who have always had some role in the Fair will be carrying on their good work again this year. While older Boy Scouts will help out with transportation and clean-up, Den #3 of Cub Scouts will be raffling off a large Heritage Wreath they have fashioned out of evergreen cones at recent den meetings. They plan to set up their raffle near Santa Claus on the Common and sell chances on the wreath for 25¢, proceeds going into the general receipts of the Fair.

Readying cones and bows for wreaths at the Cohasset Village Fair, Saturday, Dec. 1

This project has been under the direction of the Den Mother, Mrs. Sandra Theriault, and Cubs involved include Scott Herzog, Brendan Mulligan, Jay Nothnagle, Scott Theriault, and David Leahy.

Once again, there will be a raffle of other items and services donated by local merchants. Prizes include dinners for two at various local restaurants as well as gift items from stores.

A change in the Fair program this year sees the rescheduling of the Village Fair Dinner until Saturday, Jan. 12.

SS Art Center schedule

Make a plan for curing the January blues; enroll in a South Shore Art Center weeklong workshop.

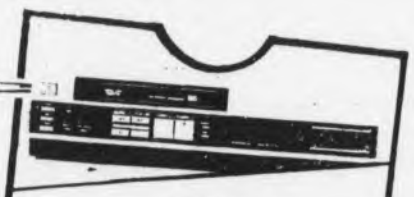
The January mid-term workshops meet daily January 7 through January 11 at the South Shore Art Center, 103 Ripley Rd. in Cohasset. Offered for this mid-term is Syma's Clay for Adults; Judeth Van Hamm Wier's Seeing and Painting Color and Elaine Wentworth's Beginning Watercolor. Advanced registration is required for these workshops.

Clay for Adults, which meets from 9 a.m. to 11:30 a.m., will introduce participants to intensive wheel throwing and hand building techniques. Emphasis will be on the process rather than on completed pieces. The course is good for both the absolute beginner and those with some experience.

An artist well known on the South Shore, Syma brings to this class a creative excitement that she captures with clay making. Her own work demonstrates her uniqueness in working with clay and achieving an individuality in her work.

The Center's Seeing and Painting Color workshop, meeting from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., offers any level painter an opportunity to zero in on sharpening his/her color sense. Wiers will guide the students in making and using a color chart, understanding color options, analyzing other artists use of color and determining how color and value affect luminosity. Students may work in their choice of media.

Wiers has exhibited in both one-person and juried shows in the Boston area. She is a visiting lecturer at the Boston Architectural Center. She holds an MA from the University of Pennsylvania and a BA from the University of Michigan.



An evening workshop for adults, Beginning Watercolor, meeting from 7:30 to 10 p.m., offers an opportunity to develop watercolor painting skills. Starting with one and two-color harmonies then on to three colors, Wentworth has developed an enjoyable and successful progression of watercolor exercises which will give the beginner a solid approach to basic techniques and a sensitivity for the many subtleties of color, value and texture. Exercises will focus on landscape compositions.

These workshops are part of the Center's on going efforts to bring quality art instruction to the South Shore. The courses offer an excellent opportunity to improve on artistic skills or to discover a hidden talent. For complete information on these workshops, to learn of courses on the winter schedule, to enroll in programs or to take out a membership, call the Center, 383-9548.

Skippers final game

The 1984 Cohasset High School varsity football team, Coach Phil Pisano (far right) has just concluded his first year as head coach (Carol McCann)

By Lisa Shumaker

Thanksgiving Day, Thursday, Nov. 22 at 10 a.m., Milliken Field, Cohasset.

For most, Thanksgiving is a time to give thanks, but for the Cohasset High School football team, this day means much more. It marked the Skippers last game of the '84 season, and for many, it was the final game of their career.

For the biggest game of the season, Cohasset was up against the Duxbury Dragons in a contest which was slated to be exciting, physical, and emotional. Coach Phil Pisano says, "the seniors have a lot to prove to themselves, and this will definitely be the best game of their careers."

Tri-captain Mark Lahive believes the team, especially the seniors, will be motivated to play hard, because "you know it is your last game, and you want to win it badly".

The Skippers worked diligently this past week in preparation for the game. Pisano did not change his strategy for the Dragons, but his team worked on executing much more precisely and efficiently.

Cohasset also pushed to stop Duxbury's outstanding kickoff and punt returning team.

Although Duxbury's six and three record outshines Cohasset's three and five record, the teams are fairly evenly matched.

This will be the last year Cohasset will play Duxbury on Thanksgiving.

Next year, Cohasset will play an old rival, the Hull Pirates. When asked about the switch, Pisano replied, "Both teams (Duxbury and Hull) are excellent rivalries, so it really doesn't make a difference who we play". However, Mark Lahive feels, "It is a good idea and will add a lot to the game, especially since we beat Hull this year".

The captains for Cohasset this year, Jay Contis, Mark Lahive, and Jeff Brown, are all seniors and have done a great job leading and motivating the team.

With four years of football experience, Jay hopes to go to Bates next year. Mark has been playing since the eighth grade and wishes to attend either Dartmouth or Bowdoin. Jeff has been playing for three years and has not yet made definite plans concerning next year. All three wish to continue playing football wherever they decide to go.

When asked how it felt to be a captain this year, Jay replied, "It is definitely an honor. Although sometimes frustrating, it is a very good experience." Mark said, "It is a great privilege, and Coach Pisano made it easy." Jeff felt it was great fun, but added that any of the seniors could have held the title and the responsibility.

All three captains were looking forward to the Thanksgiving game, but they realize it will be a let down afterwards. They advise kids playing football now to stick with it, and play every game as if it was your last. The years go by very quickly, they warn.

Coach Pisano took over the team this year and introduced not only a new coaching philosophy, but a new positive attitude as well. He instilled a feeling of optimism and gave the Skippers a boost. According to Jeff, "He (Pisano) is the best coach I've ever played under. He cared about the team and works around the team, rather than having the team work around him."

The Skippers are three and five going into the final game. The record, however, is not an indication of Cohasset's remarkable improvement. In one year the Skippers, "gained the respect of all the other teams in the league and are no longer a pushover. They have developed into a very competitive team," according to Pisano.

Pisano feels his team's success has been due mainly to the leadership of the seniors and to the introduction of some new young talent.

For instance, sophomores Jeff Soltesz, Jeff Lydon, and Liam Stanford really brought the offensive line together and played like veterans the entire season. All three players have unlimited potential and should be stars of the future.

Next year, Pisano wishes to return to the Skippers and see what another year of his coaching philosophy will do to improve his team. Pisano's primary goal for next season is to, "turn the record around and see to it that the kids reap the benefits of a winning season."

NEWO meeting

Demonstration of Thanksgiving

In an all too brief ceremony (as far as the school committee was concerned), parents of the current kindergarten population expressed their gratitude to the committee.

Last spring, the committee voted to readjust its annual budget and add a half-time kindergarten teacher for the increasing enrollment. Parents of the students affected by the change, appeared briefly at the committee's meeting Monday night to express their gratitude.

The Thanksgiving ceremony included the presentation of a scroll, with a message written in caligraphy which read: "It seems fitting during this season of Thanksgiving to give thanks to the Cohasset School Committee for its wise decision-making of last Spring.

The Kindergarten children are being educated in classes of appropriate size and therefore, are getting the most of of the curriculum. Our thanks again. The kindergarten parents and teachers."

The petition was signed by every parent of a kindergarten student.

One of the parents making the presentation to the committee commented that the smaller class sizes "has allowed our children to make great progress this year."

"Snoopy" tickets

The best seats for "Snoopy" will go to early ticket buyers. Get your reserved seats now from any cast member during lunch periods in the high school cafeteria. Performance dates are: Saturday, Dec. 8 at 7 p.m.; Friday, Dec. 14 at 8 p.m; and Saturday, Dec. 15 at 8 p.m.

Tickets are $3.

'Snoopy" cast chosen

Final casting has been announced for the Cohasset High School musical production of "Snoopy!!!" The production will be presented on December 8, 14, 15 at the high school.

Faced with increased personal commitments but not wishing to cancel a musical this year, producer Bryan Marks has opted for a small cast show for this year only. Next year's production will again make use of a large cast. Tentatively selected is the new version of "The Pirates of Penzance."

In order to provide more students with a chance to perform, many of the roles in "Snoopy!!!" have been double cast with two students alternating performances. Appearing in the title role will be John Kuntz, a junior. Senior Shawna McCarthy and freshman Amanda Sweeney will play Lucy. Peppermint Patty will be seniors Jillian Ayer and Karlin Isele. Jenna Emmons, a sophomore, and Michelle Meagher, a freshman, will appear as Sally.

Sharing the role of Charlie Brown are sophomore Andrew Glasfeld and junior David Sweeney. Woodstock will be freshman Laura Kuhn, and seventh grade, Hillary Proodian. Junior Glenn Hochkeppel will play Linus at all three performances.

Directing "Snoopy!!!" is Ron Emmons. Musical direction is in the hands of Bryan Marks. Choreogrphy has been designed by Andrea Palardy. Ruth Dahlbeck will provide piano accompaniment. Tickets are now available for $3 at the high school. All seats are reserved.

Exchange student talk

Takeshi Nito, Rotary exchange student from Sagae, Japan spoke to Mrs. Montuori's third grade class at the Osgood School last week.

Takeshi drew a map of his country, writing the principal cities in English and Japanese. The children learned that third grade Japanese children have the same subjects as third grade American children.

The high point of the visit was a lesson in origami — Japanese paper folding. Takeshi supplied the special paper for the project. He also presented all of the children with an eraser from Japan

Takeshi is an 11th grade student at Cohasset High School, presently staying with Louis and June Simeone on Bancroft Road. According to Rotary policy, he will have two more host families before the end of his stay in Cohasset in June.

Report cards/release days

Children in Grades 1, 2, and 3 will receive their progress reports for the first portion of the year Friday, Nov. 30. Parent conferences will follow on two release Thursday — Dec. 6 and 13.

Tuesday, Nov. 27 is Photo ID Day at Cohasset High School. Students will be photographed during study hall and lunch periods. Their laminated, tamper proof IDs will be ready in minutes. Younger children and adults will be photographed beginning at 2:30 p.m.

Academic awards

Two academic awards assemblies were held on Tuesday, November 13 at Cohasset Jr./Sr. High School. The first assembly was held at 8:45 a.m. for students in Grades 7, 8 and 9. The grades 10, 11, and 12 assembly followed at 9:30 a.m.

Dr. Joseph Nedrow, Chairperson of the School Committee, Mrs. Diana Kornet, School Committee member and Mr. Eugene Crowell, School Superintendent, participated in the presentation of awards. The assemblies were conducted by Principal, Richard T. Streeter.

Students were honored for achieving honor roll status for all four quarters for the 1983-84 school year. Students who made high honors for the first time were presented with a Varsity C letter and a certificate. Students who earned honors received certificates. Students who were repeating honor roll status for one or more years were awarded certificates with gold and/or silver stars.

Insurance Companies Compete to Win Homeowners with Lower Rates.

"Now, homeowners can generally get increased coverage and pay less for it," according to Mary Porter of Whitman's Doran & Mason Insurance Agency.

Interviewed at her Bridgewater home, Ms. Porter said, "My job is to see that my clients have all the facts they need to buy insurance wisely. Right now, the fact is that you can probably duplicate your present homeowner's coverage at a lower cost — or — increase your coverage without increasing your cost."

"You can still get good, personal service with your low rates, too," Ms. Porter added. Doran & Mason has a team system. "Each of my clients can phone my office teammate any time a question arises or a problem occurs. We have enough people for that, and our size makes us important to the companies we represent. Even difficult claims can be handled more easily."

"I'll take the time to explain the details to you and I'll get to know you well enough to understand what insurance you need. I don't press;" she concluded, "if you have all the information you need, you'll make the right decisions." As an insurance professional in the Doran & Mason Agency, Mary Porter writes automobile, life, medical, business, boat and other forms of insurance as well as homeowner's.

The students of Deer Hill portray the First Thanksgiving

Mistresses Anna Sandell and Ellen Schram take a rest from their cooking chores.

This is the main course of the Pilgrims' menu - crushed grain and meal.

Deer Hill pageant reflects true meaning of Thanksgiving

It's more than appropriate that we celebrate Thanksgiving in a special manner. We are, after all, in the land where it all began.

Year after year, students are lectured on the true meaning and history of Thanksgiving. We become acquainted with the Pilgrims' plight and the Indians who befriended them. As we leave elementary school, our knowledge of this event fades. Memories of the Mayflower sail away like that tiny cargo ship to another distant shore.

But in recent years, the students of the Deer Hill School's open fifth and sixth grade class have begun a new Thanksgiving tradition. It is steeped in research and a knowledge of the actual events of the first year in the new land.

And what makes this tradition unique, is the manner in which these students have accumulated this knowledge and the way they incorporate these studies into a shared activity.

The Thanksgiving Pageant, as it has been labeled, is a wonderful visual and oral voyage into our history.

As presented by the fifth and sixth grade students, the pageant unfolds the pages of our history book in a new and meaningful way. The parents who come to share in this experience are as involved in this history lesson as the children upon whom all eyes are cast.

Three weeks ago, the students participated in a field trip to Plimoth Plantation and climbed aboard the replica of the Mayflower. They were equipped with several prepared questions to ask. In addition to their classroom studies, they watched a movie entitled, "The Mayflower Voyage," and saw videos of previous students' pageant work. The Paul Pratt Library also reserved several books for their specific perusal.

As teacher Joanne Magoun explained, ninety percent of the research was accomplished and coordinated by students within small group assignments. Teachers Magoun and Larry Schultz, with Genevieve Brown and librarian Marge Murphy, reviewed the work and approved the final product.

By Tuesday morning, the extravagant backgrounds had been completed for the show. As parents walked into the room, they witnessed the result of long hours of work. Elaborate teepees, a smaller rendition of the Mayflower, and ornate imitations of the Pilgrims' first dwellings, enveloped the large classroom.

As students, dressed in Indian leathers and fur, and girls in long dark dresses and white collars rushed to greet their parents, the inviting aroma of roast turkey evaded the room.

At the conclusion of the pageant, the children were to share some Thanksgiving feast with their parents. It wasn't just students who participated in this classroom activity. A few of parents talked quietly about their routine earlier that morning - rising at 4 a.m. to cook a 18 pound turkey.

Soon, the Indians and Pilgrims sat side-by-side explaining the traditions which emerged into the first Thanksgiving.

In quiet tones, and sometimes rushed sentences, the children talked about the experiences of these American natives and their visitors.

It was apparent the students had learned their lessons well, and they retained an interest in the subject.

Indians explained they belonged to the Wampanoag tribe and wore clothing of animal skins and fur. The Sachem, the mystic leader of the tribe, presided over the justice system. He could also have seven wives.

Although the Europeans later brought along clothing to exchange with the Indians, the natives felt the extravagent wardrobe was a nuisance to their practical way of life in the woods.

The Pilgrims began their voyage to a new world in two cargo ships. One of the vessels later returned home, and only the 90-foot Mayflower completed the trip.

Our Pilgrim guides told us how half their number died that first, harsh winter. As the Mistresses and Masters explained, they built one-room homes with oak. A fireplace was always the center of activity within the home.

Medicine used by the Indians and Pilgrims was primitive and mystical. Belief in a higher supernatural power was the basis of their separate faiths.

Pilgrim sons were taught to read Scripture. Young girls were taught to cook and sew. Young Indian maidens helped plant and sow the crops, and newborn infants were tied upon their backs as they worked the field.

It wasn't an easy life for the Indians, nor their welcomed neighbors. Today, we have much to be grateful for - our bountiful lives and the knowledge we gain from past experiences.

NOVEMBER 26 and DECEMBER 3

News from Cub Scout Troop 38

NEWS FROM THE DEN

Den 1: We're on our way to becoming Bears! An October project which provided lots of laughs and fun was making Jumping Jack-o-lanterns.

We also had a treasure hunt. Half the den laid a trail through the woods using the trail markers they had been learning about. The other half of the den then followed the trail. The trail ended at the hidden treasure which was enjoyed by all the members of the den.

Michael Equi has proved to be a very enthusiastic cub scout. Mike has already finished his requirements for his Bear badge. Congratulations, Mike!

Den 2: Bicycle riding kicked off Den 2's Bear year when the boys enjoyed a Bicycle Rodeo. The cubs demonstrated their ability to ride on a curving path as well as their skills at making sharp turns, jumps and emergeny stops.

The boys are also preparing a skit for the November pack meeting. Rehearsing has provided the cubs with lots of laughs and they are very eager to show off their talents. We hope you all enjoy their costumes, props and acting!

Den 3: Den 3 has been very busy organizing and making a den flag. The boys all participated in the Bowlerama — the annual Cub Scout Fundraiser. The cubs also baked, frosted and devoured cupcakes at another meeting.

The dads in our den joined us for a hike in Whitney Woods one Saturday. No one was lost, and a good time was had by all!

Right now we are constructing a pine cone wreath which we hope to finish in time to raffle off at the Village Fair.

All the members are ready to receive their Bobcat badges. They are: Brendan Mulligan, Scott Herzog, Jason Porter, Jay Northnagle, Scott Theriault and David Leahy. We're on our way to becoming Wolves!

Den 4: The cubs are busy organizing their den as they work toward their goal of becoming Wolves. Right now they are eagerly working on their Bobcat badge requirements. Den Chief Nicholas Lelecas, a boy scout from Troop 28 in Cohasset, taught them to properly roll their scarves and fasten them with the slides.

The boys made a den flag which they will use until they receive their official flag.

A hike to Reed's beach to collect black pebbles for a cup planter for a narcissus blub was an enjoyable outing. Hopefully, the narcissus will be in full bloom by New Year's Day.

Michael Riley and Bobby Gentile are Denner and Assistant Denner for the month of November.

Saturday, Dec. 1, is the annual Village Fair in Cohasset. It is hoped that all dens will join this worthy cause by making or baking something and donating it.

We also hope that each of the dens will make a Christmas ornament for a Christmas tree we will decorate at the December pack meeting and then donate to the Ripley Road Nursing Home.

At the December pack meeting we will also hold a food collection to make up a food basket to be donated to a worthy cause. We hope everyone will contribute to this collection.

To all cubs who took part in the Bowlerama, please try to get your receipts in as soon as possible.

Destroyer takes on local cadets

Friday afternoon, Nov. 9, the Scituate Division of the United States Naval Sea Cadets Corps and two of its officers departed for a three day training weekend aboard the naval destroyer the USS Joseph P. Kennedy, Jr. located in Fall River's Battleship Cove.

The local division of 21 participating cadets joined cadets from four other divisions. These young people were provided training in First Aid, Plotting and Navigation, Small Arms Handling, Damage Control, Communications, and General Shipboard Operations.

The highlight of the weekend was a simulated attack on the Destroyer, and all the training the cadets had received was put into action.

At 7:30 p.m. Saturday, the ship's captain announced the ship was under attack and general quarters were sounded. Over 50 cadets scurried about to man their stations. During the course of this attack, the ship underwent a fire on the afterdeck, a torpedo attack, and an all-out air attack, with sound effects and visual aids. The cadets were able to protect and repair their ship from sustaining any serious damages.

The training paid off when the ship was brought under control.

Future Events

The Scituate Division is one of the most active units on the East Coast. Nov. 23 the group will be departing for Davisville, R.I., for another three day mini-boot camp where the emphasis will be on small arms. Directed by the U.S. Marine Corps, cadets will be given the opportunity to fire the M-16 rifle.

Dec. 2, the cadets will be commissioned as a ship and will receive its permanent name as being the F.B. Battle Division of Scituate, Massachusetts. The public ceremony will be held at St. Mary's Hall and will begin at noon. A reception and dinner will follow at the New Bell Buoy Restaurant, Front Street, Scituate Harbor. The cost of the dinner is $10.50 and reservations may be made by calling 545-0145 or 545-1120.

Fundraising

The cadets have begun two major fund raising campaigns. First, anyone interested in returning cans or bottles should call 545-0145 or 545-1120. Cans and bottles will help finance group programming.

The second project is called Santa's Helpers and will begin Dec. 1. During December the cadets will take reservations, for a modest fee, for a visit from Santa and his helpers.

For more information on how to get Santa to visit a home, call 545-1120, 545-0145 or for information on how to be a Sea Cadet please call 545-9744 for those people who are between 11 and 18 years.

Meetings are held Friday evenings at 7 p.m. at the G.A.R. Hall, Country Way, Scituate.

First Parish

Christening: Nov. 11, Molly Ann McGuinness, born June 3.

Christmas concert: Our annual Christmas Concert will be held Dec. 16 at 4 p.m. The program this year will be Benjamin Britten's "Saint Nicholas". You will receive an invitation to become a patron of the concert in the mail shortly. Please respond generously.

Music notes: Next Wednesday, Nov. 21 we in Cohasset are starting a new tradition, similar to that of other communites, in having a special service of thanksgiving here in the Meeting House at 8 p.m. All of the churches in town plan to participate, and we will have an ecumenical choir, composed of people from all of these churches or no church at all. We will meet here at 7 p.m. and put together one simple anthem to sing that evening. If you wish to be with us, please come and bring any friends from Cohasset. All are welcome!

Messiah sing: The annual South Shore Messiah Sing will take place at 3 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 25, at the Second Congregational Church in Cohasset. Soloists, a chamber orchestra, and organ accompaniment will be provided in this free event; anyone interested is invited to join in singing the choruses of Handel's great oratorio. For further information call 383-0345, 383-6697, or 545-0601.

Second Congregational Church

No Lobsters: No, there aren't any lobsters in that lobster pot near the entrance of the church. Those are "estimates of giving" - the envelopes in which all of us estimate what we will be able to contribute for the church's work in 1985. If you have not yet completed your 1985 estimate of giving, stop by the lobster trap this Sunday and speak to one of the old salts on the Finance Committee - Bob Davenport, Lee Jenkins, or Gary Anderson. Thanks.

In the Family: Marie Barnes was hospitalized and will welcome your cards and notes, Vernon Manor Health Facilities, 180 Regan Rd., Vernon, CT 06066. She will be 90 on Dec. 5.

Messiah sing: Don't forget our church's annual beginning for the season of Advent, as singers and musicians from the South Shore gather to enjoy Handel's great oratorio, Nov. 25. Though the event begins at 3 p.m., you'll need to arrive early to be sure of a seat!

Saint Anthony's Parish

Baptisms: James Donovan, Tyler Dunn and Brian G. Quinn.

Banns of Marriage: Denise Byrnes - Edward Graham

CCD: All teachers and their assistants are invited to the rectory for brunch Sunday after the 11:30 Mass. Choir for Christmas: Any child interested in joining (Grade 4 and up) please inform your CCD teacher at the next class. Rehearsals will begin on Thursday, Dec. 6, at 3:30.

Village Fair: Saturday, Dec. 1. If you have donations for the bargain bazaar, candy table or children's clothing tables, please call Kathy Brennock at 383-1274 or Terri Smith at 383-1606. Books are still needed for the Book Table. Call Alice Daunt at 383-1163. Please help us make the fair a success - your help is appreciated.

Note: Daily Mass is on Channel 25 at 11:30 a.m. and on Cable Channel 32.

"We gather together"

In accordance with the real meaning of Thanksgiving, members and clergy of seven local churches will join in hymns and prayers of thanks-giving Wednesday, November 21 in First Parish Meeting House at 8 p.m.

The public is invited to participate in the service, which will include music of the combined choirs of the churches and the Vedanta Singers. An offering will be received for Project Bread, the Boston clearing-house for numerous programs meeting the needs of hungry people.

The sponsoring churches are Beechwood Congregational Church, First Parish (Unitarian Universalist) Church, Panagia Greek Orthodox Church, St. Anthony's Roman Catholic Church, St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, Second Congregational Church, and the Vedanta Centre.

State officials fail to accept responsibility

By Judith Denzer Cooper

State Sen. Alan McKinnon, State Rep. Frank Hynes and Senator-elect William Golden expressed frustration with state transportation officials who did not seem willing to accept responsibility for developing a master plan for the South Shore at a transportation meeting held in Hingham Nov. 14.

McKinnon, who is retiring from the Senate this year, said he has accomplished some transportation projects including development of the commuter boat system and improvements to Route 3-A traffic flow. But he was supported by Hynes and Golden when he said "We deserve an overall masterplan for transportation services . . . with deadlines and specific expectations . . . We're not asking for miracles but we can expect cooperation."

The legislators asked Assistant Secretary Michael Shea of the Executive Office of Transportation and Construction to develop a plan that includes buses, cars, boats and trains. They also asked for specific information about the red line. McKinnon said, "When will the red line be reliable? When can we count on it working reasonably well?"

The transportation meeting included representatives from the State Department of Public Works, the MBTA and the Department of Water Transportation. Each individual gave a report on the present status of the three modes of transportation on the South Shore.

WILL ROUTE 3 BE WIDENED?

Major questions asked by members of the audience revolved around the future of Route 3. State DPW representative Robert McDonough spoke proudly of the expressway reconstruction project being done well and on time. These comments brought a sharp response from Golden who said, "With the expressway reconstruction, you have shown us that when you want to do it right you can." Golden then asked why the same concentrated effort could not be applied to Route 3.

McDonough said there are plans for the eventual widening of Route 3 to Duxbury but that the project is more than five years away. One member of the audience asked why the Route 3 project could not be done in two phases. The road could be widened from Weymouth to Norwell first and then the major project of building a bridge over the North River and continuing to Duxbury could be done later.

Both McDonough and State transportation planner Michael Myers presented reasons why improving Route 3 was a long term and distant project. At this point Hynes said, "I'm tired of hearing about obstacles. I want to hear about a focused plan. I don't think it's unreasonable to think that part of Route 3 can be widened."

Selectman Eleanor Seaton of Scituate also spoke to the need for a master plan. She said the only public transportation for Scituate is some service by the Plymouth and Brockton bus company. And that improvements to Route 3 and Route 3A would be very valuable for Scituate residents.

Myers told the audience that all projects such as the widening of Route 3 must go through various planning procedures. He said local officials should investigate using the Metropolitan Area Planning Council (MAPC) and get proposals for projects like Route 3 reconstruction into the planning process. Myers said the Route 3 proposal would have to be included in the Metropolitan Planning Organization (MPO) plan and the Transportation Improvement Plan (TIP) before it could be considered.

When contacted after the meeting Hynes said the Route 3 project is already in the MPO and the TIP. It is just waiting for action to begin. Hynes said, "Myers' confusion is a symptom of the lack of attention given by State transportation officials to the needs of the South Shore."

The meeting also included reports of the status of commuter boat service from Hingham. Cecile Papazian said improved facilities in Hingham and the addition of a back-up boat should increase ridership. Papazian said, "At present more people ride the red line in two days than ride the boat in a year."

Jack Leary of the MBTA reported on the red line. He said the 70 year old system is undergoing track replacement and signal improvements. Fifty eight new cars will be purchased and all of the old cars are being reconditioned. By 1986 there wil be 221 reliable cars on the red line.

Why should you travel on the Commuter Boat?

Captain Dana Goodell of the Boston Harbor Commuter Services is sponsoring the "Focus on the Harbor" photo contest.

Sponsored by all the Boston-South Shore commuter boat services and Nobles Camera Shop, the contest will promote publicity for commuter boat traveling.

Winners will be awarded gift certificates from Nobles Camera Shop, Hingham; Clark's Sporting Goods, East Weymouth; the Barker House, Scituate; and the Salty Dog, Fanueil Hall Marketplace; including ticket booklets from the commuter boat companies.

In addition, the winning photographs will be displayed and may be reproduced in promotional literature.

To enter, contestants must submit photos taken aboard a commuter boat to Boston from Hingham, Hull or Quincy. Photos will be judged on how they reveal the scenic experience of riding across the Boston Harbor on these 'commuter cruises'.

Contestants can obtain complimentary one-way tickets at the award-giving establishments mentioned above. All entries should be sent to Nobles Camera Shop by Nov. 30.

For more information, call 740-1253.

It's happening in Cohasset . . .

'Cinderella' a professional play

The Cohasset Dramatic Club is fortunate this year to have two leading professionals writing and directing their original English Pantomime production of "Cinderella," the club's fall show.

Based upon a long-standing mutual interest in "panto," playwright Rushworth Kidder and director Judy Holmes have collaborated on this unique, musical version of the classic fairy tale.

Mr. Kidder is no novice to the writing profession. After graduating Cum Laude from Amherst and receiving both his master's in drama and Ph.D. in contemporary literature from Columbia, Mr. Kidder accepted a professorship at the University of Kansas in 1969. During his residency at the university, he wrote Dyland Thomas: The Country of the Spirit and e.e. cummings: An Introduction to the Poetry.

After leaving Kansas in 1979, Mr. Kidder became London correspondent for the Christian Science Monitor. While residing in London, he first became acquainted with English Pantomime and thoughts began to germinate for what later turned into "Cinderella." Mr. Kidder is currently a feature editor and columnist in Boston for the Christian Science Monitor.

Besides providing the script for this imaginative farce, Mr. Kidder also composed the original music and lyrics. He has been involved in the music world for many years, first as an arranger for a musical group in Amherst, and currently as a piano player for a charity group in Boston.

Mr. Kidder will also be playing the accompaniment the nights of the performances.

Judy Holmes, the play's director, is the other driving force of the production. Her artistic background is quite varied and includes acting, directing, coaching, poetry readings, and workshops. She was born in England and trained at the London Academy of Music and Dramatic Arts and the Guildhall School of Music and Drama. Ms. Holmes has acted in everything from farces to classics in repertory, tours, and London theater as well as television and BBC radio.

In her well-known tenure as the artistic director of Hingham's Elizabethan Companie, she produced nine plays. Her last directing for the Cohasset Dramatic Club was in March of 1983 for "Dangerous Corner" and previously in February of 1981 for "Uncle Vanya." She has also directed the Publick Theatre in Boston in Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night."

Judy's family is involved in "Cinderella." Her husband Derek, who has appeared in many of the Elizabethan Companie's production, is playing Baron Stoneybroke, the daffy, eccentric inventor, while her daughter Stephanie, is Kitty. Others in the case include Jan Higbee who will play Cinderella; Alice Duffy, her very out of the ordinary fairy godmother; and Scott Ketcham as Buttons, the apprentice inventor to Stoneybroke who talks to the audience as a modern-day chorus.

A traditional panto technique of switching genders has led to Sally Rossi-Langer playing Prince Charming; Jim McLeod-Warrick and Bob Julian playing the ugly sisters, Nostalgia and Nausea; and Sarah Delima playing Dandini, the prince's only friend.

"Cinderella" will provide a wonderful, humorous evening with dancing, audience participation, and many grand spectacles using a cast of about 60 people. It will be presented for two successive weekends at the Cohasset Town Hall: Dec. 7 and 8 at 8 p.m. and Sunday, Dec. 9 at 2 p.m., and Friday, Dec. 14 at 8 p.m. and Saturday, Dec. 15 at 2 p.m.

Senior citizens are invited for dress rehearsal, Thursday, Dec. 6 at 8 p.m. at no charge.

Tickets are available in advance at Fleming's Hardware, 124 Elm Street in downtown Cohasset or by calling 383-0170.

Relocation meeting

Donna H. Tillotson, vice president of Hunneman & Co./Better Homes and Gardens, and director of Hunneman's Relocation Center, recently joined other leaders in the corporate relocation industry at a national meeting called "Super Session 1984."

At the meeting held in Atlanta, Georgia, she met with representatives of large corporations, relocation-management companies and professionals in related fields, and members of the real estate industry that specialize in working with transferees.

Sponsored by Dallas-based consultants in Relocation, Inc., "Super Session 1984" is the only national meeting, open to all industry leaders, which focuses entirely on the real estate aspects of employee relocation.

Trautwein assumes command

In a recent change of command ceremony, Commander Tom A. Trautwein of Cohasset, Mass. assumed command of Naval Reserve Naval Station Rota 0391 from Commander Robert D. Pickett, Jr. of Marshfield, Mass. at the South Weymouth Naval Air Station.

Commander Trautwein has commanded Patrol Squadron Ninety-two (VP—92) since April, 1983. Entering the Navy in 1966 he was commissioned an Ensign and Naval Aviator following flight training. Assigned to Patrol Squadron Forty (VP—40) at Moffet Field, California Naval Air Station, he flew P-3B aircraft out of Japan, the Phillipine Islands, Vietnam and Thailand until 1971.

He is employed by Proctor & Gamble Manufacturing Co. as Operations Manager in the Quincy plant, and received a Bachelor of Science in Engineering degree from the University of California (Berkeley).

Commander Trautwein and his wife, the former Susannah L. Simpson of Petaluna, California, are parents of two sons — Todd and Chad.

Give her the best Christmas gift in sight.

This year, give her the gift that is as unique and as beautiful as she is and one that is functional too: Softcolors soft contact lenses by Ciba. In four beautiful shades of blue, green, aqua, and amber, these lenses enhance her natural eye color. They provide excellent vision and are comfortable to wear.

So ask your eye care practitioner about a Softcolors gift certificate for her Christmas gift this year. Her appreciation will show in her eyes. . . all year long.

Ask your eye care practitioner if Softcolors are right for you.

"Hi, Cohasset, I'm Ann calling you from Mass Save..."

We'd like to conduct a $10 energy survey of your home. The ideas we provide could save you hundreds of dollars each year.

So far we've helped over 200,000 Massachusetts households. We're phoning customers in this area now to encourage more of you to cut energy costs.

No one will try to sell you anything, our only product is information. Mass-Save is a non-profit service dedicated to giving you low- and no-cost energy saving ideas.

Now is the ideal time to act. So if you'd rather not wait for our call, call us. Toll-free.

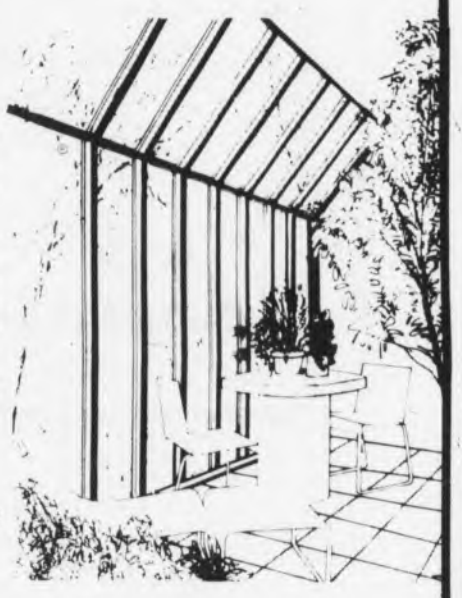
the SOLARIUM



for Creative Living

In this increasingly solar-oriented society, our solariums combine the demands for energy efficiency with the esthetic needs of today's sophisticated lifestyle.

The quality of the Grammans SOLARIUM is unmatched in the industry. Once installed, our finished aluminum framing is virtually maintenance-free and is leakproof. The 1" insulated glass is hermetically sealed to prevent condensation. A poured polyurethane thermal barrier in the framing minimizes your energy bills, and ease of installation cuts labor costs as well. Gammans' complete designing and engineering services can provide you with almost any size you desire. The versatility of the SOLARIUM makes it ideal for both old and new homes, apartments, office complexes, and condominiums.

WONDERLAND by LIGHT

There's a magical kingdom waiting for you and your children. A kingdom where the spirit of Christmas burns brightly for young and old alike. Where 200,000 Christmas lights illuminate the night, painting rainbows across the winter's landscape. And heated antique steam trains travel through woods and fields alive with wondrous sights.

It's the Edaville Railroad Christmas Light Festival. A magical world where Christmas carols fill the air. And laughing children run from one marvelous attraction to the next. From Santa's Village to the baby deer in the petting zoo. From magical animated Christmas displays to a merry white-bearded man who always has a good word and a small gift to share with a child.

Explore this wonderful world with your family. Experience the dozens of attractions, the once-in-a-lifetime train ride, and New England's largest and most magnificent display of Christmas lights.

It's the Spirit of Christmas magically brought to life—at the Edaville Railroad Christmas Light Festival.

Visit the Edaville Railroad Christmas Light Festival
Open daily (except Nov. 22nd and Dec. 25th) now through Jan. 6th; 4–9 PM weekdays; 2–9 PM weekends. Edaville is located on Rte. 58 in South Carver, MA, four miles from Rte. 495, and eleven miles from Rte. 3 via Rte. 44. For more information, call (617) 866-4526.

'We're the lucky ones'

The joys of adoption

By Judy Gilman

Thanksgiving Day, with its gathering of relatives near and far around the traditionally groaning table, is perhaps the most "family" of American holidays. President Reagan has declared this week National Family Week. But for some South Shore families, this time takes on a deeper meaning.

For, for the first time, the President has also declared the week as National Adoption Week. And while members of the Open Door Society of the South Shore have been thinking of it in those terms for years, it's nice to get official recognition.

The society, ODS as it's familiarly known, is not in its own right an adoption agency. What it is is a closely-knit group of families who have adopted children or who are thinking about this very special, and sometimes rather frightening, step.

Talking with a number of ODS families is a most upbeat experience, for without exception, they are enthusiastic—almost beyond description—about their adoption experiences and their children and about the group that lends them support and gives them a forum in which to discuss everything from foreign-adoption red tape to how to deal with peer pressures in school.

Every family interviewed was different in their family makeup and in their experiences. And yet they all expressed the view of Linda Fitzgerald of Hingham who said, "It's not the kids who are the lucky ones. We're the really lucky ones."

She and husband Joe have two daughters, Anjali, who will be two Dec. 1, and Channa, who's now four months old. They're both from India and "just adorable," according to their admittedly-doting mom.

"My family just wanted us to be really sure before we made the decision," Linda recalled Saturday. "They said bringing up any child in this world is difficult, and there might be other complications." Linda was frankly a bit concerned about the lack of the same kind of prenatal care found here in the U.S. and what effect that might have on Anjali and Channa. But she found her worries groundless.

"Anjali hasn't had a cold since she arrived last February," she said. "And she's so quick to pick things up." Channa had been a five-weeks premature baby, weighing three pounds ten ounces at birth. When she arrived here at the end of September, she weighed six pounds. When she visited her pediatrician a month after she'd arrived, she'd gained three pounds, an astonishing rate. "She's really thriving," Linda said.

The Indian adoption agencies, Linda said, like to get the children established with their new homes and families. Paperwork is begun a day or two after birth, and the children arrive in the care of escorts from Angels in the Air.

"Anjali (who arrived when she was 11 weeks old) had a 45-hour trip, including layovers," Linda said. "They started in Calcutta and flew to New Delhi, where there was an eight-hour layover. From there they went to Pakistan, Amsterdam, and London, then finally to New York" where her parents were waiting.

Linda first heard about ODS from an accounting client of hers a month after Anjali had arrived. "And it's been just great," she said. "You have to understand that, for adoptive parents, adopting is a very big part of our lives. We can talk about it for hours, and some people, who are only mildly interested, don't want to hear you go on and on. With

by JOAN PINKHAM

Only an optimist would dare to ask, on the day after Thanksgiving, "What's for dinner?" Only a dreamer would expect to sit down to anything other than leftovers. In our house, anyone who still has an appetite on Thanksgiving night makes up a cold-turkey sandwich — to me, the best part of eating at home. "Pickers" should have to open the refrigerator door for their leftovers, as the turkey should never be left out on the kitchen counter when the meal is over. If your fridge is crowded, give the bird top priority when it comes to space, even if you have to shift things like beer, wine, or other less perishable, bulky foods to a picnic cooler. Refrigerate only enough leftover turkey for two or three days and freeze any extra. Certainly a novel way with turkey leftovers is Terry Maye's

TURKEY TACOS

1 can (1 pound) tomatoes
1 envelope taco seasoning mix
1 to 2 c. diced cooked turkey
1/4 c. chopped green pepper
1 T oil
12 taco shells
Shredded lettuce and shredded cheese

Combine in saucepan tomatoes, contents of seasoning mix envelope, turkey, pepper and oil. Bring to a boil, reduce heat and simmer 5 min., stirring frequently. Heat taco shells for 3 to 4 min. in 300 degree oven. Spoon turkey mixture into shells and garnish with lettuce and cheese. Serves six.

Faced with the long holiday weekend with the continuing family reunions, kids home from college and friends dropping in, it might be well to have this dessert of Cathy Perea's on hand that is called

CRANBERRY CREAM FREEZE

2/3 c. graham cracker crumbs
2 T sugar
4 T butter or oleo, melted
1 8 oz. pkg. cream cheese, softened
1/4 c. sugar
1 pt. vanilla ice cream
1 16 oz. can whole cranberry sauce

Combine crumbs, 2 T sugar and oleo. Press into bottom of 8" springform pan. Beat cream cheese and remaining sugar together till fluffy. Working quickly, beat in ice cream, a heaping tablespoon at a time. You may need to let ice cream stand in the fridge several minutes to soften. Pour over crust. Stir cranberry sauce. Drop by spoonfuls into ice cream mixture. Cover, freeze approx. 4 hours. Serves eight.

It's all too easy when preparing a big meal to get a little careless in the preparation and it's important to avoid cross contamination by washing utensils and counter surfaces thoroughly before using for another food. So that there won't be any tummy aches nad lagging appetites, besides keeping things clean, remember to keep hot foods hot (140 degrees or more) and cold foods cold (40 degrees or less) and no food at room temperature for more than two hours. It may be a little late in the day to serve Gloria Whitford's recipe which she says is an awfully pretty addition to the holiday table, but to my way any day would be a good day for

FRUIT FILLED SQUASH

Cut four small acorn or butternut squash in half lengthwise, remove seeds and place cut side down in a 13x9x2" baking dish. Bake in 350 oven for 35 min. Turn cut side up and sprinkle with salt. Combine 1 c. chopped, unpared apple, 1 c. fresh cranberries, chopped, 1 small orange, peeled and diced, 1/2 c. brown sugar and 2 T melted butter. Fill squash with the fruit mixture and continue baking for 25 min., or until squash is tender. Serves eight.

Today we welcome those cooks in Braintree and Weymouth who enjoy every minute spent in their kitchens, whipping up meals and trying out yet another new recipe. Since the Marshfield Mariner made its debut over 12 years ago, this little corner of the paper has been devoted to an exchange of recipes, hints, ideas and suggestions. Now that women in our other towns here on the South Shore have laid aside their pots and pans long enough to share their family favorites with us, we hope that both men and women of our new reading public will join in the fun. Most recipes have misty origins, but if it's a favorite in your family, we've learned over the years, it's usually good enough to print.

Happy Thanksgiving.

A few good words for McKinnon & Tsongas

If for no other reason than it is but a matter of fortnights before some insufferable pollster notifies us that some so-and-so is leading the polls in the early running for 1988, it is time to put the 1984 election into history. Before doing so, a few closing comments about the not terribly hilarious 1984 show that ran on for far too many acts.

. . . Probably the worst development of 1984 was the refinement into an incessant barrage of the "negative spot," the 30 second commercial which seeks to denigrate some aspect of an opponent's reputation. In Southeastern Massachusetts, we are situated so as to receive this junk food of oratory from three states. I don't know about you, but your reporter is a breather.

John Kerry's messages first about Ed Markey,then about Jim Shannon, and finally, about Ray Shamie told me more about John Kerry than we ever wanted to know, and he was but the most prominent, most successful practitioner of the utterly unhumorous, unuplifting black art of denigration. Nearly everyone did it, and one must wonder why, in relatively good times, it is so hard to find candidates capable of articulating a vision.

. . . Consistent with the overall negative thrust of the 1984 season, far too little was said about the departing figures of 1984. Probably the low light of a low season for me was sitting in the Worcester Centrum listening to retiring Sen. Tsongas attempt to address the state Democratic Convention last spring.

Tsongas is a genuine hero of the Democratic party. He spoke that day and turned a personal tragedy into a joyous, loving decision to give up public life for his family. One would have thought that the Party he had served so well would hang on every word he would say to them.

To the disgusting contrary, the Ed King types (what few were there) didn't hang around for Tsongas' speech, and the Mike Dukakis types didn't bother to listen, apparently too busy being pleased with themselves over their serging political power. The result was a spectacle in which one of the finer public servants of our time could not make himself heard to those who ought to appreciate him the most.

Another retiring Senator no one seems to be thanking is the South Shore's own Allan McKinnon. McKinnon has served ably, honestly, and at times courageously in a State Senate that has given us more jailbirds than statesmen lately. Yet at liberal cocktail parties your reporter hears his liberal friends blithering on about Senator-elect Bill Golden, without ever bothering to mention Allan McKinnon.

Now, Bill Golden would seem to be a fine young man, and become a great senator. But the man of the decade is McKinnon, and he should not be allowed to move on without those he has served pausing from the pursuit of political trendiness without thanking him for his distinguished years of service.

. . . It's time for Lew Crampton to learn Portuguese, he has no alternative if he means to run against Gerry Studds again. That's exactly what Studds did after his narrow defeat in 1970 by then Cong. Hastings Keith. Since then Studds has owned New Bedford, and since then Studds has not tasted defeat.

Crampton carried the South Shore and could be expected to again . . . those who deserted Studds on account of his censure are not likely to return to him in future years. But New Bedford still dominates the Congressional district, and no challenger will have a chance against Studds without cutting into his margin there.

My guess is that Studds will retire in 1986 or 1988. In his view he has been vindicated on the 1973 issue, he has always asserted that public office should not be forever, and he is a man whose interests extend well beyond politics. . . . In any event, Lew Crampton and anyone else who would like to succeed him should brush up on their Portuguese.

Studds, on the other hand, needs to brush up on the New England twang as spoken in the South Shore. While his constituent services here as elsewhere have always been superb, Studds continues to see our transportation conundrum as a "local problem" not requiring his involvement. It is ironic that Studds, who grew up in Cohasset, has no difficulty appreciating the New Bedford fishing industry, but he will not understand that transportation is a true economic problem, the resolution of which is vital to our future quality of life.

Some sound reasons for owning pets

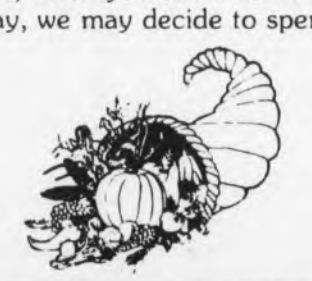
Have you ever considered eating the family dog or cat?

My question may be repugnant to you, creating images of roasted Rover or sunny-side-up Sylvester. But I'm asking this to illustrate a point.

Cats and dogs hold a kind of sacred position in our society. Millions of pigs, cows and chickens are raised to be slaughtered for food, usually living under conditions we would never subject our pets to. Yet these animals are not lower life forms than our domestic pets. Something obviously sets our pets apart from other animals.

This week I attended a lecture by Dr. Andrew Rowan of Tufts University's School of Veterinary Medicine, who discussed some plausible reasons for why we adore the 50 million dogs and 50 million cats which share our lives and cost between $400 and $700 each a year.

He first kicked out the old theories that animals are replacements for human contact, a by-product of a booming economy and a parasitic condition placed on society by the pet industry.



We keep pets, he said, to enhance our physical and psychological health. The obvious is true; they make us happy.

For instance, when you and I come home after an awful work day, we may decide to spend a few quiet minutes stroking our animals. When we do this the animals' heart rates lower and get stronger. So do ours. We relax, hence the animals serve as a stress reducer.

Pets are also great for our self-esteem. Rowan said most people envision the ideal pet being attentive, loyal and expressive. Pets give human beings a sense of security.

He asserted that though academia has a hard time taking the study of pet ownership seriously, these animals have a tremendous amount of status in our society. He said persons may not want to examine the topic closely because they are anxious about their animals not being human but seeming to possess human qualities.

Do they have emotions? Do they have souls? Do they love us? These questions reflect our anxiety, as does our use of terms such a pig and dog and bitch.

ASBESTOS LUNG DISEASE

Asbestos dust causes serious lung ailments; the diseases appear suddenly, years after exposure. Today numerous SHIPYARD WORKERS, MASONS, and PIPEFITTERS of the 1930's-1970's have lung afflictions because they inhaled asbestos particles many years ago.

If you worked in one of those professions then and now have a lung disease, you may be eligible to receive money damages or workers' compensation. Relatives of living and deceased victims can also recover in some cases.

The joys of adoption

ODS, it's sharing a very important experience.

"They have some very helpful speakers, as well," she said. "And the outings for kids are great. I think it's important for our children to be with other children that are different, too. At two or three, they may not know they're different, but they will know by the time they get to school. And having a group of friends who are all like them because they're all different will be very helpful.

"I would definitely recommend the experience," Linda said. "The joy they bring is so wonderful it's hard to express."

Joe and Susan Mahan of Weymouth already had two biological sons of their own when they decided they wanted to expand their family. "But our younger son, Michael, was eight, and we decided we didn't want a baby but an older child. That was nearly three years ago, and there was a lot of publicity in the media about older children needing homes. We contacted DSS (the state Department of Social Services) and went through a home study. Then we had to wait."

When they heard about Tim, who came from western Massachusetts, "we pursued him. We visited with him for four months before he moved in. Six months after that, we went to court to adopt him."

Tim is unique in that he is now the oldest son in the family, with 12-year-old Joseph making up the trio.

"There was a very big period of adjustment," Susan recalled. "Sometimes you don't realize you've been through something until it's all over."

The Mahans heard about ODS at an informational meeting the society held at DSS. "But we didn't seek support until we'd started visiting Tim. We wanted to meet him first."

ODS is "a great support group. Your family and friends haven't been through the same sorts of experiences and problems. The group is never judgmental, which is very important. They're always willing to listen and share their experiences that may help you out."

Susan strongly recommends adopting an older child. "But you have to know in your own mind what your motive is. You have to be strong to make it work."

There were reverberations from their other two sons and the rest of the family. "There were negative reactions at first. They wanted to know why we were bothering. Weren't the two of them enough? And our families didn't really understand our reasoning at first. It wasn't until we all started visiting Tim, that there was a name and a face, that things began to fall into place."

Donna and Bob Batts with Kerri, 8, and Elise, 4.

It's been a year and a half now since Tim joined the Mahan family and "it's getting better all the time," Susan said.

Bill and Joann Norton of Pembroke agreed "it would have been a lot less complicated if we had gotten in touch with ODS before we adopted. The agencies recommend it, but it was one of those things, with making all the decisions, going through all the paperwork and working at the same time, that we put off."

David, now 4½, arrived when he was six months old from Korea. Victoria, now three, was five months old when she followed her brother.

"We really caused ourselves a lot of needless anxiety," Joann recalled. "It's so much better if you can share the experience with others who have been through it. You may know it's ridiculous, but you're up at 5 a.m. scrubbing the front door the day the social worker's coming for the home study. And she's much more interested in meeting you.

"With ODS, you're plugged into a great information network," Joann added.

She spoke very highly of the Korean adoption program. "It's very stable, it's been established for decades. You know so much about your child before he or she comes."

Joann and Bill's families were "very supportive. I have a cousin who also adopted a Korean child. Our family tree is a little exotic."

But Joann also wanted to make very clear "we're so grateful to any birth parents, who make the decision to give up their child. What I would like more than anything else is to give them some peace of mind."

Joe and Joanna Tobin of Hingham have four adopted children, three of them in a so-called "open adoption." In this system, unlike the traditional scheme where the birth parent has no contact with the child once it's put up for adoption, there is contact with the birth parents, sometimes through letters and gifts, sometimes through visits.

The Tobins have a busy brood to look after. Allison's a year old, Sarah is three, Christopher's seven, and Joshua is nine.

"Open adoption with an older child is not as unusual," Joanna said Friday.

When it gets too late too early

Long have I been in awe of them, the night people. My most profound confrontation with one of them came years ago at a party when a neighbor said brightly at 2 a.m., "This is the shank of the evening."

Shank. Whose? Not mine. The foot, maybe, the toe. Never have I experienced a day's 'shank' at 2 a.m. I ran into that about 4 in the afternoon, when I think dinner should be served, in order to allow a few quiet hours before bedtime.

My obvious inadequacies with late evenings have been an embarrassment to me. It is as if a shade comes down over my eyes, a flannel blanket over my mind with the dwindling sign-off sound of the "Star Spangled Banner" in my ears.

All this while effervescent chatter emulates from the lips of people with whom I shared an evening but with whom I do not share the body's clock. Indeed I have found pain and a type of torture few understand when I've stayed up beyond the signoff.

Recently, however, I saw the flip side of the coin and it afforded both entertainment and redemption.

I had something to drop off at a friend's house before I went to work. I head out for that anytime between 7 and 7:30. That is of course your a.m. time. I am, after all, a highly a.m. person. It isn't that I rule the world at 6 but my chances of it are better then than they are 12 hours later.

Anyway, I bustled into her kitchen, greeting her robust boys, swapping non news with them as they were commandeering most of the milk and the rest of the cereal.

Their mother, they said, would be down in a minute. That was true, in a manner of speaking. Within 15 minutes a woman resembling someone whom I remembered as being a lively sort, droned into her kitchen. She was in her robe, something that I sensed troubled her enough to have warranted an explanation, if she'd been up to it.

She wasn't. I have seen more vitality in people rolled out of the recovery room on wheels than she exhibited.

There we were, night and day, my day, her night. The frustration I find in being up beyond my bedtime, she found in getting up before her getup time.

She was distressed by early morning happenstances as I am by nighttime ones. Similarly (with a 12 to 16 hour time difference) - household occurrences which need correction seem beyond one's ability. I, for example, could leave a table that needed to be cleared at night until morning. I would have no use for the table then, anyway.

She, that morning, was confounded because the cat had been up on the table. So she said we shouldn't use it to sit at for coffee. What you can't deal with when the body clock says simmer, you do without, especially as an alternative to doing something about it, or fixing anything.

Her coffee schlopped when she poured it and the bread was cut too large to fit into the toaster. Such situation wrought minor moans from her, too early, she said,"not my best time of day".

Her boys hustled about getting their coats while she, as best she could, remembered what it was she meant to tell them for the day . . . wear jackets, wait for her after school, all of which took its toll on a woman who said repeatedly that she had no business being up.

This, you see, is the same person who told me later about a movie she'd watched on cable from 1 to 3 a.m. I am barely aware there is a 1 to 3 a.m., let alone anything happening on cable or elsewhere. When I had babies (I now refer to my memory bank) I, tantamount to a drugged stupor, had a seven minute ritual during which I changed a diaper and fed tham and then snuggled them with me. They said you were never supposed to do that. It probably saved the lives of my children rather than my falling asleep with them in a slippery chair.

But this night time personality plus person whom I hadn't watched at my peak of the day had her stupor early and then got over it right through the night. Amazing.

Her very movement, once accomplished, was at the slowest of speeds. No seven minute shower, she says, or 17 minutes between that and ready for work. She needs more time to accelerate to a speed that carries her into her desirable time of day. I, meanwhile, have been at my fullest speed by 2 p.m. and start to wind down.

One of the things for which I'm grateful (and I'm mindful this is Grateful Week) is that we're all different. Lord save us from sameness. What dreary dregs we'd be of one another.

This way we have endless variety in physical beings, emotional reactions, creative thinking.

Viva la difference(s) and Happy Thanksgiving.

'No Sex Please'. . . pure entertainment

Play review

By Corinne A. Kutish

If you've got friends or family visiting for the holidays, take them to see "No Sex Please, We're British" at the North River Community Club in Norwell. This riotous British farce runs the next two weekends and offers pure entertainment.

All action takes place in an apartment over the branch of a bank in London, where two newly-weds, Peter and Frances Hunter (played by Brian DeLorenzo and Kathie Erickson), are setting up their first home.

The budget is tight, though, and Frances sends away for Swedish glassware, which an ad promised she could sell from her living room like Tupperware. What arrives is dirty photos, then dirty movies, and then dirty books. As expected, pandemonium breaks out.

Into this madness enters Peter's mother, Eleanor (played by Janice Daley), who demands constant catering to her whims; Peter's officious boss, Leslie Bromhead (played by Bill Chouinard), who is smitten by Eleanor; and a timid bank inspector, Mr. Needham (played by Al Pizzotti).

Both DeLorenzo and Erickson keep the show's pace running smoothly. Erickson, who has acted in a number of shows for Quincy Community Theatre, showed endearing exasperation at the wild goings-on.

But the run-away favorite of the show is Sean Mahony, who as the bank's chief cashier, Brian Runnicles, lights up the stage with his comic antics. Mahony is in his fourth role at the North River Community Club.

As the boxes of pornographic matter keep appearing at the door, Peter and Frances are driven frantic trying to dispose of them. In desperation, Brian is pressed into service, despite his high-pitched objections.

As Brian, Mahony capers across stage, reluctantly carrying out the boxes to bury or burn. But bad luck follows him as he is seen dropping the photos in the river Thames, and the films he shoved into a garbage truck was actually heading for a church bazaar.

Janice Daley, who has been active in community theatre since high school, is excellent in her role as the ever-present mother-in-law, grandiose with her gestures and meticulous with her wardrobe. As Eleanor, she has her cap set on Mr. Bromhead and she never wavers in her pursuit.

Bill Chouinard, who has appeared in two recent musical productions with the NRCC, plays a delightfully pompous Mr. Bromhead, with a hearty baritone laugh and a fetish for proper procedures.

Other highly comic characters are Gail Dunphy and Alyce Feathers-Fitzgerald as two "ladies of the evening" sent to the Hunters' apartment in error by the supposed Swedish glassware company.

Dunphy has appeared in a number of previous NRCC productions. As Susan, an experienced hooker, she slinks across stage. Along with her apprentice, Barbara (played by Feathers-Fitzgerald), the two have a funny bit with Al Pizzotti, who plays a confused bank inspector.

The two hookers assume Pizzotti is their "customer" and chase him relentlessly back and forth across the stage.

Also appearing briefly in the NRCC production are Bob Treganowen as Police Superintendent Paul, in hot pursuit of the phantom pornographer, and James McPhee as the delivery man who keeps popping up with more unwanted packages.

In addition to the fine acting on-stage, credit must also be given to the obvious effort made behind the scenes. Jan and Burt Lindemann, Clay and Sue Lewis, and Marion Barnes decorated the set, which was built by Bob Neary, Barry Cornwall, Bob and Torey Treganowen, Joe McAlarney and James McPhee.

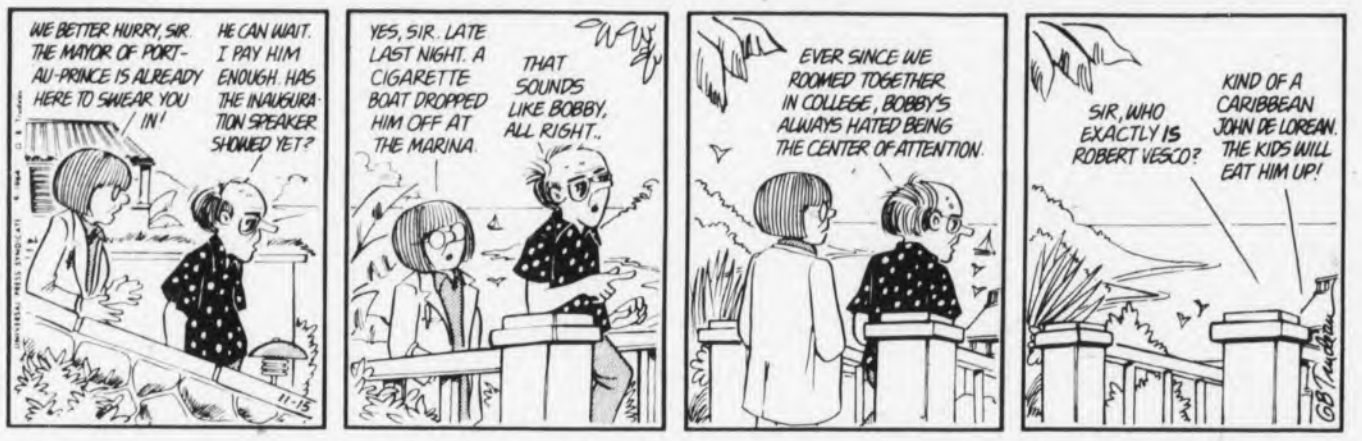
Dorris Pizzotti is stage manager, assisted by James McPhee. Barry Cornwall is producer.

Special mention must be given to director Joe McAlarney, who, in his directing debut, has put together a very funny production.

Marion Barnes is assistant director and Gail Dunphy is responsible for make-up.

The NRCC is well-known for its quality amateur productions on the South Shore and "No Sex Please, We're British," by Anthony Marriott and Alistair Foot, carries on this tradition.

Seating is cabaret style and refreshments are available. Tickets are $6.00 and are available at The Deli on Route 123 in Norwell Centre, or through the mail by calling an answering service at 659-7000.



"No Sex Please, We're British" continues Friday and Saturday nights, Nov. 23, 24, 30 and Dec. 1 at 8 p.m. The club is located at 513 River Street in Norwell.

The joys of adoption

"We adopted Chris in July. He had lived with his mother and remembered her and does keep some contact." But open adoption with infants is new, and both Sarah and Allison have been adopted under this plan.

Joanna said Hawaii has always had a policy of open adoption and a few other states have adopted it. But here in Massachusetts, the Tobins are the very first, through their agency, Cambridge Family and Children's Agency. "We're their guinea pigs," she said. "And we've found it very non-threatening. It makes no difference in the legality of the adoption. It's admitting the child did come from a birth parent.

"If this were our first child, we might not feel as comfortable with it. But with four, there's no problem. I know I'm their mother. I'm the one that's raising them.

"I'm grateful to the birth parents," Joanna added. "It's no skin off my nose to share letters and photographs with them."

Joanna said she and Joe had meant to get involved with ODS earlier. But it wasn't until there were some questions about Chris's medical background that she called Lynn Rizzotto in Hingham, an active ODS member. Lynn contacted a nurse who was also active in ODS and the questions were quickly cleared up.

"Everyone is so warm and loving in the group," Joanna said. "And we all love to talk about adoption anytime anyone wants to hear about it."

Donna and Bob Batts of Hull had decided before they were married that they wanted to adopt. And like most other ODS parents, they had already been through the long and sometimes-agonizing adoption process before joining.

"It's a great outfit," Bob said. "Everyone's been through the experience. They've learned about all the shortcuts of getting through the red tape. Social workers are fine, but they're getting their knowledge out of a book. They haven't been there."

Kerri Lynn is eight and her sister Elise is four. They arrived from Korea when they were 10 months and 11 months old, respectively.

"They're completely Americanized, that's for sure," their father said. "They come in and throw their coats on the floor just like any other kids."

"They're certainly just like any other kids in the neighborhood," Donna added. But Kerri, in particular, demonstrates a lot of curiosity about her Korean heritage, which her parents encourage.

"She's got a Korean dress and she has a whole collection of books on Korea," her mother said. "She talks about going back, and maybe we'll go when the girls are teenagers."

Their families, they recall were somewhat incredulous, asking 'What do you want to do that for?' "But once the girls arrived, everything was great."

Donna also had high praise for the Korean adoption program. "The kids come healthy and fast. And they're young. We wanted to start with them young, so we could learn as we went along."

And newly-arrived Korean infants, in particular, get a lot of attention. "It's almost overwhelming. You go into a supermarket and everyone comes over to see the baby. 'How come nobody comes over to me now?' Kerri asked."

When the Battses adopted Kerri, there was no ODS chapter in the area. "I saw an ad in the Ledger to start a group and called, and we've been involved ever since," Donna said. "It's a wonderful support group. Once you've made up your mind to adopt and you go through the paperwork and the home study, you think after the waiting (for the child to arrive) that it will be all over. But that's only the beginning. Being able to talk to other adoptive parents is the best part. "

Chris and Peter Travi of Hingham have three daughters, 16 to 19. "Our friends and our families all thought we were crazy when we told them we were going to adopt a baby. 'What's the matter with you, at your age?' they asked. But Marcos is the joy of our lives," Chris said Saturday.

Marcos, now 2½, arrived from El Salvador last March 22 and on the 23rd Chris walked into her pediatrician's office. "What are you doing here?" the doctor said, astonished. "Well, we've got another one," she replied.

"It had been in the back of our minds for a long time," Chris said. "We wanted to pay back some of the good fortune we've had. I don't think I was through with mothering, and with the war going on in El Salvador, there are so many kids who need homes. And we always wanted a boy, and now we've got him."

Unlike some of the other couples interviewed, the Travis were involved with ODS from the beginning, before they adopted Marcos. "We went to an informational meeting of ODS with another couple one night," she recalled. "We wound up adopting and they didn't."

But it was an almost interminable, three-year wait before Marcos arrived. The agency the Travis were working with originally disappeared from sight. "But we were determined to succeed. And it worked out better than we ever thought possible."

The Salvadoran authorities kept changing the rules and regulations of adoption, and the only thing they guaranteed was that nothing was guaranteed. "Adoption is a very emotional business, full of ups and downs. We weren't hearing anything from the authorities. Thank goodness we had the support of our other children. I don't know what young people with no other children do," Chris said.

"But Marcos is the most beautiful little boy," she added proudly. "When he came, he was malnourished, and though he was almost two, he wasn't yet walking." And a routine X-ray revealed he had pneumonia, though that was quickly cleared up with antibiotics.

But now, "he's just great. We legally adopted him two weeks ago, and I think he knows it," Chris said jokingly. "He's turned into a monster. The house is a wreck from one end to the other. I guess he knows we can't send him back."

On a more serious note, she said she wished more people would adopt. "I don't think I ever felt tied down with the kids. I always did my own thing. But you think how we're so happy and cozy here. There are so many kids who could use homes. If every family would take one kid, what a much better world it would be."

The South Shore chapter of the Open Door Society meets every third Friday evening. There are family outings and get-togethers four times a year. There is a yearly information night for new couples interested in adopting, as well as a yearly conference put on by all 16 chapters in Massachusetts, where both parents and children participate. And a newsletter and calendar also link all state chapters.

For more information on the South Shore ODS, contact Wendy Whitman or John Tower at 749-5631. They're always delighted to talk about adoption.

Bernard — By Ellen Dargin-Knapp

"Of course you're dressed appropriately."

Introducing Bernard . . .

Bernard, inspired by Arnold, cottontail bunny from Marshfield, who travelled with owner artist Ellen Dargin-Knapp to NYC, New Jersey area. There his name changed to 'Arnell' in keeping with his Manhattan surroundings. Later he was referred to affectionately as Nell. (His dates are April 1976 - August 1983.) Look for Bernard in future issues of Shorelines.

Musings

By John H. Cutler

☐It was a wise man who said, "It is easier for a woman to defend her virtues against men than to defend her reputation among women."

☐What did President Eisenhower say at a luncheon meeting when he was surrounded by 16 Democrats and four Republicans? "I am bipartisan when I am in the minority."

☐Don't marry for money. You can borrow it cheaper.

☐Can you think of a job more boring than that of an attendant in an art museum?

☐An old Negro saying: It ain't the things you don't know what gets you into trouble; it's the things you know for sure what ain't true.

☐Favorite headlines:
FATHER SEEKS TO HAVE CHILDREN PERIODICALLY.
NUDISTS TAKE OFF FOR CONVENTION.
KIMONOS REVEAL WOMEN'S SECRETS.

☐I don't know whether Emily Post said it, but I think it's true. It's always better to be undressed than overdressed.

☐Another gem from Emily Post: Better never than late.

☐A society note in a suburban newspaper read: A bathroom shower was given the bride.

Classmates cheer newest citizen

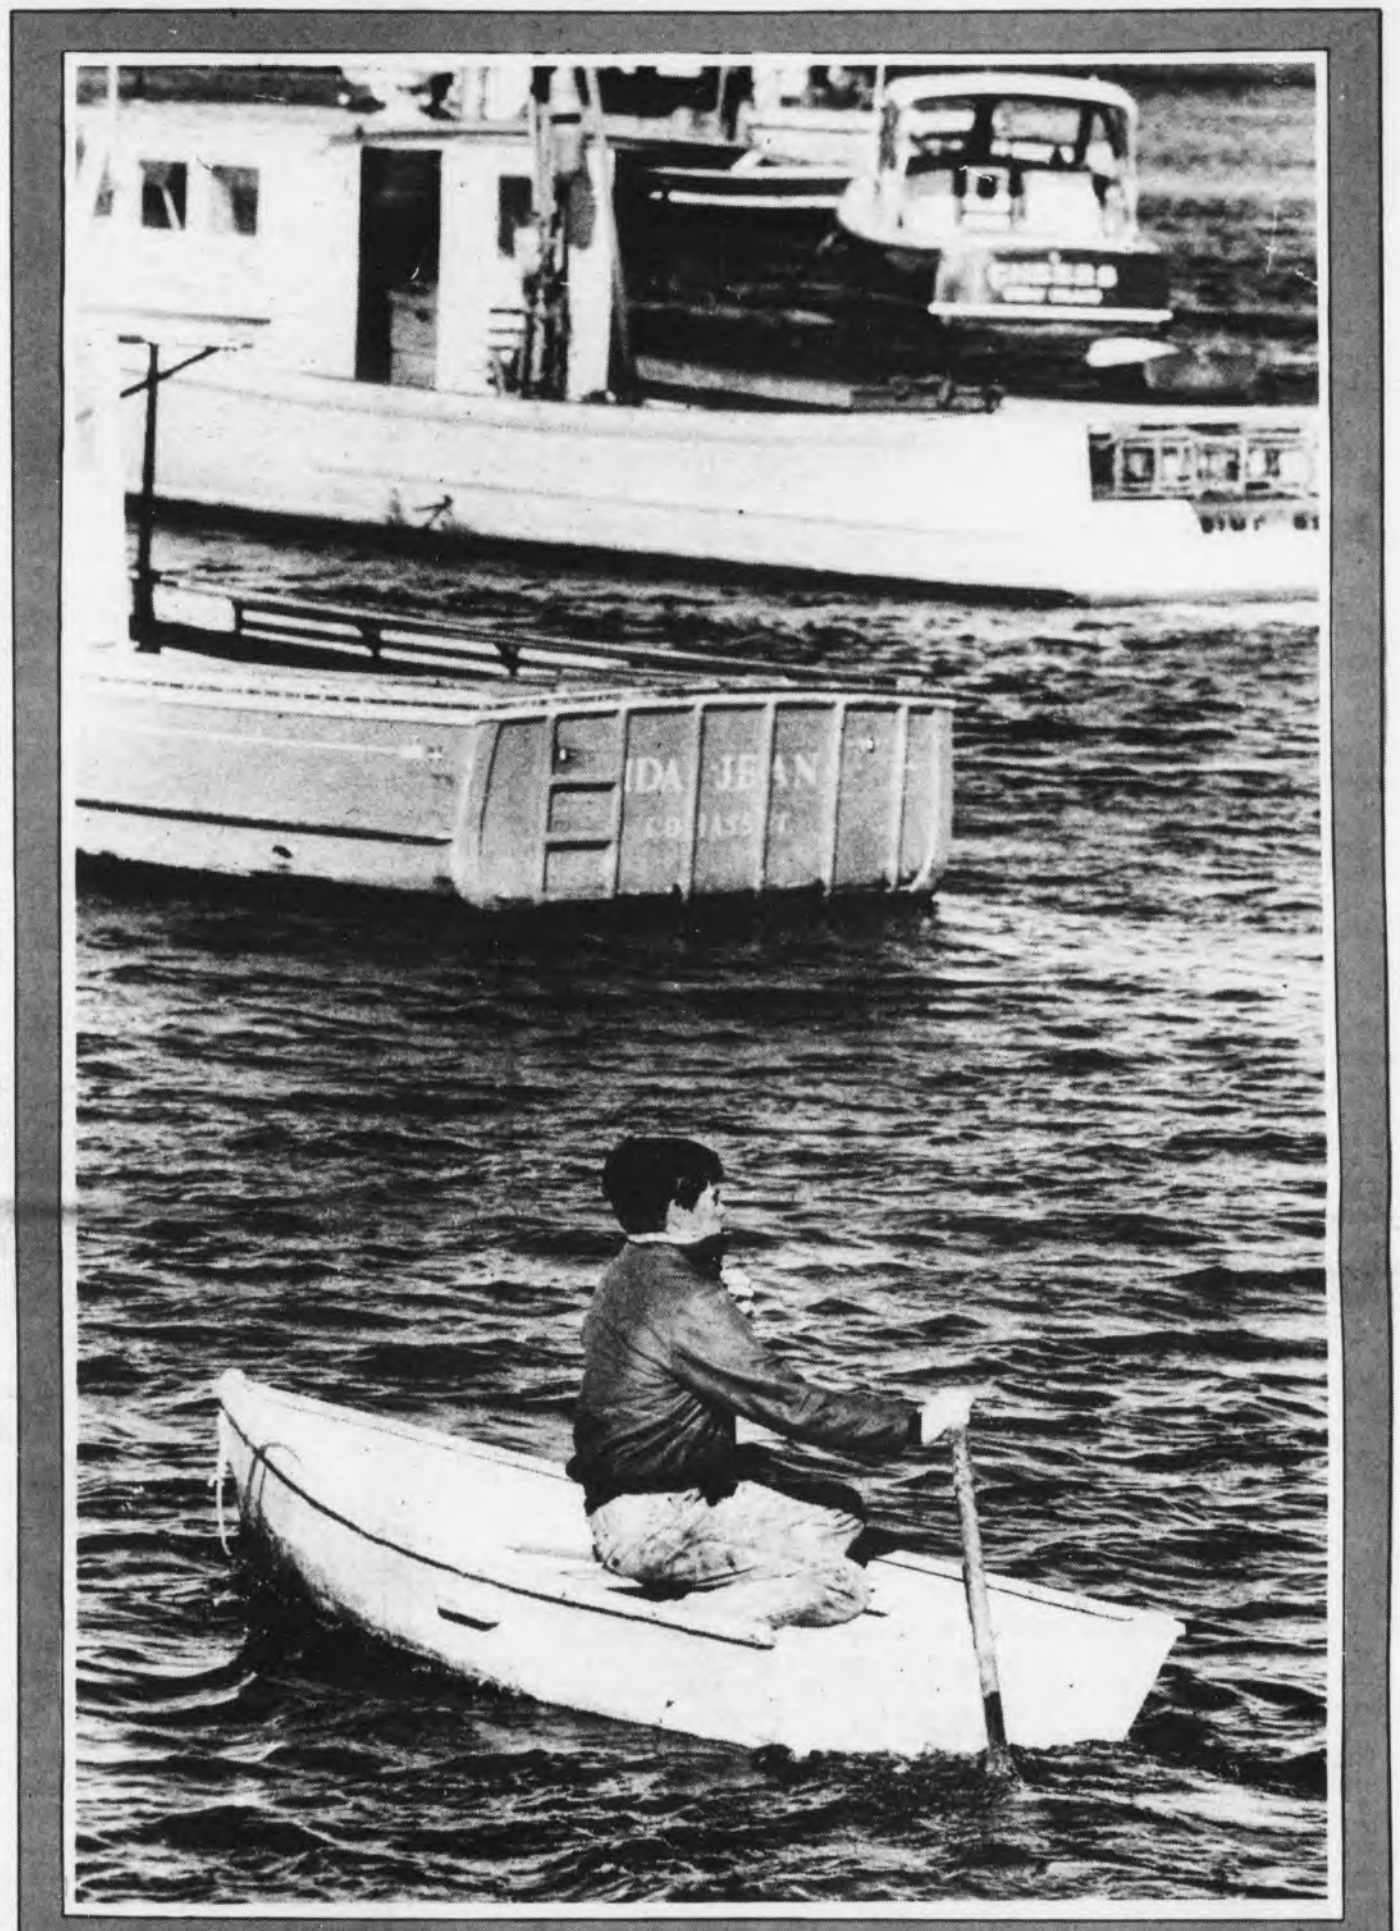
By Jane Lane

Kate Barrett The American Citizen

Katherine Anne Bae Barrett was born nine years ago in Korea. That is a nation as dissimilar to the United States, as it is distant.

But Kate, a dark-haired, wide-eyed, beautiful little girl, does not remember that foreign land of her birth. It is today and the future that is important to her now. For two weeks, Kate has been The American Citizen.

In ceremonies which took place Nov. 16 at M.I.T.'s Kresege Auditorium, Kate recited the Pledge of Allegiance, promised to "bear arms" for her new country, and listened to the orchestral strains of "It's a Grand Old Flag," and the national anthem. And with certificate in hand, the four-foot youngster came home to Cohasset, an American citizen.



Kate was adopted seven years ago by Jack and Beverly Barrett. Beverly explains the Korean War had a lot of influence on their decision to help the orphaned children of that country. Although they had three children of their own, they decided to seek adoption of a Korean child.

For a while, they attended support groups along with other families who had previously adopted Korean youngsters. It is a difficult transition for parent and child, Beverly explains, and communication and assistance from friends was important.

It took two years for the adoption to be processed. Although Kate, whose Korean name was Yun Jung Bae, could have become a citizen at that time, her parents felt it would be more meaningful if it was her decision.

Seven years later, Kate felt the time was right. She had memorized the Pledge of Allegiance as a part of her daily school ceremonies. She knew what being a United States citizen would be, although she laughs when asked if she plans to join the Army soon.

What happened to planning report?

Cohasset entered the world of professional planning more than 20 years ago.

In 1961, the town authorized the Long-Range Planning General Report prepared by by professional planning consultant, Allen Benjamin. Although engineers and planning board members at the time hailed the report, none of its recommendations were ever implemented into a revised zoning bylaw.

Burtram Pratt was a member of the planning board in 1961. Despite three attempts to push some of its recommendations through town meeting, the planners were never successful. The Benjamin study, which was financed by a grant from the federal government, sits forgotten upon the library shelf.

Pratt says it's "very unfortunate" that the new zoning law, based on the Benjamin report, could not garner the town's approval. From a marketing point of view, Pratt feels the planning board fell short. He remembers the hundreds of pages written by Benjamin contained numerous recommendations that should have paved the way for controlled planning growth in Cohasset.

As Benjamin predicted within the preface of his study in 1961, "it would be surprising if every proposal for Cohasset's future were carried out."

Even 25 years ago, recommendations were being suggested by the report's author for a municipal garage, a branch fire station, and a new Town Hall facility. Not much has changed in that time.

According to Pratt, contracting professional planning consultants by municipalities was in its infancy in 1961. Towns were aware of the need to plan and control its growth and development, yet few local communities relied on the advice from private planning consultants.

"The whole issue of zoning was a touchy subject then," Pratt recalls. "People fought it for years because it would be taking their Constitutional rights from them, they thought. Cohasset fought zoning for many years."

Committee approves gifted program

Cohasset will be one of seven area communities to initiate a university-sponsored program for gifted and talented tenth grade students.

The school committee voted Monday night to allow Cohasset to enter into an association with six other towns. This collaboration will allow Cohasset students to participate in an academically-advanced program sponsored by the University of Southeastern Massachusetts.

As explained by Dorothy Wondolowski, director of Cohasset's program for gifted and talented students, the program entitled Spotlight, will begin March 2 at the university in North Darmouth. The program will continue for nine weeks, with one of the seven collaborative towns selected as the site for many of the weekly afterschool sessions. The use of an area facility will reduce the transportation costs for each of the school systems, Supt. Eugene Crowell explained.

The towns of Hingham, Hanover, Marshfield, Norwell, Rockland and the Silver Lake Regional school districts are reviewing proposals to join the collaborative. The Cohasset School Committee voted to budget $1000 for the project, to pay half the tuition costs for the program.

According to Wondolowski, there is an opportunity for five or more students to participate in the SMU program. The academic and artistically-gifted students will be selected after review by guidance personnel, department chairman and Wondolowski. Hopefully, Supt. Crowell said, the program will be successful and there will be an opportunity to introduce a greater number of students into the project. There will be no limit set for the number of Cohasset students selected for the March program.

The series will include a series of mini courses such

Elm Street crosswalks

The town's Building Inspector recently ordered the immediate closing of all crosswalks connecting the 17 buildings within the Elm Street elderly housing project.

The order was given after Building Inspector Edward Poskus received a call from Barbara Clain of the Housing Authority. Several of the crosswalks looked to be in poor condition, she stated, and an architect and carpenter were asked to review the structures. The state Building Inspector and Poskus were also notified of the situation.

The crosswalks connect the 17 buildings within the Elm Street housing project. There are 64 apartments and approximately 70 residents in the complex.

Poskus ruled that at least five of the bridges showed evidence of decay, and ordered them closed until they had been repaired or replaced.

Clain said the state Department of Community Affairs has also been notified. That is the funding agency for the local Housing Authority. In the meantime, the repairsarebeing prioritized so that the most severely deteriorated structures will be repaired first.

EMT advisory committee

The Cohasset Emergency Medical Services Advisory Committee, feeling that all of their recommendations have progressed as far as possible, will take a two-month break from their regular meetings.

During the hiatus, committee member Wayne Dewald M.D. will appear before the selectmen to determine what has been done by them in regard to the purchase of a new ambulance, a new fee schedule, the progress of an emergency phone number, and the purchase of a manequin for the basic life support course.

During Monday night's meeting, the group agreed to recommend that the town purchase a basic manequin at a cost of $286. Member Carol Barrett also presented the committee with a revision of the Emergency Medical Services Manual. During their break, the other members will review different aspects of the manual, including a possibly controversial section dealing with the transportation of patients to area hospitals.

The two-month layoff will also be used by member Mark Freidman M.D. to begin development of a telephone protocol system to be used by the town's EMT's.

Source of shellfish pollution

Health Agent Joseph Godzik has determined the location of pollutants in the harbor, a situation which has caused the state to impose a ban of shellfish harvesting for the past several months.

According to Godzik, there is a pipe opposite 94 and 98 Howard Gleason Road which is discharging high levels of fecal coliform into the harbor. The source of the pollutant is unknown.

A dye test was conducted at 94 Howard Gleason Road which showed that effluent from that system was being run across the road into a trench which leads into the harbor. Richard Pratt, the owner, will be required to remedy the situation, Godzik stated.

In the meantime, a representative of the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) has conducted more water sample tests in that area. The results have not been received by the local Board of Health.

According to Godzik, the board will continue to investigate any leads regarding harbor pollution, and will also look at sewage disposal from boats in the next spring.

Building inspector rulings

Building Inspector Edward Poskus has ruled that William Figueiredo must remove the five truckloads of fill which has been stockpiled on his Parker Avenue property for several weeks.

According to the town's zoning bylaw, Poskus stated in a letter to Figueiredo, permission must be granted by the Board of Appeals to fill in any land within the floodplain. The property at 33 Parker Avenue is within the town's designated floodplain.

Figueiredo presented plans to the Conservation Commission in which he outlined plans to fill potholes in front of his property with the gravel. The request was denied last week. Figueiredo has since stated he will not remove the gravel and will hire attorneys to fight the commission's denial.

In another matter, Inspector Poskus notified the owner of the Texaco station on South Main Street that an application for the construction of a fence there must be made to the Planning Board.

Poskus said that the issue had previously been discussed in July with owner George Roukounakis, who stated he would apply to the board for permission to erect the fence around his property. No application has been made as of this month, Poskus added. The building inspector noted in a letter to the owner, "you were directed to remove the fence posts until you have received a Site Plan Review and a Building Permit for the work."

504 Steering Committee

Selectmen are seeking members for the 504 Steering Committee. This is a new committee which selectmen authorized at their Nov. 13 meeting.

The committee has been formed in accordance with Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, a Federal law which serves as a civil rights guarantee and assurance of equal opportunity and freedom from discrimination for citizens with disabilities.

The first meeting of the committee was held today, Nov. 29. Building Inspector Edward Poskus is serving as coordinator. Poskus is actively seeking members at large who are especially sensitive to the needs of the handicapped.

Notice to the taxpayers

The fiscal 1985 real estate tax bills were mailed Nov. 20. The first half payment is due in the Collector's Office on or before Dec. 20. For any late payment interest is computed at 14 percent from the post mark date of Nov. 20.

If, for any reason, you fail to receive a tax bill, duplicate copies are available at the Collector's Office.

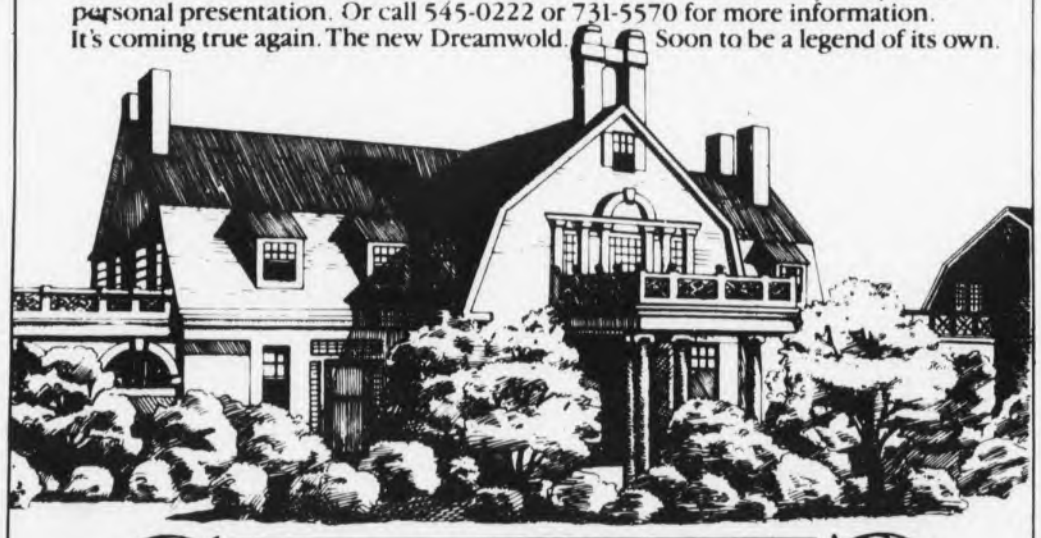
Once upon a time, not so far away, a brave Copper King built an enchanted kingdom in a land by the sea.

There in Scituate, he surrounded his mansion with idyllic pastures and formal gardens. Then built a fairy tale tower to watch over his dream.



Some said he was eccentric. Others said he was vain. But in truth, the legendary millionaire, Thomas Lawson, was building a beautiful haven as a gift for his beloved family. And in 1903, Dreamwold came true.

Now it's coming true again. All the majesty, privacy and splendor that was Dreamwold. In twenty-six unique Victorian condominium residences encircling a spectacular rose garden and beautiful swimming pool.

Dreamwold. A magnificent blend of historic restoration and new construction as only Boston's premier developer, Parencorp, could do.

This fall, Dreamwold is available at pre-completion prices, starting in the mid-100's. Visit Dreamwold between 10:00 AM and 5:00 PM daily for a personal presentation. Or call 545-0222 or 731-5570 for more information.

It's coming true again. The new Dreamwold. Soon to be a legend of its own.

She has sworn to 'bear arms'

On her naturalization papers sent along from Korea, Yun Jung (Jung meaning righteousness, she explains), was described as "very shy." As she told her mother on the trip home from M.I.T., "that's right, I am very shy."

She speaks quietly, and infrequently. She giggles a lot. When asked what she had to do to become a U.S. citizen, Kate answers, "repeat" (during the citizenship ceremony).

Her classmates in the fourth grade at the Deer Hill School made quite a deal about this newest citizen. Her teacher, Trish Sullivan, baked cookies for the class. The children made cards to greet Kate when she returned the following Monday.

Among the cards, most of which were splashed with symbols created in red, white and blue, were sentiments which could only be created by nine year-old imaginations. Statues of Liberty adorned many of the covers, as well as fireworks, the flag and portraits of Kate.

"Dear Kate, I hope you like the United States," read one message. "Rose are red. Violets are blue. Congratulations to you," another poet wrote.

On one card, a proud Statue of Liberty proclaimed, "Welcome to be an American Citizen."

Kate will keep these handmade momentos forever, in rememberance of her special day, Beverly says. Her father did not fail to make the day more special when he inscribed Kate's name in some wet cement on the sidewalk encircling M.I.T.

Kate's world is a busy one. First, she is a "very good" student, according to her proud parents, and recently completed a program for gifted and talented students at Massasoit Community College. She loves math and computer science the best, she admits, although older sister Sarah interjects that recess is also a special subject.

Since homework occupies most of her evening, Kate is allowed only a half hour of television. She turns to Nickelodeon nightly.

She is a student at a weekly ballet class in Hingham and has been taking a Korean language course in Hanover for more than a year. Jack and Beverly felt it was important for Kate to learn about her native culture and language. When she came to this country, her mother says, Kate knew a small amount of Korean, but soon forgot it as she assimilated the English language. She is doing well with the Korean classes, mastering an alphabet and phrases that would baffle an adult.

Kate Barrett

Her family occasionally dines at a Korean restaurant in Cambridge, where Kate reads and interprets the menu for the others. She loves Korean food "better than my mother's cooking," she softly states.

Kate would love to return to her birthplace someday to visit. That day may not be far off, her parents suggest. Their dream right now is to attend the Korean summer Olympics in 1988. Kate, a budding gymnast, says she may even participate in the games.

For now, Kate has much to celebrate. The future looks bright for this small, shy girl, surrounded by a circle of loving friends and family.

as drawing, advanced computer science, a study of classroom behavior, natural science and youth orchestra. It will be a opportunity for the youngsters to progress in critical thinking, and also in the field of art, Wondolowski said.

According to Supt. Crowell, high school credits will be given to the students upon course completion. More importantly, he added, the student will be given a transcript of course completion. "We're hoping to make this program sought after for academic accreditation," he told the committee.

The student cost will be $109 for the nine-week course. Half of that sum will be paid by the school, through the budget allocation. Supt. Crowell added that other Boston-area colleges, such as Suffolk, Emmanuel and Bentley, may participate in similar academic programs in the future.

Town's first planning report forgotten

Pratt himself fought the town's first attempt to implement zoning in 1954. "It was a lousy law," he states. A mild, compromise version of the zoning law passed town meeting the following year.

Pratt was a member of the 1954 planning board which worked for a year on an "amateur" planning study. Early zoning opponents, mostly local landowners, disliked the study, saying the encroachment of zoning would "take money away from our pocketbooks," Pratt paraphrases.

The advisory committee didn't feel favorable towards the unprofessional effort either, Pratt says, and recommended the town obtain a grant to complete a study by a certified planner. They followed the committee's advice and hired Benjamin.

"We went to town meeting with a new proposed zoning bylaw two or three times. The first time the new zoning bylaw failed by a handful of votes. Then we set up an advisory committee with attorneys to help us present our case to the next town meeting. Again, we lost by about four votes. A small group of people who never even saw the plan were against it. They wanted the light industry located in a certain section of Route 3A. To this day, this area still has not been developed they way they envisioned," he adds.

The Benjamin study, he says, provided the groundwork for a solid zoning bylaw. "Better than the one we had. That one was patched together. For the amount of time and money we spent on the report, it was never properly implemented," Pratt states. "I think we needed some sort of marketing effort behind it. But this was years ago and we were unaware of such things."

The unabridged study, Pratt recalls, is about two inches thick and covers just about every aspect of life in Cohasset.

Among the topics discussed within the study are suggestions for a new zoning map and a special floodplain zone along the James Brook. Several revisions to the planning regulations were outlined, along with topics such as planning neighborhoods, business centers and future business areas, future industrial areas, and suggestions for new highways and secondary roads.

Among Benjamin's proposals was construction of a new access highway from Route 3A to Cohasset Center from the curve near Forest Avenue east to the railroad and to the Center. The road, he stated, would distribute traffic from the north to all parts of town east and south of the highway. Another road was proposed from Beechwood at the curve just below King Street, south to Scituate.

Benjamin assessed the future needs of the then expanding school system, a parks and recreation plan and a public lands and buildings plan. Regarding Lily Pond, which is currently the center of attention by town health officials and planners, Benjamin wrote, "this valuable body of water should be preserved as public property and every effort made to acquire sufficient land around the pond for access and enjoyment of residents for passive recreation such as picnicing, hiking, and nature studies.

Benjamin suggested 24 years ago that construction of a new municipal garage be considered on Route 3A simultaneously with and attached to the proposed new branch fire station. The garage portion of the building should initially house 25 vehicles and service police, fire, and school departments, he had stated.

Regarding the Town Hall, Benjamin suggested that the present facility be remodeled " to provide enough town office space to meet the local needs through at least 1980."

Current planning board member Daniel Cotton says he was once familiar with the study, but it has not been discussed in recent years. As far as he could remember, it was a good study that was not implemented by the town. "It's been forgotten," he states.

Since Cotton has been on the board, the Benjamin study has not been mentioned. "No serious references have been made at least in the past five years," he adds.

Following are some explanations of certain terms used in the travel trade that will help you to better understand "travelese": A "direct flight" is not synonymous with non-stop. It refers to a trip in which a passenger does not have to change planes during intermediate stops along the way. "Double-occupancy rate" is the price per person when a room is shared with another. It differs from "double-room rate," which is the full price of a hotel room for a twosome. "Modified American plan" and "demi-pension" both translate into hotel charges that include bed, breakfast and a second meal (lunch or dinner). The same rate may be charged whether or not you partake of the proferred meals.

Let the office of COLPITTS TRAVEL CENTER be your travel headquarters to distant places around the world or destinations near at hand. Our staff has the experience you can depend upon to plan every aspect of your trip down to the most minute detail. Come into our office and discuss your plans. We are open to serve you 9-5 Mon.-Fri.; 10-4 Sat. and by appointment. You will find us located at 3 Brook St., Scituate. Tel. 383-1717 and 545-4500.

Travel Tip: Try a bed-and-breakfast establishment as a pleasant alternative to a sterile hotel room.

the SOLARIUM

for Creative Living

In this increasingly solar-oriented society, our solariums combine the demands for energy efficiency with the esthetic needs of today's sophisticated lifestyle.

The quality of the Grammans SOLARIUM is unmatched in the industry. Once installed, our finished aluminum framing is virtually maintenance-free and is leakproof. The 1" insulated glass is hermetically sealed to prevent condensation. A poured polyurethane thermal barrier in the framing minimizes your energy bills, and ease of installation cuts labor costs as well. Gammans' complete designing and engineering services can provide you with almost any size you desire. Researchers confounded by causes of autism

By Judy Gilman

Just what is life like for someone who tastes peanut butter as peanut butter one day and as sand the next? For someone who hears distinct words on Monday and gibberish Tuesday?

That's a simplified description of the brain disorder known as autism, a severely incapacitating lifelong developmental disability which usually appears during the first three years of life.

Autism occurs in approximately four in every 10,000 births and is four times more likely to strike a boy as a girl.

Until 1940, the disorder was not diagnosed separately, and today researchers are still confounded by what causes the severe confusion of signals between the senses and the brain.

Dec. 2 through 8 is National Autism Week and this is the 11th year of the National Society for Children and Adults with Autism.

The Massachusetts chapter of NSAC was formed in 1976, and its president, Gerald Kramer of Wellesley, was just elected president of the national organization. Statewide the organization numbers 300 members, while across the nation there are 7,000.

This year's goal of the society is to bring in a new member for each existing member. And the society looks to any interested individual to join the group.

There are a million autistic individuals in the U.S. They are designated as educable and can be brought to some degree of self-sufficiency, though less than 10 percent are able to live in a group home. At the same time, autistic individuals have a normal lifespan of 70 years or so.

Research is going on all the time into this mystery ailment. Locally, two physicians are involved in research with autism.

Dr. Paul Hardy of Hingham is associated both with the Fernald School in Waltham and Tufts New England Medical Center. He is a neuropharmacologist who is working on drug research to combat some of the most severe symtoms of autism, including self-abuse and aggression. Research has shown an autistic person's brain chemical level operates at a rate two to three times higher than that of a normal person. The confused signals are crowding in at such a rate that there is no chance to sort them out or to make sense of the information.

National autism week

Dr. William Condon of Cohasset is working in the area of communication with autistic individuals. Communication is one of the biggest stumbling blocks of the disorder. He exhibits a rare patience in interviewing older autistic patients, videotaping those interviews, then analyzing the films looking for clues to penetrate the communication wall.

He looks at psychological/audiological phenomena, such as the response time an autistic patient exhibits from when the doctor claps his hands until there is some acknowledgement of the noise. In a normal human being, a one-second delay in response time is rare. In the autistic, a seven-second delay is common.

At this point, researchers' best guess is that autism is caused by a biological/chemical imbalance at conception, a chemcial shortcircuiting. If the particular chemicals could be pinpointed, the door would be opened to the way to cure.

Along with laboratory research goes educational research to define the best ways to reach the autistic. Both the TEACH program, which originates in North Carolina, and the APT programs, from Madison, Wisc., emphasize opening up communication with the autistic, the major stumbling block not only to teaching them but in learning, from the inside out, exactly what it is like to be autistic. Behavior modification is another large portion of the educational training, much of which is taught in a central location in each state and then carried to local school systems.

According to material published by NSAC, the symptoms of autism include:

—disturbance in the rate of appearance of physical, social and language skills;

—abnormal responses to sensations. Any one or a combination of sight, hearing, touch, pain, balance, smell, taste and the way a child holds his body are affected; —speech and language are absent or delayed while specific thinking capabilities may be present;

—abnormal ways of relating to people, objects and events.

The accompanying chart shows the more important signs and symptoms of autism. If a child exhibits seven or more of these and if the bizarre behavior is constant and age inappropriate, further evaluation is recommended.

In the meantime, the lab and educational research continues to try to find the key to help these individuals locked inside themselves.

For further information on autism or National Autism Week, call 423-3838 or write to the Mass. Chapter of NSAC, 13 Debra Lane, Framingham, MA 01701.

☐ From January to September, Mary Ellen Neagle sold in excess of $2.5 million through the Cohasset office of the Jack Conway Company earning a company sponsored trip to Antigua.

Neagle has also been the top listing agent in the Cohasset office for the past five years.

Mary Ellen earned the designations of GRI (Graduate, Realtors Institute) and CRS (Certified Residential Specialist) from the National Association of Realtors. She has been a member of the professional Standards Committee, the Hospitality Committee and Membership Committee of the Plymouth County Board of Realtors. She is also Vice President of the Women's Council of Realtors. A North Quincy native, she lived in Scituate and Hingham for many years before moving to Cohasset.

☐ Margaret R. Charles of Cohasset has joined the residential sales brokerage staff of The Chase Group/Realtors, Hingham Office it was announced by Philip Murphy, Vice President and Residential Manager.

Margy is a graduate of the Lee Institute, the College of New Rochelle and has a Masters Degree from Simmons. Prior to joining Chase, she was an advertising sales representative and a teacher.

Active in community affairs, Margy is a member of the League of Women Voters, the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee, St. Anthony's Church and the Hull Yacht Club.

☐ Elizabeth Glasfeld, a Haverford College sophmore from Cohasset, Mass., has been selected to the 1984 Philadelphia Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (P.A.I.A.W.) Division III All-Star Field-Hockey Team.

A two-time varsity letter winner, Glasfeld played sweeper and was credited with nine defense saves.

☐ This month the Cohasset Knoll Nursing home would like to recognize Ed Feinstein. He has been our longest residing resident, 13 years. Before coming to the Knoll, Ed lived in Milton. He worked for many years in Stop & Shop Warehouse Division. Ed is an active member of the Knoll. He enjoys arts and crafts, bowling, movies and men's coffee hour. Also, Elizabeth and Charles Short recently celebrated their 47th wedding anniversary October 12.

Winnie and Everett Dolan celebrated their 56th wedding anniversary Oct. 30.

☐ After years of rowing the family dinghy in Cohasset Harbor, Bill Davenport is now rowing varsity crew for Dartmouth. Bill's a sophomore and a 1983 grad. He's the son of Bob and Sally Davenport on Black Horse Lane.

☐ Here's to a speedy recovery for Betty Maree, who is home after a recent hospital stay. Everyone wishes her the best.

☐ Manny Salvador is back after his recent trip to Saint Kits West Indies. He was visiting his brother Bernard for ten days, and hated to leave the beautiful surroundings and weather to come home to our climate! He also had a message to deliver to the "gang at the Red Lion Inn" from Glenn and Debbie. They say to be sure to say hello and to tell them to please write, let them in on all of the news.

☐ The Thanksgiving turkey tasted better than ever this year, thanks in great part to the CHS football team and their winning against Duxbury. What a way to end a rivalry, it will not soon be forgotten. Congratulations to a great team!

☐ Under the "People are getting excited and can't wait for news" . . . the Snoopy production, to be held on Dec. 8, 14, and 15 at the High School. Tickets are available now at the High School, for $3. Be sure to get yours early, they will go fast and you'll be disappointed.

☐ Christmas gets its official Cohasset Kick-off this weekend . . . although it is 60 degrees as this is being written, there are high hopes of snow to help create the right atmosphere for the Fairs that will be taking place. Santa will be sure to make his annual voyage to the Common, "taking Christmas orders" from all the little hopefuls. Get a real jump on your shopping and take in the Village and Snowflake Fairs.

☐ Mrs. Montuori's Class is still trying to get the technique of Japanese paper folding (origami) down pat. Takeshi Nito, the Rotary exchange student gave them a demonstration and made it look so simple . . . they are getting it, but it sure takes time!

☐ Hope everyone read the list of Academic Awards that were handed out last week during an assembly for the students. Those students are to be commended for their great efforts, and the list was certainly a lengthy one. Here's to everyone keeping up their good work.

☐ This is the first year that Cohasset will have a ski team. There has been a lot of interest shown already, with more to come as plans get finalized. The meets take place at Blue Hills, should be great for all involved.

☐ Congratulations to the 1984 Soccer champs, the Toros. They won the championship by beating the White Caps 2-0. Kevin Mulcahy and Mike Reynolds scored the goals for the Toros. In Division B the Tornados beat the Rowdies, 5-1. M. Suhrbier got three goals, M. Ellinger and D. Shultz scored for the Tornados and J. Staunton was the only scorer for the Rowdies.

☐ Mike McNeill was a sight to behold on Thanksgiving, with his new hairdo! He gets it re-cut once a week "whether it needs it or not". Reports that he likes school so far and the kids are super.

☐ The weekly plea for news from you still holds . . . this column is for your news, so phone it in to me, then read it next week!

Snoopy sings, dances at C.H.S.

Snoopy, along with many of his friends from the "Peanuts' comic strip, will perform on the stage of Cohasset High School Dec. 8, 14, and 15 in the musical comedy appropriately entitled "Snoopy!!!"

This show is the latest effort from the C.H.S. production team that brought "Grease" and "Godspell" to the Cohasset stage during the previous two Decembers.

Only the "Peanuts" gang knows how to delight an audience as thoroughly as they do in Charles Schultz's latest musical creation, "Snoopy!!!" The series of effervescent vignettes, songs, and dances involves the audience in the entertaining world of these five-year-olds and their animal friends.

In the classroom we are welcomed by the challenging yet ever-present true-false tests and book reports which taunt the minds of our young friends. The song "Edgar Allen Poe" explores the mystery of the teacher who only seems to call on you when you don't know the answer to a question.

Such events as Linus' vigil in the sincere pumpkin patch as the awaits the arrival of the Great Pumpkin are offset by the amazingly sophisticated exchanges which often occur between the characters.

A charming number entitled "Clouds" is sung as the gang cast their eyes to the sky, where they imagine not clouds, but Mount Rushmore, the Army-Navy game, dragons, and Goliath. After this innocent song, a dejected Charlie Brown, musing on the new independence of his pet, is left alone on stage to sing the moving "Where did the Little Dog Go?"

The familiar frenzy of Linus on wash day without his security blanket, as well as a poignant exchange between Peppermint Patty and Charlie Brown, in "Poor Sweet Baby" further elevate the enjoyment factor in this delightful comedy.

The energy and optimism of the gang posseses a contagion which will quickly be imparted to the audience. The rousing number "Don't Be Less then Everything You Can be" offers encouragement to all.

"Snoopy!!!" is not just a show for kids; it's appeal is universal. Sometimes beautiful ballads and sometimes clever parodies, its songs will entertain all. Likewise, the plays lines are basic enough for a child and philisophic enough for an adult.

Appearing as Snoopy and Linus at all performances will be John Kuntz and Glenn Hochkeppel respectively. On alternate nights Lucy will be played by Shawna McCarthy and Amanda Sweeney, Sally by Jenna Emmons and Michaelle Meagher, Peppermint Patty by Jillian Ayer and Karlin Isele, Charlie Brown by Andrew Glasfeld and David Sweeney, and Woodstock by Laura Kuhn and Hilary Proodian.

Staging "Snoopy!!!" is Ron Emmons, with musical direction by Bryan Marks and choreography by Andrea Pallardy. Accompaniment will be provided by Ruth Dahlbeck.

For the convenience of parents with young children, the first performance of "Snoopy!!!" Dec. 8 will begin promptly at 7 p.m. with the remaining shows Dec. 14 and 15 scheduled to start at 8 p.m. Tickets are now available at the high school (383-6100) for $3. All seats are reserved.

Potpourri

Now that the holidays are over for another four weeks to so, onto some other pressing issues.

We hope last night's special Town Meeting was well attended and the town's business completed. The issue of whether to contract with SEMASS for trash disposal is an important issue. Refuse is not an attractive topic, per say, but it is important. We hope Cohasset residents agreed and made their choice.

The repairs to the high school roof is another important issue among the other important 11 warrant articles. Roofs may not seem to be the most integral part of our children's education. And, they're not. But without that obligation to maintain and protect our school facilities, our children will not have the type of education we desire for them.

Financial considerations must be recognized within this request for additional monies. That is your decision. The most crucial point we can make here, is to insist that you make that decision.

In other matters, the town is once again interviewing engineers to begin a comprehensive watershed study. It is the intention of this $10,000 study that some strong zoningbylawswill be formulated which will forever protect our precious water supply.

It will bean interesting subject to follow in the coming months. As an added note, special appreciation should be extended to the Watershed Protection Advisory Committee which has pursued this matter with energy and committment for several months. It would be difficult to find a more dedicated group of individuals.

Although neither side will speak openly about the situation, it seems negotiations are at a virtual standstill between the town, and the police and fire unions. The two sides have not sat down together since early October, and the talk about town is that a contract settlement is not in the foreseeable future.

Both administration and union officials would like a conclusion and a signed contract. But after a year of talk, no one is predicting a contract for several months.

Another thought; there are so many Christmas craft fairs going on this weekend. It's too bad they seemed to be scheduled at once, making it financially a bit difficult to spread the wealth around. Try and attend each of the separate fairs this weekend.

Have a great time meeting friends and neighbors who have worked dilgently for their church or organization. The articles are guaranteed to be special, created by a caring Cohasset neighbor.

Clarification

In the Mariner's reporting of the Nov. 6 election results, we mentioned the growing number of Independent party members in Cohasset.

As explained by Burtram Pratt, that is a misnomer. There is no Independent party. The Independent voter is a registered voter who is not affiliated with any political party.

Choosing gifts by the stars

By Claire McDonough

Want to make this holiday season memorable? Then choose your gift purchases with the recipient's stars in mind. Would you give the same thing to a Scorpio that you would to an Aries? To a Sagittarian as a Virgo? Of course not. I discussed this dilemma with my friend Madame Zolar, and she agrees that the very thought is an abomination. Madame suggests that you clip this page and bring it with you when you do your holiday shopping. After all, she points out, with a little astrological guidance, you can be a stellar success when it comes to choosing presents.

ARIES (March 21 - April 19): Aries natives are active, impulsive, headstrong, and somewhat careless. Consider presenting your favorite Aries with a first aid kit. You'd be amazed to know how many of them are involved in accidents or are punched out by their dearest friends.

TAURUS (April 20 - May 20): Taureans love peace, beauty, friendship and money. When it comes to gifts, they will happily forego the first three. Stocks or bonds would be an ideal gift for a Taurus. If you're not in the bracket that deals in stocks or bonds, you might wrap up a collectible that will increase in value over the years. Bubble gum cards seem to do well in the long haul.

GEMINI (May 21 - June 20): Selecting a gift for a Gemini is always a problem, since you never know which of his personalities will rip the wrapping off the present. Why not play it safe and get him a Blackstone? He'll find it useful whether he's planning to be a lawyer or a defendant at the time.

CANCER (June 21 - July 22): Cancerians love gifts that will enhance their homes, and they are particularly fond of antiques. If Dresden and Limoge are out of the question, how about a gift certificate for the services of a very old cleaning person?

LEO (July 23 - August 22): Leos appreciate splashy, showy, ornate gifts. A Rolls Royce, a piece of diamond jewelry, or a sequined Mick Jagger tee shirt will delight your favorite Leo.

VIRGO (August 23 - September 22): Your typical Virgo is happiest when she is pointing out someone else's flaws. Give her a gift you know she'll hate, and she'll love you forever.

LIBRA (September 23 - October 23): Librans are starry-eyed, romantic individuals who love art and beauty. If you can't afford a trip to an exotic place, maybe a Harlequin romance will do the trick.

SCORPIO (October 24 - November 22): Scorpios are ruled by Pluto, god of the underworld. Since both the best detectives and master criminals tend to have a good deal of Scorpio in their charts, a police radio might be a good idea. Or a Mickey Mouse watch.

SAGITTARIUS (November 23 - December 21): Sagittarians are not strong on tact. A Sag's idea of a compliment, in fact, is to tell someone, "You aren't nearly as fat as everyone says you are." If you want to give a Sagittarian a gift that will be used throughout the year, consider enrolling him or her in a good hospital insurance plan.

CAPRICORN (December 22 - January 19): Your Capricorn is more concerned with amassing power and money than anything else. Capricorns tend to be successful in business and in accumulating wealth. Give the Capricorn on your list my phone number.

AQUARIUS (January 20 - February 19): Aquarians are fun-loving, unconventional, and somewhat zany. This often brings them to the attention of the local police. Give your Aquarian a gift certificate for the services of a good trial lawyer.

PISCES (February 20 - March 20): Pisces is the sign of the martyr. Your typical Pisces is only happy when his/her feelings are being hurt. Wrap a box in gaily colored paper and tie it with festive ribbons. But leave it empty.

Note To All Signs: An unscrupulous sun sign astrologer will try to deceive you. She is only doing this to earn money for her own Christmas shopping. Ignore all of the above suggestions and give everyone on your list a subscription to Single Living.

People always tell us what's best

Letters

To the Editor:

Yesterday, on Thanksgiving Day, I drove with my family to Plymouth. I felt that it would add a touch of romanticism to our first Thanksgiving in Massachusetts.

While in Plymouth, we toured the places purported to have been occupied, 364 years ago, by the Pilgrims. We went aboard the Mayflower II. Unexpectedly, we witnessed a protest by a group of "rag tag" people. Upon further investigation they turned out to be representatives of Native American groups. What could this band of people have to complain about?

As it turned out, all they wanted to say was that perhaps those who originally and continuously had settled and developed an area should be allowed to have a voice in its future.

While driving back to Cohasset, I noticed that my children were puzzled at what we saw. I could only comfort them by stating that it has always been human nature for groups to force their wants and desires on others. I told them that in 1620 it was done for the expediency of the settlers, whose hardships matched those of the inhabitants they encountered. I told them it was really a matter of survival.

Today the situation still continues. People are always ready to tell others what is best for them. When I got home from my visit I had occasion to read Mr. Staszko's letter in your newspaper. As I read it I realized people still think they know what is best for others whether the others want it or not.

Manipulations with statistics, accusations about "strong arm" tactics, and references to totalitarian forms of government always seem to show the beginnings of desperation. Why is everything so secretive and defensive? Don't the residents have some rights to their future? Should they travel to Plymouth and "beat their drums" in front of Massasoit? Is that the answer?

Cohasset origin, Hingham's frontier

by David H. Wadsworth

The town of Hingham's forthcoming 350th anniversary, to be celebrated in 1985, brings to mind the fact that Cohasset once was part of Hingham and its first settlers were farmers, tradesmen, and fishermen from the parent settlement some four miles to the west.

Until the year 1670 this eastern-most frontier of Hingham was mostly vacant land, useful only for the pasturing of domestic animals and for the harvest of salt hay along its shores.

Hingham residents called the area "Conahasset" the name derived from the Indian word "Quonahasssit", meaning "Long Rocky Place" in Algonquin language. The Indians' descriptive term was as accurate then as it is today. In the year 1636 the Town of Hingham began to grant lands in the Conahasset area to its citizens.

These first land grants were in the area called Turkey Meadow, to the north and northeast of today's Turkey Hill, near the present Cohasset Golf Club. Hingham settlers David Phippeny, Edmund and Joshua Hubbard, Thomas Lincoln, Thomas Wakelye and George Stranye were among the more than one dozen Hinghamites to receive grants of meadowland at Turkey Meadow between the years of 1636 to 1638.

By 1647, Hingham voters had decided to parcel out to private owners many of the coastal salt marshes and shoreline meadows of Conahasset, including those bordering Little Harbor, Cohasset Harbor or Cove, and sixty acres described as being "over the River". The marshes "over the River" to the east and south of the Cove were the notorious "Three Score Acre" lands which had given rise to a continuing boundary dispute between the settlements of Hingham and Scituate, and between the two Colonies of New Plimouth and Massachusetts Bay.

In the salt marsh and meadow land divisions of 1647 and 1651 more than fifty Hingham residents received parcels at Conahasset, — all taken from the town's "undivided Common Land", or land owned in common by all the freeholders or landholders of Hingham.

But the sixty acres called "Threescore Acres" bordering on Scituate remained disputed land, with Scituate's settlers maintaining their purported rights of ownership against Hingham's claim. As early as 1640, an intra-Colony Commission constituted of residents from the two towns (and the two Colonies) had defined the Colonial boundary between Scituate and Conahasset.

Threescore Acres had been awarded to Hingham and the Massachusetts Colony, but the dispute flickered on and broke out anew as Scituate continued its efforts to levy real estate taxes in the disputed area, to the chagrin of the Hingham owners. The "Threescore Acres" question remained unsettled for two more centuries until in the late 1800's when the Commonwealth of Massachusetts overturned the old Colonial decision and gave the marshland to Scituate and Plymouth County.

By the decade of the 1660's agitation was increasing in Hingham to divide up the upland areas of Conahasset among the town's landowners. In January of 1669, a Town Meeting was held to determine the number of shares of undivided Common Land should be granted to each property owner. The rule adopted gave the largest landowners and prominent citizens the greatest number of shares and the smallest landowner the least number.

Thus the Rev. Peter Hobart, Hingham's Parish Minister, received 25 shares; Capt. Joshua Hobart received 18 shares; Lieut. John Smith 15 shares; and Ensign John Thaxter 16 shares. At the other end of the scale Daniel Bates received 2 shares; as did John Farrow, Samuel Stodder, Samuel Bates, Joseph Andrews, Thomas Huit and several others. Low men were John and David Stodder and Clement Bates, Jr. who received a meager one share apiece, as also did Onesiphorus Marsh. At about the same time, certain areas of the undivided Common Land were set aside by the voters of Hingham to remain undivided in perpetuity for the use of the townspeople.

In Conahasset the land to be left undivided included the area of today's Town Common. Hingham voters, having made up their minds to parcel out amongst themselves the eastern section of their town, hired Lieut. Joshua Fisher of Dedham to survey the Conahasset uplands. This was done in short order, and the resulting plots of land were conveyed by the Hingham Proprietors on December 6, 1670.

With the Conahasset lands open for the founding farms and homesteads numerous sons and daughters of the parent town turned their eyes toward the eastern shores of Hingham. Thus was set in motion a series of events which would see the new village at Cohasset become Hingham's Second Parish and Second Precinct in the year 1717 and become a separate District or Town in 1770, a full century after the initial Land Division and some 90 years after the first humble dwellings were raised in the Conahasset uplands.

Murray's memos

Report from the State House

Highway deaths are a serious concern both nationally and locally. Nationally, highway deaths for 1983 numbered 42,600, compared to the 55,000 Americans killed in Vietnam. 470,000 persons have died on American highways in the past decade. In Massachusetts, highway deaths for 1983 numbered 643, and a total of 9,121 for the decade.

Clearly, the cost of highway accidents — in lives, injuries and property losses — demands greater efforts toward occupant protection. The problem is — how do we go about providing this protection?

Currently, Massachusetts does not have a mandatory seatbelt usage law. However, the state does require children five years of age or younger to wear a restraint device while riding in an automobile.

Recently, Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole urged states to pass safety belt use laws. Pointing to the leadership and initiative of state legislators who have helped pass child safety laws in 49 of the 50 states, Secretary Dole called for similar support for the crash protection plan she announced in July.

The immediate projection of the plan is to set up use of the lap shoulder belt systems currently installed in all vehicles by encouraging state safety belt usage laws.

The second component of the rule reinstates the passive restraint provisions of the 208 standard (passive belt or air bag) in 1989 with a phase — in schedule starting Sept. 1, 1986.

According to Secretary Dole, the two parts of the plan are complementary and totally compatible. This comprehensive, integrated approach is designed both for the present and future.

During the next four years, the Department of Transportation will be working cooperatively with automakers, insurers and others in the private sector on a joint $40 million campaign to educate the public about occupant restraint systems.

The order provides for a recession of the passive restraint mandate if states representing two-thirds of the nation's population enact Mandatory Seatbelt Usage Laws before April 1, 1989.

It is likely Massachusetts will consider such legislation at some point during the 1985-86 legislative session.

'Murray's Memo' espouses factual untruths

To the Editor:

It is high time that you demonstrate a modicum of professional responsibility and remedy forthwith the editorial and journalistic travesty which appears in the Cohasset and Hingham editions of the Mariner entitled "Murray's Memos: Report from the State House."

The fact that this ostensive "Report" of an elected official to her constituency has become a once-a-week ideologically tainted diatribe espousing the party line of one political group seems to trouble you, or to flag for you a hint of journalistic duty, not one whit.

What is the reader of your newspapers to think about your ability to objectively report and critically comment on the events of the day when you routinely make available a quarter page of your journal for the unrestricted, unchallenged, and unanalyzed propagation of purely partisan political thought?

Has the ownership or staff of your newspaper ever made an attempt to reach out to individuals with disparate points of view as an attempt to balance the weekly writings of Republican party operatives which appear under Mrs. Murray's name.

What is the reader to think of your understanding of the world of state government when you allow Mrs. Murray an exclusive platform from which to spew her factual untruths about the Dukakis Administration, legislative rules reform, taxation issues, and other pressing public policy matters?

Letters

One is left with only two alternative explanations for the manner in which the Mariner has chosen to carry Mrs. Murray's weekly rantings: you either agree with her ideological bent and therefore have refused to solicit opposing points of view, or your knowledge of Massachusetts government and politics is so limited that you reprint her politically influenced "Report" without any conception of another view of reality. I tend to think your actions are directd by the latter. Certainly in other areas of local reportage, your columns demonstrate no particular partisan affiliation.

Indeed ignorance remains the only plausible explanation of why you would weekly allow Mrs. Murray to attack the current leadership of the Massachusetts House, yet not question her known support of House Speaker Thomas McGee. Obviously you simply do not understand the important legislative issues of education reform as you give Mrs.Murray an opportunity to rail against the Governor's planning in this area, yet fail to report on her recent vote favoring public tax subsidies for the support of parochial schools. Simple ignorance of the issues of infrastructural renewal and the clean-up of our harbors can be the only explanation of why we read week after week of Mrs. Murray's rejection of the MassBank and the Boston Water and Sewer Authority proposals without challenge in your paper.

I submit for your approval several bits of political information together with a modest proposal: There is another way of approaching matters of governmental policy which has little in common with that of Mrs. Murray. There is a whole grouping of voters and elected officials who subscribe to said approach.

We are members of what is commonly called the Democratic Party. We have fielded national leaders with names like Roosevelt, Truman, and Kennedy. We have many differences of opinon within our ranks, yet somehow generally agree on a few basic tenets. Democrats believe that government has a moral responsibility to provide for the human needs of all Americans which would otherwise be unmet. Democrats are proud that a president chosen from our ranks prosecuted the Second World War against international banditry. We are proud of our Party's role in the struggle for civil rights, and the protection of our environment. We are proud of the Democratic contribution to free public education for all.

If indeed you believe that Mrs. Murray's politicized columns need proper partisan balancing in your newspaper, and would allow opposing points of view to be heard on an equal footing, I would be happy to introduce you to some real life Democrats actually now residing in your circulation area who would be willing to provide this needed service to your readers.

English Award

The National Council of Teachers of English has sent a certificate of commendation to the Cohasset High School's Department of English for excellence in its instructional program, in recognition of its contribution to the high quality of student writing.

This past spring Christine Munroe was nominated in her junior year by members of the English department for an N.C.T.E. award. She has been recognized by the council as one of the nation's best student writers.

Over 18,000 high schools across America nominate students for these awards. At least two winners are chosen from each state as well as from American Schools abroad. Winners' names are published in a booklet which is sent to 3,000 colleges and universities in the United States. The N.C.T.E. recommends the winners for admission and scholarships.

Individual Math Systems Awards

Helen Mulhern has announced the class winners of the I.M.S. Program for the month of October: Gr. 6./Mr. Shultz's class; Gr. 5/Mr. Levine's class; Gr. 4/Mrs. McDonald's class.

The children earned points by achieving 100 percent accuracy for ten different math concepts during the month of October. VOLUNTEERS for I.M.S. are still needed — please call Deer Hill School for more information. Thank You!

Deer Hill Library Messages

Once again, the children have competed for the Library Merit Award for the month of October. Marjorie Murphy announced the winners: Gr. 6/Mrs. Cisneros' class has done it again by winning the award for the second time in a row! Gr. 5/Mr. Deakin's class surpassed in the fifth Grade, and Gr. 4/Mrs. McDonald's room outdid all the 4th graders.

Attention!

We are having a Book Sale in the Library for Christmas! Come and do your shopping in the Deer Hill Library on Dec. 18, 18 and 20.

Cable comes to Deer Hill

The installation of our cable is finally complete. As part of that American Cable Systems offered to the Town, each school will receive, free of charge, the Super Cable Service. With our recently acquired recording hardware, we now will be able to record and save programs that are more closely correlated with our curricula offerings.

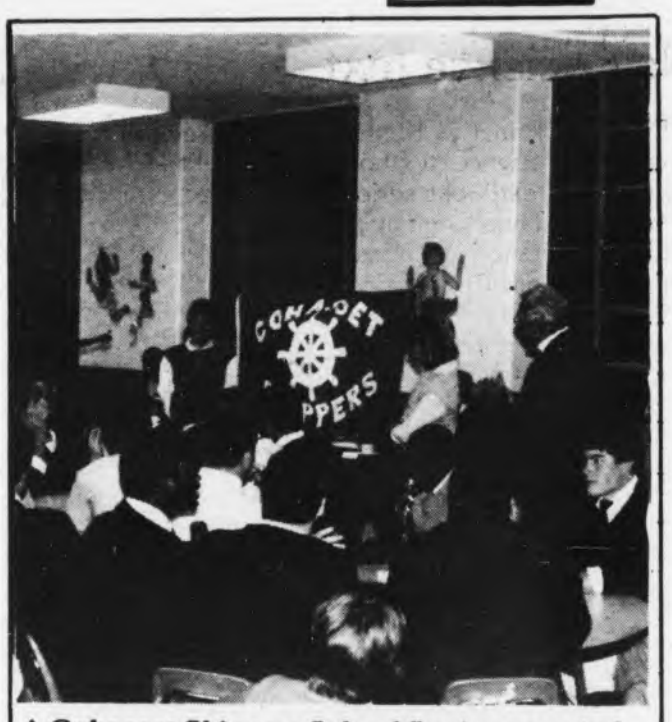
Good stuff cheap

There are still some items available for purchase in the Deer Hill cellar. Perhaps a small student chair or desk would make a suitable Christmas present. For more information, call 383-6115.

Artist-in-residence program

Once again, we have been fortunate to secure funding for an Artist-in-residence at Deer Hill. You may recall that during Mrs. O'Malley's convalescence last spring, we were indeed fortunate to secure the services of Syma as an art teacher. Her background, training, and professional endeavors, are well known throughout the South Shore.

There will be a complete cycle of student mini-workshops, student-teacher observations of the artist's studio work, intensified core group involvement, including one core group comprised of the collaborative class students and several teacher workshops. All of these activities will reference existing curricula disciplines, i.e.: Holt Basal Reader, Unit 6, Mythology; expressionism, pottery, geometry, story writing, and sculpture.



Currently, our students have limited exposure to ceramics in our conventional art program. Consequently, we believe we have found in Syma an expertise that, through her medium, can enhance our students' appreciation for the various disciplines involved in an artist's work.

As a result of the "1984 Events Program", our students have been trained in various video techniques to a point where we hope to produce a documentary of this year's residency. This will be shared with the entire student body, parents, and community through assemblies, parents' nights and an exhibit at the So. Shore Art Center. At this point, we would hope to reschedule the residency from Jan. 14, 1985 through Mar. 1, 1985 (six weeks). In a series of culminating activities, a frieze will be installed in ceremonial fashion in the school and a joint exhibit with the work of Joseph Osgood students will be held at the So. Shore Art Center.

School committee briefs

New science text

Deer Hill Principal Kenneth Ekberg reviewed the new Heath science textbooks now utilized in that school. The textbooks series was adopted earlier this year by the school committee.

Ekberg outlined the class schedule and the topics which would be discussed in each level of the book. He emphasized that in addition to reading, the classroom instructor would be providing the students with activities based on specific chapters of the text.

Committee members had previously expressed their concern that the topic of Darwin's theory was not discussed within the textbook. Ekberg said that unit was added to the elementary science classes from the Heath textbook unit used in grade seven.

Response to letter

School committee member Richard Conley responded angrily this week to a letter that was published two weeks ago in the Mariner. The letter denounced the lack of support for school sports by school officials and staff members.

Conley said he was angered by the letter, and said if the author (Mrs. Dee DeSantis) had bothered to investigate the matter, she would have uncovered the truth.

The committee member said many teachers "take time away from their families" to cheer and support the numerous school athletic teams. Even administration officials, such as High School Prinicipal Richard Streeter and Supt. Eugene Crowell have assisted at various school sports events. Conley sarcastically suggested that in order to avoid future erroneous assumptions, "perhaps the staff should be assigned special shirts" to wear at the games, to signify their attendance at sports events.

Dodge resigns

The school committee accepted "with regret and many thanks," the resignation of High School Band Director Jeffrey Dodge.

Dodge, who had been band director for the past five years, resigned to accept a similar position at Eastern Nazarene College.

PSO members Karin Bartow and Robin Surhbier, who attended the committee meeting, asked if the committee was going to discuss the organization's concern with class scheduling conflicts at the high school. According to a letter sent from the PSO to the committee, there have been several complaints from students and teachers that band practice often conflicts with academic courses such as a foreign language. In such an event, many students have had to drop out of band in favor of the required academic class.

Chairman Joe Nedrow said the class scheduling conflict is an issue which must be addressed by the school administration, not the school committee. The PSO suggested that perhaps an elective period could be improvised into the high school schedule. Nedrow replied that whatever solution is forwarded, it is likely to have an effect on next year's budget.

Dwyer & Mullin re-locate

Dwyer & Mullin Real Estate of Cohasset has moved to new and expanded offices.

The firm's new building is located at 812A Chief Justice Cushing Way, in an area of specialty shops and businesses on the east side of Rte. 3A, just before the Cohasset/Scituate border.

According to owner and president Robert J. Mullin of Scituate, Dwyer & Mullin's growth created the demand for addtional space for clients, brokers and office personnel. The new offices have been completely renovated to incorporate a reception area, a conference room, work centers for the firms' 12 brokers, a computer center, and office space for Mr. Mullin and for office manager, Jane Wilder, also of Scituate. The new location also features an expanded parking area easily accessible from Rte. 3A.

Mullin, a former president of the Plymouth County Board of Realtors and a recent recipient of the Realtors Outstanding Service Award, stresses the tradition of quality service that has become associated with his 11 year-old firm. "In our prime selling area the greatest percentage of sales activity centers around turn-over housing," Mullin said. "Large housing developments are not being built in towns like Scituate and Cohasset, so knowledge of the market is vitally important. Our brokers are full time real estate professionals with 68 plus years of combined experience. They are all local residents and active in their communities."

Mullin has completed a Course VIII Residential Appraisal Course from the American Institute of Appraisers, is a Certified Appraiser - Senior of the American Association of Certified Appraisers, a Certified Residential Specialist (CRS) and a Graduate Realtor Institute (GRI). Recognition of Mullin's professional expertise extends beyond the real estate community.

He has served as an advisor to the Town of Scituate during its tax re-evaluation process and to the Scituate School Committee during its deliberations on school closings.

In 1981, consistent with its emphasis on customer service, Dwyer & Mullin joined ERA (Electronic Realty Associates, Inc.), the second largest real estate franchise organization in the world, acording to Mullin. "Our association with ERA," Mullin said, "supplements our thorough knowledge of the South Shore market with access to the national housing market picture."

As an ERA firm, Dwyer & Mullin is able to offer ERA home protection plans, photo-by-wire listings, a nationwide relocation system and a guaranteed sale plan. Also, through ERA Mortgage Services, Dwyer & Mullin provides mortgage financing for buyers around the country at competitive rates.

Community sports report

by Lisa Shumaker

Football Victory

Cohasset ended their season with a tremendous victory over the Duxbury Dragons, 7 to 0. The entire team contributed to the win which marks the first time ever the Skippers have ever beaten Duxbury on Thanksgiving as well as the last time. Next year, Cohasset will be playing Hull on Thanksgiving.

Cohasset scored in the third quarter when Bobby Durkin gained some tough yardage which set up Floyd Hardwick's 36 yard-run for the touchdown in which he avoided two Dragons and outran another. This touchdown, capped off by Bobby Durkin's extra point, marks the first time Cohasset has scored off Duxbury since 1971.

This was by far the Skippers best performance on defense. Led by Tommy Durkin, Troy Chatterton, Mark Lahive, and John Hall, Cohasset's defense held Duxbury to only two first downs the entire game. The Skipper's pass coverage was superior, due to the efforts of Danny Curran, Troy Chatterton, Floyd Hardwick, and Philip Mahoney.

According to coach Phil Pisano, "the game itself is a tribute to the senior class members who have been working all year to pull the team together and create a team Cohasset can be proud of. This game will hopefully send them off next year with fond memories."

Winter Sports Preview

This week the winter sports season kicks off, with all the teams holding tryouts. Next week look for previews of the boys' and girls' basketball teams, hockey team, the wrestling team, and the gymnastic tea.

Soccer registration

Think spring for a brief moment to register your child or children for Cohasset's spring soccer. Registration for the Coastal Youth Soccer League will be Saturday, December 1 from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. during the Cohasset Christmas Fair. A registration table will be set up in the entrance to the Congregational Church.

Spring soccer is open to kids ages eight to 18. The registration fee is $20 per player. Registration will again be held Saturday, December 8 from 9 a.m. to noon both at the high school and Deer Hill during the Recreation league basketball.

Parents may also register via the mail by sending a check made out to Cohasset Soccer and name, age, birthday, phone number and address for each player to 178 South Main Street, Cohasset, 02025.

Pat's Peak Ski Trip

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept telephone registrations for a Saturday, Dec. 15, Ski Trip to Pat's Peak, Henniker, New Hampshire.

The cost for this trip will be $22 per person payable by check to the Town of Cohasset. The fee includes round trip motor coach transportation, and all day lift ticket. Rentals are $9.50 and Ski Lessons are $4.50 payable at Pat's Peak. Buses leave the Town Hall at 6:30 a.m., and return at about 7 p.m.

To register, please call the Recreation Department office, at 383-6791 immediately.

Blue Hills Ski Lessons

Late registrations will be accepted for Blue Hills Ski Lessons by calling the Recreation Department Office at 383-6791. Lessons are scheduled to begin Thursday, Jan. 3, and continue for five weeks, ending Thursday, Jan. 31, 1985.

The cost is $45 per person for lessons and transportation. All levels of instruction are available for children and youth aged 7 to 18 years old.

Fall is 'putting up' time for the family

It was "putting up" time. Papa sat in the mid e of the kitchen, knees hugging the pail of onions he wa peeling for Mama's mustard pickle.

"Ada, put a crust of bread in Papa's mouth " Mama directed, "so his eyes will stop watering."

A paring knife in one hand, he drew his arm across his eyes, smiled and opened his mouth.

"Watch out, my dark-eyed beauty," he cried. "I might bite you like the wolf."

My sisters and I all laughed at the very idea of our gentle father biting anyone, let alone his favorite daughter.

Mama stood at the stove stirring the contents of a big blue kettle, a long wooden spoon in her hand. She frowned because her eyeglasses kept steaming up. Then she took them off and sat wearily by the table where Esther and I were doing our homework.

"You might each take a turn at stirring the pot while I rest a minute. Just don't let it catch on the bottom."

Delicious smells of spices and herbs floated through the flat. Over the soapstone sink and set-tubs, brass faucets and pipes shone from their weekly application of Bon Ami and elbow grease. Empty pantry shelves were washed and waiting for the winter's supply of condiments, fruits, jellies and jams. The red brick pattern linoleum was waxed and the black coal stove was highlighted with the well-buffed stove polish.

Most of this was Crissie's work: she reveled in housework. Esther, the calm one, and I did our share at Mama's bidding. Marie was good at thinking up ideas of running errands or anything to get out of the scrubbing, but dependable Ada was right there at Mama's side, the cheerful cherub. Liz had begun to have dates, so she was out.

We took turns stirring, feeling important and sniffing the grand aromas. Through the steam rose visions of our holiday table at Thanksgiving and Christmas with Mama's pressed glass dishes filled with golden mustard pickle of tiny baby onions and cauliflower buds to go with our Thanksgiving turkey, or her perfect piccalilli for our Christmas feast, or rosy chili sauce to go with our baked beans and brown bread on Saturday nights.

Most suppers we drank Formosa Ooolong tea with our meals, but on Saturdays Mama preferred coffee, which Liz made. She used an eggshell to make the brew come clear. And we had frosted coffee buns for dessert.

More sweets lined each window sill; jars of purple concord grape jelly, glowing amber apple jelly and the pale jade of quince, each shining in the late sun and each wearing a little white cap of wax that Mama had poured from an old cracked teapot. On the board that covered the set-tubs sat quart Mason jars filled with spiced peaches, pickled pears, brandied cherries . . . all destined to last through the winter on shelves in the pantry or in the cellar. More sterilized jars waited on a snowy tea towel for the mustard pickle.

It had been a long month and Mama was tired but smiling with satisfaction at a job well done. Yet she said, "George, will you get out the bread mixer after supper and knead the dough for me? It's Friday, you know."

"I'll get it out now, Mame. Sit down and rest. The girls will get supper ready."

We put our books away and Esther started to sing. "Maxwelton's braes are bonnie . . . " We all joined in "where early fa's the dew". We were harmonizing and Mama, who never could resist a song, came in with her lovely soprano. It was Papa's favorite song.

After supper he sat again in the middle of the kitchen turning the handle on top of the metal bread mixer. Under the lids were blades that kneaded the heavy dough already mixed with cakes of Fleischmann's yeast. We bought this at their plant on Inman Street. When Papa finished, the dough was cut and shaped into loaves, then set in bread pans to raise overnight.

Now yellow-eye beans were put to soak on back of the stove for tomorrow's baked beans. Mama used salt pork and molasses and an onion. Tomorrow she'd make brown bread with raisins.

Our Friday night suppers were often creamed salt codfish with a hard boiled egg sauce and baked potatoes. But if we had company Mama would go into Foley's in the market in Boston and get real finnan haddie. Then she'd use her special recipe and make plenty so Papa could have the leftovers for Sunday breakfast. This she made with extra care, extra cream, onions and a green pepper . . . a meal to remember!

Papa was a willing helpmate, happy to spend his evenings cutting up bushel baskets of green tomatoes and all the good things which went into her cherished old recipes. Her favorite cookbook was a notebook she'd pasted up herself of recipes copied from the newspapers. And oh, the good dishes that came from that old book.

Soon the results of their labors would be set before us and our voices would blend. "Thank thee, O Lord, for these thy gifts."

Papa's daughter

Expressway traffic lanes

The state Public Works Dept. is instituting new traffic lane changes beginning Monday, Dec. 3.

From 6 to 10 a.m. daily, two northbound left lanes will be designated express lanes to Boston. The northbound right lane and a "traffic management lane" will be designated local exiting lanes.

From 3 to 7 p.m. daily, the two southbound left lanes will be designated express lanes from Boston to Braintree. The southbound right lane and the traffic management lane will will be used for local exiting traffic.

This plan will continue until March when the second year of the Southeast Expressway reconstruction project is begun. Until March, there will be no concrete barriers set on the lanes.

Directors needed for Bay State Games

The 1985 Bay State Games, Massachusetts own Olympic-style sports festival, is offering a unique alternative to the usual summer job for high school juniors.

The Games are providing an opportunity for part-time work in the areas of sports management and sports promotion through participation in the Bay State Games regional organization system.

As a result of the great success and tremendous enthusiasm generated by the 1984 Games, this system is being expanded to integrate a network of volunteer, non-paid, student managers and assistants to work throughout the state in the six competition regions of the Games.

Students will be assigned to assist coaches, regional sports chairmen and the Bay State Games staff in the three largest sports of the Summer Games; basketball, soccer and track & field.

They will also be responsible for keeping their local press informed on key players and for providing reporters with updated information on the Games in general and its participants in a particular region.

Students interested in applying for manager and assistant positions in the 1985 Bay State Games may pick up the proper forms in their high school guidance office or by writing Bay State Games at: Bay State Games, P.O. Box 8336, Boston, MA 02114.

All forms must be submitted to the Bay State Games office no later than Friday, Dec. 21, 1984. Student manager and assistant selections will be announced in mid-January and those chosen should be expected to begin their assignments in mid to late April for approximately eight hours per week.

Take appropriate steps to avoid the flu

With the approach of winter and the beginning of the cold-weather season, the Massachusetts Medical Society (MMS) today advised residents of Massachusetts to take appropriate steps to avoid the risk and effects of influenza (flu), which is expected to be more widespread in the Commonwealth this season than last.

Based on the most recent epidemiological and laboratory data, state public health officials and the medical community anticipate that influenza will be more prevalent during the upcoming winter season because the antigenic nature of two influenza virus strains frequently observed last year has undergone the usual drift toward new strains. The A/Brazil strain is now a new strain called A/Chile. The B/Singapore virus has drifted to a new form called B/USSR. The A/Phillipines type virus appeared in scattered cases last season, and is expected to occur again this year. Public health officials have warned that the appearance of these new viral strains raises the possibility of greater numbers of Massachusetts residents being affected by influenza during the 1984-1985 winter season. As a result, the state department of public health and the medical community at large suggests annual immunization (vaccination) against influenza, especially for those in "high- risk" groups.

In a report issued jointly by its public health and occupational/environmental health committees, the MMS advises its member physicians to make their patients fully aware of the risks associated with influenza and to encourage proper precautions well in advance of the influenza season which peaks in midwinter. Underscoring the importance and effectiveness of immunization against influenza, MMS President Frederick J. Duncan, Jr., M.D. said that "all Massachusetts residents, especially those in high-risk groups, should consider being vaccinated, because the vaccine is readily available, quite safe and painless to receive, and highly effective in providing protection against the flu." "The best approach is to consult one's personal physician and to discuss the appropriateness of flu vaccination on an individual basis," Dr. Duncan added.

Influenza illness is characterized by an abrupt onset of fever, sore throat and nonproductive coughing. Unlike many other common respiratory infections, influenza can cause extreme, general physical discomfort lasting for several days. It also can lead to more severe disease if there is any viral invasion of the lungs. During the peak influenza period in midwinter, high rates of acute influenza illness and lower respiratory tract infection usually result in dramatic increases in visits to physician offices and hospital emergency rooms.

Certain individuals are more at risk medically during influenza outbreaks. Those who, because of their age or underlying health status, are poorly able to cope with viral infection are more likely to contract influenza and often require medical attention, including hospitalization. These "high-risk" group persons should take special precautions to avoid infection by influenza virus, and should consult their personal physicians about the value of vaccination against influenza. For those individuals in the designated high-risk groups, annual influenza vaccination is the most effective means of preventing or weakening the infection.

In addition to high-risk groups, high priority should be given to immunization of those who provide medical care and essential community services, as well as to pregnant women and others in the community who should reduce their chances of acquiring influenza infection.

Because of its lower potential for causing fever reactions, only split (subviron) influenza vaccine should be administered to children under 13 years of age.

Advice on holiday charities

Did you know that $60 billion was given to charitable causes in 1982, and that individuals like you gave over 80% of that amount?

With the approach of the holiday season, Attorney General Francis X. Bellotti urges citizens to be alert for deceptive or fraudulent schemes which divert your charitable dollars into private pockets.

With the aid of the law and some common sense, you can not only protect yourself but also help the many worthy organizations sustain their valuable services.

"The first rule is to find out about the charity to which you are considering contributing," Attorney General Bellotti advises. "If it's an oral solicitation, ask questions: Is it a paid solicitation? How much of your dollar actually goes to the charitable program?

Exactly how is the charitable program carried out? Request written information, and don't give until you receive satisfactory answers. If you receive a direct mail appeal, take time to read the literature. Find out how your dollar is spent and make an informed decision."

Another way to learn about a charity is to take advantage of the law. In Massachusetts, there is a law which requires most soliciting charities to register and file annual financial reports with the Attorney General's Division of Public Charities.

These reports, which are available to the public, disclose the amount and sources of each charity's income and how it spends its money.

There are also private watchdog groups which can provide you with valuable information on charities, such as the National Information Bureau in New York City, and the Council of Better Business Bureaus in Arlington, Virginia. Both of these organizations have established basic standards to which they feel charities should adhere.

Another rule is to avoid organizations using high-pressure solicitation tactics, usually found in telephone appeals. Professional fundraisers will try to sell you tickets to a show or advertising space in a publication on the plea that the proceeds will help handicapped children, law enforcement personnel or some other cause that will catch a sympathetic ear.

What they will not usually tell you is that 75 percent or more of your money may go to the fundraiser, with very little left over for the charity itself. Be sure to ask a telephone solicitor how much of your dollar acutally goes to charity .

While some charities use telephones drives legitimately, the best advice is not to give if there is any hint of high pressure or you have received unsatisfactory answers to your questions.

Attorney General Bellotti's office has filed a number of lawsuits regarding fraudulent fundraising against professional solicitors and the groups that hired them.

An informed public is essential, however, to combat those who prey on our charitable instincts for personal gain.

A show for all the family

The Cohasset Dramatic Club's December presentation of the English "panto" show "Cinderella" will be a highlight of Cohasset's Christmas season festivities.

Written specially for the club's Town Hall presentation by author and newspaperman Rushworth Kidder, and directed by Judy Holmes, the Cohasset "Cinderella" is adapted to the Town's stage and for the actors and actresses who will appear on it.

This particular "Cinderella" emphasizes and is directed toward the numerous children and family groups who will appear onstage as part of the cast of sixty incredible characters invented by Rush Kidder, all serving as embellishments to the old story of the poor girl who found and married her Prince Charming.

Basically, the English "panto" style is new to this country, seldom seen here, but is a traditional English Christmas art form. This "Cinderella" could be called a bit of a spoof on the original tale, and the accent is on humor, with the stage setting populated by such diverse characters as a number of very small dancing mice, a remarkably intelligent cat, two zany sisters, who don roller skates, a fairy godmother whose magic isn't always dependable, and of course, Cinderella herself.

These are but a few of the unusual and unique characters who will be seen in the Dramatic Club's Christmas show. Perfomrances are Friday evening Dec. 7, Saturday evening Dec. 8 and Friday evening Dec. 14, all at 8 p.m. and Sunday Dec. 9 and Saturday Dec. 14 matinee shows at 2 p.m. Tickets are $4 for adults, $2 for children 12 years and under.

Tickets are available at the door or in advance at Fleming's, Cohasset Center. Plan now to bring the entire family to see the Dramatic Club's special Christmas "Cinderella".

New state banking law for elderly and minors

By Paula W. Gold

Massachusetts became the first state in the nation to guarantee that senior citizens and minors will have access to banking services, when a new law went into effect on October 11, 1984.

Under Chapter 230 of the Acts of 1984, more commonly known as the "18-65" Law, state-chartered savings, commercial and cooperative banks are prohibited from imposing "any fee, charge or other assessment against the savings account or checking account of any persons 65 years-old or older or 18 years-old or younger."

Although national banks and federal savings institutions are not required to comply with "18-65" most are expected to respond to competitive and public relations influences and voluntarily follow the new statute. One large national bank, in fact, recently launched a progam giving charge-free accounts to depositors age 60 and over and a charge-free savings account to those 18 and under.

The new law is brief, but it has spawned a number of questions that were addressed by State Banking Commissioner Paul E. Bulman, who has determined that:

- The law applies to Passbook and Statement Savings Accounts, Regular N.O.W. (Negotiable Order of Withdrawal) and Regular (non-interest earning) Checking Accounts.
- The law does not apply to Super N.O.W. and Money Market Accounts, Certificates of Deposit and any account used in whole or in part for commercial or business purposes.
- Consumers who meet the eligibility requirements are not limited to only a single protected account. any combination of savings, checking and N.O.W. accounts is permitted.
- There is one charge that is permitted. Should any checks bounce because there were insufficient funds on deposit in the consumer's account, banks may charge a maximum of $5 for each check which has bounced because of insufficient funds.

Massachusetts banks subject to the law are currently working to implement "18-65" under a two-stage approach recommended by Commissioner Bulman. Initially, banks should be making a concerted effort to inform their customers of the law using signs conspicuously posted in all banking offices, as well as enclosures in regularly mailed account statements. These mailings include a registration form and stage two calls for those consumers who are both eligible and interested to complete the forms and return them to their banks. On a related point, once a minor signs up for a protected account, it becomes the responsibility of his bank to terminate the protected status once the depositor turns 19; it will not be necessary to fill out another form to "unregister."

One somewhat confusing twist applies to cases of joint ownership when one accountholder does not meet the age requirement. For example, the account will be protected if the "underage" accountholder is the spouse of a joint depositor who is 65 or older. In all other cases, where the underage person is not the spouse, the account will be considered ineligible for "18-65."

Consumers who have questions or are experiencing problems should contact their bank. Consumers may also contact the: Office of the Commissioner of Banks, Consumer Assistance Division, 100 Cambridge Street, 20th Floor, Boston, 02202, (617) 727-2102.

Annual festival

The second annual Festival for Children's Hospital, a public display and sale of professionally decorated trees and wreaths, opens Thursday, Nov. 29 and runs through Sunday, Dec. 2, at the Bayside Exposition Center, Exit 17, Southeast Expressway, adjacent to Morrissey Boulevard.

Festival hours are Thursday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m., and Sunday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Admission to the festival is $4 for adults and free for children, 12 and under. Special group rates are available.

All proceeds from the festival will benefit Children's Hospital of Boston. The event is being organized by the Children's Hospital League, which has more than 700 members throughout the Greater Boston area.

In addition to trees and wreaths, visitors to the festival will find gift boutiques, "Sugar Plum Shop", and "Munchkin Hollow" - a childrens' activity area. Entertainment, provided by Boston area performers will run throughout the festival.

The artificial trees and wreaths will remain on display at the Bayside Exposition Center for the duration of the festival and then be delivered to buyers. The trees and wreaths are all decorated by prominent local designers who have donated their time and materials.

Second Congregational Church

Why no offering of letters this Thanksgiving

Last Thanksgiving several members of our church responded to the appeal of Bread for the World to write letters to congressmen and senators urging their support of the Human Needs and World Security Bill sponsored by BFW.

Our letters, along with thousands more from all across the country were successful. Most of the provisions of the bill have been passed and become law.

This is probably why a new appeal for an "offering of letters" is not being made this Thanksgiving. Approved were: a $25 million Child Survival Fund; $98 million increase in the health and aid budget of the U.S. Agency for International Development.

But our efforts to hold down military aid were frustrated by a close vote in the Senate. However, the battle to eliminate hunger goes on. Our churches, BFW and other organizations will be urging new programs as soon as the 1985 Congress gets organized. In the name of Christ, please support these appeals.

Thanks for giving, Hungry people in Boston thank you for your gifts of food, brought last week to the Thanksgiving Sunday service and delivered this week to Pilgrim Church, Dorchester. Hungry people in Africa will be helped by your Famine Relief contributions. On behalf of all of them, thanks.

Children's Table needs costume jewelry. Please call Claudia Story, 383-6976.

News Flash, Stumped for a Christmas idea? Try Second Congregational Church note paper! Proceeds benefit the 7th and 8th graders. Available after church now through Christmas. The price? A scant $2.50 for a box of individual notes and envelopes.

Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints

At the Sunday session of the two day Stake conference held at the Hingham Chapel of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, Cheryl Turner of Forest Ave., a senior at Cohasset High School, addressed 600 members on the subject of Peer Pressures.

Her dad, Tom Turner, had been called to a position on the Stake (diocese) as a Counselor in the Young Men's organization in charge of the Scouting program.

Of special interest to those present was the opportunity to meet and hear an address from Russell M. Nelson, an apostle of the Lord. For many years, Elder Nelson has been a preeminent cardiac surgeon, earning recognition in medical circles around the world. He had always held many positions in the church as well.

Then last April, the First Presidency of the LDS church asked him to set aside his profession and assume the mantle of an Apostle. This he willingly did. He now serves his fellowman in a different way by serving the church full time, and will continue in this way the remainder of his life.

He proclaims that "God lives, that Jesus is the Christ, and that His church is established on the earth today." Elder Nelson reminded the audience that Thanksgiving began here in New England when George Washington designated a day of Thanksgiving for the nation. He said the key to thanksgiving is in our daily prayers, said individually and "with your families."

Elder Nelson urged all to feast on the words of Christ . . . to study daily the Bible and the Book of Mormon . . . to bring the work of the Lord into the sanctuary of the home." If this is done, he promised rich blessings to our homes, to our nation and to the world.

Cohasset Chess Club seeks members

After three months, our core chess group numbers approximately ten individuals: Ed Cox, Arne Gjesteby, Dee DeSantis, myself (Tanna Kasperowicz), Ginny DeBassio, Judy Volungis, three Brockton residents and Charlie DeSantis when he's on land (he's a pilot with a very complicated schedule).

The club has three official chess meets, and we're still playing round-robin kinds of games. But we hope to get better. Ed Cox has written to the National Chess Federation for rules, etc. Our goal, some fine day, is to send one or more of our group off to a regional tournament. We have several people interested in doing the same. But mostly, we play for fun.

We're still trying to find "a good night to meet." We recently voted to meet on the second and third Tuesdays of the month, at members' homes. We hope to be able to include more of you . . . by playing around with meeting nights, at least in the beginning. If you'd like to join us, but Tuesday nights are bad for you, please call me with that information.

We're also interested in beginners (those of you who would like to learn how to play chess but have never learned how). The Cohasset Chess Club has no dues. If you should decide to meet with us regularly, you would be expected to "host" a meeting occasionally. I can assure you we are very quiet and consume mostly tea and coffee and a few crackers if you have them.

We'd love to be able to include you. To be included, you need only make a phone call (383-9115; message 9158). We can pick you up, deliver you home safely.

Supplemental health rules

The Cohasset Board of Health voted the following amendments and additions to the Supplementary Rules and Regulations for the Disposal of Sanitary Sewage which are in effect:

Massachusetts General Laws, Chapter 111, Section 31E, Section 8r of Cohasset Supplementary Rules and Regulations

"In order for the Board to accept a proposal for consideration, the application must consist of a set of plans in conformance with Title V and Cohasset Supplementary Rules and Regulations for the Disposal of Sanitary Sewage and a Disposal Works Construction Permit paid for and filled out in its entirety."

Section 13 Amendment

"The design engineer or an agent of the Board of Health for the disposal works system shall make such inspection required by the Board and shall determine that the individual sewage disposal system has been constructed in accordance with the approved plans, the provisions of Title V of the State Environmental Code and the rules and regulations of the Cohasset Board of Health and he shall make certification to the Board of the form required by the Board, a copy of which is attached to these regulations, within two (2) weeks from the completion of construction."

Leaching Trenches 15.14
Section 24 B of Cohasset Supplementary Rules and Regulations

"When leaching trenches are proposed for new construction, use of the area between the trenches as a reserve area is prohibited."

Percolation Test 15.03(4)
Section 23 of Cohasset Supplementary Rules and Regulations

"Percolation test data will expire two (2) years from the date of testing, unless renewed by the owner of the property or his/her agent at the time the data expires. The Board of Health can renew the test data for two (2) more years provided there has been no alteration of the land which could affect the percolation data. The decision to require an additional percolation test will rest with the Board of Health or its agent. Alterations will be determined by the Board of Health or its duly authorized representative(s)."

Cinderella begins Dec. 7

"Awesome, ain't it?" crows Cinderella's fairy godmother in the Cohasset Dramatic Club's forthcoming production. Awesome? Rushmore Kidder's original musical, Cinderella, is indeed, awesome.

This jazz pianist, former professor of English, now Feature Editor and weekly columnist for the Christian Science Monitor, has conceived a lively book and delightful score in the tradition of an English Panto.

While in England, as London Correspondent for the Christian Science Monitor, Rushmore Kidder was first introduced to Panto. And, since "Judy Holmes has always been after me to write one," Rush finally capitulated. So, here we have it: Cinderella.

The show has everything: puns; malapropisms; buffoonery; slapstick; marvelous - no, purr-fect - pantomine by Cinderella's Cat (Stephanie Holmes); acting; dancing (the "mouse dance" alone is worth the price of admission); singing - and I guarantee you'll leave the theatre humming, "I Wish I could Go to the Ball", a haunting melody threaded through the script.

Alice Duffy as fairy godmother will turn in a dazzling performance, as will Derek Holmes, Cinderella's father, Baron Stoneybroke, an absent-minded inventor, with such brainstorms as a knitted salad bowl (to absorb the excess dressing), peanut butter tooth paste and a "rollerboid" (a camera) to his credit and who claims, "The messier the workshop, the mightier the work."

Jan Higbee will be Cinderella and her stepsisters, Nasty and Nostalgia (Bob Julian and Jim McLoud-Warrick) are mincing and muscular, splashing themselves with perfume ("for sensual ravishment") in order to attract Prince Sally Langer, a fetching, leggy brunette, who speaks in rhyme when bored. As Dandini, Sara DiLima, the Prince's sidekick, will treat us to comedy at its best.

Performances are: Thursday, December 6, 8:15 p.m. This is the final dress rehersal, and senior citizens are invited as guests of the Cohasset Dramatic Club.

Also, Friday, December 7, 8:00 p.m.; Saturday, December 8, 8:00 p.m.; Sunday, December 9, 2:00 p.m. Matinee; Friday, December 14, 8:00 p.m.; and Saturday, December 15, 2:00 p.m. Matinee.

All performances take place at Cohasset Town Hall.

Ticket prices are adults: $4; children: $2; seniors free at dress rehersal. Tickets may be purchased at Fleming's or at the Box Office. For ticket information call 383-0170.

Seminar to discuss environmental concerns

Sewer backups, basement flooding, and sewage overflows into local waterways used for drinking water, swimming, and fishing are all symptoms of a problem engineers call excessive infiltration and inflow (I/I).

"Excessive I/I has overtaxed our sewerage systems, causing serious environmental and economic consequences for citizens throughout the Commonwealth," says Thomas C. McMahon, director of the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering's (DEQE) Division of Water Pollution Control (DWPC).

Infiltration occurs when clean water leaks into a sewerage system from defective pipes, pipe joints, connections, or manhole walls. Inflow refers to clean water gushing into a sewerage system via interconnections of storm drainage systems or illegal sump pump or downspout connections from private residences.

Of the 195 Bay State communities with municpal sewerage systems, more than 80 are known to have excessive I/I in their sewerage systems.

Environmental degradation caused by I/I has forced DWPC to impose prohibitions on the addition of new wastewater flows to many local sewer systems. This diminishes opportunities for planned growth, industrial expansion, and broadening the local tax base. The DWPC currently has sewer bans or connection restrictions against 13 Metropolitan District Commission (MDC) and eight non-MDC communities.

Recent studies performed by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), various national and regional water pollution control organizations, and large sewer authorities have demonstrated that over one-half of all I/I enters the municipal sewer system from private sewer service connections. For this reason the DWPC is in the process of instituting a coordinated enforcement effort aimed at reducing this source of extraneous flow.

Their enforcement strategy will include ordering the affected communities to take specific actions to remedy the problem. These actions could include house-to-house inspections to document illegal services, such as sump pumps and follow-up procedures to ensure their removal.

In order to aid these communities in their I/I reduction efforts, the DWPC and the New England Interstate Water Pollution Control Commission are co-sponsoring a one-day seminar Dec. 7 at the Marriott Hotel in Newton.

This seminar will allow municipal officials and public works directors to discuss these issues with other local officials and representatives from regulatory agencies, as well as review action programs already under way in various Massachusetts municipalities. For registration information, interested citizens should call Mary Lou Mottola at the DWPC at 292-5758.

The DEQE is the state's environmental regulatory agency responsible for developing, administering and enforcing programs which regulate air, surface water and groundwater, wetlands, and solid and hazardous waste.

Dec. production of Cinderella

The Cohasset Dramatic Club presents five performances of the show "Cinderella" done in traditional English "panto" style, in a version specially written for this production by author Rushworth Kidder. The director is Judy Holmes.

Dates of the performances are: Friday and Saturday evenings Dec. 7 and 8; Sunday Dec. 9, an afternoon matinee; Friday evening Dec. 14 and Saturday Dec. 15, an afternoon matinee.

Times of the performances are evenings at 8 p.m. and matinees 2 p.m. at Cohasset Town Hall, 41 Highland Ave. Tickets are $4 for adults, $2 for children 12 years of age and under.

Tickets will be available at the door or in advance at Fleming's, Cohasset Center. Senior Citizens are invited to the final dress rehearsal at the Town Hall, Thursday, Dec. 6 at 8 p.m. For additional information please call 383-0170.

You've built equity in your home . . .

The equity in your home (the difference between the amount you owe on your first mortgage and what your home is really worth) is an asset often overlooked.

You worked for your home...now let your home work for you. Our loan officers will be pleased to talk with you about taking advantage of this ideal money source.

A loan on this equity can pay the tuition for your children's education, buy or build a recreational home, allow you to take advantage of investment opportunities, and even help you assume an existing mortgage on a new home. We can assist with any worthwhile financial need.

You have built equity in your home — why not use it???

Watershed engineering study

The Watershed Protection Area Committee will be meeting Thursday night to interview engineering firms bidding for the $10,000 watershed study.

The committee received three proposals from Fay Spofford and Thorndike, I.E.P. Inc., and Camp, Dresser, and McKee. Tonight's meeting will be held in conjunction with the watershed committee, the Board of Selectmen and the Water Commission.

Two firms, SEA Consultants and Camp, Dresser and McKee, had previously submitted proposals for the watershed bylaw study and were interviewed in October. No selection was made at that time, and the proposal was put out to bid again.

'Single Living' party

"Single Living" Newsmagazine sponsors its first annual Christmas party at Renaissance Restaurant in North Pembroke (Rte. 53) Monday, Dec. 3, starting at 7 p.m.

No reservations are necessary for the evening. The host restaurant is creating an hors d'oeuvres buffet. There will be prizes, dancing to the Jim Sylvia Band and "Single Living" Tee shirts, as well as a brief program.

There is a charge of $7 and a cash bar. Call Connie Ruisi, Patty Cole or Lois Martin at 837-2884 for further information.

Cohasset Village Fair

"Something for the holidays for everyone" could well be the watchword of Cohasset's Village Fair this year when the 44th edition of the popular joint fund-raiser of five town churches opens its doors at 10 a.m. Saturday, Dec. 1 in buildings around Cohasset Common.

A count of the various elements of the Fair organized by a committee of representatives from the five churches headed by General Chairman Jeanne Syrmopoulos, shows nearly 25 individual attractions. Many of these are designed for their special appeal to separate audiences and tastes, all the way from tots on Santa's knee to grandparents testing their luck in a raffle for a color television set.

As a matter of fact, a new raffle for one of the hottest items on 1984 lists for youngsters was announced this week by Claudia Story, chairman of the Children's Table who revealed that she expects to have one or more Cabbage Patch dolls that will go to lucky ticket-holders in a raffle.

The dolls will be centerpieces of a Cabbage Patch Corner of the Children's Table where clothes, slippers and other adornments for the much-sought-after dolls will be on sale.

This raffle joins at least two others at the Fair. One will offer a list of major contributed items headed by a color TV, a personal computer and including many donations by local businesses and restaurants. Another will offer the prize of a large Heritage Wreath made by Cub Scouts of Den 3 and contributed to the Fair. A fourth possible raffle offering will be colorful gingerbread houses fashioned by Kiki Booras.

A directory of the Fair shows the following locations of its feature attractions:

Town Hall

In addition to the Children's Table, which will have its traditional location in the center of the Town Hall, two major attractions here will be the Boutique and Wreaths. Wreath-makers and embellishers, under the leadership of Jean Manganaro, have been putting the finishing touches on hundreds of these decorative items in round-the-clock work sessions in the Congregational Church this week.

Months of preparation for the Boutique have resulted in the creation of scores of hand-crafted gifts which Chairman Carol Sandblom says will be displayed in lots hour by hour so that late shoppers will not be disappointed.

Other Town Hall features include the Potting Shed presided over by Mary Campbell and Fran Walton where a wide variety of flowering and green plants will be supplemented by artistic dried arrangements. Finding a place near the Children's Table will be Grabs to tempt youthful speculators.

Once again, food will have its place in the Town Hall with Phil Shockman, Jack Riley and crew running the Snack Bar to satisfy appetites for hot dogs and soft drinks; Ham Tewksbury offering a variety of cheeses he brings in from dairyland; and Rod and Marilyn Hobson grinding out a white avalanche from their popcorn machine. The Town Hall will also be the site for sale of raffle tickets.

Decorations in the Town Hall will be the responsibility of the Central Committee, while Betty Madden and Ginny Nast will decorate the Christmas Tree in the entrance lobby.

St. Stephen's Church

Walton Rodgers Hall of St. Stephen's Church will be given over to Children's Activities from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. offering hand-painting, face-painting, carol-singing, and, at 11:30 a.m., a Children's Movie. A staff of attendants, including Linda Summers, Megan Phelps, Ruth Wilcox and Kate Abbruzzese, will direct these activities, giving mothers a chance to leave their children in good hands while touring other Fair sites.

Congregational Church

The Chowder Bar, Secret Room, Food and Candy Tables and Books, will make the first floor of the Congregational Church a very busy place during the Fair. Bob Beggan and Bill Billikas, teaming up to run the Chowder Bar will offer not only the usual chowder and sandwiches, but adding souvlakia and Greek salad to the menu in deference to the leadership role this year by the Panagia Greek Orthodox Church.

The Food Table, organized by Grace Donahue, and the Candy Table headed by Pamela McNamara, are also expected to offer some Greek delicacies in addition

AT KIMBALL'S FOR THE HOLIDAYS.

Rather than pack them into sleeping bags in the family room, why not put up Grandma, Uncle John and your sister from Des Moines at Kimball's.
They'll have great views of Cohasset Harbor, wonderful food in our dining room (gets 'em out of your kitchen), and the price is just a mere $49.95* per night (at that price, you might want to stay here yourself).
Kimball's for the holidays. Relatively speaking, it's a wonderful idea.

to the usual breads, brownies, cakes and fudge.

Alice Daunt and Helen Hooper will again preside over the sale of hundreds of used paperbacks and hard-covers, while in expanded quarters in the rear of the church, children will have an opportunity to do their Christmas shopping in private in the Secret Room, from which adults are barred. Barbara Hislop and Lee Jenkins will direct a staff of sales people and gift-wrappers.

Unitarian Parish House

The popular Bargain Bazaar, with a wealth of attic and basement treasures, will take over Trueblood Hall in the Unitarian Parish House. A group headed by Pauline Walter has been collecting for weeks and pricing for days in anticipation of the Fair. Also in the Parish House will be the Silent Auction organized by Marie Johnston, where people can leave their bids for the merchandise displayed or described.

On the Common

Santa Claus will again be the center of attraction on the Common, arriving about 1 p.m. with appropriate fanfare to take up his place on a sleigh in his bower. Jeff Steele and Margaret Young are again managing his appearance. Nearby, balloon inflaters and sellers headed by Kathy Brennock will compete for attention with the Cub Scouts selling tickets for their Heritage Wreath.

Snowflake Fair

The Beechwood Congregational Church, 53 Church Street, Cohasset will hold its annual Snowflake Fair, December 1 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

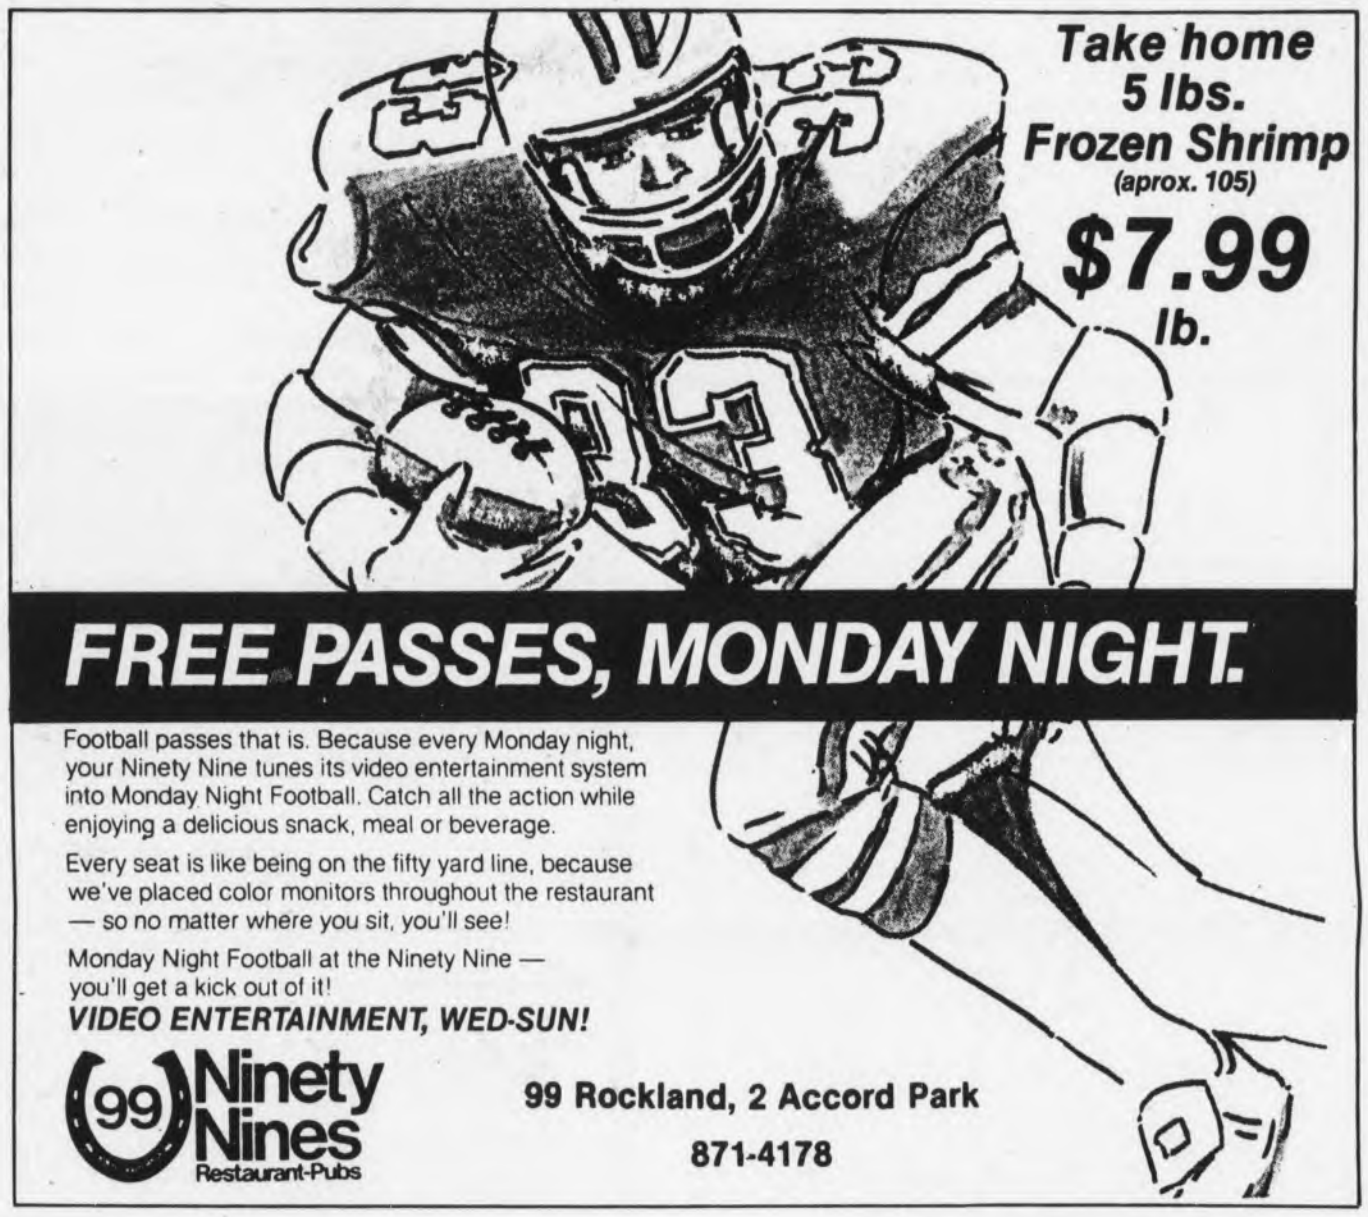
The aroma of fish chowder, fried bread dough, and the smell of fresh pines will greet you as you enter the fellowship hall.

Once again our famous "Beach Glass Candy" will be on sale. Flavors will include spearmint, wintergreen, licorice, clove and peppermint. Samples will be provided in case you never tasted it before.

Another specialty on display and for sale will be cabbage patch clothes suitable for any occasion for those "cabbage patch kids."

Fish chowder luncheon will be from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Fried bread dough, coffee, cold drinks and the snack bar will be open all day. Also May Merrit's Harvard Beets (a speciality at our Harvest Supper) will be available for take out along with our fish chowder.

On a Christmas tree will be a wide selection of new and different ornaments made by Church members. Wreaths (decorated or plain) will also be available. Our fancy table will display the handiwork of the different "Church Crafters".



Everyone's favorite is the White Elephant where one is sure to find a bargain. Homemade pies, cookies, cakes, breads and candy will be available at our Food Table.

No Christmas Fair would be complete without a visit from Santa. Santa will arrive at 1 p.m. Mark your calendar and call your friends for December 1 - be an earlybird shopper.

Hospice:

Lending a hand at the most difficult time

By Elisabeth Gorfinkle

Karen Black and Helen Parsons met for breakfast at Friendly's every Tuesday for about a year and a half. Their conversations, though they took place in the midst of light-hearted decor, were serious and thoughtful.

Black, 37 and mother of two young children, had recently lost her husband. He died because he couldn't survive complications concurring with a chronic blood disease.

Parsons was helping Black literally put the pieces of her life back together. She was carrying out the hospice philosophy which says that grief shouldn't be closeted but aired and worked through.

Two years later, in early November a few days before the anniversary of her husband's untimely death, Black said she feels she is successfully embarking on a new life. A few months ago she left South Weymouth for a new home in Pennsylvania.

On one of those late Saturday afternoons when dusk seems to fall far too soon, Black returned to visit Parsons, who is a 38-year-old mother and registered nurse living in South Weymouth. They discussed how their talks at Friendly's had helped her heal deep wounds and find herself.

"I found that the world at large didn't want to talk to me. There were no platitudes that made me feel good. No magic wand," she said.

"Having a friend like Helen gave me a present and a future, not just a sad past. Even though I functioned under this heavy cloud, having a friend that cared and pushed me on, got me to do things on my own.

"I could count on our meetings. If I had an idea or while I was finding out who I was, she would support me. Because of this, I really believe in hospice. Many people don't realize how emotionally wrenching it is to share in the experience of death with a family. Because it's so painful, many people withdraw. It is a special person who can share it with you."

Undoubtedly, hospice is about special people. They are doctors, nurses, social workers, clergy, home health aids and volunteers who provide alternative health care for dying persons choosing to no longer prolong death, but to spend their last days enjoying life as much as possible.

According to the National Hospice Organization (NHO) the definition of this care is: "...to provide support and care for persons in the last phases of an incurable disease so that they can live as fully and comfortably as possible.

"Hospice affirms life and regards dying as a normal process. Hospice neither hastens nor postpones death. Hospice believes that through personalized services and a caring community, patients and families can attain the necessary preparation for a death that is satisfactory to them."

The term hospice was derived in medieval Europe and means resting place on a difficult journey. The hospice movement was founded in London in 1967 by Dame Cicely Saunders, who opened St. Christopher's.

Hospice affirms life and regards dying as a normal process. Hospice neither hastens nor postpones death. Hospice believes that through personalized services and a caring community, patients and families can attain the necessary preparation for a death that is satisfactory to them.

The first hospice in the U.S. opened in New Haven, Conn. in 1974. The movement was slow to catch on. In 1979 210 programs existed, compared to today's 1,200 programs, according to a survey conducted this year by the NHO.

Parsons, a well-seasoned volunteer for Hospice on the South Shore Inc., is being honored for her work, as are all people affiliated with hospices throughout the country, because November 1984 has been proclaimed the first National Hospice Month.

A Senate resolution, approved by voice vote in September, directed President Ronald Reagan to inform government agencies, the medical community, along with other interested parties, that they should spend November actively encouraging national recognition and support for hospice care.

The federal government has also recently included hospice care in the Medicare benefits program, making this health care alternative readily available to many more of the elderly.

On the South Shore the hospice program takes place in the patient's home and is extended to the entire family, according to administrator June Grace.

This is because in 1978 Gloria Powaza, then the executive director of the Braintree-based Visiting Nurse Association of the South Shore and now chief executive officer, decided that her home health care agency would provide hospice care, said Grace.

Powaza pulled together a group of hospice professionals and started a pilot program, which in 1980 became an official branch of the VNA. Three years later the program became incorporated as Hospice of the South Shore. And its specialized health care teams enter homes in 11 towns including Braintree, Weymouth, Hingham, Norwell, Cohasset and Scituate.

"Our policy is to serve people regardless of race, ethnic origin, creed, sex or ability to pay," Grace said. "The program is holistic. In fact, I can't imagine a hospice program without a bereavement component, spiritual component and social services,(as well a medical component)."

All expenses which are not reimbursable by insurance coverage are covered by fund raising and donations. The money spent on subsidized care last year was $56,000.

She added that patients who decide on Hospice care must receive permission from their doctors and must have at least one family member or friend to act as a primary care giver.

Barbara Segal, hospice team coordinator and an oncology nurse (a clinical specialist in cancer nursing) explained that the primary care giver is necessary for the program to work.

She said that even though the program provides 24-hour on call service and health aids can be assigned to the hospice team, the program is designed to teach family and friends how to take responsibility for the patients.

Patients and their loved ones need each other to learn to cope with painful diseases as well as impending death. For instance, most hospice patients are battling with cancer, a disease as brutal to the psyche as it is brutal to the body, said Segal.

"Many times I find that people with cancer are very lonely. Their support systems have disappeared. The staff people are there a couple of hours a day depending on the need, but it has been my experience (that outside of the primary care givers) people don't know what to say to them," she said.

"We end up taking on lots of the burden of support. And this is a very stressful job to be in sometimes because you're facing your own morbidity constantly. (For example) in August we had a case load of 50 people and lost 23 in 30 days."

For more information on the VNA's hospice program, call 843-0947.

Politicus — by David A. Mittell, Jr.

Regaining excellence in education

(First of three parts)

Education is one of the two or three most critical issues Massachusetts and America will confront in the mid eighties. After a decade (the sixties) when fundamentals were scoffed at in the usually foolish pursuit of "relevance," and after a decade (the seventies) when declining enrollment brought about declining public interest in public education, we are at a juncture when a relatively prosperous Commonwealth can if it will restore our public schools to their once pre-eminent position.

We are farther from "pre-eminence" today than most of us realize. Even New Hampshire, which spends a fraction of what we spend per student on public schools, produces students whose SAT scores average higher than ours. What we confront is a perhaps decade-long task — commitment would be a better word — to regain the excellence that we somehow let slip away.

On November 19 the Massachusetts House passed House 5704, a lengthy, complicated piece of legislation attempting to deal with the problem. It is the product of a joint House-Senate committee chaired by Sen. Gerard D'Amico and Rep. James Collins, who have been working closely with Gov. Dukakis.

The bill that has emerged, unfortunately, is not the answer. It is not the answer for a variety of reasons, most of which will be gone into next week. But the first reason that this bill is wrong, even dangerous, is its timing. For we are in a "lame duck" legislative session, and in Massachusetts a lame duck session is nearly always a disastrous time to write major legislation.

"Lame duck is my favorite dish," the late legendary Governor's Councillor Sonny McDonough said during one of these sessions a few years back. What the savvy McDonough was referring to was that when a legislature reassembles after an election and during the holiday season, it nearly always goes nuts. Defeated members see it as a last opportunity to push through self-serving pet projects. Reelected members know that they have two years to let the dust settle over any outrages they commit. The public is tired of politics in the news and has its attention on the holidays ahead.

It is just this sort of time when taxpayers get stuck with spending programs for years to come. When, rarely, good legislation comes out of such sessions, it usually comes with a strong odor . . . amendments slipped through giving this or that Beacon Hill hack a lifetime seldom-show sinecure. Everyone remembers (or should) the session two years ago in the last days of the King Administration, which came to be known as the "Great Feeding Frenzy."

Well, it's "feeding frenzy" time again, and Gov. Dukakis used poor judgment when on November 1 he sent a seven-page memorandum plugging House 5704 to his entire teacher-heavy personal political organization. By doing this the Governor not only acquiesced in the consideration of the education issue during "feeding frenzy" time, he lent credence to the widespread opinion that House 5704 is nothing more than a taxpayer-financed lubrication of his 1986 reelection vehicle.

This is too bad because the Governor's support of public schools has been consistent throughout his career, and his proposed amendments to House 5704 are by-and-large good ones that seek to contain its cost. But by pushing the issue now rather than awaiting the new legislature and the resolution of the question of the House speakership, both the Governor and the Legislature have assured that this most important of issues will be a political football at feeding frenzy time.

What must be appreciated is that House 5704 is no ordinary spending bill. As passed by the House on November 19, its projected cost is one billion, 200 million during the first five years. (Those who remember the actual cost of Chapter 766 versus the projected cost when it was enacted, know that the actual cost will surely run much higher.) With a billion and more being bandied about, with the future wellbeing of the next generation at stake, education is an issue that simply must not be relegated to a lame-duck, business-as-usual-on-Beacon-Hill session of the legislature.

The problem at hand was with us before the election, and it will be with us in January. To the extent that it is soluble by legislation at the state level (an assumption subject to challenge), any legislation needs to be considered soberly, in due course, and in the absence of lame ducks and other quacks, hacks, and shennanigans that history shows accompany lame-duck sessions.

Next week we will see that this legislation, although containing some good points, is fundamentally flawed.

'Pioneer Polly' learns to stoke a few coals

It is with a smug smile on my face and coal dust under my fingernails that I report my advancement to the intermediate level of Coal Stove Tending.

Let the winds howl. Let the snow mount its cold white magic up to the dog's eyebrows. I am ready.

When first I saw my "Chubby" (smart mouth references to my mirror will cause a hurt look) in my house, I feared it.

It is about three and a half feet high, earnestly rotund. Most of all, it is your serious coal stove. Several people having glanced at it and me said it would be only three days of shoveling before I tried to push it out the sliding glass door.

I considered that not an indictment but a challenge.

But to back myself up I ordered a cord of wood from a man in Pembroke, who put it in a high pile beside the garage. That was the biggest cord of wood I've ever seen. I became aware of that when I started stacking it. In fact I'm tempted to say that each time I walked away from it, the wood multiplied, till I was certain I would not see the day it was fully depleted.

It is true that I am not a woman who lusts after hardy outdoor exercise. I admire it but I seldom share it, choosing instead to wave my little plump hand at joggers, rakers and cyclists in those tight black shorts.

So stacking had to become a game with me in order to keep me with it, something like ironing used to be when I did that. Little by little I shifted the wood from its causal pile to somewhat precarious rows in the garage. It took me several outings because I promised me I'd do it only until my next injury. One work day was halted when I smashed a finger. The second session concluded with my dropping a log on my left foot. Someone else finally finished it due to my stalling and injuries.

But the wood was only a backup. It was coal I needed to learn for my mainstay. Yes, there's a central heater, but only a wimp counts on that when she's got herself a Chubby.

Now after enough cold weather to season both me and my skill, I'm delighted to report that people in my living room Sunday begged me not to stoke more coals. Every time someone said, "It's stifling in here," I modestly said, "Thank you".

Now I'm up to four days at a lick without her going out on me. I'm getting the hang of when to open 'er up and when to shut 'er down. I never said I could control the heat but I can create it.

Recently someone looked at my garage's supply of winter provisions and said it looked like Taylor Lumber Company. What great tribute to someone who's been playing Pioneer Polly for a month.

The garage does indeed seem an outlet for fuel. By way of friends a coal bin was created. It's my first. Never in my life have I had my own coal bin, never mind my own shovel and bucket. I consider them status symbols.

Minor problems remain. Not quite within my grasp is the knack for opening the door without choking guests with billowing smoke. That is probably a more advanced technique.

More obvious is the matter of my hands. They have known simple utilitarian care, never inch long nails, buffed and shined. But it is also a new experience to have them represent me as a coal miner, a battered one at that.

A big family wedding's this weekend. And I'm trying to get ready for the reception line. I hope people won't be picky. A little soot never hurt anyone.

To the editor:

Thank you for your help in reaching the public with our appeal for donors over the past two weeks. The critical need for group O blood is not completely gone, but your help has reduced the deficit we were experiencing considerably.

Over ten days ago we first contacted you because we were witnessing a deficit of group O blood of almost 1600 units. This deficit was putting a severe strain on hospitals throughout Massachusetts and was affecting our distribution to them. As of today, our deficit for group O blood has been lowered to about 500 units —still not optimal, but a far more manageable number.

When we were first in touch with you we were seeing all other blood groups dropping significantly with regard to collections. The picture for these groups is now extremely strong.

With your help we were able to reach over 140 people who had never before donated blood but were willing to help meet the need by doing so. We surpassed our collection estimates for last week alone by over 600 units — a number which you may readily translate into people.

As I said, we're not out of the woods yet. We still need you to help us continue to remind people of their role as responsible members of their communities. Your help over these past two weeks has been invaluable. Your continued support is appreciated and needed, too. Thank you for the part you play in helping the Red Cross provide a safe and adequate blood supply for all in need. You do make a difference!

Sincerely,
Jamie Haines

FROM THE KITCHEN

by JOAN PINKHAM

Out of the pages of ladies auxiliary cookbooks come recipes from some of our finest South Shore cooks. These collections gathered with zeal by women belonging to church groups, garden clubs, senior citizen and historical associations are the grass roots of New England cooking. The cover usually carries a picture of the old local church or grist mill, the binding is plastic spiral and the five hundred or more recipes can make mouth-watering reading and ambrosial dining. I have two shelves of cookbooks our local groups have asked me to review in this column and with Christmas gift lists being compiled just about now, I thought it might be fun to mention again some of the books still available. My favorite is "Cohasset Entertains" by the Community Garden Club of Cohasset, a book divided into four sections, one for each season. For example, here is a recipe from Patti Knowles who writes: "Our favorite Christmas morning coffee cake" of this

PRUNE SOUR CREAM COFFEE CAKE

1 1/2 c. chopped cooked prunes, Sunsweet, 12 oz. box
1 tsp. baking powder
1/2 tsp. salt
3/4 c. sugar
1 c. sour cream
2 c. flour
1 tsp. baking soda
1 c. margarine
2 eggs
1 tsp. vanilla
Topping: 1/2 c. each brown sugar and chopped nuts
1 T. cinnamon

Cream margarine, sugar, blend in eggs, one at a time. combine dry ingredients. Add with sour cream and vanilla. Fold in floured prunes. Grease and flour sponge cake pan. Pour in 1/3 of batter, sprinkle topping on batter; repeat layers. Bake at 350 for 55 minutes. Cool in pan approximately 10 minutes. Freezes beautifully.

Gourmet magazines may have their truffles, caviar and puff pastry delights reposing on silver trays, but these New England cookbooks have Yankee treasures such as Pumpkin Preserves, Indian Pudding, Mincemeat Plum Pudding, Apple Duff, My Dark Christmas Pork Cake and Marie Huddleston's chowder, perfect in our wintry season. This book is compiled by the Adult Fellowship of the First Baptist Church of Marshfield where people come from miles around to the summer luncheons prepared by these churchwomen.

DOWN HOME CHICKEN CHOWDER

4 slices bacon
1 can (4 oz.) sliced mushrooms, drained
1/2 c. chopped onion
1/8 tsp. thyme leaves, crushed
1 can each cream of celery and chicken vegetable soup
1 soup can water
1 1/2 c. diced cooked chicken
1 8 oz. can whole kernel corn, undrained
1 c. chopped canned tomatoes

In saucepan cook bacon until crisp. Remove and crumble. Pour off all but 2T drippings. Brown mushrooms and cook onions and thyme in drippings until tender. Add bacon and remaining ingredients. Heat, stirring occasionally. Makes about 5 1/2 cups.

Thousands of amateur efforts published as fund raisers have spewed off the presses since the first of them appeared to aid the dependents of Civil War casualties. Women and friends of St. Andrew's Episcopal Church labored long and lovingly to compile their book which includes Yankee dishes such as Sticky Buns, Halibut Souffle, Scalloped Oysters, Brown Bread and Highbrow Haddock. These tasty bars, nice for the holidays, are Louise Muzrall's

MINCE BARS

1 jar mincemeat, or 1 pkg. dry mincemeat, made according to directions on pkg.
1 c. brown sugar
1 3/4 c. flour
1/2 tsp. baking powder
2 c. oats
1 c. margarine

Mix together all ingredients except for mincemeat. Pack 1/2 mixture on 11 1/2 x 17" cookie sheet. Spread mincemeat over it. Add remaining dough mixture. Pack firmly. Bake at 350 degrees for 40 min.

Benefit to celebrate the King's birthday

Celebrating Elvis' golden birthday, Mr. and Mrs. David L. Archer, Sr. are sponsoring a benefit concert for the Children's Happiness Foundation. Stan Jr., with music provided by the famous John Penny Band, will be presenting his Golden Anniversary Tribute to the King-Elvis on Jan. 6, from 6 to 10 p.m. at the Bridgwaye Inn, Humarock.

The Children's Happiness Foundation is an organization that grants children, with life threatening illnesses, their fondest wishes.

Stan Jr. is a nationally known impersonator of the "King." As an internationally known TV and recording artist, Stan has appeared on stages from Broadway to Las Vegas, from Montreal to Florida. His concerts are in the true spirit of "The King of Rock and Roll." Stan was known by Elvis before his untimely death.

John Penny and all his band members are winners of many country western music awards and have been playing here in the New England area for many years. Their music spans the full range of country music from early Grande Ole Opry to the present.

The combination of Stan Jr. and the John Penny Band will bring you one of the finest shows ever seen in this area. Stan Jr. appeared at the Marshfield Fair, to many people's delight, this past summer. You saw only a small portion of his Elvis Show there — now come and see Stan's full Golden Anniversary Tribute to the King of Rock and Roll. This will be the only appearance, in this area, of this fabulous show. We are extremely lucky in getting him so close to Elvis' birthday on Jan. 8.

Due to only 280 seats available, tickets are by presale only. For tickets call Dave or Carol Archer between 3 and 9 p.m. only, at 837-0577 or mail a stamped envelope and $10 for each ticket to: Dave Archer, P.O. Box 1235, Marshfield, 02050. All tickets on first-come-first serve basis only.

THEATRE REVIEW

'I Do! I Do!' recreates 'marital bliss'

By Judith Montminy

What the Nickerson Theatre's production of "I Do! I Do!" does is present a pleasant, light-hearted look at marriage. What it doesn't do is show us marriage as we know it today. The musical, with book and lyrics by Tom Jones and music by Harvey Schmidt (both of "The Fantasticks" fame) is based on the 1951 play, "The Fourposter," by Jan deHartog. It's important to put the show's beginnings into perspective because what you see and hear about marriage is a curiosity —a wistful, romantic view of what was once known as "marital bliss." There is no trace of life in the mid-1980s with cohabitation, single parents, working mothers or remarried families.

"I do! I do!" traces the 50 years of Agnes and Michael's marriage from 1890 to 1940. When the show opens, Kathy Morath and Roger Neil play the two newlyweds with an embarrassment and excitement that is innocent and corny. But the schmaltz is an integral part of the entire show. The theme of the play is summed up in the final number, "This House," when both sing, "Marriage is a very good thing 'though it's far from easy; still it's filled this house with life and love." Yes, there are problems along the way. Yes, there are roving eyes. Yes, there are misunderstandings. But throughout it all, there is a constant thread of humor and dedication to the proposition that marriage is here to stay.

The show is simple. In less capable hands, the characters easily could have become boring. But Morath and Neil are charming actors who are easy to

ASBESTOS LUNG DISEASE

Asbestos dust causes serious lung ailments; the diseases appear suddenly, years after exposure. Today numerous SHIPYARD WORKERS, MASONS, and PIPEFITTERS of the 1930's-1970's have lung afflictions because they inhaled asbestos particles many years ago.

If you worked in one of those professions then and now have a lung disease, you may be eligible to receive money damages or workers' compensation. Relatives of living and deceased victims can also recover in some cases.

CREATURE COMFORTS by Liz Gorfinkle

Strange encounter with a frog

I had a strange encounter with a bullfrog from Wilmington a few weeks ago.

Working as a volunteer at the South Shore Wildlife Medical Center on Route 3A brings me into contact with many kinds of animals from milk snakes to exotic birds. But this frog hunched all alone under rocks in a gigantic sink really made an impression on me.

First of all, the sink was devoid of water. And two, the sink is in a semi-enclosed, unheated area. The bullfrog is a species of amphibian which rarely leaves water and decides to hibernate at the onset of cool weather. This frog was definitely in the wrong environment.

I inquired about the frog's welfare. I learned that IT (I forgot to check its sex by comparing the size of eye and eardrum. If they match in size, it's female. The male's eardrum is larger) needed to be taken to our wildlife classroom in Building 47 at the former Hingham Ammunition Depot. A large terrarium inhabited by little turtles was intended to be the frog's new home. I was then asked if I had the time to bus the frog over in a plastic bucket.

"Okay, why not?" I thought. "This is unexpected but moving a cold frog won't be any trouble."

Amphibians are cold blooded so their metabolisms slow way down in cold weather. "Besides," I rationalized, "If the frog warms up in my car, it certainly can't hop out of the bucket, because it has a broken leg."

The frog had been found on a Wilmington road and brought to the wildlife hospital. It had probably been hit by a car. I was told that the best treatment for the frog was to let the leg heal on its own, for a splint would be more of a hindrance than a help.

Once I put the frog in my car, I learned it was recuperating magnificently. It looked up at me, then jumped straight up into the air and landed on the passenger's seat.

Bullfrogs are well known for their leaping ability. In the wild they usually lie in wait in shallow water for prey to fly overhead, then leap forward as the prey passes. In a split second muscles in their mouths contract, whipping a long tongue around the unsuspecting prey, which is pulled under water and eaten.

Bullfrogs, Rana catesbeiana, have voracious appetites, and the larger ones (average length is eight inches) can pull small birds out of the air and gulp down small garter snakes. Their diet consists of various small creatures, usually insects.

Luckily, the frog had decided to hop up next to me before I had pulled out of the parking lot. I put the car in park, grabbed his now-warm body with both hands, looked around for a bucket cover, gingerly placed the frog in the bucket and slapped a cushion over the lid.

"This is what my life has come to," I said to the contents of the bucket.

Epilogue: The bullfrog is now resting comfortably in the terrarium. It has dug itself a hole near a pan of water and is hibernating. Bullfrogs always pick a spot to hibernate near water, so our frog was being true to form in digging up the earth in the terrarium. They will also hibernate under logs or stones.

I've been told they can dig down a few feet, probably well beyond even the most determined hibernation crashers. I'm not sure when our frog will stir from his immobile state, but bullfrogs are known to be the last of the amphibians to emerge in the spring, along with some of spring's most brilliant flowers in mid-May.

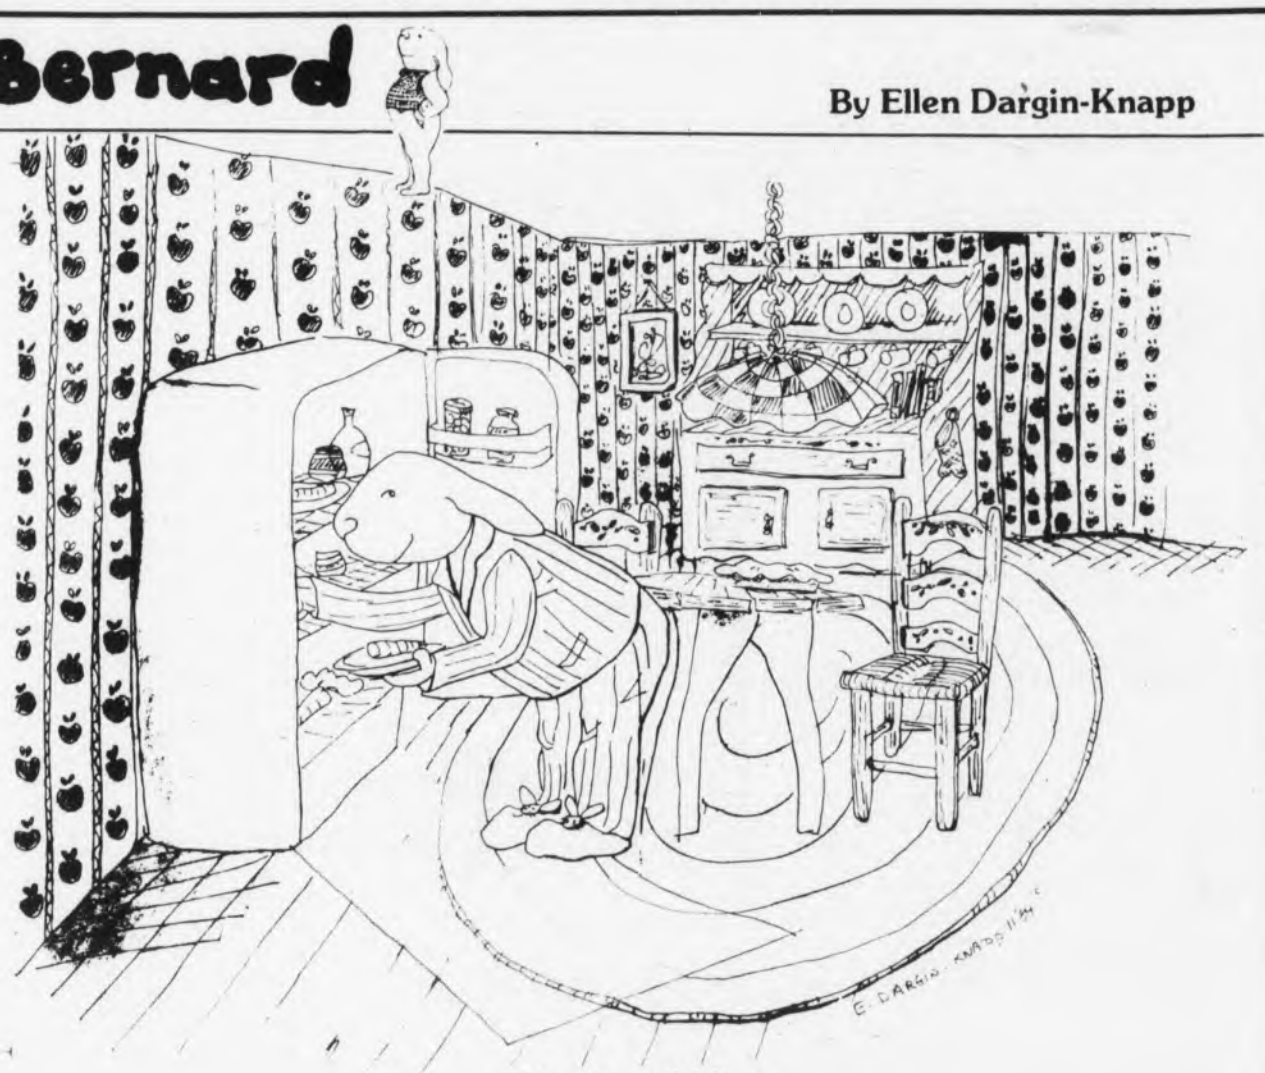
watch. Aging 50 years is not an easy task, especially when several decades pass onstage. Roger Neil's graying temples and mustache clearly point out the advancing years. Yet it is Kathy Morath's physicalizations and tempo that more accurately mark the passing of time and the changes not only in her age but also in her relationship with her husband.

Director Jon Kimball has avoided the static blocking of many two-character plays and moves Agnes and Michael with imagination. Several times, however, the audience became apprehensive when Agnes, dancing in high-heeled shoes, just missed falling off the bed or tabletop. The precarious moments were distracting.

The audience is most at ease during the period of marriage after the honeymoon is over and the children are out of diapers. The husband has become a successful writer of romantic novels and wants his wife to change and grow with him. Both Agnes and Michael list each other's faults in "Nobody's Perfect." One is always early, the other always late. One always finishes the other's stories and gives away punch lines, and so on. A gentlemen across the aisle was laughing so hard he had to dab the tears from his eyes. He was not alone in recognizing and enjoying some of the foibles of married life.



The Nickerson production of "I Do! I Do!" runs into trouble during the brief, serious moments when Agnes tries to explain her dissatisfaction with her lot. Neil, as Michael becomes a caricature of the concerned, misinterpreted husband. By today's standards, Agnes and Michael's reconciliation is too simplistic and pat. But today's standards cannot be applied to this show.

To enjoy "I Do! I Do!" one must be willing to accept the show's attitude toward marriage, at least for the duration of the performance. The production, on the whole, is well-crafted and offers frothy entertainment at a theatre on the South Shore.

"I Do! I Do!" continues at the Nicherson Theatre in Accord Park through Dec. 16. Performances are Tuesday through Sunday evenings, with a matinee on Sunday.

White Christmas appears this Sunday

Forget the last-minutes shopping hassles, nevermind the crowded malls, disregard any thought of driving into Boston.

Many of us forget that right here in town we have an array of specialty stores not found in the neon and glitter of the area shopping malls. Handcrafted articles, and one-of-a-kind items, sold by longtime neighbors and friends are found just steps from our door.

Guess who's making a return visit this Sunday? Look for this jolly man as he makes his way from Cushing Plaza to the Common.
(McCann)

Cohasset is the place for Christmas shopping. And to start things off with customary Cohasset style, the local Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring "White Christmas in Cohasset" this Sunday.

This will be a day to be long remembered by residents and merchants. Sunday will be the start of what local storeowners hope will become a tradition - a tradition which will aquaint folks with Cohasset's unique shops, and lure them back each year.

More than 60 Cohasset businesses have participated in the months of preparation for this Sunday's "White Christmas" celebration. These are business owners and professionals who have worked together for about one year to create the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce.

John Hagerty, president of Cohasset Colonials, is an enthusiastic spokesman for the Chamber's Christmas event.

"The White Christmas event evolved from the need perceived by the business community to highlight the great services provided by the Cohasset merchants. There is a preconceived notion that the malls offer more of a selection and a better price than the local merchant. But it is apparent to us that we in Cohasset have an excellent selection of gift items that are sold by people who will service you year-round," he said. "Cohasset merchants care about what they sell. It makes perfect sense to shop here, rather than anywhere else."

The elimination of a long trip, the lack of throbbing crowds at a register, and the absence of part-time, unknowledgable workers who care more about a sale than your taste, are three primary reasons people should shop locally, he added. "Why not buy a product from someone who really cares about what he or she is selling you. You know the Cohasset merchant wil be there to service you all year," Hagerty explained.

The Christmas celebration has been well-planned by the Cohasset Chamber. The members have spent thousands of dollars to ensure that, whether or not the weather cooperates, that this will indeed be a "White Christmas in Cohasset."

School budget picture is fuzzy

Ominous clouds are looming over the present and future school budgets. The fiscal forecast for the Cohasset public school system is not bright.

Supt. Eugene Crowell explained to the school committee Monday night that certain unforeseen, unpredicted budget items have forced the FY85 budget into a corner. Looking to the end of the fiscal year, the school system could be faced with an estimated $30,000 deficit.

And turning to the proposed FY86 school budget, Supt. Crowell displayed a first draft which is $130,000 over the advisory committee's recommended budget total of $4,191,335. It will be up to the school committee to review the proposed budget items included in the draft, and to determine whether some or all of that $130,000 surplus should be cut from next year's requested school budget.

The superintendent spared no details in explaining the latest budget dilemma. He was blunt in his statements to the committee. "We are $30,000 in the hole and I am scared. For the first time in my professional life, I don't think I can balance this budget. There are a couple of courses of action. One may be to comb through this budget and cut out $30,000. Rest assured I will be trying the rest of the year to reduce this $30,000 figure. But I am frightened."

One indication of the seriousness of the superintendent's statements is a memo he has sent to department chairmen calling for an immediate halt to all purchase orders. "The cupboard is bare," he explained to school committee members. "This type of memo is sent earlier every year, and let me tell you, my people are getting sick of this."

"We're $30,000 in the hole and I'm scared. For the first time in my professional life, I don't think I can balance this budget." Supt. Eugene Crowell

Fiscal Year 1985 budget

The school committee sat down with Advisory Committee member Jim Lagrotteria to discuss the problems facing this year's school budget. As Supt. Crowell and Chairman Joseph Nedrow said, the committee sought to have the advisors' input into the budget process throughout their discussions.

Lagrotteria thanked the committee for requesting his participation in the problem-solving, saying it helped in forming his perspective on budget requests.

Supt. Crowell explained that early in September, administrators witnessed signs of budget problems. Unanticipated expenditures reached further into appropriations, and have sliced into several areas of the school's budget.

The first unexpected expense was the addition, per parental request, of a kindergarten and one half-time fifth grade teacher at a total cost of $27,657.

The second problem arose when a number of teachers' salaries had to be adjusted for advanced degree payment. A greater than normal number of teachers obtained advanced degrees this year, Supt. Crowell added.

An area which the superintendent said, "really killed

It was time for Bassett 'to put up'

By Lisa Messersmith

Christine Bassett reflects the confident, assertive manner of a woman in a position of authority.

As chairman of the Cohasset planning board and as a health care professional, she has assumed a two-fold responsibility; one to the future of her town and another to elderly individuals who need valuable health care.

Bassett has served three years of her five-year term on the planning board and has chaired the board for one year. She explained that board members "attempt to rotate the chair" to allow every member to hold the position at least once and perhaps even twice.

Before serving on the planning board, Chris Bassett attained a masters degree from Queens College in New York where she studied psychology and sociology. From there she launched a career in health care planning research and development of long term projects for the elderly.

She has planned retirement living and congregate housing projects to help keep the elderly out of full care nursing homes when full care has not been necessary.

When she ran for the planning board in 1981, there was "a great deal of apathy," she said, "as far as the town (residents) willingness to participate in town government. "There is something wrong when people can't put themselves out." You couldn't get people to take out nomination papers for town offices," she added. When she asked a friend why someone did not take some responsibility and run for office, her friend

How education bill affects us

Supt. Eugene Crowell explained last week what the proposed state Education Reform legislation would mean to Cohasset. Although House Bill 6262 is an attempt to equalize quality education throughout the state, Cohasset does not have as much to gain as many other communities.

The explaination was presented as part of a forum sponsored by the Cohasset League of Women Voters last Thursday morning. Thirty residents attended the seminar, which featured Supt. Crowell, and Maryanne Hardenburgh, policy advisor to the Governor on education issues.

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray was scheduled to attend the forum, but cancelled because of State House business regarding the same issue.

Hardenburgh, who was past president of the Boston LWV, has long been associated with Massachusetts educational issues. She is a past member of the state Board of Education.

She explained that the present legislative proposal is a result of years of effort by that Board to upgrade educational opportunities throughout the state. State mandates including Chapter 766, and Chapter 622, granting full educational adavantages to disabled youngsters and to minorities, preceded the current controversial bill.

The basis of House Bill 6262, which has gone through three draft versions, is to "allow every child an equal opportunity to a fundamentally sound education," Hardenburgh said. Previous efforts by state politicians have experienced lukewarm results. The Chapter 70 formula which was to give 50 percent state aid to local education, was distributed unfairly. Although more money was to be spent on poorer communities, a "safe, harmless" provision was written in, a prerequisite of the political realities of this state. Because the bill could not pass without full support, funding provisions were rewritten so that wealthier towns would not be penalized.

Tax Seminar

A Tax Seminar for Small Business will be offered by the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce at the Chamber's December 12 meeting.

James F. Kearney C.P.A. will explain changes in the tax reform act of 1984 which affects small business. Depreciation, pension plans, travel and entertainment expenses, and investment tax credits are changing under the new law.

Mr. Kearney will suggest action you can take before the end of 1984 to improve your company's tax situation.

The meeting will start at 6:15 p.m. December 12, at the Cushing Room, Cushing Plaza. Chamber members free, $10 fee for non-members.

For more information, please call Ed Goff at 383-0223.

Police protest stalled negotiations

A majority of the officers in the Cohasset Police Association staged a silent, but visual protest of the stalemate in contract negotiations.

For a year now, the union negotiators have been attempting to work out a contract with selectmen. For the first time in the town's history, selectmen have hired a special labor relations attorney, Phillip Boyle, to handle police and fire contract negotiations.

A provision of the negotiations has been that neither side is to make any public comments about the progress of the talks. Both sides had previously adhered to that agreement, although police and fire personnel had complained about the lack of dialogue.

According to both unions, there has been no discussions held with Atty. Boyle or the selectmen since October. The union's contract expired in June.

At Monday night's brief selectmen's meeting, 12 police association members carried placards into the meeting. Although no discussions took place between the officers and selectmen, the signs indicated the frustrations felt by the officers.

The signs protested the lack of dialogue between the two sides, stating, "14 years of progress destroyed in one year." Police and fire union members have continually complained that the selectmen's negotiator wants to reduce benefits that have included in the contracts for several years.

Selectmen would not publicly discuss the progress of the talks, and did not openly talk with the officers during Monday night's silent protest.

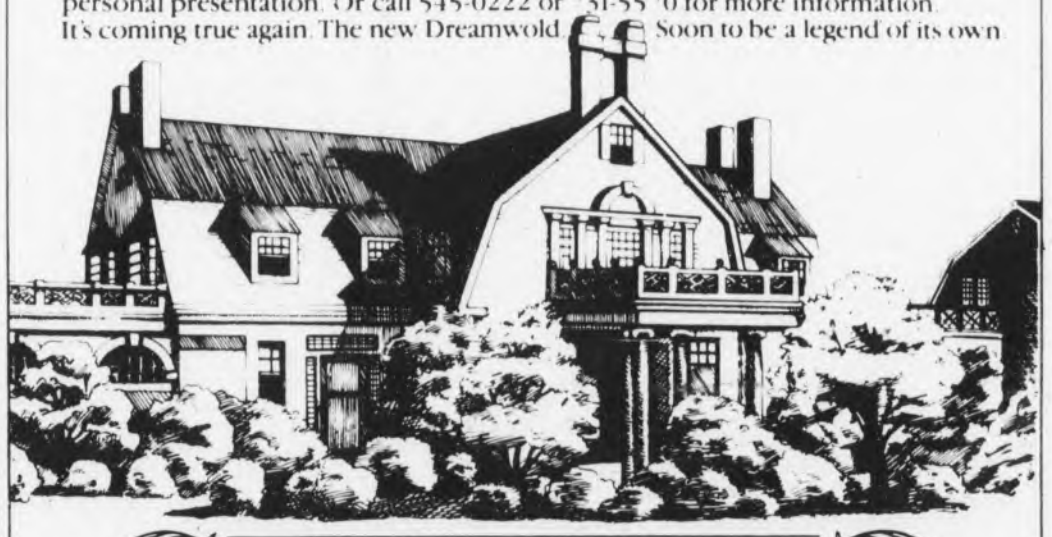
Once upon a time, not so far away, a brave Copper King built an enchanted kingdom in a land by the sea.

There in Scituate, he surrounded his mansion with idyllic pastures and formal gardens. Then built a fairy tale tower to watch over his dream.



Some said he was eccentric. Others said he was vain. But in truth, the legendary millionaire, Thomas Lawson, was building a beautiful haven as a gift for his beloved family. And in 1903, Dreamwold came true.

Now it's coming true again. All the majesty, privacy and splendor that was Dreamwold. In twenty-six unique Victorian condominium residences encircling a spectacular rose garden and beautiful swimming pool.

Dreamwold. A magnificent blend of historic restoration and new construction as only Boston's premier developer, Parencorp, could do.

This fall, Dreamwold is available at pre-completion prices, starting in the mid-100's. Visit Dreamwold between 11:00 AM and 6:00 PM daily for a personal presentation. Or call 545-0222 or 731-5570 for more information.

It's coming true again. The new Dreamwold. Soon to be a legend of its own.

Town meeting review

At last Wednesday night's town meeting, voters approved the $225,000 budget request to complete repairs to the high school roof, along with a request to sign a 20-year trash disposal contract with SEMASS.

The okay to forge ahead with SEMASS, the trash-to-energy disposal system in Rochester, means the town will seek a 20-year contract with the organization.

Members of the Area Disposal Study Committee had argued for months that this was the most logical alternative to finding and constructing another landfill in about 13 years.

Study committee member Don DeMichele told voters last week that the cost to Cohasset would probably be about $14.90 per ton, a fixed price over the 20-year period of the contract.

SEMASS is a $140 million plant which will convert the trash from several area communities into electrical energy. That energy will be sold, and part of the revenue from the conversion will ultimately be brought back to the individual communities.

In other action, despite the advisory committee's warnings that such an appropriation would deplete the town's surplus funds, town meeting approved the completion of the school roof repairs.

Already, school administrators and Town Accountant William Signorelli are working on a separate request for 50 percent state aid for this portion of the repair work. The previous work approved this summer by voters, has been officially sanctioned for fifty percent reimbursement by the state Bureau of School Buildings.

Although advisors were symphathetic to the request, they could not recommend taking $25,000 from the town's free cash reserve.

Among the items town meeting voters approved last week were: $30,000 for legal expenses incurred during the past several months in the Sewer Commission's fight against the state for an innovative sewer system; $3777 to pay Fire Chief Martin Dooley's legal fees incurred during an investigative hearing last year; $3740 to renovate the interior of the town clerk and town accountant's offices; and $15,000 for planning board engineering services.

Give a membership to Science Center

A gift to surprise and delight! Why include among your holiday gifts an individual or family membership to the South Shore Natural Science Center in Norwell? Because this gift offers a wide variety of other gifts through the enjoyment of nature.

There are guided walks to watch the birds; walks along the beaches and through the marshes; walks along the natural trails maintained by the Science Center or to secret gardens full of lilliputian mushrooms, fungi and wildflowers; even walks through some historic graveyards and fascinating rock quarries. Numerous crafts are taught — all using natural materials such as grasses, grapevines, wheat, pine, and seaweed to create wreaths, decorations, pictures, lampshades, ceramics and baskets. There are many programs for children from Kindergarten to Grade 6, including a Nature Nursery, Parents and Tots, After School and Saturday Programs, as well as specials. These are only a few of the joys of belonging to the South Shore Natural Science Center. All programs are led by talented instructors who are trained in their fields.

Stop in for a visit. The Science Center is located on Jacobs Lane, just off Route 123 in Norwell. This is a good week to come by as the nature-oriented gift shop is holding open house until Sunday, Dec. 9. Take a look at the programs, read about the opportunities available for all ages, browse in the shop and enjoy some refreshments.

Individual membership, $15; family membership (with children under 18), $25. For further information, call 659-2559.

SPACE AVAILABLE

Three programs at the South Shore Natural Science Center in Norwell still have space for sign-ups. "The Evergreen Story" on Wednesday, Dec. 12, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Join Larry Mish, professor of Botany at Bridgewater State College, as he discusses the tricks for knowing how to tell pines from spruces and other native evergreens. Visit Bridgewater's small aboretum and the college greenhouse. Carpool from the Science Center. Fee: members, $6; non-members, $8. "Mid-winter Skies" on Friday, Dec. 14, from 7:30 to 9 p.m. Two thousand years ago, the winter sky put on quite a display. Compare the 1984 sky with that past time through slides and outside viewing, if weather permits. Fee: $3 members; $4 non-members.

"Trim A Tree For Birds" on Saturday, Dec. 15, from 1 to 3 p.m. Put some holiday spirit out for the birds. Make decorations they love to eat and at the same time learn about the feeding habits of these winter friends. A program for all ages. Fee: $3 members, $4 non-members. For further information on any of these programs, call 659-2559.

The South Shore Natural Science Center is located on Jacobs Lane, just off Route 123, Norwell, and is open from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. and 1 to 4 p.m. Sundays and most holidays.

Celebrate the holidays with Jay O'Callahan

Children from 7 to 70 have the opportunity to celebrate the holidays with Jay O'Callahan's favorite stories, "Orange Cheeks," Red Ball," and others with the opening of Little Heroes at the Next Move Theatre Dec. 8.

O'Callahan's show Village Heroes is currently playing evenings at the Next Move where it premiered Oct. 25 to critical acclaim. According to O'Callahan, the Little Heroes matinees are being presented in response to adults who have seen Village Heroes and have asked for a similar experience for their children.

The stories presented in Little Heroes have captivated children from coast to coast and are O'Callahan's most requested stories. "Orange Cheeks" is the story of a mischievous youngster named Willie on a tumultuous visit to his grandmother's house. "Red Ball" captures the magic of the bus stop, and tells of a little girl named Marian who waits at a bus stop with a red ball which she converts to an imaginary friend.

After a presentation of his children's stories in Seattle, Seattle Times critic Wayne Johnson wrote, "To say children liked it is to say kids like to run and jump and eat candy. They were transfixed." O'Callahan reports that he received 30 pounds of mail from children after one of his programs for youth.

Jay O'Callahan has been referred to as the "foremost storyteller in the United States" by Time Magazine. He was appointed official storyteller to Africa by the State Department and was the official Olympic Bard at the Lake Placid Olympics.

Little Heroes will be presented Saturdays on Dec. 8, 15 and 22 and Christmas week Dec. 26, 27 and 28 at 2 p.m. For box office information call 423-5572. For group sales call 282-5230.

Kerian McCarthy (l) and sister, Kathleen, are comfortably accommodated by mom during the Village Fair. (McCann)

School committee briefs

Arts advisory committee

The school committee voted Monday night to establish an Arts Advisory Council to assist in the formation and administration of a systemwide arts policy.

The policy, developed by school committee member Martha Gjesteby and PSO representative Karin Bartow, has been reviewed by the school committee, administration and community. The new advisory council will include two teachers and one parent from the Deer Hill School, one teacher and one parent from the Osgood School, four teachers and one parent from the high school, one administrator, one school committee member, one METCO representative, one community representative and the school superintendent as an ex officio member.

Crisis Intervention Counselor

Health Education Coordinator Michael Gill will request a fulltime Crisis Intervention Adjustment Counselor and Health Education Specialist for the elementary schools for next year.

The proposal, written by Gill, has been included as an $18,000 school budget request for the 1984-85 school year.

According to Gill, "the kids in the elementary schools desperately need someone in their respective school buildings who they can go to for comfort, advice, or referral. This person would concentrate on prevention, but would also be available to begin treatment."

The proposed counselor would help elementary grade youngsters deal with emotional problems associated with single-parent homes, alcoholic families, and abuse. The counselor would also deal with students who demonstrate disruptive behavior, or are withdrawn from the rest of their classmates.

Smoking in schools

The school committee decided Monday night to form an eight-member ad hoc committee to re-evaluate the current school smoking policy.

Committee member Martha Gjesteby has repeatedly stressed the need for Cohasset to implement a smoking ban withing the schools. Last month she presented material which outlined the methods area schools have devised to prohibit smoking in their school buildings.

Gjesteby said she has received several calls from parents concerned about the number of young students at the high school who are caught smoking in the bathrooms and corridors of the school.

School Committee Chairman Joseph Nedrow, in a letter addressed to his fellow members, said he has received feedback, pro and con, about Gjesteby's concern.

"Some feel our current policy, if properly administered, is a realistic approach to dealing with the problem. As School Committee members, we have a responsibility to those on both sides of this issue to re-evaluate our policy and take action if appropriate," Nedrow stated.

Saying it would be premature to take any formal action on the issue without the benefit of additional input, Nedrow suggested an ad hoc committee be formed.

The committee agreed to appoint Gjesteby chairman of the committee, along with members Richard Conley from the school committee, Jay Contis or Ingrid Anderson as student representative to the school committe, a PSO representative, a high school PAC member, health educator Michael Gill, a high school student (a smoker with parental permission), and a high school administrator.

Arbitration decision

The American Arbitration Association decided last week to deny a grievance brought by the Cohasset Teachers Association against the school committee.

The grievance stemmed from a senior math teacher at the high school who was laid off the end of last year. A teacher who had less experience, but who was deemed a superior teacher by the school administration, was kept within the school system. The RIF'd teacher filed a grievance stating his involuntary leave of absence was in violation of Article 29 of the teachers contract.

Article 29 states "when the school committee determines that staff reductions are necessary, it shall, consistent with the existing law, retain those teachers who it deems most qualified. If the committee determines that all other factors are equal, length of service in the Cohasset school system shall govern."

But according to the arbitrator, the senior teacher, had achieved a lower "superior rank" and had accepted teaching assignments with some reluctance and less enthusiasm than the less experienced instructor. The arbitrator agreed the criteria used by the school committee and administration "was reasonable and were reasonably applied, and the committee has some rational basis for determning that the junior teacher was 'most qualified'."

Planners make effort to ensure 'landscaping'

suggested she should run. "It was either put up or shut up," Bassett remarked.

At first, Bassett thought the most logical board position to aim for would be on the Board of Health because of her professional experience. Yet, she reasoned, "professionals tend to be specialized and narrow" in their approach to a specific project.

As a health care professional, Bassett believed she could bring a "broad based approach" to the planning board which focuses on engineering. Five people ran against her for the position, but she was the only candidate to obtain the necessary signatures to run for town office.

The planning board, Bassett said, is concerned with the future and direction of Cohasset and the zoning by-laws which set the town's philosophy. "Cohasset wants to retain its uniqueness and integrity as a small town," she said, "and preserve its natural resources —the wetlands, the salt marshes, and the forests."

Yet, Bassett explained, "Cohasset wants to grow in a responsible manner." The "strip industry" along Route 3A has not been given proper attention in the past, she said. The route's appearance has caused concern on the part of the planning board.

"The planning board," she feels, "is making a very deliberate effort to make sure the landscaping" for future businesses along this route "is aesthetically pleasing." The board members require an adequate amount of what they call "green space" so that the site "doesn't look like an asphalt jungle."

An update on recent planning board approval includes the New Bergsons Restaurant, Autohaus foreign car dealership, and Seavey Engineering, a light industry which manufactures antennas.

The developer of the proposed Cohasset Plaza shopping complex Donald Staszko, has asked the planning board to postpone their review of the project because he plans to return to the DEQE to ask that that department reverse their prior decision to disapprove the plans.

When and if the planning board reviews the plaza site plans, the members will take into consideration the size and appropriateness of the project which is their major concern.

Chris Bassett

Another factor in their decision will be the traffic impact which has been a major concern for neighboring residents.

The planning board is currently reviewing the Lily Pond subdivision. Although the site sits directly on top of the Watershed Protection Area, Bassett said, "we have to look at it as primarily separate from the moratorium."

Because the planning board does not have the authority to disapprove a site plan just because it proposes building in the moratorium area, the planning board must look at the project as if the moratorium does not exist.

"We need to hear what the community believes in a philosophical sense," Bassett said. The weight of consideration the members give public opinion depends upon the project. Bassett explained the board members want to see a concensus of public view points. The protestors of a certain project must not just simply be complaining, they must make their arguments from consistency and with the town's interest at heart.

From the project developers themselves the planning board expects just as much or more. "We've become a lot stricter and a lot more demanding," Bassett said. "We really require people to do their homework," she added, because the board members feel their jobs do not include designing half completed project plans.

In January, the planning board will hold a public hearing to discuss a reshaping of the application procedures for business and light industry developments. "What we're hoping to do is to insist upon certain approvals from other boards prior to coming before the planning board," Bassett said.

The application process at this time requires the developers to apply to all boards at once. The new system, if approved, will allow the public to follow the progress of certain projects. Hingham and several western communities follow this application procedures which seems to work quite well, added Basset.

Bassett concluded she was "very impressed with the quality of the people on the planning board. They are great to work with," she added, "but that is not to say we don't disagree."

Bassett also feel the relationships between the various town boards are better now than they were a few years ago; but, she added, the camaraderie came as a "deliberate effort on everyone's part."

As the chairman of a powerful town board, Bassett must balance her authority between a strict adherence to the zoning by-laws and a sensitivity to opposing points of view.

Despite the stress of helping to keep this delicate balance, Bassett plans to run again for town office when her term is over.

In the meantime, she and her fellow board members will strive to maintain what they view as a unique town.

School sports report

by Lisa Shumaker

Boys' Wrestlilng

The wrestling team began practicing last week in preparation for their winter season. Few of the 30 team members have had experience on the varsity level, but all are very enthusiastic about the upcoming season.

There are only three seniors and six returning starters on the team. But their coach, Torin Sweeny, feels that with hard work and dedication Cohasset can have a winning season.

This year there is one of the best competitions between the weight classes within the team. Sweeny feels this rivalry within the team can only help Cohasset improve.

Because the team is so young, this will be mostly a building year for Cohasset. Sweeny believes a winning season would set a base for a strong wrestling program in the years to come. The key to this season will not be so much talent, as it is emotion and dedication. Cohasset's wrestling season opens Dec. 17 in Middleboro.

Girls' Basketball

The girls are coming off of an extremely successful season last year with a record of 15-7, during which they qualified for the state tournament. Cohasset was knocked out of the tournament in the quarter finals by a team that went on to be second in the state.

Losing only two seniors, the team plans to not only match, but even better last year's achievements by winning the small school's division title and going even further in the state tournament.

Coach Bill Fallon is very optimistic about this upcoming season. He feels if his team can do a little better offensively, and defensively handle the pressure, then Cohasset will definitely be able to fulfill their goals. Fallon is also impressed with the performances of both Carla Lucas and Tracy Fitzpatrick and believes the rest of the team is coming along very well.

The girls will be scrimmaging all this week. Wednesday, Cohasset will travel to Quincy, and Thursday the Skippers will take on Boston Latin Academy. Saturday at 2:30, Cohasset will play Braintree at home. Cohasset will open their regular season Dec. 11 against Holbrook.

This year the team consists of: Vicki Spooner, Carla Lucas, Tracy Fitzpatrick, Janet DiGorolamo, Sarah Seavey, Jill Nedrow, Kerry O'Brien, Kristian O'Brien, Anne O'Leary, Maria Cahill, Maureen O'Leary, Lisa Shumaker, Melissa Shea, and Cindy Spooner.

Recreation schedule

Loon Mountain Ski Trip

The ski trip to Loon Mountain, originally scheduled for Sunday, Dec. 2, has been postponed to Saturday, Dec. 22.

The date change has created a few openings for the trip. Any students interested in going may call the Recreation office at 383-6791 for reservations.

The cost is $27 per person which includes round trip motor coach transportation, all-day lift ticket, and for beginners, a lesson and rental of equipment. Non-beginners must pay for rentals which are $12.

Pat's Peak Ski Trip

A number of openings remain for the Saturday, Dec. 15 ski trip to Pat's Peak. If interested, please call the Recreation office at 383-6791 immediately. The cost of the Pat's Peak ski trip is $22 per person, and includes round trip motor coach transportation and all-day lift ticket. Equipment rentals, available and payable at the mountain, are $9.50 and ski lessons are $4.50.

Morning Aerobics

Tuesday and/or Thursday aerobic classes are scheduled to begin at the Town Hall Auditorium Tuesday, Jan. 8 and Thursday Jan. 10 at 10 a.m. A few openings in each class remain.

If interested, please call the Recreation Department office (383-6791) immediately. Sessions are eight weeks in duration; the fee is $15 for eight one-hour classes and $25 for sixteen one-hour classes. Margret Watson is instructing both classes.

Blue Hills Ski Lessons

Registrations are still being accepted for ski lessons at Blue Hills. The cost is $45 per person and the package includes five one and 3/4 hour lessons and bus transportation to and from the Blue Hills. All levels of instruction are open. Classes are held on Thursday afternoons, beginning Thursday, Jan. 3, 1985. Equipment rentals, $6 per lesson, are available at Blue Hills. For further information and registration, please call the Recreation Department office.

Creative Dramatics

New Creative Dramatics programs are scheduled to begin Tuesday, Jan. 8, 1985. Classes are open for grades K-3 from 3 to 5 p.m., and grades 4, 5, and 6 from 4 to 5 p.m. at the Town Hall. The cost for this program is $12 per person and sessions are six weeks in duration.

Mrs. Barbara Elliott will be instructing. Mrs. Elliott's credentials include direction of both junior and senior member plays for the Cohasset Dramatic Club. She

around town

This cheery fellow was the center of attraction at last week's Village Fair. Caitlin and Megan Connelly adorn his lap.
(McCann)

☐ Paul Stanford isn't a student at Cohasset High any more, and it is certainly our loss . . . Paul is now at Xaverian, where he just made the first honors honor roll . . . congratulations to Paul, keep up the hard work as it surely paid off last term!

☐ Bob Dennis and his wife, Kathy are brand new parents, this time its a baby girl! Born on Nov. 28 (very early in the morning of course), Dad was in attendance the whole time. Best wishes to the happy family.

☐ Helen Ketchum called last week; Helen, who is one of the mainstays of the Cohasset Drama Club, wanted to fill everyone in on the production of Cinderella. It was written especially for the club (and for the Town Hall stage), and there are 60 characters in the cast. Helen wanted to be sure that everyone knew that it is "family fare" . . . everyone will enjoy the production of the Cohasset Dramatic Club's Christmas Show, don't you miss it. Performances are as follows: Friday, Dec. 7 at 8 p.m.; Saturday, Dec. 8 at 8 p.m.; Sunday, Dec. 9 at 8 p.m. and Sunday, Dec. 9, and Saturday, Dec. 14 are matinee shows, to be shown at 2 p.m. Tickets are $4 for adults, and $2 for children under 12, either at the door or in advance. Bring the whole family!

☐ Army PFC Scott T. Arnold took part in a NATO sponsored exercise, the Army's return of forces to Germany and the Air Force Crested Cap exercises.

☐ All of the Christmas Fair workers were super tired, but glad of it when the word got around that they had made the most money ever selling their nifty wares. Everything looked so intriguing, and all of their work paid off in grand style . . . they are to be congratulated.

☐ The Cohasset Historical Society recently held its Annual Meeting for the 1984 year and elected the officers and directors for the forthcoming year. They sure have done a super job to date, and the Historical House is being used more and more for various groups . . . it is amazing the number of Cohasset people who haven't been inside the beautiful home, which is always so nicely decorated for the holidays. Make an effort for it is worth your efforts, indeed.

☐ Congratulations are in order for Mary Ellen Neagle, who earned a trip to Antigua for her efforts in selling over 2.5 million dollars in Real Estate (through the Cohasset office of the Jack Conway Company). She has also been the top listing agent in the Cohasset office for the past five years. Here's to a super trip!

☐ Tech. Sgt. Vaughn Hodgkins, brother of Kenneth Hodgkins of 109 Border Street, has been decorated with the Air force Achievement Medal at Cannon Air Force Base, New Mexico. The Achievement Medal is awarded to airmen for accomplishment, meritorious service or acts of courage. Vaughn is an instructional systems supervisor with the 27th Tactical Fighter wing. Vaughn was in town this summer, as a member of the reunion held by the class of 1959. He looked super, and was looking forward to his stay in New Mexico . . . Its a sure thing there will be no White Christmas for him!

☐ Welcome to Ross Mark Lieb-Lappen, the first child of Helen Lieb and Edward Lappen.

☐ Cohasset businesses are decked with white lights, and will be even more so by the time Santa arives by helicopter at Cushing Plaza on Sunday, Dec. 9. He will be there with his helpers until around 2:30, then will ride into Cohasset Village on Becky, the Camel. Horse and carriage rides, carol singing, camel rides, a Christmas Carillon concert and more will make our common "come alive" with the spirit of the season. Be sure to come and join the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce on this special and joyous occasion. Imagine, a camel ride . . .

Today is a day that will be remembered by all of the people on John Mell's postal route. Although his official retirement isn't until January 1, John will be getting through on Thursday for health reasons. The town certainly won't be the same without the Post Office Jeep rounding the corner and his big smile peeking through the window. Good luck to John, and hope he's as happy as he has made everyone else during his 37 years as a mailman!

☐ Steven Pozatek sure took the tennis world by storm a few weeks ago, when he won the Junior Tournament for the 12 and under Boys singles. The tourney was held at Brockton, and he was the winner out of 25 boys. Steven beat Dan Schatz of Leominster, 6-3, 7-6. Watch for his name!

☐ In the same tournament, another Cohasset Junior made it to the finals, in the girls division. Emily Reardon was defeated in the finals . . . tons of applause for her efforts.

☐ Speaking of winners, Bob Noonan certainly is one! Bob was the lucky one in the recent Gridiron Raffle, and everyone present was delighted when his name was called as the winner. Congratulations are in order for Bob!

☐Be sure to drop by Kit & Kaboodle to see the new limited edition print of Cohasset Common in the snow. It is just beautiful and would make the perfect gift for a college student or anyone away from home.

The accompanying article about Cohasset by town historian, David Wadsworth, certainly makes it very special.

☐Jeffrey C. O'Neill, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald J. O'Neill of Cohasset, recently received a Varisty Football Letter from Belmont. O'Neill attends Belmont Hill as a five-day boarder, a program which permits students to live at the school from Monday through Thursday and to be with their families on weekends.

☐ Mrs. Eva Black was spotted enjoying a buggy ride through the streets of Cohasset recently. She reported that it was grand!

☐ Even though the days are getting busier than ever, there should be more news for you to report to me . . . give me a call at 383-0560 with your latest news bulletin!

Budget forecast for the schools us," is four longterm leaves of absences. These extended staff absences is estimated to cost the system about $25,000, Crowell said.

The failed clock and bell system at the Deer Hill School was replaced the beginning of this year at a total cost of $3001.

The superintendent said "rollovers" where novice teachers are hired to replace more experienced higher-salaried instructors, along with other budget offsets, could reduce this budget increase by $19,352, he said. So a total inflationary factor of $37,674 must be faced by school budgetwatchers as we approach the new budget projections, Crowell added.

The system may save $7000 from the roofing project supervisor's salary by doubling his duties for the basic salary. The overspill from the appropriated budget would may be reduced by $7000, if that savings is not immediately forwarded to the town's free cash supply.

Therefore, Crowell has ordered no additional supplies. A second option, if the advisory committee concurs, may be to take $30,000 from the town's free cash reserve, or whatever amount is deemed necessary by the end of June.

Lagrotteria responded to the budget prognosis by stating, "I don't see how you have control over any of these budget items." He added, however, that the advisors have no control over the town's free cash account, and can only support or reject a department's request to obtain such funds.

He itemized several avenues which may be utilized to reduce the budget increase including a new contract with the Clerk of the Works for the high school roofing project; and the generation of fuel savings because of the new school roofs.

Asst. Supt. Stephen Hart explained that the purchase order memo to personnel was a dramatic move "to encourage as many economies in the budget as we can."

He also noted that there may be a fuel savings because of the added roofing insulation, however $7000 of the $92,000 fuel appropriation has been spent to fill oil tanks in July. Based upon the $87,000 expended last winter, there may not be any savings in that account unless this winter is mild, he added.

Fiscal Year 1986

The advisory committee informed the school department two weeks ago, .hat the schools would be allotted a $126,000 increase over last year's $4,065,335 appropriations.

The budget projections proposed in the first draft of the FY86 budget reflect a total school budget of $4,294,613, which is $103,278 more than the advisors have recommended for the system.

Another factor which must be considered, Crowell explained, is that there are no estimations included for negotiated salary increases in that projected $4,294,613 total. Therefore, if the school committee is going to pare down that total, they will have to reduce deeper than $103,000 to come down to the advisory committee's recommended total, he added.

As he reminded the committee, salaries comprise 85 percent of the school department's budget.

In an introduction to the budget analysis, Supt. Crowell summarized his reasons for requesting the increased total.

"I can no longer recommend we level fund your school system's budget. For the next several years, enrollment will decrease, but this will produce savings of not more than 15 to 20 thousand dollars.

My budget asks for the following education improvements," Crowell continued in the letter.

"1. Maintaining four K sections due to enrollment increases at the elementary level. 2. Addition of a halftime teacher at the fifth grade level. 3. Expansion of Gifted and Talented program for grades 4-6; 5. Adoption of the following text and curriculum improvements for a. elementary science, grades 3-6. b. elementary social studies, grades 2-6. c. grade 9 math. d. grades 7-10 social studies e. books for all school libraries. f. equipment replacement for all departments."

The budget introduction continued, "6. Systemwide expansion of our Computer Literacy Program with the goal of integrating computer use in most disciplines. 7. Expansion of systemwide Health Education Program with a youth adjustment counseling component for elementary schools. 8. Expansion of Research and Development Program to rejuvenate the Curriculum Update Program into Phase III. 9. Expansion and utilization of Cable TV Program as a cross sectional curriculum. "

The superintendent also included a number of building maintenance and improvement items which will be reviewed in FY86. An estimated cost of the projects would cost the school department more than $500,000.

A more detailed review of the proposed budget draft will be completed at the committee's Dec. 17 meeting. The budget will be the first item placed upon the agenda that night.

Holiday deadlines

Here's a rundown on the Cohasset Mariner holiday deadline schedule:

There will be no Mariner published Thursday, Dec. 27, while the staff enjoys a Christmas vacation with their families. The last issue before Christmas will be Thursday, Dec. 20, with the usual deadline on Tuesday at noon (1 p.m. at the new drop spots).

There will be a Cohasset Mariner in the mails and on the stands Thursday, Jan. 3, but because of the New Year's holiday, deadlines will be Friday, Dec. 28 at 5 p.m. Newsstore or mailed subscriptions will be accepted after that date.

Come Jan. 3, the Mariner will be back to business as usual, refreshed and ready to begin a new year in Cohasset.

Murray's memos

By Mary Jeanette Murray

Report from the State House

Representative Mary Jeanette Murray is informing her district that all local census will begin in January counting the population in Massachusetts amid speculation about the effect new criteria might have on the resulting redistribution of financial and political power among the state's 351 cities and towns.

"Local aid to cities and towns for the next ten years will be based on the new population figures and, in 1987, the State House and Senate will be redistricted using those same figures as a base.", Representative Murray stated.

"The exercise is one the state goes through every ten years in those years ending in '5'. The federal government conducts its census of the national population once each decade in years ending in '0' and, as the result of a constitutional amendment ratified by voters here in 1978, when the Massachusetts count is undertaken in January 1985 the same guidelines employed in the federal census must be used."

These guidelines require that students, military personnel, prisoners and nursing home residents must be counted as residents of the communtiy in which they spend most of their time rather than where they may be legally domiciled. In the 1975 state census, students were included in most communites' totals only if they themselves indicated that they lived there or sought to vote there.", Mary Jeanette continued.

The U.S. census is designed to produce a true count of the nation's population, counting each person where they are and the U.S. House of Representatives is then redistricted as a result. Congressional seats are taken away from areas of the country where population has declined and those seats, with the political strength associated with them, are given to more populous states. Following the 1980 federal census, Massachusetts lost one of its 12 congressional seats.

Locally, the state census will accomplish the same redistribution of power. The new figures will be used to redistrict the Massachusetts House and Senate, giving more representation, and the corresponding increase in cherry sheet disbursements of state financal aid, to those communities which show growth.

The last state census was conducted in 1975 and showed the Commonwealth has 5,789,478 residents. Five years later, the federal count gave Massachusetts 5,737,037 people. Currently one member of the House represents 36,534 people. For Boston, which with 17 members has the largest legislative delegation, the count went from 637,986 in 1975 to 562,994 in 1980. The drop during the five year period occurred even though students were included in both Boston surveys.

With future local aid dollars and political clout tied to the number of residents, it is to the advantage of communities to count as many people as possible. Deputy Secretary of State Robert Williams, who is directing census activities for Secretary Michael J. Connolly, speculated that significant differences may come in communities like Boston, Cambridge, Newton and Amherst, with their large student populations. "They will pick up a lot of students," Williams said in a recent interview.

Adding to the complexity if the census is the requirement that cities and towns with more than 6,000 people must also redraw their precinct and ward lines with no precinct exceeding 4,000 people. In July of 1985, the local census directors must submit to the state secretary's office their tallies along with the redrawn precinct lines, and the new boundaries are then analyzed by the Local Elections Review Commission. If approved, the scheme must then be certified by the House Clerk.

Mary Jeanette Murray stated that she is most concerned that, "The requirements which raise questions as to whether communities housing colleges, or other institutions with 8,000 residents, would have to create two new precincts and staff polling places when it is possible that no one in those new precincts intends to vote. Furthermore, they probably would prefer staying registered in their own home town."

Williams predicted that 80 percent of communities will have to redraw their lines. Last year the Legislature approved a bill stating that all communities "shall" redraw their precincts in 1985 with the exception of Boston which "may" redraw them in 1986. The language is being interpreted by some as a permanent exemption for Boston.

Boston Elections Commissioner John McElligott, who will direct the city's census next year as he did in 1975, predicted that "we'll have a gain over the 562,994 of 1980." He noted that students were listed in 1975 because the law said they were eligible to vote in the city. The city will have access to school registration lists in conducting its survey.

Because the census is taken by local officials - each community has named a director - the monitoring process may be difficult. The techniques in each community range from personal door-to-door interviews to mail surveys to simple telephone calls to each residence. Some rural or small suburban communities may not take the same pains as larger ones seeking to keep their numbers high.

Bernard Goulding, who is assisting Williams in the Secretary of State's office said an audit process has been estabished and "We will be checking" for double counting. "We have an idea what the population should be with adjustments for schools," and "the big thing is the compliance of cities and towns to the guidelines. If they follow them, we won't have a problem. If they don't, we're going to clamp down on them and we could refuse to certify their members," Goulding said.

He explained that there will be two processes going on at the same time. Each community will be developing annual street listing which is used for its own purposes -primarily for voting lists. At the same time the state census will be ongoing and Goulding cited the example of a person who might consider his voting and legal residence as Watertown yet spend nine months of the year as a student at the University of Massachusetts in Amherst. That person, for purposes of the state census, must be counted in Amherst, he said.

"The federal government wants people counted where they spend most of their time," Goulding said. "The law is the law and we have to go with it." The mechanics for conducting next year's census were developed by Connolly's office along with a federal consultant.

Goulding acknowledged that there might be a temptation on the part of some local surveyers to use the street lists, containing the names of those who vote in the community, in order to increase their number but he said search of magnetic tapes would reveal anyone who showed up twice.

Representative Murray believes because there is so much to win and lose as a result of the new figures, it is also possible that charges of undercounting or overcounting may find their way into the courts if a community or segment of the population feels it has not been accurately portrayed.

State officials are hopeful a law signed last week will insure the count will be a thorough one. In the past, communities have been reimbursed by the state 25 cents for each person counted and legislation signed by the Governor increases that to $1 for each person counted.

If serious problems should arise with use of the new guidelines, lawmakers could adjust the new law prior to the 1987 legislative redistricting even though the count will have been completed. The consititutional amendment approved by the voters in 1978 contained language stating that the federal standards would be used "subject to such exceptions as the General Court may provide by the law."

Against engrossement

To the Editor:

With utter disregard for the views of their constituencies, last week 116 state legislators approved the first step of a consititutional amendment to allow state and local communities to use public funds to aid private and parochial schools.

Just two years ago, 64% of the voters of this Commonwealth voted against a similar amendment. At that time, the voters of Cohasset voted 2296 to 1049 against the referendum.

Citizens should immediately contact their representatives and insist that the will of the voters be upheld. Furthermore, in a period of limited public funds, this Commonwealth can ill afford to siphon off public monies for private education.

The people of the Commonwealth must urge that their representatives vote "against engrossement" of this parochiad measure when this proposed amendment is considered again on Dec. 5.

Jason pushed his beans around his plate. "May I have another kidney bean, Mrs. McDonough? And maybe a taste more ketchup?" he asked virtuously.

"Well," I told the Dragon, "I worry about their health. Gandhi couldn't have survived on what these two are eating."

He patted my hand. "Don't worry about it. The wrestling season only lasts a short time and they're basically healthy youngsters. So long as they're taking vitamins and drinking plenty of water they should be fine."

Late that night I heard a noise in the kitchen. Visions of housebreakers dancing in my head, I tiptoed down the hall.

Jason and Skip were seated at the table happily dispatching waffles, pizza, hash, donuts, brownies, cookies and the remains of a pumpkin pie.

When they saw me standing in the doorway, they made a quick move to cover their stash, then realized it was too late.

Skip smiled up at me innocently. "O.K. you convinced us. Our health is more important than wrestling."

Jason grinned. "And we got to thinking about the starving children overseas . . ."

HB 6262 effect on our schools

"We were rewarding towns that were the most able to pay," Hardenburgh explained. Although that provision was to be phased out in five years, "it never happened," she added.

Massachusetts has since jumped on the national bandwagon to initiate educational reform. Hardenburgh views this education legislation as a "partnership between the local communinities and the state. We will give more money to the school systems, but the local systems must be more accountable," she explained. And although she disagrees with the method the Governor has utilized in his effort to get the proposal approved, Hardenburgh agrees with the basic philosophy.

The local school systems would be held accountable for providing higher educational standards through a minimum high school graduation requirement. The irony of the current state educational process is that the sole requirement for graduation from a Massachusetts high school is four years of physical education and one year of history, she said.

Two levels of kindergarten would be mandated, as well as a state-funded pre-K program for communities where 75 percent of the youngsters are disadvantaged.

A controversial aspect of this bill is the minimum $18,000 teacher salary, a cost factor which will have a ripple effect on senior staff salaries. This financial program would be phased in a three-year period.

A comprehensive K-12 curriculum plan must also be devised by and for each community, a provision approved by the state LWV.

The 'stick' which is viewed with disdain by many local educators, she said, is the annual review authority granted the state over the local school system. If the school plan does not meet the minimum requirements of the state education commission, that authority will intercede.

It is the League's opinion to get the present version on the books. "There are a lot of groups not in support of different pieces of this, but there is a real need to do a better job of equalizing educational opportunities," she said.

Supt. Crowell, with sleeves rolled up, urged his audience to participate in his presentation. According to a survey released last week, 65 percent of all Massachusetts residents know nothing about House Bill 6262. This was a situation Supt. Crowell was intent on dismissing from Cohasset.

Supt. Crowell and members of the Cohasset school committee attended an educational conference last month. Gov. Michael Dukaksis used the forum to summarize the legislative package he introduced as the "Four Year Plan for Excellence in Education."

Within the proposal there are several individual goals, Crowell explained. These include promoting equal educational opportunity, enhancing teaching as honored and attractive profession, and ensuring teaching performance through accountability.

One method the Governor proposes to attract excellent teaching professional is through a grant program. "A great idea" Crowell explained, which would give the best teachers a grant for extra duties performed during the summer months. Rather than having the history teacher painting houses in the summer, he will be developing innovative curriculum programs for the fall.

The need for such wide-sweeping reform is witnessed in communities around the Commonwealth, including Cohasset, Crowell admitted. Although many people assume Cohasset schools are far and above the rest, "we still do not have a curriculum plan. For the past four years we have been struggling to survive. When we get an annual budget increase of $126,000, most of it goes to repair roofs and to give our teachers a decent raise. It's gone," he added.

Although many perceive this law as Dukakis' payoff to the state teachers' association, Crowell, a political independent, said it isn't true. "Dukakis is sincerely interested in providing quality education for the only natural resource of this state - our kids," he stated.

Plan to attend Sunday's 'White Christmas'

Plaza or the commercial belt of Route 3A. They are the shopkeepers of Cohasset Village, and include an unseen neighbor, Cohasset Colonials. All these merchants have come together to help celebrate the arrival of the Christmas season in Cohasset.

Sunday's event will unfold at noontime at the Cushing Plaza with the arrival of Santa. He will depart from a helicoptor to "Santaland," a stage which has been designed specifically for photographs with this jolly old man. Free balloons and lollipops will be handed out here and elsewhere throughout the day. Christmas music will also help to set a festive mood for the day.

At 2:30 p.m., Santa will go to the Tedeschi Shopping Center and mingle with the people gathered there.

About 3 p.m., St. Nick will arrive at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library and saddle up on Becky, the camel. He will complete the trek into downtown Cohasset and conclude his journey at the Common.

"Santaland" will be assembled on the Common and again, Santa and his elves will be there to talk with the youngsters. Camel rides will be offered around the Common, as well as a pony and cart ride. A petting zoo, featuring a baby donkey, 12 geese and ducks, and 12 sheep and goats will be on the Common. Food will be available for children who would like to feed the animals.

Everything is free of charge.

At 3:30 p.m., there will be carol singing at the Common with the Girl Scouts, the Boy Scouts and the high school chorus. At 4 p.m. there will be a Carillon concert from St. Stephen's Church.

Just around this time, all Cohasset merchants will be lighting white lights around their stores. A blizzard of white balloons will be unleashed from the Common, adding further to the symbolism of a white Christmas in Cohasset.

Throughout the day, merchants will be offering hot drinks and foods to shoppers. Friendly conversation and a warm welcome will greet everyone who comes to browse in the shops of Cohasset.

The weekend festivities are part of the Chamber's efforts to enhance the image of Cohasset's business community. "We (the Chamber) are in the business of promoting local business," Hagerty explained. "In doing so, it makes the town a better place for all of us. Most of our businesses are operated by people who also live in town.."

Hagerty noted the Chamber actively supports those types of businesses which it deems attractive and necessary for this community. Businesses, he said, which are consistent with the town.

"Such businesses would include those that increase the town's tax base, but not in a way which will cost the town more money than we get from it. The Chamber supports new businesses which will provide better services for our residents, such as more specialty stores, dry cleaners, computer/video stores. We are not talking about attracting highly-polluting industry. We do not view Cohasset as a source to attract lines and lines of tourist buses. We will continue to work with the town's planning board, zoning board and selectmen in helping to plan the business future of Cohasset. We work not as an adversary to these decision-making groups, but in a partnership. "

Hagerty, who began as president of Cohasset Colonials six years ago, is pleased with the Chamber's direction during its first year. "We have seen areas that need change, in the business-to-town relationship. The Chamber is ideally suited to promoting that change," he added.

"White Christmas in Cohasset" is a step in maintaining the partnership between businesses and the residents they serve.

Campers can enjoy the great natural wonders of the U.S. Virgin Islands by staying at Cinnamon Bay, part of the Virgin Islands National Park on St. John. The park features colorful shorelines, an underwater snorkeling nature trail and unusual wildlife and foliage. There are several alternatives for campers. Forty tents are already in place. There are also two group tent sites, with eight tents each, forty cottage units and ten bare tent sites. All are located within a five minute walk to the beach. Each ten by fourteen foot tent has a floor and a nylon screened door. It comes equipped with camp cots, pads, linen, picnic table, grill, propane stove, gas lantern, ice chest, water container and cooking/eating utensils.

We are open 9-5 Mon.-Sat.; 10-4 Sat. and by appointment. Tel. 383-1717 and 545-4500.

TRAVEL TIP:

Visitors to Cinnamon Bay Campground generally arrive in the islands via Harry S. Truman Airport on St. Thomas.

Now that fall is ending and all the leaves have fallen, it's time to clean and oil your wooden gutters. Once the gutters have been cleaned and have dried completely, caulk the joints and ends with Phenoseal. It comes in tubes that fit a standard caulking gun. I recommend using Penta Dip for oiling the gutters. It performs better than linseed oil. Not only will Penta Dip repel water, but it will also prevent rot and kill moss and insects. I suggest that you pour plenty into each gutter and allow it to soak into the wood.

Please keep in mind that fall and winter are excellent times to replace roofing and siding. Severe weather is not a problem because we always start and finish a section of work each day.

Finally, whenever you have roofing or siding done on your home, ask for a Massachusetts Builder's License and insurance. Both are required by law.

Choral Art Society performance Dec. 8

By Dorothy Kavka

The 75-member Choral Art Society will present Bach's famous Christmas Oratorio Parts I, II, III at St. Luke's Church, Scituate, Dec. 8 at 8 p.m. Bach fans will note that this marks the 250th anniversary of the first performance of the Christmas Oratorio and features as conductor William C. Sano who has been director of the Choral Art Society since 1979, Dorothy Bales, first violinist of the Dorian Chamber Players as concert master, and Jill Crafts as accompanist for the orchestra.

The Christmas (Weihnachts) Oratorio, composed in 1734, consists of six church cantatas, each performed at one of the six church services between Christmas and Epiphany, only three of which will be presented on Saturday, Dec. 8. The day and subject of the first three cantatas are: The first day of Christmas, Saturday, Dec. 25, 1734, the birth of Jesus; the second day of Christmas, Sunday, Dec. 26, the proclamation to the shepherds; the third day of Christmas, Monday, Dec. 27, the shepherds at the manger. Singing the recitative role is William Hite, tenor, who has a degree in opera performance and was recipient of the 1984 Vocal Fellowship at the Tanglewood Festival followingperformances with the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Based on the Gospel according to St. Luke, although the work was composed to be performed on six different days, there is a cohesiveness in the narrative which unifies the whole, and the tonal structure, as unified as the text has D major as the key center. The story of Christ's birth is told by the Evangelist with the remainder of the work—ariosos, arias and choral numbers as "lyrical meditations".

Part II, the shepherds' pastorale, leads into perhaps the most celebrated chorale of the entire Oratorio with the rendition of "Break forth, O beauteous, heavenly light", while the chorus number "Let us even now go to Bethlehem" shows Bach at his descriptive best as the music pictures the shepherds talking back and forth as they scramble to haste to see the Babe.

Vocalists, in addition to tenor Hite, include Linda Healy, mezzo-soprano, from Duxbury, Howard Wilcox, bass, guest soloist from Wellesley, Kathleen Keegan, soprano, from Scituate, Ellen Boley, alto, from Marshfield, who will sing the lovely "Slumber, beloved" aria on the birth of the Babe; Paula Carroll, soprano from Scituate, and Susan Chapman, mezzo-saprano, a guest soloist, also from Marshfield.

The orchestra, comprised of 21 musicians, includes first and second violins, viola, cello, double bass, flute, English horn, bassoon, trumpet, timpani and organ and two performers on the oboe d'amore, one of whom, Peggy Pearson, is noted as one of the best oboe d'amore performers in the Boston area.

The program in part supported by the Massachusetts Arts Lottery, as administered by the Scituate Arts Council, will be followed by a reception to be held in Dutton Hall in the church immediately afterward.

Weddings

Durkin/O'Toole

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Durkin

Lynn Francis (O'Toole) Durkin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Austin Francis O'Toole, was married recently to Mr. Joseph Francis Durkin, son of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Durkin. The double ring ceremony was officiated by Father Richard Bourgeois at Saint Anthony's Church in Cohasset. The reception was held at Lantana's of Randolph.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore her mother's ivory satin gown and carried a bouquet of white American beauty roses.

Her maid of honor is her twin sister, Lisa O'Toole. The bridesmaids were Clover O'Toole, Marita Carpenter, Patricia Durkin, Laura Durkin, Shelanne Durkin, Mary Howley, Susan Patton, Heidi Chase, and Carol Conway.

The groom's attendents were best man John Durkin, and ushers Brian Durkin, Thomas Durkin, Robert Durkin, Scott O'Toole, Joel Carpenter, Jim Vivian, Bill Roy, David Gunville and Richard Hobson.

The bride received a Bachelor of Arts degree in Management and Accounting from Simmons College and is employed by Touche Ross and Company.

The groom received a Bachelor of Arts degree in Economics from Stonehill College and is employed by the Bank of Boston in the Trust Department.

The couple spent their honeymoon in Florida and will reside in Cohasset.

Chorus Performance

The Choral Art Society is celebrating the holiday season with a performance of J.S. Bach's Christmas Oratorio.

The 75-member chorus, soloists, and symphony orchestra will present Parts I-III of the oratorio Dec. 8 at 8 p.m., at St. Luke's Episcopal Church, Rte. 3A and First Parish Road, Scituate.

This concert will inaugurate the Society's 27th season, and its sixth under music director William C. Sano.

Chorus members from Cohasset include Rita Burke, Linda Henderson, Carl Hurtig, Marilynn Humphreys, who is in charge of the reception following the concert, Millard MacNeill, Edwina Migliaccio, Diana Rousseau, Karen Spencer, Peter Tolman, and Nancy White.

Tickets are available from members of the chorus and at the door ($5., seniors and students $3.50). This program is supported in part by the Massachusetts Arts Lottery, as administered by the Scituate Arts Council.

Since Choral Art Christmas programs are sold out promptly, concert goers are urged to arrive as early as possible.

Christmas raffle

The Greater Plymouth Association for Retarded Citizens (GPARC) is conducting a Christmas raffle of a Cabbage Patch Doll, as well as a television and baskets of cheer and fruit. The drawing will be held Friday, Dec. 21, in time for Christmas.

A limited number of tickets will be sold at $1 per ticket. Further information is available by calling GPARC at 294-8100 or 294-0078.

Dramatic Club's 'Cinderella' debuts Dec. 7

'Tis the season — the holiday season. True it is a time of good cheer but more importantly it is a time of magic. A time of dreams and wishes. In this tradition the Cohasset Dramatic Club is offering a little holiday magic. The story is well known to us all but in an adaptation that was made just for the Town of Cohasset. In the style of the Christmas Carol the Club proudly offers . . . Cinderella.

One thing that makes this production magical is the great involvement of the junior members of the Club. The play was open to any member of the Club who wished to participate. Including talent from the younger ranks of the organization helps make the production of Cinderella a showcase of ability and creativity.

The juniors were given room to experiment and create their own characterized sub-plots, incorporating all the varied talents at their disposal. This provided for rehearsals that were spontaneous, creative and not a few times confusing. But in the true fashion of amateur theater, ingredients were mixed together to form a final product. The play was constantly changing and growing. Each week of rehearsal something was added or changed making the production different every practice.

The successful utilization of the diverse talent is a testament of the skill possessed by director Judy Holmes. Constantly combining the correct dosage of freedom and guidance she has created a cohesive adaptation of the Rushworth Kidder version of Cinderella.

Some junior members hold important roles in Cinderella. Stephanie Holmes plays Cinderella's best friend Kitty. Laura Doherty and Jane deLima are attendants to the Prince.

Bob Julian and Jim McLeod-Warrick, as the Ugly Sisters in the Cohasset Dramatic Society's "Cinderella." (Jack Foley)

This part gives Jane an opportunity to display her unique talents. Other members of the deLima brood play an intricate part in the production: Jonatha , Kate and Carolyn each add a little bit of themselve . Fine contributions are also made by veteran Beth Pe ry and newcomer Kirsten Monroe. A face to watch for is Justine Thurston who is constantly giving her all.

Cinderella offers entertainment for all ages, after all it was produced by a group made up of all ages. So in this magic season, join in the holiday spirits with the Cohasset Dramatic Club and come enjoy this original version of the classic story of Cinderella.

The Cohasset Dramatic Club's performances of "Cinderella" start this coming Friday, December 7 at the Cohasset Town Hall. Show dates are Friday the 7th, Saturday the 8th and the following Friday the 14th at 8 p.m. and matinees on Sunday Dec. 9 and Saturday Dec. 15 at 2 p.m. Tickets are $4 for adults, $2 for children 12 years and under, and will be available at the door, or in advance at Fleming's, Cohasset Center.

Scituate visit for Santa

Santa Claus is coming to Scituate Saturday, Dec. 8 for a visit right up to the day before Christmas.

He is scheduled to arrive by boat at the Town Pier at 12:30 p.m. where he will be greeted by the Scituate High School band and scores of youngsters who will accompany him on a stroll along Front Street to the Harbor Mall.

He will stay at the Mall until 5 p.m.

The following is his schedule at the Mall for the remainder of his visit: Sunday, Dec. 9, through Sunday, Dec. 16, 2 to 5 p.m.; Monday, Dec. 17, through Friday, Dec. 21, 3 to 8 p.m.; Saturday, Dec. 22, and Sunday, Dec. 23, 2 to 5 p.m., and the day before Christmas from 2 to 4 p.m.

Santa's lengthy visit is sponsored by the Scituate Chamber of Commerce.

Tele-a-Santa

Attention, all children! If you want to talk to Santa Claus at the North Pole, just dial 545-4000 any time between 5 and 9 p.m. Monday, Dec. 10, through Thusday, Dec. 13.

Santa's "hot line" is sponsored annually by the Scituate Chamber of Commerce and was arranged by Robert P. Magner, Jr., a member of the Board of Directors.

'Christmas in Cohasset' schedule

12 p.m., "Santa Claus" arrives at Cushing Plaza by helicopter "Santaland" will be set up for picture taking with Santa and his two "Elves". Free balloons and lollipops will be distributed and Christmas music will be played.

2:30 p.m., Santa goes to Tedeschi Shopping Center and mingles with people. Balloons and lollipops will be distributed.

3 p.m., Santa and his Elves arrive at Cohasset Center, riding on a camel. "Santaland" will be set up for picture taking. Balloons and lollipops will be handed out. Some trees at the Common to be decorated with white lights. Camel rides will be available as well as Horse & Carriage rides around the Common. There will also be a petting zoo, and food available to feed the animals.

Sea Cadets receive official commission

The F.B. Battle Division of the United States Naval Sea Cadet Corps (formerly known as the Scituate Division) and its Officers received their official Commissioning Charter, from Washington D.C. in a formal ceremony and reception, Dec. 2.

This commission officially charges the Officers and their Cadets to carry out the orders, regulations, and traditions established by the U.S. Navy, Navy League of America, and Congress.

Among the guest speakers at the ceremony were; Father Thomas Gillespie, State Rep. Frank Hynes, Capt. John Caswell, USNR (Ret.); LCDR F.B. Battle, Regional Director USNSCC; LCDR Paul Corriea, Inspector General USNSCC, and Chief Petty Officer Rowland USCG, Commanding Officer Scituate Coast Guard Station.

Congratulatory letters were received from Senator Edward Kennedy, Rear Admiral R.R. Coutoure, Governor Michael Dukakis, Senator Allan McKinnon, Congressman Gerry Studds and Senator Paul Tsongas.

The Unit, is commanded by LT. H. Robert Feijoo and his Officers which are; Executive Officer, Lt. Lee Hawver; Administration Officer, LTJG Lillian Rousseau; Operations Officer, LTJG Bill Payne; Fiscal Officer, LTJG Jeff Ludlow and Supply Officer LTJG David Carchia.

These people have been working with the young cadets for the past 2 years.

Through their dedication and efforts, they have enabled Scituate to receive high praise from other area NSCC Commanders.

At Boot Camp this past summer, Scituate was able to receive 50 percent of the honor positions awarded.

They've participated in many local events such as: Scituate Heritage Days, Sand Hills Labor Day Parade, Hull Bike Race, Memorial Service for Ray Fitzgerald, Scituate Veterans Day Parade and many more.

Many organizations, companies and people are appreciated for their assistance in the success of the Unit during the Commissioning.

They include: Massa Electronics, The Welch Company, Scituate Knights of Columbus, Scituate Harbor Video, Rudolph Mitchell, The Scituate Rotary Club and Herb Gilsdorf.

A lot of thanks goes to Chief William Rowland and the crew of the Scituate Coast Guard Station "without their continued encouragement we would not have reached this point. Also, a special thanks to St. Mary's of the Nativity Church, for their continued support," said several cadet organizers.

Following the ceremonies, the officers, cadets and invited guest attended a reception and dinner at the New Bell Buoy Restaurant in Scituate Harbor.

Cancer Society sponsors women's symposium

Breast health is one of the most important issues facing women today. About one out of 11 women will develop breast cancer at some time during their lives. With early detection and prompt treatment, however, more than 87 percent of women who develop breast cancer will survive their disease.

On Wednesday, Dec. 12, the Massachusetts Division of the American Cancer Society and New England Medical Center in Boston will sponsor the Breast Health Day Symposium in the Dorothy Quincy Suite at 200 Berkeley Street from 11:30 a.m,. to 1 p.m. The program, hosted by John Hancock Mutual Insurance Company, is open free of charge to the public.

The purpose of the Symposium is to offer women the unique opportunity to listen to six of the state's leading experts in breast health, and ask them questions. Topics to be covered include normal breast conditions, the causes of breast cancer, who's at risk, breast self-examination, mammography, the patients' informed consent law, treatment alternatives, rehabilitation after breast cancer, and the growing popularity of breast reconstruction.

Natalie Jacobson, co-anchor of WCVB-TV's "News Center 5" will serve as moderator for the symposium.

Breast cancer is the leading cause of cancer death in American women. An estimated 115,000 women developed the disease this year, and 37,000 died of it. In Massachusetts, an estimated 3,600 women developed breast cancer in 1984, and 1,200 women died of it.

Symposium speakers will include Thomas J. Smith, M.D., Director of the Breast Health Center at New England Medical Center in Boston, who will discuss benign breast disease, and treatment options for primary breast cancer. Dr. Smith, a member of the American Cancer Society's Massachusetts Division Public Education committee, is coordinating the Symposium. Carolyn Lundeen, R.N., B.S., Liaison Nurse of the Breast Health Center, will address the importance of breast self-examination. Speaking about the benefits vs. the risks of mammography will be Marc J. Homer, M.D., Chief of the Mammography Section, New England Medical Center. Nicholas, J. Robert, M.D., Chief of Medical Oncology at New England Medical Center, will discuss advances in treatment of breast disease. The growing popularity of breast reconstruction will be addressed by Matthias Donelan, M.D., of the Plastic Surgery Department, New England Medical Center. Margo Woods, Ph.D., of the Department of Infectious Disease of New England Medical Center will talk about diet as a means of preventing breast cancer.

In addition to a panel discussion and question-and-answer period, participants in the Breast Health Day Symposium will have opportunities to learn the technique of breast self-examination, see exhibits on breast reconstruction, breast prostheses, services available to cancer patients and their families, the American Cancer Society's Reach to Recovery program, and the Breast Health Center at New England Medical Center.

The Symposium is open free of charge to the public, employees of John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance, and employees of businesses and industries in the Greater Boston area. For information, contact the American Cancer Society's Massachusetts Division at 1-800-952-7664.

Christmas Concert Tickets

Tickets are now on sale at the church office at $3 for our annual benefit Christmas concert. This year's concert will feature "Saint Nicholas" by Benjamin Britten and the Broad Cove Chorale and Unicorn Singers under the direction of Margo Euler. Proceeds from the concert will again help the DOVE shelter for battered women in Quincy. To date we have 28 patrons. If you wish, there is still time to become a patron of the concert by making a contribution of $25. Patrons receive two complimentary tickets. Don't miss out on this opportunity to benefit a good cause and to enjoy some beautiful Christmas music.

Christmas Poinsettia

Once again we are looking for donors for poinsettia to decorate our chancel table Christmas Sunday and Christmas Eve. Please call the church office 383-1100 or Olivia Linsley 383-0730.

Open Hearing on Church Finances

As a follow-up to the report of the Financial Planning Committee to the Special Meeting of the Parish in October, the Parish Committee and the Financial Planning Committee strongly urge you to attend an open hearing on the report in Trueblood Hall, Thursday, Dec. 6, beginning at 8 p.m. The discussion will be informal and is intended to encourage the maximum exchange of ideas prepatory to a Parish Meeting scheduled Jan. 16 to take action on the report.

Music Notes

We invite anyone who has the urge to be really emotional on Christmas Eve to join the Senior Choir in preparing a whole bunch of easy and cheerful pieces for the evening. Joining us now does not commit you to signing away your Wednesday evenings for life, just a few weeks. We would be delighted if you stayed.

Calendar

Thursday, Dec. 6, Church Finance Meeting, 8 p.m.

Second Congregational Church

November was Pledge Month

The "old salts" of the finance Committee have been hauling the lobster trap each Sunday this month. To insure a good catch, they will be mailing a letter and "estimate of giving" card to every family who have not yet completed a card. It will help (and save postage) if you can drop off your estimate of giving card — available at the entry of the church this Sunday. If you have any questions, call Bob Davenport, 383-1932, Gary Anderson, 383-6345, or Lee Jenkins, 383-0024. Thank you.

New Members will be received on Dec. 9 during the service of worship. If you would like information about church membership, please contact Rev. Benbow (383-0345, : 6697).

Christmas Art Show — Harry Woodhead, famous local artist, was delighted with the pictures our church's children made for Thanksgiving. The title of the December art show is "The First Christmas." For this show, please use black ink or marker on white paper; that will make it possible for us to print some of the pictures in the Good News.

Elevator Fund Notes - If your gift to the Elevator Fund was intended as a memorial gift, please be sure that the Elevator Fund chairman, Rich Silvia (383-0500) has all of the details. Thanks.

Testing visual acuity in kids

Children with learning difficulties may have undetected vision problems, according to Dr. John Child, director of the Optometric Extension Program in Massachusetts and a Norwell optometrist.

Even though the child's visual acuity may test at 20/20, this merely shows that objects 20 feet away are seen clearly. Learning, however, requires reading at near distances, usually between 12 and 16 inches. To see well at the reading distance, a complex combination of adjustments of the eye muscles must be made and sustained. While some children can do this with ease, others cannot.

Reading and learning are first and foremost educational problems, Dr. Child said, but when a child has difficulties achieving in school, a thorough functional vision evaluation should be sought. It may be that the child is simply farsighted and having difficulty adjusting for near seeing, even though distance vision may be clear.

In other cases, the eyes are not able to move easily across the page or cannot be made to look exactly at the same point on the page, resulting in blur or of the words or even double vision.

A functional vision examination performed by an optometrist will check for the health of the eyes, for sharpness of sight at both far and near distances, for smoothness in tracking or moving, and for coordination and focusng ability. Inadequacies in these vision skills frequently contribute to reading difficulty.

Christmas Concert Tickets

Tickets are now on sale at the church office at $3 for our annual benefit Christmas concert. This year's concert will feature "Saint Nicholas" by Benjamin Britten and the Broad Cove Chorale and Unicorn Singers under the direction of Margo Euler. Proceeds from the concert will again help the DOVE shelter for battered women in Quincy. To date we have 28 patrons. If you wish, there is still time to become a patron of the concert by making a contribution of $25. Patrons receive two complimentary tickets. Don't miss out on this opportunity to benefit a good cause and to enjoy some beautiful Christmas music.

Christmas Poinsettia

Once again we are looking for donors for poinsettia to decorate our chancel table Christmas Sunday and Christmas Eve. Please call the church office 383-1100 or Olivia Linsley 383-0730.

Open Hearing on Church Finances

As a follow-up to the report of the Financial Planning Committee to the Special Meeting of the Parish in October, the Parish Committee and the Financial Planning Committee strongly urge you to attend an open hearing on the report in Trueblood Hall, Thursday, Dec. 6 beginning at 8 p.m. The discussion will be informal and is intended to encourage the maximum exchange of ideas prepatory to a Parish Meeting scheduled Jan. to take action on the report.

Music Notes

We invite anyone who has the urge to be really emotional on Christmas Eve to join the Senior Choir in preparing a whole bunch of easy and cheerful pieces for the evening. Joining us now does not commit you to signing away your Wednesday evenings for life, just a few weeks. We would be delighted if you stayed.

Calendar

Thursday, Dec. 6, Church Finance Meeting, 8 p.m.

Second Congregational Church

November was Pledge Month

The "old salts" of the finance Committee have been hauling the lobster trap each Sunday this month. To insure a good catch, they will be mailing a letter and "estimate of giving" card to every family who have not yet completed a card. It will help (and save postage) if you can drop off your estimate of giving card — available at the entry of the church this Sunday. If you have any questions, call Bob Davenport, 383-1932, Gary Anderson, 383-6345, or Lee Jenkins, 383-0024. Thank you.

New Members will be received on Dec. 9 during the service of worship. If you would like information about church membership, please contact Rev. Benbow (383-0345, - 6697).

Christmas Art Show — Harry Woodhead, famous local artist, was delighted with the pictures our church's children made for Thanksgiving. The title of the December art show is "The First Christmas." For this show, please use black ink or marker on white paper; that will make it possible for us to print some of the pictures in the Good News.

Elevator Fund Notes - If your gift to the Elevator Fund was intended as a memorial gift, please be sure that the Elevator Fund chairman, Rich Silvia (383-0500) has all of the details. Thanks.

Testing visual acuity in kids

Children with learning difficulties may have undetected vision problems, according to Dr. John Child, director of the Optometric Extension Program in Massachusetts and a Norwell optometrist.

Even though the child's visual acuity may test at 20/20, this merely shows that objects 20 feet away are seen clearly. Learning, however, requires reading at near distances, usually between 12 and 16 inches. To see well at the reading distance, a complex combination of adjustments of the eye muscles must be made and sustained. While some children can do this with ease, others cannot.

Reading and learning are first and foremost educational problems, Dr. Child said, but when a child has difficulties achieving in school, a thorough functional vision evaluation should be sought. It may be that the child is simply farsighted and having difficulty adjusting for near seeing, even though distance vision may be clear.

In other cases, the eyes are not able to move easily across the page or cannot be made to look exactly at the same point on the page, resulting in blur or of the words or even double vision.

A functional vision examination performed by an optometrist will check for the health of the eyes, for sharpness of sight at both far and near distances, for smoothness in tracking or moving, and for coordination and focusng ability. Inadequacies in these vision skills frequently contribute to reading difficulty.

Scituate officials review effect of HB 6262

(This article concerns Scituate's reaction to the proposed Education Reform legislation. The proposal, currently being debated in the State House, will affect each community in an unique way. Cohasset school officials are also studying its effect on our school system. Ed.)

by Claire McDonough

The advantages and disadvantages of the State education bill continue.

State Rep. Frank Hynes addressed the Scituate selectmen, School Committee members, and other interested parties to explain House Bill 6262, the so-called Education Reform Bill.

Hynes explained that the bill is an intensive attempt on the part of the Dukakis Administration and the Legislature to respond to criticism which labels education in Massachusetts as mediocre at best.

The bill, as of last week's amendments would set stringent standards for student and teacher performance and provide for achievement testing for youngsters; equalize funding across the state, and recognize the importance of teaching and the present inadequacy of salaries to attract competent and capable teachers into the system.

Asked by Selectman Richard Bowen to explain the so-called Natsios amendment for the testing of teachers, Hynes replied the amendment has been accepted in a second reading, but that he planned to move to strike it.

Under the Natsios proposal, every teacher would be compelled to take a comprehensive examination by 1988. A teacher failing to pass would be allowed to take another examination in four years, but anyone who had not passed by 1992 would be subject to termination.

Hynes said he felt this would be an insult to teachers and would "put them all in the same bag."

He said testing is a poor, superficial, simplistic measure of performance, a test of recall of information, but does not measure things like interest, interaction, and character traits.

Hynes said he will propose an evaluation process on an annual basis with general guidelines to be developed by both the Department of Education and local school committee, which would have specific knowledge of the teaching needs in a given community.

Selectman Ellie Seaton said she doesn't have a problem with increased standards, and would like to see certification standards increased, but questioned the financial aspects, adding it is unnecessary to equalize funding because the Chapter 70 formula does this already.

She objected to the earmarking of money. Seaton added she sees no benefit to Scituate in a measure which would take billions of dollars from the taxpayers and give them to the dozen or so towns that have done a disservice to education.

She also voiced a fear that local control would be forfeited and suggested it would be preferable to have individualized local aid concentration on problems that don't have price tags.

Hynes said that Seaton had represented one point of view that exists at the current time, but that he felt it misrepresents the bill.

He noted the bill does establish more stringent standards for certification, requiring both observation and testing — somewhat like a bar exam.

He agreed that Scituate did not stand to benefit greatly, but said that the cost would not be as great as many feared. He noted the governor planned to introduce the major amendments to make the measure more fiscally sound. The amendment would bring the cost to $376 million over the next three years and not require additional taxes.

Minimum Salary

The first amendment would establish an $18 thousand minimum salary for new or existing teachers. The state would provide funding for those who make less, and would fund a kind of proportionate increase for others to be phased in over the next three years across the State.

State funding would exclude, or net out, any cost of living increases that would naturally occur. This would be done on a proportionate basis, with property value-poor communities receiving more.

"This," Hynes noted, "is where towns like Scituate would begin to suffer."

The second amendment would make participation in the program a local option. It would be up to the governing body — in Scituate's case, town meeting, to accept or reject the program.

The third amendment would address the Early Childhood package. In the original bill, as submitted by James Collins, the proposal would require optional schooling at four years of age and compulsory schooling at five years old, with a first grade readiness program for those who require it.

Hynes said he felt the concept sounded great, but that there are many problems, as a school system might find itself compelled to provide day care from four years old on.

Under the governor's proposal, $5 million would be available for early childhood training. After an assessment of need, a community that wished to develop a pre-kindergarten program could apply for a grant. Kindergarten would be left as it is.

Children who were not progressing with the class would be picked up by the second grade or earlier, and a special program initiated to bring them to grade level.

Selectman Joseph Norton questioned whether any of the proposals guaranteed an improved educational system.

Hynes explained the essential thrust of the bill is to develop a school plan with basic guidelines for reading, writing and computer skills.

Three times during his or her educational life, each child must be evaluated, and if the child does not meet minimum standards there must be a program to help him reach them.

There are presently systems in the commonwealth with a 50 percent dropout rate.

At this time the state does not require anything more for graduation than physical education and social studies or civics.

Local communities have more extensive programs, but there are some communities that do not require a math course.

Hynes noted the project should not require new taxes based on projected revenue growth. However, should the economy fall apart, parts of the program might have to be abandoned.

He added that this legislature cannot bind future legislatures, so there is no guarantee that the state will continue to fund the program. However, since the state is by law required to fund any programs it mandates, communities will not be required to pick up any funding that future legislatures might drop.

Under the proposed legislation, each school system will establish a program for computer education and literacy in conjunction with high tech firms. State money — approximately $45 million over the next three years — will be available for equipment.

Norton observed that state money still comes from the taxpayers.

Hynes agreed, adding people should ask themselves if they believe that children across the state should get a decent education.

If we don't believe this, we don't have to do anything, he said.

However, over 100 major studies testify to the mediocrity of education. The President's own study stated if our educational system were perpetrated on us by foreign entity we would declare war.

The automobile industry in the United States has lost economic power because American Colleges and Universitys graduate far fewer engineers than Germany or Japan.

"And try," he added to get a math or science teacher. Whatever is mandated must be funded by the state, and if there is to be educational reform there will be a cost factor."

Selectmen Andy Zilonis objected that the legislature would take away from home rule, and expressed concern that later amendments would be added and local authority stripped.

Hynes responded that this danger was real with the Collins Bill, and that is why the Dukakis amendment gives local option.

School Committee Chairman Florence Banks said the bill would put town officials in an awkward position when it comes to negotiating salaries with the teachers union. Traditionally school committees grant wage increases, but get something in return. This gives higher salaries with no strings attached.

Hynes agreed that this is a problem, but asked, "What is the alternative? Are we serious about educational reform and about attracting and keeping good teachers? If it doesn't happen now, it's not going to happen. If we don't do it, who will?"

What's Christmas without the family tree?

By Cyndee Moore

To most Americans, Christmas isn't Christmas until the family tree is decorated

In fact, selecting just the right evergreen tree has become a symbol for the arrival of the long-awaited Christmas season.

Interviews this past weekend with local nurserymen had one message to those planning to buy a fresh tree this year -- buy early while the selection is good.

Paul Parent of Kennedy's Country Gardens, located on 3A between Scituate and Marshfield, said the nursery had only 18 trees left last year just before Christmas. (And with an original stock of 1100 trees, that's not a great selection for the last-minute shopper.)

Parent said this year all of Kennedy's 1500 trees are in. He cautions those who wait closer to Christmas to buy a tree thinking they are getting a fresher tree. "All trees are cut the same time," he said. "It's better to get your tree, give it a fresh cut, and place it in a bucket of water in the garage until you are ready to decorate it."

Tom Nye, who runs the Lambert's Fruit tree lot on Rte. 139 beside Tinker's Dam across from the North said all their trees are cut one day before Thanksgiving and a few days after. The trees come from Vermont, Maine and Canada.

According to Parent, trees from Vermont and Quebec are fresher than trees from Nova Scotia, where the earlier winter forces growers to cut trees earlier.

There are plenty of trees this year, said Bruce Reed of Reed's Country Way Nursery on East Street outside of Cohasset off Rte. 3A. Reed said Saturday the nursery had one-half of its tree stock of balsam, Douglas fir, noble fir, and Scotch pine. Seventy-five percent of the nursery's sales are balsam, traditionally the most popular Christmas tree in American homes. Trees at Reed's, depending on type, come from Quebec, Nova Scotia, Maine, and Oregon.

Brian McInnis, general manager at Garden Craft in Assinippi on Rte. 53, also reports an abundant crop of trees from Nova Scotia this year. Garden Craft has reasonably-priced, naturally-grown trees "bundle" trees ($7 to $25) and higher priced premium sheared balsams and Scotch pines ($25 and $35, respectively, and up). All trees were in the day after Thanksgiving.

McInnis strongly urges shoppers to buy trees early, to give trees a fresh cut, and to place trees in water three or four days before bringing inside to decorate. The next two weekends are traditionally the busy weekends for tree sales, he said.

All nurserymen also said the prices for trees, which range from $19 to $35 and even higher for large premium sheared trees (which may take 15 years minimum to grow) will not go down the closer to Christmas it gets.

What to look for

The concept of celebration by decorating an evergreen began in pagan times and continued on after Christ's life, especially in 16th-century Germany, as a symbol of life everlasting. Today, when making a tree selection, that same concept of immortality eggs on shoppers to find the freshest tree possible.

"Pinching" and "bouncing" seem to be the two surest ways to guard against a short-lived tree, according to the nurserymen interviewed.

Parent advises rubbing and crushing a few tree needles to test for a characteristic evergreen smell. All suggested bouncing the tree a couple time to see if a large number of needles fall off. And of course, color and shape are two other things for tree shoppers to note. If height is what a shopper is looking for, Kennedy's has 12 to 15 feet trees up to $75 in stock.

Keeping your tree fresh

As already mentioned, it is of utmost importance to put at least a quarter inch fresh cut on the bottom of the tree. A fresh cut is so important to prolonging the tree's

Holiday month is unpredictable, fickle, atrocious

December is a cornucopia of gifts from Mother Nature — not one moon, but two. First the Beaver Moon sheds its golden light on a countryside that is barren and bleak. Later, when the winter solstice begins early on the 22nd, starry skies will be the setting for the Moon of Cold and Long Nights. Called the Twelfth Month by some, even the sun is slow in awakening these dark, cold mornings and sunrises are the latest of all in December and days the shortest. A peek at the almanac is heartening for the 23rd may be the shortest day of the year, but by the 29th, daylight lingers two minutes more and from then on, the days start getting longer.

Of all the pleasures of living by the sea, beachcombing is by far more rewarding, since you never know what the tide will bring. A piece of driftwood burns brightly in the fireplace and if you're near the marshes, get some salt marsh hay for the compost pile. It has all sorts of trace elements, those goodies that our soil should have to help it reach its potential as a food-and-flower producing medium. Pampas grass makes a handsome arrangement in a tall, metal container and bayberry mixed with greens are traditional Christmas decorations. Hardy bayberry bushes are a part of our heritage, passed down to us from the early settlers who made candles from the wax of the berries, not greasy to the touch, as the tallow candles were. Because the bayberry candles didn't melt and droop in hot weather, nor offend sensitive noses as tallow tapers did, bayberry candles were often set out when company called, as much for their fragrant incense as for their steady, slow-burning flame.

Even though our New England December can be atrocious, fickle and unpredictable, our fields and woods have much to offer for decorating for the holidays. Pine cones wired to sprays of evergreen can by sprayed, glittered, covered with shiny beads and shells and if big enough, will make miniature Christmas trees. Wreaths made with cones are practically indestructible so they may be stored in a plastic bag and used year after year. Wreaths and garlands are best made of balsam fir, spruces, hemlock and pines, all fragrant and beautiful. Decorated with cones, seed pods, gourds, rose haws, fruits or black alder berries, the wreaths or swags may be painted over lightly with white paint to give a touch of frosted snow, or shellacked to give longer life to the needles. Certain greens that should not be picked because they must be protected, are the American holly, mountain laurel and Prince's pine; all becoming constantly scarcer.

When you do take time out from holiday preparations to sit by the fire, remember this warning by the Federal Safety Commission. Those artificial logs sold in the market are usually made of sawdust and wax and can flare up if added to a hot natural fire. Safety experts advise waiting at least two hours to give a wood fire time to die down before adding an artificial log. Home rolled newspaper logs should never be soaked in flammable fuel of any kind; such logs could explode. Soaking newspapers in water either before or during rolling removes clay content and will make logs burn better after drying.

December also means the sharing of gifts and perhaps the most treasured are the little handmade offerings of children. Cub Scouts delight in making bird houses out of gourds or plastic bleach bottles; cardboard cream cartons filled with seed and suspended by wires attract the birds as nicely as the most expensive wooden birdhouse. Brownies delight in pre-Christmas meetings where they make calendars for Mom, or a dish garden to grace the kitchen windowsill. An onion set on top of chips, sprouts from the top may be snipped off for salad. Beet and carrot tops set on top of chips soon sprout into green foliage and an avocado pit can be a thing of glory.

The local flower shops and nurseries go into overdrive at this time of year — racing the clock, going non-stop 'till Christmas Eve. About eighty percent of the plants sold at this time of year are poinsettias and if you want a touch of the holiday spirit, a visit to the greenhouses at Bridgewater State College will do the trick. When you select a gift plant, consider the home it is going to and read the attached card that tells you what setting is needed. For instance, the most popular houseplant is the African Violet and in order to bloom, violets need several hours of direct morning or afternoon sun in winter, or a position near a bright window. A clue to lack of light is the leaves — if they grow horizontally, the plants are receiving enough light; if they are reaching upward, they are not getting enough. Amaryllis bulbs require a sunny window to develop into a magnificent plant, while a home where the only window faces north or is shaded by trees, coleus, Swedish ivy or

THIS WAY OUT.

When we were growing up, most of our medical problems were solved by the family doctor. But that was yesterday.

Today, finding good medical care is a lot more complicated.

The whole medical landscape is changing dramatically. And along with it, the decision to join a health plan has never been more difficult.

Today, there are well over a dozen health plans in the Boston area, and all of them have something to offer.

But how do you find the one that's right for you?

For this medical problem, understanding is the best cure.

MultiGroup has prepared a simple booklet that can help you tell one plan from another.

Write us, and we'll be happy to send it to you. Or call.

Setting priorities for the holidays is important

Holiday harmony does not happen by accident, according to Psychotherapist Eileen Salame of Family Counseling & Guidance Centers.

"Many people allow themselves to become very self-absorbed during the holiday period," says Salame. "This is contrary to the spirit of the holidays, which are designed to be a time for giving."

The pressures of mounting activity and financial concern affect many families as the season develops, Salame notes. But she says that these pressure can be lessened through family discussions that lead to plans of action for shopping and entertaining.

"Setting priorities is important," she says. "In making decisions, a couple should put their love for each other and for their family members first. Then the priorities will fall into place."

In some families, she points out, there has been a history of holiday drinking, emotional outbursts and clashes which have left negative memories in the minds of people who are now parents.

"To break such a negative cycle, a positive plan of action is necessary," advises Salame. "The holidays are only as hectic and harrowing as we allow them to be."

The picture of the happy family with harmony at the dinner table and gifts under the colorful tree can be achieved, says Salame, but not by accident. "The burdens of preparing for the holidays must be discussed and a division of labor must be achieved so the load doesn't fall on just one person."

Summing up her tips for "a holiday season filled with fun, happiness and serenity," Psychotherapist Salame from Family Counseling & Guidance Centers advises:

1. Have family conferences.
2. Set priorities for buying, entertaining, etc.
3. Make decisions ahead of time.
4. Divide up the work among family members.

Salame says that as we get caught up in the spirit of the holiday season, we should remember these two very imporant words — "Loving" and "Sharing."

A better understanding of family relationships can help, too, says the psychotherapist. Christmas Art Shopping

Make Christmas shoppig fun by traveling to the South Shore Art Center's Holiday Shop, filled with handcrafted gifts for the holidays.

Shoppers can select from a variety of finely crafted items by South Shore artists. The shop, located in the Center's building at 103 Ripley Road, is open Monday-Friday, noon to 4 p.m. and on Saturday from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Cohasset artist Tom Lucas has given to the shop a collection of small pre-Columbian pieces dating back to around 200 BC. Pottery in the shop is by Ralph and Sandy Terry, Marsha Klein, Judy Rossman and Syma.

A new stock of post cards representing works by Rosalind Farbush, Margaret Dillon, Eleanor Avakian, Syma and Mimi Turner has just arrived in the shop. Shoppers may also select from wreaths, small sculpture, unframed paintings, prints by gallery artists, ornaments and T-shirts.

Gift certificates are available to be used for art, the handcrafted items, a membership in the Center or for one of the many classes, workshops or seminars. The gift certificate introduces a novel way for introducing the South Shore Art Center to a friend, relative, spouse or child.

Artist wins award

North Shore, South Shore, and Cape Cod artists were recognized recently at the Copley Society's fourth annual Art Auction, held at the Copley Plaza Hotel on Sunday, Nov. 18.

Among the winners was Ros Farbush of Cohasset, who received the John Singleton Copley Award.

The Copley Society of Boston, with galleries at 158 Newbury St., is the oldest art association in America, founded in 1879. It shows and promotes the work of its artist members. Gallery hours are 10:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday, and Sunday afternoons in December, 1 to 5 p.m.

Toy safety tips

Secretary of Consumer Affairs and Business Regulation Paula W. Gold today urged consumers to take all possible precautions in the selection and use of children's toys during this Holiday Season.

Most importantly, Secretary Gold advised shoppers to closely examine labels on toy packages. "Age recommendations provide safety guidelines and may assist in selecting educational as well as suitable toys," she said.

State grant aimed to reduce childhood injuries

The Massachusetts Department of Public Health (DPH) has received a $750,000 federal grant to reduce injuries among children and adolescents in Massachusetts over the next three years.

The Massachusetts Injury Prevention Implementation Project is being funded by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services and will be carried out by DPH's Statewide Childhood Injury Prevention Program (SCIPP), established by DPH in 1979 to study the extent of childhood injuries in the state and to develop ways to prevent these injuries from occurring.

According to Massachusetts Human Services secretary Philip Johnston, "The leading cause of death for young people in Massachusetts is accidental injury, and for every such death in the state there are 45 injury-related hospitalizations and 1,300 emergency room visits. An estimated 377,000 Massachusetts children and adolescents suffer an injury requiring hospital treatment annually and many more accidents go unreported.

"While most of these injuries are not fatal, many will require medical treatment," said Johnston. "When we consider that an average emergency room visit to suture a laceration can cost $120, the cost benefits associated with reducing the number of annual injuries in the state are obvious. It is difficult to assign a dollar value to the trauma and worry children and parents experience when an injury occurs, but anyone who has rushed an injured child to the emergency room will probably never forget the incident."

Massachusetts Public Health Commissioner Dr. Bailus Walker, Jr. said, "Many people think that accidents will not happen to them or cannot be avoided, but that is just not the case. For instance, a cup of hot coffee left near the table's edge within sight and reach of a curious three-year-old can become the cause of a serious burn.

"Many injuries can be prevented and injury rates reduced," said Walker. "In fact, we hope to reduce childhood injuries in Massachusetts by 10 percent within the next five years by implementing this new initiative.

"While many injury-prevention programs are based on information taken from death certificates, Massachusetts has data from its statewide childhood injury surveillance system to draw upon," added Walker. "Based on a study conducted over the past three years, we know, for instance, that preschoolers are ten times more likely to experience a poisoning than elementary school children; and that more than one out of every 80 elementary school children will require hospital treatment for a bicycle accident. By identifying groups who are at greater risk for certain types of accidents, we are able to design education and prevention programs specifically for each group."

SCIPP will use project funds to design a series of easy-to-use teaching packets targeting specific age groups and injury types. Preschool and elementary school training materials are currently under development for teachers, day care staff, and college students in early childhood development. A teacher survey to determine how many schools teach injury prevention and to what extent will begin in January of 1985.

Nearly 75 percent of injuries to young children occur at home. To bring injury prevention into the community, a series of workshops on home injury prevention for local agencies is scheduled for next spring. In addition, during 1985 SCIPP will provide funding to community organizations to provide injury prevention programs to high-risk groups.

To better understand how and to whom injuries occur, SCIPP will investigate new methods of injury surveillance. To date, collecting information on injuries in the state has been limited to analysis of death certificates and emergency room and discharge data from 23 Massachusetts hospitals. Expansion of injury surveillance into more of the state's hospitals and non-hospital settings such as schools, day care centers, and organized children's sports programs will be evaluated.

Injuries can be prevented. For additional information about SCIPP and injury prevention in Massachusetts, call SCIPP Director Susan Gallagher at the Massachusetts Department of Public Health at 727-1246.

World of Weather: a Christmas message

By Warren Waitkus

Last month the 1985 edition of the Old Farmer's Almanac appeared on newsstands across the nation. They claim a high degree of accuracy in their long-range weather forecasts, and in fact, they are eagerly awaited by the reading public. Their summary for New England (page 114) reads: "The winter is expected to be colder and drier than normal with below average snowfall, but with large variations in temperature."

On October 3, 1984 my long-range outlook was published in the Mariner Newspapers. It read: "December, January, and February, on the whole, will be above average in precipitation with a confidence factor of 55 percent, and above normal in temperature with a confidence factor of 65 percent." I used defining numerical limits, in percentages, to express confidence of my outlook.

On November 28, 1984, the National Weather Service predictions branch issued their annual forecast for December through February, which is considered the meteorological winter. The weather service never deals in certainties when making predictions, so the forecast was presented in probabilities. For our region they are calling for a 60 to 65 percent probability of the weather to be warmer than normal, and a 50 percent probability of the precipitation being normal.

The top U.S. Government forecasters, with their resources of highly trained personnel, vast computer systems, and voluminous climatological data, came up with a forecast paralleling my outlook. Strange isn't it?

My outlooks are based upon what I call "Lunar Weather Rhythm." This is a method of determining the movement of high or low weather systems. I believe there is a definite relationship between the transit of the moon in its orbit, and the passage of highs and lows. My theory is an expansion of lunar-phase prophecies devised by astronomers Sir William Herschel and his son Sir John Herschel. Even though their studies were conducted in the 1700's, I have great faith in our forefathers' wisdom. I have spent over 30 years of research on the subject in spite of the fact that today's scientific community still continues to be skeptical of any relationship between the moon and the weather.

Christmas Message

In whatever religion you have been taught, however you have been brought up, and however you have understood your teachers on these levels, you will understand and grasp this message. It is not enough that this message be believed. It is a message to be lived.

The essence of universal religion is peace and truth, with love for and kindness to all the creatures of the earth. Now is the time to express this essence in your own life. A beginning must be made, and the place to begin is with and in yourself.

You would reform the world? Begin with yourself, brother! The message of the unreformed reformer seldom inspires reformation.

The heart of all religion is love. And righteousness, which is love in action, is the fulfillment of religion. Love not only family and friends, for love limited is love denied. Seek peace within yourself and seek, too, within yourself the devine breath of life. Persist in these things. Do not let up for a single moment.

Through your faith and through your deeds you shape your life and help shape the lives of others, as well. What a responsibility. The spirit finds in you its agent and also its partner, and to the degree that you are aware of this and act on it, your life is enriched.

A revelation will occur to you, a revelation higher than your most exalted dreams. The new age is coming, and in it there will be a realization of the oneness of all. Differences between the various religions will disappear. The good, which is in each of them, will be fused and will become the common goal of all mankind.

Know that you have the power to choose. Choose love, not hate; choose gentleness, not violence; choose holiness, not evil. Dare to believe that the reign of love and peace is coming soon. Ready yourself for it. Ready yourself for it with deeds of righteousness. Righteousness is the door-opener, and beyond the door is love. May power divine enter every aspect of your life endowing it with the rewards of material accomplishments, the treasures of purposeful existence, and the eternal light of spiritual achievement.

Do you think I wrote that? I didn't! I just used it to emphasize the wisdom of those who preceded us. That message was found in Old Saint Paul's Church, Baltimore; dated 1693.

November Summary

November was a nondescript month, weatherwise. It was cold, dry, and windy, but without any major weather event. It brought us our first measurable snowfall and a little Indian Summer at the end of the month.

Total melted precipitation, at my station in Marshfield, was 1.67 inches, 3.20 inches below normal. There was one inch of snow, .2 inches below normal. The maximum 24-hour rainfall was .57 inches on the 5th. Maximum 24-hour snowfall was one inch on the 13th. Rain, .01 inch or more, occurred on seven days with a trace on two days. Snow, 1.0 inch or more, occurred on one day with a trace on three days. The total precipitation this year has been 49.72 inches, 9.85 inches above normal. The mean temperature was 40.8 degrees, four degrees below normal. The average daily maximum reading was 50.8 degrees, while the average daily minimum was 40.8 degrees. The low temperature for the month was 14 degrees on the 20th, with a high reading of 68 degrees on the 2nd.

There were six clear days, 15 partly cloudy days, and nine cloudy days. The average wind speed was 14.3

Local artists featured at gift shop

Third and fourth generations of an artistic family are carrying on the tradition of creativity with their paintings of local scenes and nostalgic childhood memories.

It's a mother and daughter act done with quiet confidence and enjoyed by an ever-widening audience.

B. Spencer Green is the third generation artist whose paintings have been delighting residents and visitors with charming views of Cohasset and Scituate landmarks. Her paintings are done in two distinct styles, academic realism and the imaginative primitive character which has so captured the interest of the art-loving public on a national scale.

Her primitives are always based upon careful research in the archives of the Cohasset Historical Society and other local sources.

Her grandfather, John F. Spencer, was a noted lithographer and architect whose works can still be seen in many of the beautifully preserved buildings along the Freedom Trail in Boston.

Her father was also an artist, but according to B., he had to spend most of his time raising nine children on a farm during the Depression. Life was hard and the hours long but when B. wasn't helping with farm chores or baking with her mother, she could almost always be found sketching.

Her greatest pleasure was in drawing and painting country and family scenes that told a story.

Growing up in this manner created a love of family tradition and feeling which she has passed on to her daughter Donna, whose work, in turn, is strongly influenced by and evidence of this deep feeling.

B. Speneer Green displays one of her 'Home Town' series of paintings.

'Grandma's Kitchen' by Donna Green Prints are available at Kit and Kaboodle in Cohasset Village.

B. Spencer Green's latest series of painings has been on the theme "My Home Town" featured in continuing exhibition at the Kit and Kaboodle Gift Shop and Gallery in Cohasset Village.

These have been so well-liked that "The Country Cottage", a publisher of fine art reproductions, has just produced a full color limited edition print of her newest work "Winter Twilight on Cohasset Common".

This is a charming primitive, showing skaters on the pond and the golden glow of lights in the windows of the churches and houses surrounding the Common, and an overview of the harbor and ocean with a multi-toned evening sky.

Donna Green, the fourth generation of artists in her family, has become very well known for her imaginative and highly-detailted paintings featuring children. Her latest major work is "Grandma's Kitchen", a delightfully touching painting depicting the sweet memories she has of baking gingerbread cookies under the loving supervision of her grandmother in the large, cozy, country kitchen.

Having just become a mother herself, Donna says the experience of having her own child has heightened her need to paint happy, living scenes stressing the importance of close family life.

The Country Cottage publishers have selected "Grandma's Kitchen" for reproduction as a full color, limited edition print, and collectors of Donna's art are advised to make early reservations to assure getting the same numbers as in her previous series of numbered, signed prints.

Both new prints, "Grandma's Kitchen" and "Winter Twilight on Cohasset Common" are printed on high quality paper with utmost care to reproduce faithfully the colors and detail of the originals. Both are limited, numbered and signed by the artist.

The new prints and the original paintings will be diplayed together at the Kit and Kaboodle Gift Shop and Gallery on Main Street in Cohasset Village, affiliated with the Country Cottage in representing the artists.

Call Bob Fesler at Kit and Kaboodle for information about reservations and purchasing. 383-9667.

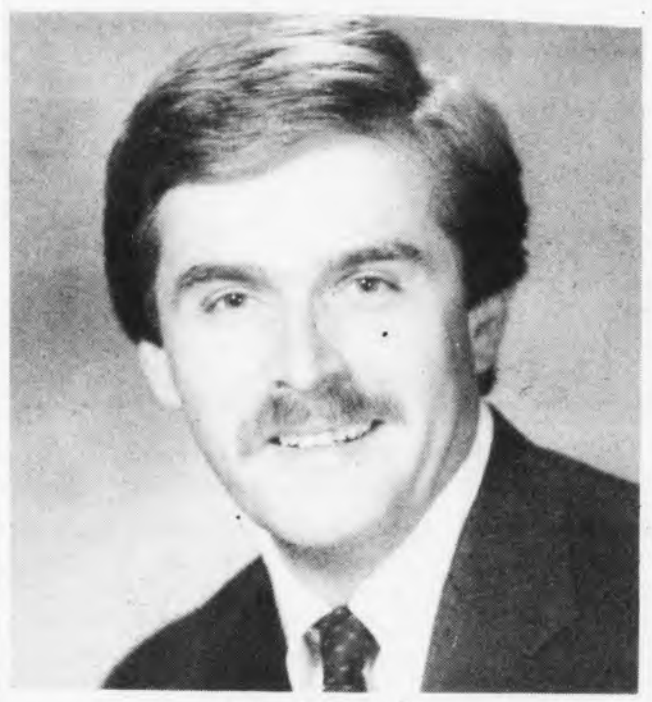
"Cinderella" This Week

"Cinderella", the English "panto" show staged by the Cohasset Dramatic Club, opens at the Cohasset Town Hall this Friday night for five fun-filled performances.

This specially-written comic version of the old tale is directed by Judy Holmes with script written by author and newspaperman Rushworth Kidder.

The traditional Christmas English "panto" show is actually a spoof or humorous parody of the original story and features a cast of sixty actors, dancers and singers of all ages.

Jan Higbee plays Cinderella, Derek Holmes portrays her father the Baron Stoneybroke, Stephanie Holmes plays the sentient cat called "Kitty", Scott Ketcham will be the Apprentice Buttons, George Ela is Murk the salesman, and Alice Duffy plays Cinderella's own Fairy Godmother.



In the amusing and sometimes slapstick gender switcheroo found in traditional "panto", Bob Julian and Jim McLeod-Warrick play the "ugly" step-sisters, Sally Rossi Langer is Prince Charming and Sarah deLima plays the Prince's helper Dandini.

"Cinderella" in its "panto" form is a rarity seldom seen in this country. Rush Kidder's script and music were written specially for this Town Hall production, and local themes appear throughout the show.

Performances of "Cinderella" will be Friday and Saturday evenings Dec. 7 and 8 at 8 p.m., with a matinee Sunday, Dec. 9 at 2 p.m.

Next week there will be an evening performance Friday, Dec. 14 at 8 p.m. and a final matinee at 2 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 15.

Tickets are $4 for adults, $2 for children 12 years and under, and will be available at the door, or can be obtained in advance at Fleming's, Cohasset Center.

Photography Show

Entry dates for the South Shore Art Center's All New England Photography Show "Images" are Friday, Jan. 4 and Saturday, Jan. 5.

Works may be brought to the Center, 103 Ripley Road, from noon to 4 p.m. Friday and 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday. All orginal work must be delivered on the dates specified. The show opens Jan. 9 and continues through Feb. 1 with a formal reception on Sunday, Jan. 13 from 5 to 7 p.m.

Jurors for the show are photographer and conceptual artist Cary Wasserman, photographer Marie Dreyfus and photographer-author William Berchen. Awards will be given for Best Black and White and Best Color and honor awards and ribbons in both categories.

Photographers are limited to five entries in all categories and all work must be securely framed and ready for hanging. No glass sandwich frames will be accepted. All work must be identified on back with title, value, photographer, address and telephone number.

Wasserman is a photographer and conceptual artist who has studied with Henry Holmes Smith.

Dreyfus served as the former director of the Boris Gallery of Photography and is currently a member of the Board of Directors of the Photographic Resource Center.

Berchen has combined his photography with writing and has published several books including "CapeCod" by Viking Press, "Maine" by Houghton Mifflin and "Aspects of Boston" also by Houghton Mifflin.

Works not accepted into this show are to be picked up Saturday, Jan. 12 from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. For additional information call the South Shore Art Center, 383-9548.

mph; normal is 13.2 mph. The highest gust was 51 mph on the 17th.

The normal heating season is from Sept. 1 to May 23. Some 79 percent of the heating year remains.

December Outlook

December will be a stormy month with above average precipitation and temperature. From the 5th to 14th it will be cloudy and wet with major storm activity indicated. The 15th to 21st should be mostly fair with some showers or snow squalls. From the 22nd to 30th a very active storm system is indicated, most likely on or about the 27th. I feel that most of the precipitation in our area will be in the form of rain with below average snowfall for the month.

Weather Q and A

Q. Is Chicago the windiest city in the United States?

A. No. Boston, Massachusetts is with an average wind speed of 12.7 mph. Chicago got the nickname "The Windy City" from her long winded politicians.

Have a good day and a nice forever.

Selecting the perfect tree

freshness that Kennedy's cuts the tree for customers right before leaving the lot.

Reed, Nye, and McInnis feel water only is sufficient for keeping trees fresh. However, Parent said Kennedy's does give customers a free package of pet-safe preservative with each tree.

Reed thinks it important to use initially warm water. This seems to open up the tree's tissues, he said. He warned against adding sugar to the tree's water because "glucose can plug up tissues."

Whether or not one uses water or water and a preservative, Parent said it is even more important not to allow the tree's water supply to dry up. If this happens, the tree's open pores dry up, he said.

In addition to feeding the tree water via the trunk, Nye said he tells customers to mist trees all over occasionally. He said this is even more important to those who place trees in rooms where heat is poorly circulated as in a room with a coal or wood burning stove.

Selecting other greenery

For some, the tree is just the beginning. Swags, ropes, garlands, and wreaths complement the Christmas tree's main attraction. The best place for variety in other greenery is a nursery rather than an isolated tree lot. Lots, like Lanbert's Fruit, do have wreaths, but mostly balsam.

However, these wreaths are most reasonably priced. For example, a 12-inch single-faced wreath at Lambert's is only $2.98 and a double-faced, $3.98.

Unlike tree lots, nurseries offer customized greenery. Reed said two-thirds of the wreaths sold at his nursery are custom decorated with all-natural decorations. The nursery also has potted house plants for Christmas and garlands of five different kinds of greenery.

Special to Kennedy's and to the South Shore are wreaths made from west coast evergreens, Parent said. "These evergreens, not native to the Northeast, will not shed," he said, "and are trucked 3,000 miles just for our enjoyment."

Among the varieties at Kennedy's are noble fir, silver fir, west coast cedar, and blueberry juniper. Priced from around $16 to $18, these specialty wreaths are thick and full and withstand the heat in the house, Parent said. Some people even keep the wreaths through spring, changing the decorations, and then in July after the wreaths turn gold, decorate them with summer flowers.

McInnis said the large selection of wreaths at Garden Craft ranges from 10 to 36 inches and can be customed decorated, also. The nursery has a large selection of poinsettias and cemetery mounds and wreaths.

(Editor's note: Hours for tree shopping at the above lots are as follows: Reed's Country Way Nursery: 8 - 6 weekdays, Friday until 9 and open Sunday until New Year's Eve; Kennedy's Country Gardens: 8 - 8 weekdays and until 6 Saturday and Sunday; Garden Craft: 9 - 9 weekdays and 9 - 6 Saturday and Sunday; and Lambert's Fruit (lots in Hanover and Pembroke): 7 -11, seven days a week.

December is nature's cornucopia spider plant require little sun.

It's hard for plant lovers to conceive of anyone not enjoying having living plants around. What can you do? Give them a Gum Drop tree! Take a dry leafless tree branch. Stick a gum drop on each twig. Stand it in a deep pot filled with rocks, shells, or marbles. Add little bows and tie special notes to it.

As we were growing up, feeding the birds usually meant tossing out some bread crumbs. Now, with so many birders wishing to attract birds to their yards, we've learned that the main dish at our bird banquet will depend to some extent on the guests we wish to invite. Cracked corn is one of the least expensive foods, but the avid birder will soon have an abundance of house sparrows, starlings, pigeons and more blackbirds than you care to count. If you want a select clientele, the least expensive need is the mixed bird seed found in our supermarkets. This will attract a different crowd. If it's cardinals or evening grosbeaks you're after, sunflower seeds are the answer. If it's goldfinches or siskins you want, they love thistle seed. Hemp is also favored by many small finches — yes, hemp is marijuana, but the seed sold for birds has been sterilized. Other seeds and food include pumpkin seeds from last summer's flower garden, acorns and nuts of various kinds and many a bird such as mockingbirds, wrens and woodpeckers will readily sample spoiled fruit. Birds will find another diner and even starve to death if you put food out one week and none the next, for they become dependent on you. If you go away on vacation after you start feeding the birds, a winter storm could result in birds starving to death.

Some oldtimers know that a peek out the window can tell you more than all the weather charts and glib forecasters. Just a look at the tree branches will give you a clue as to what to wear when venturing out. At 20 mph. the wind moves small branches and dust or snow is raised; at 30 mph large branches move, wires whistle.

A conversation with Hanover's St. Nick

The young and the young-at-heart have begun lining up to talk with Santa at Hanover Mall.

This past weekend children from nearby Hanover, Norwell and Pembroke, and from as far away as Quincy and Halifax made their annual pilgrimage to affirm their good behavior and to make their Christmas gift wishes known to Santa.

Children, grandchildren, and grandmothers stood in line for 15 to 20 minutes just to talk with Santa and to have their picture made on Santa's lap.

From 10 a.m. until 10 p.m., the Hanover Mall Santa will be talking with children of all ages until 6 p.m. Christmas Eve.

In an interview Saturday, Santa said it is the talks with children that raise his spirits the most each Christmas season.

While lending his ear to boys and girls this year who have visited the mall, Santa has learned his elves back at the North Pole must work day and night to meet the demands for Transformers (robots that convert into trucks, etc.) and Cabbage Patch Kids. He is pleased to report that his toy shelves are now "well-stocked."

Other popular toys for Christmas this year are accessories for G.I. Joe, He-man, My Little Pony, and Cabbage Patch Kids.

As far as what Santa himself wants for Christmas, he said, "For next year I wish for all children to be as good as this year."

When Santa is not at Hanover Mall, he is busy making house calls and visiting the handicapped who cannot come to visit him.

Before he begins his long journey on Christmas Eve, Santa said he would be making numerous house calls on the South Shore. Anyone who wishes Santa to pay a visit early Christmas Eve can arrange a house call through the Hanover Mall Santa.

To all this Christmas season, Santa adds, "A very Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year."

The origins of Conahasset

By David Wadsworth

Cohasset's origin was as the easternmost land in the town of Hingham. The parent settlement, originally called Bare Cove, had been well established by the year 1635 and soon began to expand into nearby vacant lands.

By the end of the sixth decade of the 17th century the salt marshes and meadows of the Conahasset area had been granted by the town to numerous Hingham residents, but the upland areas east of Hingham, in the section called Conahasset, still remained undivided and were part of the town's Common Land.

By this time, Hingham's population was increasing, and so was the need to utilize vacant upland areas nearby. It was decided to divide up the Conahasset uplands, and a Hingham Town Meeting in 1669 determined the number of shares of Common Land each man should receive.

November 25, 1670, Lieut. Joshua Fisher of Dedham was engaged to survey the uplands of Conahasset, and at Town Meeting held in Hinham December 6 of the same year voters met to assign specific parcels of land to qualified residents. At that time, most of the Conahasset uplands passed from Common Land into private ownership by grants made by the town.

The division of land at Conahasset followed the English method, having long but narrow strips of a given length. The width of each lot depended upon the number of shares to which the new owner was entitled. In this case the length of most new properties was one mile, except where natural boundaries interfered.

As anyone familiar with Cohasset's topography will attest, the town's land areas are anything but consistant in quality. Here, glacial gravel and clay are interspersed with granite ledges, and the rich topsoil so vital for agriculture is scarcely to be found.

Hingham land division planners took the varied topography into account and attempted to provide some useable land to each owner along with the unuseable. To achieve fairness, they first divided all of the Conahasset area into four large sections called the First, Second, and Third Divisions and the Second Part of the Third Division. Every new landholder received shares in each of the four Divisions. In this way it was hoped that the best and worst of Conahasset's varied lands would be shared equally.

When Joshua Fisher surveyed Conahasset, on his map or "plat" he left narrow strips between the new lots in certain places for a grid of future highways. A rough roadway already existed along the line of today's North and South Main Streets connecting the settlements at Hingham and Scituate. Another wound along the northern shoreline approximately where Jerusalem Road may be found today.

To these Fisher added several straight highways running east and west and two running north and south. Of the original ways planned in 1670, today's Sohier Street, Pond Street and King Street follow much the same course. The eastern one-half of Beechwood Street approximates the location of another Fisher roadway, and a vestigal path leading west into the woods near Lily Pond is the reminder of another. Two more seem never to have been used; one leading from that old path northward to the west of King Street and another running east from Forest Avenue to Little Harbor near today's Bow Street.

Soon after the 1670 land division, Hingham settlers began to establish the first farms and homesteads in Conahasset. Of the earliest dwelling places, none exist today. One of the oldest, owned by Israel Nichols, near Strait's Pond, survived into the 20th century and is remembered by long-time residents. Joshua Bates' homestead on South Main Street appears to be the oldest extant, dating from 1695 and built on the 40th Lot of the First Land Divison. Of those whose homes were the first in Conahasset, most were of the second generation of Hingham settlers. Names such as Bates, Lincoln, Souther, Tower, James, Nichols, Pratt and Beal were among the earliest, and there were numerous others.

For many of the new landholders the long, narrow lots laid out by Lieut. Fisher were awkward to manage. The process of breaking up the original parcels and combining them into more workable properties began quite soon. Today, relatively few Cohasset properties are bounded by the original 1670 lot lines; though in some places the original boundaries still can be identified.

Not long after the first homes, the earliest industries arrived. Mordecai Lincoln harnessed Conahasset's Bound Brook to run a mill and ironworks in Beechwood, and Hingham's Cushing family operated a mill at the west end of Strait's Ponds, near Cohasset's West Corner.

Shipbuilding started at Cohasset Harbor (called "Ship Cove") by the year 1700. Subsequent generations of Cohasseters were to turn to the town's eastern frontier, the Atlantic Ocean, for their livelihood. The first years of the 18th century saw Hingham's easternmost village at Conahasset start to form itself into a community which within two more decades would itself challenge the parent town's authority and seek its own identity as a separate parish and government.

Contest seeks energy sources

Commonwealth Electric Company, with the endorsement of Gov. Michael Dukakis, Energy Secretary Sharon Pollard, the Massachusetts Association of School Committees, and with the cooperation of the electric utilities in the Commonwealth, invites students to participate in our statewide Massachusetts National Energy Education Day Poster Contest.

"Energy Visions for Tomorrow's World" is designed to encourage students in grades K-12 to become energy conscious adults, to develop ideas on conserving energy, alternative energy sources (coal, solar, wind, hydro, etc.) or brand new sources of energy and to help students think creatively.

Entries must be submitted by 5 p.m., Friday, Feb. 15. Awards will be made by March 22, which is National Energy Education Day.

Entries from students in the Commonwealth Electric Company service area should be submitted through their schools to: John R. Farnham, manager-Consumer Relations, Commonwealth Electric Company, 2421 Cranberry Highway, Wareham, MA 02571.

Braintree nurse reunites mother and son

Her search ends in joy

by Cathy Conley

Her search is over.

A search that has lasted an eternity of eight years. A search that brought her through the depths of depression to the fierceness of obsession.

A search that turned her head a million times whenever a blond-haired child passed. A search in which she accumulated a 12-inch wide stack of personal letters.

A search that finally brought her from her apartment in Framingham 3000 miles across the country to a tiny courthouse in a tiny town in Washington, a town which sits lazily in the center of a 90-mile moat of sand and tumbleweed.

Her search ended when a handsome, blond teenager walked into the courtroom with Braintree detective Gerald Currie and she stood up and said — "Do you know me?"

He stretched his arms out, put them around her and said — "Mom."

It was the sharp eyes of a Braintree nurse that ended Linda Missett's eight-year search for her son Eric.

Geri Cooke was sitting on the blue velvet couch in the living room of her home on 21 South Street in Braintree on October 12.

She was daydreaming and the 6 o'clock news was on. A snapshot of a tossled-haired five-year-old shot onto the screen and Natalie Jacobsen's voice droned in the background — "this child has been missing for eight years. His name is Eric Missett."

Geri was startled out of her daydream. One of her students at South Junior High had that name — a strapping, blond 13-year-old.

Since he came to South Junior High and his two stepbrothers came to Liberty Elementary School in September, Geri Cooke had a nagging suspicion about them.

"There records didn't seem accurate. Nurses do a lot of detective work," said the soft-spoken grandmother who has been a nurse in the Braintree school system for 16 years.

"I had a gut feeling something was wrong. I had spoken with the assistant superintendent and the principal of Liberty School."

These lost children are here, among us. They have not vanished into thin air. This is the story of one person, a school nurse, who followed through . . . and took a chance . . . that she might be right.

"Strange. I had planned to retire last year. I got the feeling that night this was the reason I didn't retire."

She immediately called Jacobsen and compared notes. The child had been abducted eight years ago when he was five years old.

Eric's face fit the slot in the puzzle. Jacobsen called Child-Find, the agency Linda Missett contacted four years previously to help find her son.

Child-Find asked the anchorwoman to get the Braintree address from the school nurse where the Missett family lived.

After four hours and several calls, Geri Cooke called Jacobsen with the address.

But the sharp-eyed nurse was not the only one who saw Eric Missett on the six o'clock news.

About five minutes away in Braintree, Eric's stepmother spotted the picture as she sat in their newly rented home at 37 Hemlock Street, Braintree.

Reports say that Eric's father was not home at the time. But within 30 minutes Nancy had packed her stepson Eric and two other sons into the family car and had sped out of Braintree headed for Benton City, Washington, where the family had lived before moving to Braintree so that the father could seek work as an electrician.

When the Braintree police arrived at the Hemlock Street home, it was stripped clean of any belongings of the family.

Linda Missett was devastated. For the first time in eight years, her son was within her grasp, but had slipped away.

Linda was married in 1970 to John G. Missett. In 1971, their only son Eric was born.

In 1974, the couple divorced. The degree provided the father with custody of the child. Linda was given visitation rights.

On October 27, 1976, Linda's visitation rights were increased and she filed for custody of her child.

The weekend following the court order, she went to pick up her child at John's apartment. Neither father nor son were there. They disappeared without a trace for the next eight years.

In November, 1976, Linda was granted permanent custody of her child because of the kidnapping.

Linda pursued every avenue in search of her child — letters to newspapers, pleas on television. Even psychics contacted her to see if they could help.

In 1980, she registered with investigators of Child-Find in New York.

In June 1983, Child-Find reported that John and Eric were located in Benton City, Washington. But before Linda could make contact, John again fled with Eric.

Linda lost all signs of her child until October 12 when a Braintree nurse spotted him on TV.

October 16 was a Tuesday. Eric had disappeared again. Linda called Geri Cooke and her first questions after eight years were — "What does he look like? Is he well liked? Is he happy?" "Handsome," "Yes," "It appears so," were the answers she got.

Geri sent her the tiny one inch by one inch picture the school secretary keeps on her rolodex file.

After learning that her son was missing from the Braintree address, Linda filed criminal complaints against her ex-husband charging him with custodial interference.

Linda was distraught. But then the break that she had been waiting for Politicus — by David A. Mittell, Jr.

The 'flaws' of House 5704

(Second of three parts)

House 5704, the comprehensive proposal to reform public schools in Massachusetts, received preliminary House approval on November 19 by a vote of 110-33, or a full 76% of members present and voting. Yet last week I called it "fundamentally flawed," as I strongly believe it to be. Here's why.

First. First and foremost, this legislation transfers much of the control over public schools from your local school committee and their appointed administrators to the Secretary of Education and the bureaucracy surrounding him. I think you can appreciate this if you read from four paragraphs of what the Governor's office had to say in favor of the legislation in a broadside mailed on November 1 to the Dukakis political organization:

". . . a school improvement advisory council is created [i.e. mandated] at every public school, . . .

"With the help of the school improvement council, each school district will prepare preliminary school plans, following guidelines established by the Department of Education. The Department will assess these preliminary plans, assisted by an advisory review committee appointed by the Governor . . . Based on the assessment of the preliminary plans, the Board [i.e. the State Board of Education] will establish minimum standards in the areas of (1) school climate, (2) school curriculum . . . , (3) professional development, and (4) special services . . .

"Each school district [i.e. your local school committee] will then propose school plans that both meet the minimum standards established by the Board and also establish five-year goals and objectives. The Board [i.e. the State Board] will review these plans . . . Finally, beginning in 1990, and every five years thereafter, each school district will submit a final school plan. The Board of Education will review each final school plan and approve or disapprove it, based on how well the school district is meeting the state minimum standards and its five-year goals and objectives.

"Failure to meet minimum standards and performance objectives will authorize the Commissioner of Education to intervene to determine how state school funds are to be spent and to establish a remediation plan, redirecting existing school budget funds among programs if necessary . . . "

There is more, but you should have read enough to gather that this is a Draconian proposal taking power away from you the voter and parent and the unpaid local school committee members who serve you. It transfers that power to the Secretary of Education and a faceless and growing (and how it will grow under this proposal!) state education bureaucracy. Such a bureaucracy never can and never will answer to you as your local school committee, meeting in open session once a week, can and does.

This proposal flies in the face of all studies, all experience, and all common sense, which say that local control and parental involvement are the most crucial factors in producing good schools — more important even than the dollar issue.

The proponents of House 5704 perhaps inadvertantly give its nature away when they speak of the State Board passing judgement on "five year goals" in every school district across the state. What this is is a quasi-socialist "Five Year Plan" for our schools — a power-centralizing outrage perpetrated by well-meaning people with a central planning mindset, who have no respect whatever for your ability to select and monitor a competent school committtee at the local level.

It is an insult, but more important than that, it is dangerous, for power once centralized tends to stay centralized. "Decentralizing" it back to the local level and to the citizen is about the hardest thing to make happen in a democracy.

But there is more than that that is wrong with this legislation . . .

Second. The cost. The bill as written will cost $566.7 million over three years or $1.2 billion over five according to official predictions . . . and history shows that official predictions are always shy of actual costs when major spending programs are enacted.

The problem here is twofold. First, as Warren Brookes of the Boston Herald has pointed out, with declining enrollments money may not be as tight in the next few years as it was in the immediate aftermath of Proposition 2½. But House 5704 blithely proposes to throw another couple of billion dollars a decade at public schools without really having assessed schools' budgetary requirements in the years ahead.

Secondly, throwing that much money at schools assumes a continuously growing state economy, or it assumes new taxes. The former is a foolish assumption, for we all should have learnt from Herbert Hoover's error when he talked of a "permanent plateau of prosperity." Some day the high and mighty high tech missle will fizzle, unemployment will rise, and the yield from "growth taxes" will shrink for a while.

We will not be ready for that day if we toss increments of a billion dollars around like floppy disks.

If the state can help the communities to meet educational costs during the present prosperous period, that is fine. But neither the communities nor the taxpayer should be set up for a fall when the boom turns bust. That is precisely what happened between 1967 and 1975.

In 1967 (a boom year) the entire state budget reached $1 billion for the first time in history. We spent and spent, and by 1975 (a recession year) we had $½ billion in deficit. Gov. Dukakis of all people should remember that and be wary of frittering away any state surplus that there might be for a few years.

Most of the other faults in House 5704 are linked to the first two (the emasculation of local control and the high cost), but a few are worth mentioning separately . . .

Third. It gives too much to teachers and does not ask enough in return. It optionally mandates (whatever that means) an $18,000 bottom salary for teachers.

That's perhaps a little high to start, but it is not far off the mark given the opportunities bright kids have in industry today. The real problem with it is that little or nothing will be garnered for the student and taxpayer in return for the higher salaries this legislation would bring about. Pay increases need to be accompanied by productivity increases in any industry, and the $18,000 minimum ought to be at the end point of negotiations with teachers, not the starting point.

Earlier retirement for teachers is another provision of 5704 . . . and it is buncombe. Healthy teachers can retire when the rest of us do. This isn't the Navy. (Gov. Dukakis proposes to amend this provision.)

Fourth. House 5704 mandates pre-kindergarten programs at who knows what cost and without any need-assessment having been undertaken. (Gov. Dukakis would amend this provision to make it on a needs-only basis.

Fifth. House 5704 would mandate other things that rightly belong in the purview of your local school committee. There are mandated student-teacher ratios; mandated teacher evaluations every other year; mandated rules relating to drug-dependent students and trouble-makers . . . It just goes on and on! In fact, one wonders what, aside from producing mandated five-year plans, will be left for your local school committee to do.

The perceived dangers contained in House 5704, as well as the strong likelihood that it could be a fait accompli before the end of the present lame-duck/Holiday season session of the legislature, have turned your reporter into a "nattering nabob of negativism." Next week, however, in the final piece in this series, I will try to suggest some alterations to House 5704 that will help make it what all of us wish it to be: a positive force for the better education of our most precious possession.

☐ Eskimos use refrigerators to keep food from freezing.

☐ Maybe it would be better if children were allowed to adopt parents, rather than vice versa.

☐ The only persons who should not be judged by the company they keep are jailers and wardens.

☐ Some sage called a cynic "a person searching for an honest man with a stolen lantern."

☐ Ronald Reagan used to glory in his reputation that he was the Errol Flynn of B movies.

☐ An excerpt from a new football novel by Dan Jenkins: "Marriage is one year of heaven and 20 years in the light-heavyweight division."

☐ As society becomes more prosperous, crime increases almost geometrically.

☐ A brief quiz: What is the average time between high tide and low tide? Answer below.

☐ I don't like Bruce Schwoegler's mental swagger. He reminds me of the guy who could strut while lying down.

☐ One of Beethoven's music teachers said the great composer "would never do anything properly."

☐ Answer to quiz: The average time between high and low tide is 6 hours.

☐ The congressman's wife sat up in bed, a startled look on her face. "Tom," she whispered, "I think there are robbers in the house." "Impossible," was her sleepy husband's reply. "In the Senate, yes, but in the House, never."

☐ A political scientist said the upper classes represent a nation's past; the middle class, its future.

☐ It was Theodore Parker who said: "Democracy means not that I'm as good as you are, but that you're as good as I am." Which reminds me of the wise saying of Aristotle: "The worst form of inequality is to try to make unequal things equal."

☐ There is no such thing as an excellently written story, but there are excellent re-written stories. In other words, no newspaper columnist could flourish without the aid of the copy editor.

☐ Youth would be more interesting if it came later in life.

☐ Pity politicians: if they are liberal, they are leftist; if conservatives, rightists; if Republicans, they are anti-people; Decmocrats, they are big welfare spenders; if they go along with party leadership, they are political hacks; if they don't, they are labeled mavericks.

FROM THE KITCHEN

by JOAN PINKHAM

Even children, late for the school bus, skip that all-important meal, breakfast. Like many other family members they scramble for the door, poor stomach empty since dinner the night before and body lacking gobs of energy needed to face the day ahead. Even Napolean Bonaparte — that energetic little emperor — was able to polish off a breakfast in seven minutes flat of two hors d'oeuvres, two soups, one roast, one side dish, four desserts and coffee. Here in New England, a huge wedge of apple pie right out of the oven was traditional when grandpa was a boy. Those were the days, too, when pie crust was always made with lard. Nowadays it's all too easy to buy the frozen pie shells, but from Priscilla Hall we learn her short cut which saves a trip to the supermarket. Mrs. Hall is wise in the ways of the kitchen, having raised her own family and now at the grandmother stage in life. By tripling this pie crust recipe, she is able to store the dry ingredients for three double-crust pies in a plastic container in her refrigerator, adding ice water when ready to roll out the crusts. As with so many good cooks, she knows "by the feel" just how much ice water must be added so that the crust will will not be too soggy, too sticky, or too dry.

PIE CRUST

2 c. flour (Mrs. Hall uses Gold Medal)
1/3 c. lard
1/3 c. Crisco
1 tsp. salt
1/2 tsp. baking powder

After sifting dry ingredients into a bowl, cut in lard and Crisco with pastry blender to make small-size crumbs. Refrigerate at this point, adding ice water when ready to make pie.

Many a child comes racing home from the school bus to a kitchen where the smells of freshly baked cookies are the stuff memories are made of. From Barbara Whitcomb we have her aunt's recipe for sugar cookies. Barbara writes: "For Christmas, these are the really old-fashioned sugar cookies, very thin and you can eat the whole batch at one sitting." That being the case, you'd better find a good hiding place for Dorothy Reimers'

SUGAR COOKIES

2 c. flour
1 c. sugar
2/3 c. butter
2 tsp. cream of tartar
1 tsp. soda
2 eggs
1/4 tsp. vanilla

In one bowl, mix first five ingredients, like pie crust, with your fingers. Slightly beat eggs, add vanilla and mix with flour mixture. Roll, sprinkle with sugar and cut. Bake at 350 degrees until brown.

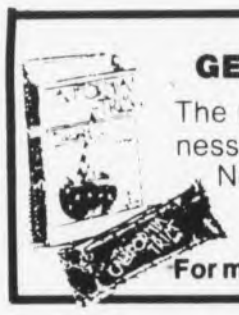
Hopping aboard the school bus, clutching their lunch box, are many youngsters who find a sandwich from home more to their liking than a big meal served in the cafeteria. A hard-boiled egg, slices of deli meat with wholegrain crackers, a container of yogurt and perhaps a slice of this homemade bread, a recipe from our good cook and friend, Millie Carr, would be nourishing and pleasing. A loaf made now and stashed in the freezer for the holidays would be a fine idea.

EGGNOG HOLIDAY BREAD



3 c. flour
3/4 c. sugar
1 T baking powder
1 tsp. salt
1/2 tsp. nutmeg
1½ c. eggnog
1 egg, beaten
1/4 c. margarine
3/4 c. each, chopped walnuts and candied fruit (chopped)

Sift first five ingredients into large bowl. Combine eggnog, egg and margarine. Stir into sifted ingredients. Stir in walnuts and fruit, turn into buttered loaf pan. Bake at 350 degrees about one hour (may need extra 10 min.). Turn out of pan onto wire rack. Cool.

PATCHES — by Lois Martin

My son's wedding:an opportunity to rejoice

Frankly it was fun, a celebration. And in many ways, it was a gift to those of us who took part in the wedding.

Meghan, the girl who visited here for the first time about three years ago, the one with the navy blue eyes. Well, she married the fellow who brought her here, Andy Martin. I knew him before his brown eyes turned from birthright blue, before he fought with his brothers for the cereal box prize, before he decided sneakers and a basketball were adequate worldly possessions.

And now in the stead and the stance of that boy, I know the man who married Meghan Saturday in Greenwich, Conn. while the rest of us sat there in the glistening church amid alternate smiles and sniffles.

PATCHES

You didn't for a moment think, did you, that I could let that pass without affirmation here. No way.

The announcement of their intention had been made somewhat traditionally last winter. And the next week I'd called Peggy Beals to create for them what seemed warm to me, her own handwork in a quilt. But between then and now it seemed many months and moons until suddenly, the occasion was the day at hand.

Part of the titillation had been arrival of a son Brian, whose firstborn face I had not seen in nearly two years.

That, his overdue swooping in from California, was the frosting on the cake. Thanksgiving, indeed. And the nicest thing anyone said to me all week was: "Brian is Lois with a moustache." I have let that go to my head.

It was Friday morning when we left for the motel that would house us all in Armonk, N.Y. Cars were filled with gifts, tuxedos, people who asked nothing more than a clear path to the big day.

We got it and more. Simultaneous with the overtaking of the hotel by our wedding party, rich in people from this part of the world, was the visit by the New York University basketball team. The manager was wise enough to put them on the other side of the motel so that we wouldn't disturb them.

We had the rehearsal and then the dinner when everyone bespoke his or her mind on the upcoming marriage. That now and then included references to Doug Flutie, for heaven's sake, because his move permeated all others that day.

Nieces, a nephew, offspring of my sister and her husband, contributed to the fanfare. And the revelry couched in commentary was delightfully irreverent because it was embroidered in loving appreciation for the two people whose merger we celebrated.

The next morning Andy had his wedding breakfast with the rest of us gearing up yet again for the peak of excitement before he fell from the precipice of singleness to the cushion of connubial commitment.

The ceremony seemed joyfully accomplished in the mellow weather. And we were off to Waveny House in New Canaan, Conn., a name and place on the map that needed finding.

Once there, we, those hundred or so people, set about making merry. Some of us did it well. I'm not terribly certain that the mother of the bridegroom was supposed to have had such a great time. Certainly no stately matron would have grabbed Usher Peter Buckley to the dance floor post haste for a commemorative fling to the theme from "Flashdance."

But that was the whole thing, you see. Sports. I was among sports, the likes of young Buckley who withstood antics of elders to set a new pace in reception celebration.

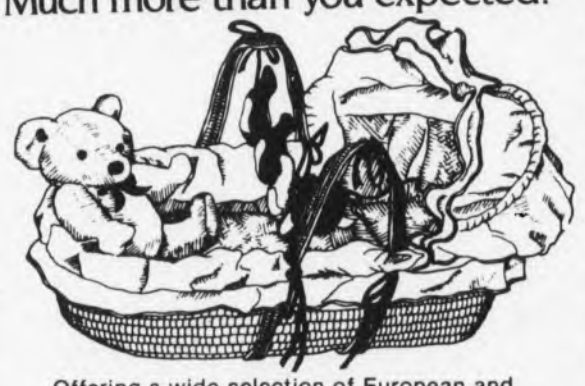
And friends. There were those there in abundance. You'd like Meghan's family. She has a father, a mother, two swell sisters, lots of kin. And I count them as friends.

I doubt that it would be possible to take a couple like Andy and Meghan without coming up with a group that shared their appreciation for one another and for their wedding.

If I was among the first to hit the dance floor, I was second to no one to being in my nightie and in bed, once back at the motel. I want points for waiting until then.

The orchid and I wilted at the same time. But not before we had a wonderful day together.

I tell you it was a gift because I view it as that any time family and friends have cause and opportunity to rejoice, a gift is in hand. I have accepted it as such, with utmost gratitude.



And yes, I found a dress that was appropriately restrained without being restraining.

But you can take my word on it. No body, no body, looked better than that bride. Not even the gladsome young man who stood beside her and beamed throughout the ceremony. Dear old couple, they're languishing in Jamaica while the rest of us are palming off the Thanksgiving leftovers to the dog.

Great beginnings and the best scrapbook material life has to offer.

Much more than you expected.

came.

A guidance counselor from Braintree South Junior High called to tell her they had received a request for Eric's school records from Benton City High School.

Then the woman, who had spent eight years getting ready for this moment, had to decide what to do.

During this time, she had gone to art school.

She had gotten her degree at Leslie College. She had become a special needs teacher. Then recently a manager of a home for retarded adults and was so respected in the field will soon manage a second.

"Do you know what was the hardest part? It seemed people were disappointed that I kept working. They would say — I would be a basket case if I were in your shoes.

"They seemed to think I should be broken down and hysterical all the time.

"But I knew that I would find him. And I would have to be strong and well for that moment."

So thousands of times she fingered his bronzed baby shoes. Thousands of times she stared at the huge painting she drew of her son from a tiny photo.

"I knew that I should not barge in on him like a paratrooper in the night," she said.

On November 16 in assistant district attorney Robert Banks' office in Dedham, it was decided that Linda Missett accompanied by Braintree Detective Gerald Currie and Quincy policewoman, Barbara DiNatale would go to Benton City, with a warrant to arrest John Missett for the kidnapping of his son.

Before the flight, the three visited the office of Psychologist Dr. Luleen Anderson of Quincy to ask how to deal with the traumas anticipated when mother and son first met.

For almost a week the two detectives familiarized themselves with the small river town, and worked with local police.

Finally, on Monday, November 26, the detectives met Eric face to face in a conference room in his old high school. Linda Missett waited in the car.

DiNatale told the boy a very special person was nearby. "My mom?" he asked. "When we said yes his face lit up with both surprise and joy, but he said he was not quite ready to see her yet," Currie said.

The next day, the boy walked into the courtroom with Det. Currie. He passed the tall, curly-haired slender woman without a glint of recognition.

She stood and said — "do you know me?"

"Mom," he said. "And he reached out for me," Linda Missett said.

Linda called the meeting "ecstacy." Her son called it "awesome."

The Benton City court gave Linda custody and within a day, Linda, Eric and the two detectives had landed at Logan Airport in the glare of TV cameras.

Eric is living with his mother now, and has enrolled in a junior high in Framingham.

"Eric always knew I was alive and had a vague idea where I was. But there was tremendous pressure on him. Now that pressure has been taken off his shoulders," Linda said.

The father, John Missett, is expected to turn himself in to Norfolk County district attorney.

"Naturally, his father's safety is one of Eric's prime concerns," Currie said.

Both Linda and Eric decided that privacy is top priority now so that the young man, who is interested in computers and football, can get on with his life.

Linda did not want him interviewed or photographed.

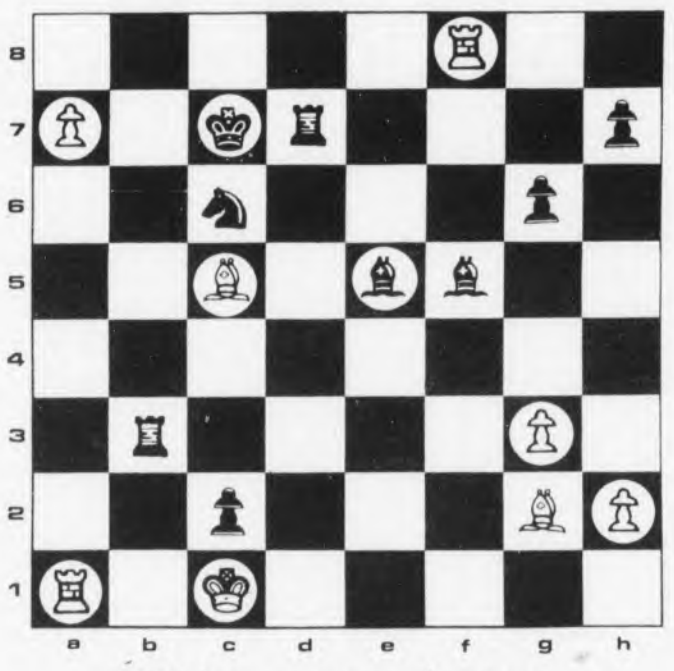
But she expressed her deepest appreciation to the Braintree nurse and the Braintree policeman and the Quincy policewoman who brought her son back to her.

"It bothers me that you can't get any help from the law in a civil case. There has to be a criminal aspect."

"Finding Eric has been an obsession in my life. Now I can marry my fiance. I would not marry before because I would have had to let go of the name Missett. And maybe that would have been the one thing that would have brought Eric back to me," she said.

"Eric has two families now. He still has great love for his first family."

Linda had saved all of the toys from when he was five years old.



Eric picked out dominoes, a coloring book, and story books, and wrapped them as presents for his stepbrothers when he sees them.

"There is no way that I would stop him from communicating with his family. He can call, write and see them whenever he wants. I don't want to ever lose him again."

ASBESTOS LUNG DISEASE

Asbestos dust causes serious lung ailments; the diseases appear suddenly, years after exposure. Today numerous SHIPYARD WORKERS, MASONS, and PIPEFITTERS of the 1930's-1970's have lung afflictions because they inhaled asbestos particles many years ago.

If you worked in one of those professions then and now have a lung disease, you may be eligible to receive money damages or workers' compensation. Relatives of living and deceased victims can also recover in some cases.

School awaits 'Eddie and the Cruisers'

This article was written by the former Cohasset Mariner editor, and the number one fan of Eddie and the Cruisers.

By Mike Berger

You know winter is around the corner when there is talk of "Eddie and the Cruisers."

No this isn't a movie and neither is it a sequel but last year's version of Cohasset High School basketball made winter a lot more exciting.

In fact people who may have never went to a basketball game before went on a Saturday afternoon to Brockton to scream their lungs out (in overtime no less) for Eddie and the Cruisers in the Division III Championship game.

And they're back. Coach Eddie Minelli is now talking of team plans to have a graphic artist produce a sweatshirt with basketball players leaning out of a '57 Chevy convertible.

Two years ago Coach Minelli took a team with very few wins and coached well over the .500 mark. He came close to being terminated by school administrators but players and supporters rallied to save his job.

He rewarded Cohasset with a championship team and helped to coach very exciting players such as Tony Bogarty and Jim Creed, both students who are being watched by college recruiters all over the nation.

CHS lost in overtime by two points to a Cardinal Spellman team but the fans enthusiasm spilled over to the fall with the success of the soccer and football teams.

The Sunday Boston Globe published a story which said Cohasset is the favorite for Division III champs and is even stronger than last year.

Minelli, candidly, disagrees. He acknowledges this year's squad is a fine team, a good one, but at least yet does not approach the overall talent of last year's team. He even predicts it might take a year to approach last

Police contract before state board

Members of the Cohasset Police Association and the Cohasset Personnel Committee were scheduled to meet together in contract negotiations with a representative of the state Labor Management Board.

The "fact-finding" session had been scheduled by the two sides prior to last week's silent protest staged by the police union members at the selectmen's meeting.

Police have worked without a contract since June 30. They have complained about the lack of progress in negotiating a fair settlement between town officials and union representatives.

This session yesterday was scheduled to expedite a conclusion to those negotiations. It was decided by both sides that an impartial party should enter into the stalled talks. According to Selectmen Chairman Cliff Mitman, who is a former Personnel Committee member, the fact finder will listen to both sides, often in separate rooms. The contract offers from each group will be reviewed by the state representative. He will then judge which offer is more reasonable, and specify the reasons why.

According to Mitman, the state official will attempt an on-site negotiation between the two groups. If that is not possible in one session, he will review the separate offers and make a determination in writing at a later time.

The representative will state the facts as he views

Help needed for young kids in crisis

By Jane Lane

The school budget is tight. School administrators and teachers are aware of that fact.

But there are some things that can't wait. Problems need to be solved, and it's going to mean money.

Health Education Coordinator Michael Gill is in line for a budget request, and he knows he's in competition. Other administrators and teachers will be asking for new texts and programs, and Gill will need a pretty good reason to add another salary to his department.

But this is a request he feels is a necessity for Cohasset's elementary schools. A crisis intervention counselor, someone who will be there at the school to help a young kid in trouble.

Someone who has never been there before.

Gill, who has been health education coordinator at Cohasset High School for five years, knows this area. He lives in Scituate and is familiar with the number of crisis intervention counselors scattered throughout the South Shore school systems. Cohasset is one of the few systems around without such a person.

According to Gill, this crisis intervention counselor/health educator, will be at the elementary schools. He or she will assist the classroom teacher in providing the required health education curriculum to the students. He envisions this as a sort of in-house training person who will supplement the curriculum devised by the classroom instructor.

"A teacher may notice a child is becoming withdrawn from the class, or perhaps is becoming disruptive. Or maybe they are aware of a situation within the family. This teacher would call on the crisis intervention counselor for assistance with that student," he said. "There is a definite need for a person in that school building, for that student to talk with."

The Scituate resident said there are kids at the high school who wander into his office daily, talking freely about problems and situations. Suicide, pregnancies and divorced parents are some of the topics he discusses with the teenagers at Cohasset High School.

But the problem at the elementary schools is that these kids often are unable to verbalize their deepest troubles. There is no one to talk with, and these youngsters often close themselves off to all communication.

"Some of the problems our kids are faced with are tearing them apart," Gill stated. "And often the teachers don't see this, or don't know where to refer

Handicapped Parking

The Cohasset Police Department reminds citizens of the recent by-law adopted by the town and accepted by the Attorney General governing designated parking spaces for handicapped persons.

Unauthorized vehicles are prohibited within parking spaces designated for handicapped persons and disabled Veterans. Violators will be cited, and fined $15.00 for the first offense; $25.00 for the second offense and vehicle removal for each subsequent offense.

The department asks for cooperation and assistance in the enforcement of this law, thus helping all handicapped persons.

Landfill holiday hours

The Board of Health wishes to advise the townspeople that the following schedule will be in effect for the Cedar Street Landfill for the Christmas and New Year holidays: Monday, Dec. 24 - closed, Tuesday, Dec. 25 - closed, Wednesday, Dec. 26 - open, Thursday, Dec. 27 - open, Friday, Dec. 28 - open, Saturday, Dec. 29 open, Sunday, Dec. 30 - open, Monday, Dec. 31 closed. Tuesday, Jan 1 - closed, and Wednesday, Jan. 2 open.

The normal days of operation for the landfill are every day except Monday and Friday from 7:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

Extended Closing Times

Selectmen approved extending the closing times of Hugo's Lighthouse and the George Mealy Post Jan. 1 until 2 a.m. This is a traditional request made by the two establishments for New Year's Eve.

Music Circus License

Selectmen delayed a decision to approve a weekday license to South Shore Playhouse Associates until producer Ron Rawson returns to the area.

Helena Moriarty, executive administrator at South Shore Music Circus, talked to selectmen Monday night about the annual weekday license request. Selectmen John DeBassio said the board members had two concerns, that some performers do not want to start performances early, "and they are the ones who disturb neighbors with their music and inappropriate language."

Moriarty admitted some performers like to begin later in the evening, but "it is infrequently and not something we plan as a steady thing." She added that Rawson would like to speak with selectmen in the spring, regarding performance starting times. She said other theatres traditionally begin their performances at 7 p.m., "and out of consideration, we have always started at 5 p.m. I can't sit here and tell you honestly we will have performers who won't start at 9 p.m." she added.

Selectmen expressed concern about a letter they received in October from Marie Pratt. In the communication, Pratt said the Music Circus had six shows this summer which began after 9 p.m. "Traffic backup was all the way to the Post Office and upper Sohier St., spilling back onto Route 3A." The cause, she stated, was the 7 p.m. shows exiting and the start of the 10 p.m. show. Traffic after both shows was evident until 12:45 a.m. Sunday, and 12:53 a.m. Monday.

Pratt also mentioned the George Carlin show July 7 which she labeled "a disgrace with obsene language throughout the last half of the show." That particular performance ended at 12:20 a.m. Sunday and traffic was until 12:50 a.m. "The other three shows were as late, but the River's and Carlin shows were for 'Mature Audiences', loaded with profanities and distastefully loud. I would request when issuing SSMC's license for 1985: 1. a starting time of no later than 9 p.m. for Sunday and weekday licenses; and 2. if the request is granted, that you notify the SSMC as soon as possible so the bookings will know in advance of all show starting times. I do not want to open old wounds, but I am really worried that these late club shows will become a habit or permanent show starting times," she wrote

Army Reserve Land Disposal

The Water Commissioners have written to the General Services Administration (GSA) requesting that the former Army Reserve Depot be transferred to the state Department of Environmental Management for conservation use.

According to Water Dept. Supt. Ben Curley, the GSA is considering disposal options for the surplus federal property adjacent to Wompatuck State park.

The commission noted that major portions of the land falls within the declared Watershed Protection Zone established by the Water Comission.

"Due to recent concerns regarding land use in or near our Watershed, and its potential impact on that resource, the Cohasset Board of Water Commissioners and Health declared a building and development moratorium within the limits of the Protection Zone. When that moratorium lapses in the Spring of 1986, we along with the other town boards and committees are assured that residents of Cohasset, convened in Town Meeting, will adopt zoning bylaws severely restricting the future development of the entire body of land within the Watershed Protection Zone," the letter stated.

In addition, the commission requested the GSA transfer the former Army Reserve depot land to the state Department of Environmental Management for conservation use.

Beechwood gas leak

The gas main broken Monday morning along Beechwood Street has been repaired and construction at the former Harmony Hill site is continuing.

The main broke at about 9 a.m. Monday morning when contractor Ross Rosano cut into the two-inch diameter pipe while excavating a drainage trench.

Nearby residents were evacuted by police who arrived at the scene along with fire personnel. No one was injured from the burst, but the fire department remained at the scene while Boston Gas Co. crews repaired the pipe.

The former summer camp for retarded children is currently being converted into five luxury condominiums. The residence is owned by Norman Kaufman of Braintree, who said that Boston Gas informed him there was no main or feeder line near the site. Company officials had told him the closest line was located on Route 3A, he said.

Although no one was injured in the sudden blast, 15 Beechwood Street residents were asked to leave their homes until the area was determined safe.

Planning board reviews zoning bylaw changes

Members of Cohasset's planning board met Tuesday night to review suggested changes to the zoning bylaw proposed in the recently-issued report of the zoning bylaw subcommittee.

The intent of the subcommittee was to "improve, and update" the existing bylaw, and while the entire bylaw was not rewritten, those changes were made which were "deemed to be in the best interests of the town."

Items included concern: structural coverage; maximum permitted coverage (in which the definition of coverage is changed to include "That portion of the lot covered by any man-made material(s) that is (are) impervious to water," such as driveways); height of structure (in which an attempt is made to uniformly describe height, and control the bulk of a house without forcing the builder to follow one theme); yard requirements (in which the size of the yard is, in general, increased in order to lower the density of buildings in any given area); the conversion of one and two-family dwellings to two and three-family dwellings (which is permitted according to regulations, provided there is "no expansion beyond the existing foundation without a special permit"); maximum impervious cover (decreased from 35 percent to 30 percent).

Also, open land requirement (increased from 35 percent to 45 percent); perimeter fences, hedges and walls (in which boundaries are moved away from the curb, and lowered in height in order to provide better visual access to drivers); parking spaces (in which seven spaces are alloted for every one thousand square feet of gloss floor area); landscaping in heavy building and light industry areas (these additions require specific footages of landscaped areas to be maintained along both street fronts, and "any property line abutting land residentially zoned").

An issue brought up repeatedly during the meeting was that of cluster zoning. In a letter to the planning board, member Daniel Cotton stated "Cluster zoning offers an opportunity to create useful open space as well as interesting and attractive dwelling space. However, when we consider that the three clusters already underway will increase the town's dwellings by nearly five percent and with more in the works, there is a real possibility that the town will be confronted with growth at a faster rate than it can handle and create problems that may be extraordinarily difficult to cope with."

Mr. Cotton explained that cluster zoning, coupled with advanced engineering, are providing access to land considered undevelopable twenty years ago when the zoning bylaw was written. All of the board members agreed that it is imperative that changes be made to redefine cluster zoning.

While the board members felt that the changes discussed were a positive start, they agreed that the work was not completed. Board director Chris Basset stated, "We continue this evaluation of the bylaws as an ongoing process. We have, at least, begun to see the iceberg." She then asked to be granted the authority to "reconstruct a new committee to continue this work." The motion was made, and passed unanimously.

The planning board will reconsider these issues next week, and put together a presentation which will be submitted for approval first to Town Counsel, then at a public hearing, and finally at a Town Meeting in April.

Christmas Tree Needs Decorations

The USS Constitution ("Old Ironsides") will have a Christmas tree this year and, once again, help is needed to decorate.

Beginning Friday, Dec. 14 and continuing through Christmas Eve, children of all ages—as well as youth groups—are invited to visit the USS Constitution at its Charlestown berth and bring along an ornament for its tree.

Tree ornaments can be homemade, but should be able to withstand rainy and snowy weather. They can be brought to the Constitution and hung on the tree between the hours of 10 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

The Constitution's Christmas tree—a 20 foot tall blue spruce—was donated to the ship by the state of New Hampshire.

For further information about decorating the USS Constitution Christmas tree, call Lieutenant Ranz of the USS Constitution at (617) 242-5670.

Town responsible for maintenance

Selectmen decided Monday night that the town has a responsibility to plow and sand the private way leading to 100 Pond Street.

Although subsequent cluster zoning developments have included a provision to maintain their own roadways, there is no such agreement within the special permit issued by the planning board to 100 Pond Street. That 39-unit condominium development was the town's first application of its cluster zoning bylaw.

Atty. Roberta Sawyer, representing Pond Street developer Frederick Thayer, argued that the residents of the private development deserve municipal maintenance of the private road entering the property.

More than 40 percent of Cohasset roads are private, but the historic policy of the town has been to plow and sand all roads. There is no distinction between private and public roads in Cohasset, she explained.

Atty. Sawyer stressed that the residents of 100 Pond Street, who individually pay about $4000 annually in property taxes, "are entitled to the same municipal services such as plowing, and sanding." Cluster zoning is in no way a requirement that municipal services should not be provided its residents, she added, saying, "cluster zoning is simply an alternative to traditional zoning."

Also, she noted, there is no agreement between the planning board and developer Thayer in which he is required to maintain the road leading off Pond Street into the development. Recorded minutes of several meetings between the board and Thayer are incongruous and do not indicate any agreement was settled, she said.

Dr. Phillip Brackett, a 34-year resident of Cohasset who now resides at 100 Pond Street, said it has been the tradition of the town to plow private ways. He noted that the majority of the residents there do not have school-aged children, and thus bears no burden to the school system and other municipal services.

Planning Board Chairman Christine Basset told selectmen she was not on the board at the time the development was reviewed, but former member Barbara Power said "without hesitation" that maintenance of the road at 100 Pond Street "is their (Thayer and condo owners) responsibility."

Bassett explained that the other two subsequent cluster zoning developments, Cedar Ledge and Wheelwright Farm, have provisions which require private maintenance and plowing of the roads. She admitted that the planning board minutes were "ambiguous" although former members said that during the 1981 review process Thayer indicated he would be responsible for all maintenance within the development.

"It was the understanding of the planning board at approval time that the developer would maintain, whatever that means, the roadways," she explained.

The other issue to consider, she said, is the number of so-called private ways in town. Because the town has continually maintained and plowed them, they have become through the years, "de facto public ways."

Town Counsel Richard Henderson agreed with Atty. Sawyer that no formal agreement had been negotiated between the planning board and developer Thayer. There is no consistency in the conversations recorded during numberous meetings between the planning board and Thayer, he added. "I am not sure of the basis of the town treating this development any differently," he said, referring to the town's maintenance of other private roads.

He cited a section of the Homeowners Trust Agreement which states the trustees are responsible for the maintenance of all "common areas and facilities" within the develoment, although, Henderson added, the statement does not mention the streets.

Selectman Frank England held written minutes of a Feb. 10, 1982 meeting which contained statements from Atty. Sawyer requesting that the road at 100 Pond Street be plowed.

Atty. Henderson said the problem has arisen from the town's confusion about it's responsibility to maintain private and public ways."We have some work to do on the bylaws," he told selectmen.

Although selectman John DeBassio requested the planning board members sit down and discuss the issue with developer Thayer, selectmen answered that was not within their authority. They voted 3-1 to have the town plow and sand the road at 100 Pond Street. Planning Board Chairman Bassett told selectmen the board will make a definite move to develop firm agreements with future developers, so similar confusing situations will be avoided.

Fuel asssistance

Joseph Kennedy, II, of Marshfield, president of Citizens Energy Corporation, has announced a new brochure containing information about the Fuel Assistance Program and home energy conservation is available.

Citizens Energy Corporation is a non-profit energy company that provides low-cost oil to the state of Massachusetts. This oil is distributed by Community Action Agencies through the Federal Fuel Assistance Program. Though hundreds of thousands of families in Massachusetts receive this assistance, there are still many who are eligible but who have never applied.

In addition to describing the fuel assistance program, this brochure provides low-cost and no-cost weatherization tips for the home. These conservation ideas are easily implemented and can save the average homeowner a few hundred dollars each year with little or no capital investment.

For a brochure write: Joe Kennedy, Citizens Energy Corporation, P.O. Box 1900, Boston 02205.

Bausch & Lomb Science Award

John Rattenbury of 1 Briarwood Lane, was named winner of the annual Bausch & Lomb Science Award last week at Cohasset High School. The Science Award - a bronze medal - is presented each year to winners at more than 8,700 participating schools throughout the United States and Canada.

"The Bausch & Lomb Science Award is especially significant," according to Richard T. Streeter, Principal who made the presentation, "because it recognizes the senior student at our school who has attained the highest scholastic standing in science subjects."

As winner of the Award John is eligible for one of several four-year Bausch & Lomb Science Scholarships at the University of Rochester, Rochester, N.Y. Scholarship winners are selected on merit, and stipends, based on need, could range up to $7,500 per year. Surveys indicate that the Award has encouraged more than 30 per cent of the winners to follow scientific careers.

Gardeners Meeting

The Amateur Gardeners of Cohasset will meet Dec. 18 at the home of Ruthven Walsh, Deep Run, for their annual Christmas party.

The party will start at noon. Members, please remember to bring a handmade or homecooked article and a Merry Christmas poem, for a Christmas exchange. Mrs. Lydia Kanzler will be co-hostess with Mrs. Walsh.

Tryouts for "Morning's At Seven"

The Cohasset Dramatic Club will continue its 64th season on Cohasset's historic Town Hall stage with a production next March of the Broadway hit play "Morning's At Seven".

Written by playwright Paul Osborn, the Cohasset presentation of "Morning's At Seven" will be directed by Denise Ripley.

Tryouts for the play will be held at the Cohasset Town Hall Sunday Jan. 6 at 2 p.m. Playbooks will be available at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, Cohasset.

Performance dates for "Morning's At Seven" are Friday March 1, Saturday March 2 and Sunday March 3.

The Cohasset Dramatic Club invites all interested in reading for roles in this forthcoming production to attend the Jan. 6 tryouts.

Music Circus gift certificates

Offering the gift of music, laughter and dance, Christmas gift certificates valid for the 1985 35th anniversary season at South Shore Music Circus in Cohasset are now available by mail, phone and at the theatre's business office.

Available in any amount starting at $10, certificates may be used in the spring to purchase tickets to any attraction of the 1985 summer season. Information on the theatre's Inner Circle Club and Season Tickets is also available.

Music Circus producer Ron Rawson commented, "Our gift certificate program grows in popularity each holiday season. Music Circus patrons find our certificates to be the perfect gift for any number of people, from family and friends to valued business associates. And because the recipient uses the certificate to see a favorite performer, it's a gift that's sure to please."

Patrons may purchase certificates with a major credit card by calling 383-9850 during business hours. If ordering by mail, patrons should send a check in the chosen amount, adding a $1 handling fee, to Gift Certificates, Box 325, Cohasset, Ma. 02025.

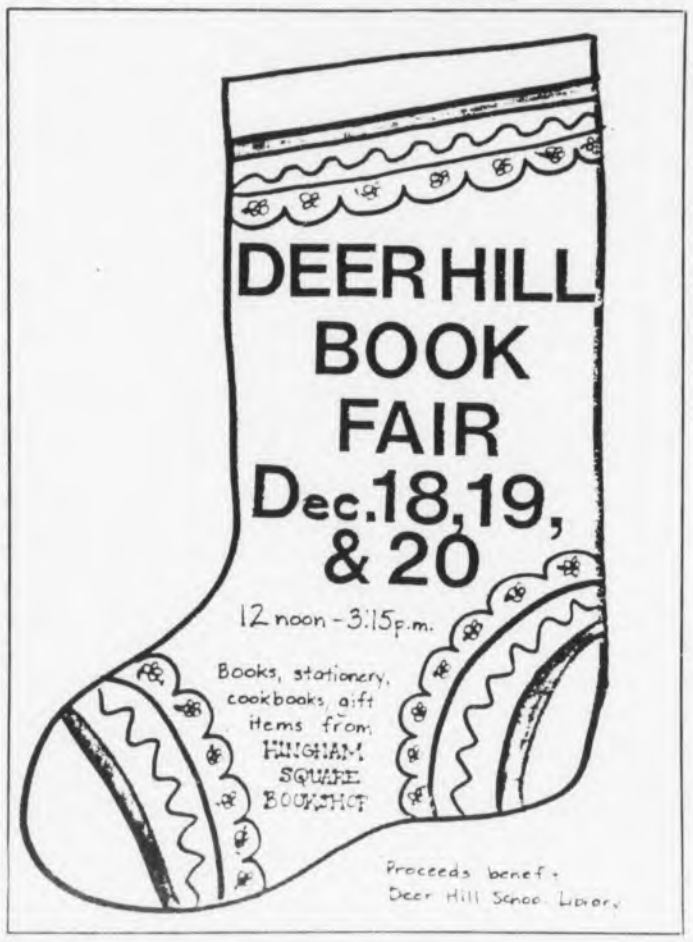
Art grant to Deer Hill



The Deer Hill School in Cohasset will receive a total of $1,350 in funding from the Cultural Education Collaborative's Institute for the Arts.

The awards are made possible through one of the institute's state-wide funding programs: Events, single visits by artists from a variety of disciplines; Artists-In-Residence who work in schools for one to eight months; and Art Partnerships, programs developed among artists, cultural institutions and schools.

Representative Mary Jeannette Murray said, "I am very pleased to announce that Deer Hill has been acknowledged in this manner by the Cultural Education Collaborative's Institute for the Arts. In recognizing the essential role that arts education plays in the growth and development of our children, continued support is needed throughout the Commonwealth."

The Institute for the Arts, in offering its financial and technical resources, supports and provides quality arts education programs, for learners of all ages throughout the state. Funding for the institute is provided by the Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities, a state agency.

State support is matched by funds raised in Massachusetts cities and towns for the support of local programs. Additional contributions from foundations, corporations and individuals make the institute a model for collaborations between public and private funding sources.

In order to help these wonderful people the Special fund is raising money by a raffle with the prizes being none other than two Cabbage Patch Kids. The drawing will take place on Dec. 18 (in time for Christmas) and the tickets are $1:00 a piece or 6 tickets for $5.00. There were only 750 chances printed, so your chances are excellent of winning one of the dolls. Call Linda at 383-0289 for more information, a ticket, and your support!

☐During half-time ceremonies in Orchard Park, New York, in the NFL game between the Buffalo Bills and the Indianapolis Colts, Chris Keating was selected as the NFL man of the Year. The selection was made by Chris' teammates and fans, and was in recognition of his work for charities and youth during the past year. Chris was chairman of the committee which raised funds for the Ronald MacDonald House, chairman of the successful fund raising effort to raise money for a Viet Nam memorial in Buffalo and participated in many telethon and radio shows for charities in the Buffalo area. In addition he joined in fund raising efforts in New Jersey and Colorado. This is Chris' sixth year in the NFL, and he is having one of his best years as outside linebacker, despite the losing record of the Bills.

☐Rosanne Ring, director of volunteer services at Massachusetts Eye and Ear Infirmary, was honored at a recent service award ceremony for fifteen years of service in the Infirmary.

☐Happy Birthday to Dan Curran.

☐Ros Farbush was among the artists from the North Shore, South Shore and Cape Cod recognized recently at the Copley Plaza Hotel. She received the John Singleton Copley Award.

☐Happy Birthday to Bill Kurtz and to Cinnamon Jones, born Dec. 1 and Dec. 3. And congratulations to Charlene Kurtz and Joe Gardner who were winners in the Jack Pot at the Cohasset News Store.

☐Caleb Slotnick has to be one of the proudest young men around the town! He just came back from ceremonies recently, that took place in Oklahoma, where a section of Route 66 was named after his grandfather. Caleb's grandfather was Admiral Joe Clark, and the section of highway is in Chelsea, Oklahoma. Admiral Clark is a native son of Oklahoma, and had a ship named after him (the USS Clark), as well as being famous for having been on the cover of Life Magazine. Caleb was present for the dedication, as were many others, including "real cowboys and Indians". Its no wonder that Caleb is so proud of his grandfather!

☐Never has downtown Cohasset been so busy, and the mood has been a festive one! Many got their first look at a camel, got a chance to tell Santa the most important present on the list...the animals on the Common were so neat. Sunday was spectacular. The merchants of our town really outdid themselves, as "kids" from six to sixty will attest to. A great time was had by all. The carolers helped to make the majic, as did the carillon, and all were in the Christmas Spirit when the day was done.

☐"Cinderella" was a smash, if you didn't get to see it, be sure to catch it this weekend. All of the cast's efforts paid off, don't miss it.

☐The following residents recently graduated from Fisher Junior College at the Duxbury Campus: Gretchen M. Lincoln, who received a Medical Assisting Certificate, and Deborah B. Protulis, who was awarded a Medical Assisting Certificate.

☐Allison Elizabeth Scott was born Dec. 7 at South Shore Hospital to Ann (Stanford) and John Scott of Weymouth. Allison's grandparents are Florence and Joseph Stanford of Cohasset and Irene and Frank Scott of Weymouth. Welcome Allison.

☐Dave Barcomb was recently awarded the trophy for season's high scorer of the Williston-Northampton School football team. From his quarterback position, Dave threw nine touch down passes, and scored seven touch downs rushing, while leading Williston to a 6 and 2 season.

He is also starting guard on the Williston basketball team.

☐Kate Bishop of Cohasset, attended the Fall Open House for prospective students at Wheelock College, Boston, Nov. 17. A student panel presentation, campus tours, and workshops on field placements, career planning and financial aid were part of the day's activities.

☐That's the news for this week. Keep those phone calls coming.

Toy Drive

The Osgood School is sponsoring a Toy Drive to benfit needy children under the care of the Department of Social Services' Coastal Area office. Please contribute a new or like-new toy to Santa's toy box in the Osgood hall. There are nearly 100 children in neighboring towns who will celebrate this Christmas with joy thanks to your generosity.

Holiday Concert

The Deer Hill School Holiday Concert will be held Tuesday evening, Dec. 18, at 7:30 p.m. in the Cohasset High School Auditorium. Performing will be the Deer Hill Chorus, Deer Hill Band, and the Concert Choir.

Crotched Mountain ski trip

Come celebrate the end of the first semester exams; join the seventh-eighth grade ski trip to Crotched Mountain Sunday, Feb. 3. The original eighth grade ski trip planned for Jan. 6 has been rescheduled for Feb. 3 and is now open to both grades. The Jan. 6 date came just too close to the end of the Christmas vacation.

Seventh and eighth graders are encouraged to participate in this junior high ski trip to Crotched. The cost is $25 for lift, lesson and transportation and $30 for lift, lesson, rentals and transportation.

Participants will be asked to sign up after the Christmas vacation. Parents should look for a form to come home with their students. In order to facilitate the rental procedure, information on weight, height, shoe size and skiing ability will be submitted to Crotched prior to Feb. 3 so equipment is ready.

Transportation will be provided via a bus coach which will leave town hall around 6:30 a.m. and return around 6: 20 p.m.

Katie Lord, vice president of the eighth grade, encourages seventh and eighth graders to participate in this ski trip. "It's a good chance to ski and have a fun time," she said.

The trip has been sanctioned by the school and the eighth grade student advisor Edward Leach is working with the students.

Further announcements will be made as to when reservations and money have to be in.

Let's be done

Yes, there are flaws in the proposed education reform legislation. Big ones.

But we hope, for the future of public education in this state, that it is approved. Let's be done with it. The time is past. Lay it on the table, vote on it and hit the gavel. For the sake of public education, let's follow the lead of other states and attempt to revamp our sagging public educational system.

One controversial aspect, among many in this proposal, is that it will take local control away from the individual school systems. Gone will be the days of local authority by the parents, teachers and school committee over our local schools. The big, bad state is going to creep in and regulate what will and will not be taught in our schools.

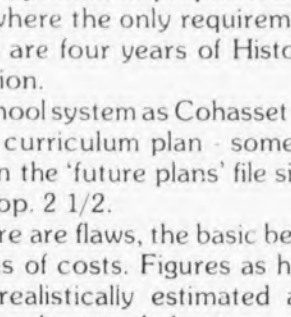
For the state to mandate a curriculum for each school district may not be as preposterous as it sounds. Not in a state where the only requirements for a high school diploma are four years of History and one of physical education.

In as fine a school system as Cohasset is purported to be, there is no curriculum plan - something that has been lingering in the 'future plans' file since before the onslaught of Prop. 2 1/2.

Certainly there are flaws, the basic being the horrifying expectations of costs. Figures as high as a billion dollars, more realistically estimated at about $500 million, have been bantered about.

Whatever the cost, the state must determine an equitable and appropriate manner in which to solicite funding to all communities. The premise of this proposal is to upgrade all school systems, particularly within the poorest communities.

Gov. Michael Dukakis has repeatedly stated his committment to improving the educational system in this state. We have all been hurt by 2 1/2, Cohasset and Scituate to a lesser extent than some larger communities. But we are still hurting.



Teachers who have been laid off through a lack of seniority, who have been swept from our schools by a promise of higher salaries and a solid future, are turning to private industry. Math and science teachers are at a premium. What are we to offer our children in these areas when there may not be qualified teachers to instruct them? We have to lure them back to education.

This bill would compensate the teachers at a more decent salary level, while providing a peer evaluation system to ensure the quality of our professional teaching staff.

Yes, there are flaws - among them a gnawing sense that local control will be eaten away. But has local control been such a thunderous success that we need not search for alternatives?

This is an earnest effort in the continual struggle toward the survival and success of the public education system.

The mathematics are simple. Denying this alternative leaves us none.

It's not Christmas without confusion

By Claire McDonough

"Don't you love Christmas?" I asked the Dragon. "The joy, the love, the carols, the bells..."

"Bells, si," he replied. "Bills, no. Which reminds me, how are you coming with the Christmas shopping?"

I glared at him. "Where is it written that I get to do the shopping? How come you wait till everything's done and wrapped, then you find fault with what I bought?"

He shrugged. "Someone has to. And anyway, you're not being fair. I do some of the shopping."

"Oh, sure. You buy my present. And you get Breida to wrap it. That hardly puts you in the jolly old elf league."

"Look," he said reasonably, "I would have been happy to do the shopping, but you said you had a system. You were going to start in January when you could take advantage of the sales.

"Whenever there was a special during the spring or summer, you'd buy a gift, and by Thanksgiving everything would be wrapped and ready. Whatever happened to that plan? Didn't you shop the sales?"

"Of course I shopped the sales," I told him. "As a matter of fact, I finished my Christmas shopping at least three times this year.

"I even wrapped everything. Remember all those packages in our bedroom closet?"

"Vaguely," he replied. "But I don't recall seeing anything there for months."

"Of course not," I told him. "After all, all the people we buy Christmas presents for have birthdays don't they? It was great to be able to pull something out of the closet instead of going to the store."

"And you used up all the presents that way?"

"Not all of them. Some went to birthday parties the kids got invited to. When I came home from work and had to go to a meeting, did you expect me to go to the harbor to buy something for Skip to bring to Brendan?"

"Makes sense," he admitted, "sort of. But what about all the packages in the hall closet? Aren't you giving them to someone for Christmas? There's one with shiny blue paper and a silver ribbon, sort of oblong, that 'clunks' when you shake it."

"You touch that package," I hissed, "and I'll break your arm."

The Dragon looked smug. "I thought so. What about the other packages? Certainly you have something to show for your master plan, don't you?"

"Not really. I can't remember what's in four of them. And the ones I can remember aren't on anyone's list of suggested presents.

"The problem is, I bought the things they wanted when I shopped last spring. Now they've been reading the ads and watching commercials, and they all want different stuff now. Maybe I can buy new presents, and hope that some other year the merchants advertise the stuff I have in the closet now."

"If they do," the Dragon sighed, "you won't remember you have it. Are you terribly disappointed?"

I linked my arm through his and put my head on his shoulder.

"Not a bit. It wouldn't be Christmas without last minute confusion. And Jay and Sharon were here earlier and her due date is Dec. 25."

The Dragon smiled. "A baby really makes Christmas special, right?"

War on drugs in School

The Massachusetts Board of Education will attack the problem of substance abuse in schools on several fronts, according to Commissioner of Education John H. Lawson.

The Department's efforts will be assisted with a $100,000 appropriation by the state legislature for prevention programs in public schools, Lawson said.

Commissioner Lawson's announcement comes in response to the release of a Department of Public Health report to the Governor's Statewide Anti-Crime Council on Massachusetts high school student drug and alcohol use and a set of recommendations for the review and implementation of substance abuse policies and programs in Massachusetts schools.

Current initiatives approved by the Board of Education include:

- A substance Abuse Prevention Education mini-grant program which shortly will award small grants of $1,500 to $3,000 to thirty school districts which have applied for funds to plan and develop substance abuse prevention programs for students from kindergarten through grade eight.
- Grants from the Department of Education's Commonwealth Inservice Institute currently are available statewide for training school staff in the area of substance abuse prevention education programming, teaching methods, curriculum development, and materials selection. In the current fiscal year, the Department has funded inservice training programs in substance abuse prevention education (in cooperation with the Department of Public Health) in twelve school districts for a total of $23,173. In the past ficsal year 1984 the Department (in cooperation with the Department of Public Health) funded sixteen school districts to do inservice training for a total of $19,397.
- The Department of Education's Health Education Resource Bank which contains a listing of over five hundred consultant experts, materials, programs, and organizations, many of which are particularly helpful in developing and providing substance abuse prevention programs in local schools, is available by contacting any one of the six regional offices of the Department of Education.

Letter from a grateful man

(This article was written by St. Kitts writer, Frank Sharman, for former Cohasset resident Bernard Salvador. Salvador now is president of Caribbean Sea Investments, Ed.)

Open Letter to Prime Minister

My name is Bernard Salvador and I run a fishing operation called Caribbean Sea Investments, based here at New Town in St. Kitts. With my son Glenn, we also run a registered fishing boat which is called the Audrey PII.

It is in connection with this boat - and what happened to it during the recent tropical storm (which later became Hurricane Klaus) that I wish to place on public record my undying and heartfelt thanks to certain brave Kittitian citizens.

On a Tuesday at about 3 p.m., we returned to our mooring in Basseterre Bay after a fishing trip. The three man crew and my son Glenn loaded the inflatable dinghy with the fish they had caught and motored in to the shore.

As they beached, the tremendous seas overturned the boat, spilling all four men into the boiling surf, despite their efforts to hold the boat steady. The entire catch, for which the crew had worked so hard was flung into the sea, which also tore off the outboard motor and threw the crew head over heels, bruising them badly.

The following day, Wednesday, the winds had reached such a pitch that we could not reach our fishing boat at its mooring. We had wanted to put out additional storm anchors to secure the boat, but were forced to return to the shelter of the fish plant, which is located in New Town on Bay Road.

It was from the fish plant that we saw the Audrey PII break loose and start to drift rapidly towards the shore. My son Glenn and I jumped into our pick-up and raced along Bay Road to the house of Kenneth Samuel, a very enterprising local fisherman who had already proved many times to be a good and helpful friend.

Kenneth immediately came with us to the Deep Water Harbour, where we were met by Ralph Wilkins, the energetic and hardworking Government Fisheries Officer, whom we also knew and who had seen the boat break loose as he was on duty at the time.

The Audrey PII was being hurled about in the water and was getting perilously close to the concrete harbour walls.

On seeing the imminent danger that the Audrey PII was in, Kenneth Samuel, who is also a Master Diver, plunged straightaway into the raging seas and began swimming towards the stricken vessel.

After a few moments, Ralph Wilkins and my son Glenn also dove in and started to make their way through the mountainous seas towards the Audrey PII.

Thanks for record year

To the Editor:

Thanks to the generosity of thousands of local residents and the support of the local media, the United Way of Massachusetts Bay has completed its most successful fund-raising drive ever. We topped our goal for the third year in a row, raising $35,236,864 for a 10 percent increase over 1983.

The United Way South Region (19 communities south of Boston) also topped its area goal, raising $813,812 to support many United Way agencies serving local residents.

These record-breaking results are very gratifying because they come at a time when the demand for health and human services is rapidly increasing. More people than ever are seeking food, shelter, day care, home health care, alcohol and drug counseling, family counseling - and many other vital services that couldn't do without United Way funds.

More than one million people in eastern Massachusetts - one out of three - will be touched by United Way funds this coming year. That includes families, friends . . . and often ourselves.

The success of this campaign makes all of us winners because the quality of life in our community will improve as the delivery of health and human services improves. Thanks to you, it does work for all of us.

United Way South Chairman
Senior Vice President

Murray's memos

By Mary Jeanette Murray

Report from the State House

Winter is rapidly approaching, bringing with it colder temperatures. As a result, people are turning to additional heating sources to help supplement heating systems while keeping costs down.

One of the most popular heat supplements are space heaters. While they are very economical, they can also be very dangerous if not used properly. According to the Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC), fires from supplemental heaters increased by 85 percent between 1978 and 1982.

State fire Marshall Joseph A. O'Keefe has urged that no one, under any circumstances, use an unvented heater that runs on liquid fuel. These are currently banned for residential use in the state.

As of 1981, all unvented heaters are required to have an oxygen depletion sensor which would detect dangerously low levels of oxygen in the room and automatically turn the heater off. Purchasers should check for such safety features.

The CPSC has outlined precautions individuals can take to protect themselves and their families from the danger of fire and gas inhalation that such heaters pose. Manufacturers' instructions for installation and maintenance should always be followed.

If you are using a heater that runs on liquid fuel, the following precautions should be taken:

1. Only use dealer certified K-1 kerosene. Never use gasoline or other fuels.
2. Don't move the heater, remove the fuel tank or refuel the heater when it is in operation or still hot from use.
3. Only refuel the heater outdoors.
4. Don't fill the fuel tank above the 'fuel' mark.
5. No one should use the heater when they are asleep, confined to bed or not present.

When using a gas space heater, the CPSC has advised that:

1. If the heater is not vented, a window should be cracked and interior doors left open.
2. If vented, the venting system should be installed and maintained properly.
3. Manufacturers' instructions should be followed in lighting the pilot.
4. A match should be lit BEFORE the gas is turned on and, if the match does not light on the first try, the gas should be allowed to dissipate before a second attempt.
5. Upon smelling a lot of gas, the gas supply should be shut off and doors and windows opened. Electrical switches should not be touched nor should flashlights or telephones. Gas service should be sought from a neighbor's home.
6. Gas cylinders intended for barbeque or camper grills should never be used.

According to the CSPC, there have been two product recalls this year - the Patton Heater Plus Fan model HF-10 and Sears Heater Plus Fan model 201-7208. The slide control switch on the top of these products, sold between August of 1983 and March of 1984, may be faulty. The company will replace the product at no extra cost.

The second item recalled is a liquid propane gas heating unit, the Unitrol A-1 series of hot water heaters, on which safety control features can wear out. These heaters were made from 1946 to 1955.

Quilt News — The almost finished quilt will be on display Sunday after church and raffle tickets will be available. Those who have not turned in their money yet can do so at that time. All proceeds from the quilt raffle will go the Elevator Fund.

Gifts for Children — On the Sundays from now until Christmas, each person in our church is invited to bring a gift for a child. A warm pair of mittens, a winter hat, a scarf, underwear or socks - all of these things will be gratefully received by a local agency which will distribute them to children in need. Used clothing, especially if it is warm, will also be received. After you've given what you can to keep children warm, you may want to give a gift of another kind: a new toy, doll, or game which will be distributed by the Coastline Council for Children to families who are in need. If you wrap the gifts, be sure to label them (for example: "For a girl, age 3 - 5"). The Christmas tree near the sanctuary will be our "Gifts for Children" tree.

Ice Hockey

For the past two weeks the varsity hockey players have been faithfully practicing every weekday at 5:30 a.m. in preparation for their winter season. Coach Richard Izzo is not only impressed with his team's attendance, but with their enthusiasm as well. With this positive attitude, Izzo feels Cohasset will have a good season.

Cohasset has only three seniors on the team and as many as nine freshmen, thereby making it an extremely young club. As a result, this will be a building year for the relatively new team, and it may take a while before the boys mold themselves into one unit.

Izzo is optimistic about his season and is very pleased with the team's progress. The Skippers plan to win over fifty percent of their games this year, and qualify for the state tournament. Izzo believes that if Cohasset keeps up their hard work, their goal will be fulfilled.

The team will be led this year by senior tri-captains Troy Chatterton, Alex Ghetto and Danny Curran.

Cohasset's regular season opens up Wednesday at 6 p.m. at Cohasset Winter Gardens when the Skippers take on Sandwich. Saturday, Cohasset will travel to Abington and play at 6 p.m.

Gymnastics

Although their regular season doesn't open up until Dec. 19 against Hingham, the gymnastics team has been hard at work for almost two weeks now. Comprised mostly of 7th and 8th graders, the team is obviously young and looks upon this season as a year to build a strong foundation so that the program will be outstanding in the years to come. There is only one senior and one junior, among the team's 17 members.

Coach Andrea Palardy feels that although she had to start from scratch this year with many of the gymnasts, the team is capable of improving upon last year's record and doing much better this season. Palardy believes that in spite of such stiff competition as Scituate, Cohasset has a shot at taking second place in the South Shore League once the team learns how to work together.

This year, the captains of the team are fresheman Jane deLima, and the lone senior, Julia Sechen. Both of these girls are looking very good so far, and will hopefully lead the Skippers to a winning season.

Initial plans denied for Lily Pond

Members of Cohasset's planning board disapproved preliminary plans for proposed Lily Pond Estates, at their meeting last Wednesday night.

The Boards primary concern was voiced by director Chris Basset who stated, "I live in this town, I don't want my water to be polluted."

Her opinion is not unsupported. October 15 the Board of Health imposed a moratorium on the "Combined Watershed Area(including the Lily Pond Watershed Area . . .)", postponing construction of any new septic systems in the area until a watershed bylaw is developed.

Planning board members unanimously supported the moratorium, believing that until the highly sensitive area is studied more closely by engineers, construction poses too much of a threat to be considered acceptable. Board member Patrick Plante felt that until construction has been approved by the Board of Health, he could "not even consider approving this thing." Ms. Basset supported his position. "It is a critical area, it is currently under moratorium. I just can't see fooling around with a watershed area," she said.

Engineers for the Estates argued that through use of advanced technology, they could eliminate the possibility of negative effects to the pond. Some of their methods were described in brief, and include catch basins for runoff from roadways and parking lots, and an impressive sewage system. Attorney J.B. Markus, representing H. W. Moore engineers stated "the water that comes out of that system would be drinking water."

The next step for the Lily Pond Estates group is to file a definitive plan, according to Markus "that is exactly what we plan to do."

Basset repeatedly emphasized that while the area is currently under moratorium, she did not feel that it was the intent of the Board of Health to halt building in that area forever. "The key word to the developer," said Basset, "may be 'at the time'. I don't think you will never be able to develop there . . . It's a matter of planning and safeguarding for the future."

Also discussed at the meeting was the question of responsibility for the maintenance of roads at 100 Pond Street pending decision by the Board of Selectmen.

The cold weather is here. We've all closed our storm windows and turned on our furnaces. Many homeowners are increasing the insulation in their attic. All of these factors can contribute to a buildup of condensation in your attic and can eventually cause severe damage to your sheathing and rafters. The moisture will also soak your insulation, causing mildew and rot.
You can easily determine whether or not you have a moisture problem. Check the underside of your roofboards and the exposed nail ends for moisture or frost. Any moisture will indicate a need for added ventilation.
Roof louvres are inexpensive and easy to install and in a few weeks your attic will dry out. Added ventilation will also cool your home in the summer.
Finally, whenever you have roofing or siding done on your home, ask for a Massachusetts Builder's License and insurance. Both are required by law.

Arts advisory group

Last week the school committee voted to establish an Arts Advisiory Committee to assist in the development of a K-12 curriculum based on a proposed arts inventory/needs assessment.

The committee's formation is the first step toward implementing a new Arts Policy adopted by the school committee Nov. 7. Votedunanimously,the Arts Policy insures that a fair share of allocated resources will be assigned to the arts.

It states the school committee's belief that "the arts are an essential and fundamental component of a quality education." It says the committee supports the "strengthening and encouraging of arts at all levels by providing an education in the arts, and by giving emphasis to arts throughout the educational program."

The policy defines arts as: "Performance, such as music, theatre, dance; Visual, such as drawing, painting, sculpture, crafts and media; and Literary, such as poetry, fiction, or playwriting."

Goals for 1984-1985 suggested by the policy's developers, School Committee Member Martha Gjesteby, School Superintendent Eugene Crowell, and PSO Representative Karin Bartow, are: 1. To conduct an art inventory/needs assessment to determine what arts education needs are not being met, 2. Establish a School Arts Advisory committee to assist in the development of a K-12 curriculum based on the needs assessment, 3. Devise a long-term inservice education plan in the arts for teachers, specialists and administrators with the goal of training personnel in the arts, and in demonstrating the relationship of the arts to teaching the other disciplines, and 4. Establish a mechanism for annual evaluation of the effectiveness of the arts program.

The new advisory committee will include two teachers and one parent from the Osgood, Deer Hill and junior/senior high schools, one administrator, one school committee member, the METCO coodinator, three community members and the school superintendent as an ex-officio member.

Appointments to the committee will be made at the next school committee meeting scheduled for Monday, Dec. 17.

"Cinderella" Continues

The Cohasset Dramatic Club's popular "panto" style Christmas season show "Cinderella", will continue this weekend at the Cohasset Town Hall.

The two final shows will be at 8 p.m. Friday, Dec. 14 and at 2 p.m. Saturday afternoon Dec. 15. "Cinderella", which played to enthusiastic audiences last week, has been specially co-authored for this Cohasset production by Christian Science Monitor writer Rushworth Kidder and Hingham's Judy Holmes. Judy also is the play's Director.

The Stage Manager is Leslie McLeod-Warrick, set design by Scott Kethcham, and lighting design is by Arthur Paquette. Co-Producers of the show are Arthur Johnson and David Wadsworth.

Jan Higbee is Cinderella in this unusual English version of the old tale. Characteristic of English "panto" is the highly humorous approach to the story and the use of singing and dancing as well as audience participation. Author Kidder is the composer of the numerous songs including the audience sing-along song "It's A Wonderful Day".

"Cinderella" has a large cast including a number of children and is written for the young-at-heart of all ages.

Tickets for the Dramatic Club's Town Hall performances are $4 for adults, $2 for children 12 years and younger, and are available at the door or in advance at Fleming's, Cohasset Center.

Be sure to reserve one of the dates, either this Friday evening or Saturday afternoon, to bring the entire family to see a performance of this unique presentation of "Cinderella".

Pre-Columbian crafts at SS Art Center.

Pre Columbian figures from the Tom Lucas collection are a new addition to the South Shore Art Center's "holiday shop." The Center's shop at 103 Ripley Road in Cohasset offers buyers an opportunity to find a unique gift.

All items are handcrafted by the Center's artists. Items include pottery, wreaths, ornaments, jewelry, post card reproductions of works by local artists, unframed paintings, prints, small sculpture, T-shirts and gift certificates.

The gallery shop is open Monday through Friday, noon to 4 p.m. and Saturdays, 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

'Eddie and Cruisers' have returned

year's successes.

The reason is height. Last year Minelli blended a mixture of players with great quickness and speed with tall players who could rebound and play tough defense.

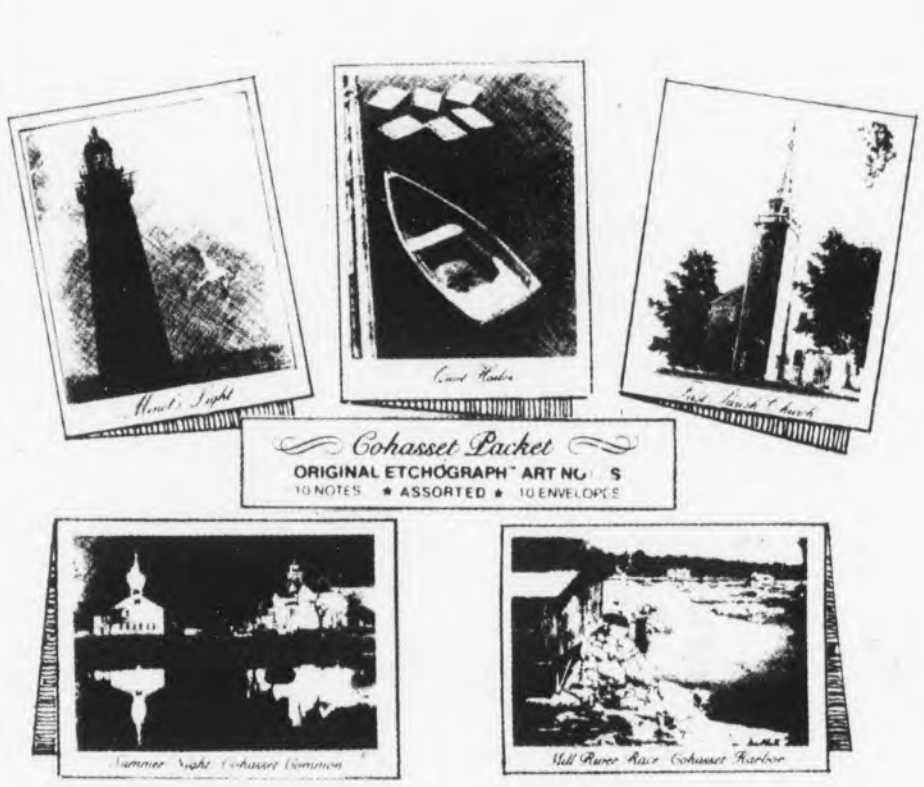
His bench was excellent and this gave him the flexibility to substitute. This year his players are again quick but the tallest player is Center Jim Creed, a 6-5 junior. His next tallest players are 6-3 and 6-2. Compare this with Scituate which may have a starting unit of players who are 6-7, 6-6 and 6-4.

"There's no doubt we are very quick and an intelligent team. But the questions this year are rebounding, depth and a proven bench. What if something happens to Jim Creed?" asked Minelli.

Another concern is the balance and overall strength of the South Shore League. "The league is the strongest its been in 15 years. Everyone is loaded with talent. Every team we will play is bigger but one thing we have is leadership and I'm very happy with the leadership provided by our tri-captains (Tony Bogarty, David Macdonald and Jim Creed," Minelli said.

The team is blessed with a great backcourt in Bogarty who is a high school All-American and who could be recruited by UCLA, Notre Dame, Georgetown etc. and other quick guards such as Brian Edwards, Floyd Hartwick, Bobby Schultz and Macdonald.

Because of the great abundance of guards, Edwards, 6-0 is is being tried as a forward. The next tallest player and experienced big man on the team is Phil Bernstein, a 6-2 senior forward.



Minelli said the most improved player on the team to date has been Schultz, a 5-8 junior guard who could likely be the team's sixth man and who could start on occasion.

The key to the success of this team is how the next five players work into the offense and defensive flow of the team.

The rookies include Andy Staumer, a 6-2 junior forward, Mark Crough, a 5-10 junior forward, Tom Larson, a 6-0 sophomore forward, Todd Trautwein, a 5-10 junior guard and Steven Fries, a 6-3 senior center.

One promising aspect this preseason has been the success of the team against Archbishop William and Durfee and other good private basketball schools. Minelli will know a lot more about the future of this team when the squad opens up Dec. 12 against Jamaica Plain, Dec. 14 at Hull and Dec. 18 in the home opener against Middleboro.

Christmas Concert Tickets Tickets are now on sale at the church office at $3.00 for our annual benefit Christmas concert. The concert will feature "Saint Nicholas" by Benjamin Britten (first performed in 1948) with Carolyn Curtis and Lila Hodges, piano, Carolyn Curtis, organ; plus Gregory Bouchard, tenor soloist, a string quartet, a large percussion section (timpani, several drums, cymbal, gong, triangle, whip and tambourine!) Also 23 children's voices in the role of small boys brought back to life by St. Nicholas after they were slaughtered by a wicked butcher.

The piece describes various episodes in the life of the legendary saint, (who is patron-saint of children, seamen and travellers, and is universally known to children in his disguise as Santa Claus). The most exciting section describes a storm at sea in which all are fearful of death until God calms the waves in response to Nicholas' prayers.

The concert will also involve elaborate carol arrangements—new and familiar—for all to sing together.

To date we have 45 patrons. If you wish there is still time to become a patron of the concert by making a contribution of $25.00. Patrons receive two complimentary tickets. Don't miss out on this opportunity to benefit a good cause and to enjoy some beautiful Christmas music.

Parish News: Our congratulations and thanks to all who worked on another very successful Village Fair. Indications are that income even surpassed last year's record amount. Particularly, we appreciate the efforts of our two Central Committee members, Linda Summers and Megan Phelps.

Looking for Work? The Unitarian Universalist Association has two job openings—one for Director of Information and another for General Assembly Administrator. Call the church office 383-1100 for details.

Poinsettia - Please call the church office 383-1100 if you wish to donate poinsettia to decorate our chancel table Christmas Sunday and Christmas Eve.

Reminder - of the Christmas Pageant and Party Dec. 16. Families will worship together at 10:30 a.m. and then come to the Parish House for the party. Remember to bring mittens for our mitten tree.

The Youth Group is raising funds by selling a charming chocolate cottage all decorated for Christmas. These can be ordered any time until Dec. 16. The price of this special treat is $10.00, a portion of which goes to Oxfam America. This house makes a terrific holiday centerpiece as well as a sweet gift.

Music Notes: Sunday, Dec. 16, we will have our annual Church School Christmas Pageant during the morning worship. While we have had the Youth Choir sing for this in the past, this year we are having a special group of young people brought together for the specific purpose of singing and playing carols for this service. They are former Youth Choir members gone on to the business of high school and junior high.

Theology for UU Women is the theme of the 1985 Biennial Continental Convention of the UU Women's Federation. The convention will be June 14-16, 1985, at Agnes Scott College, Atlanta, GA. A noted theologian from outside the denomination and three UU women will spearhead an exploration of feminist theology and spirituality. Workshop topics include Acting Out Your Theology; Odessy: Personal Spiritual Journeys: Who Started the Feminist Fire? and How to Use Feminist Theology in Worship.

The program is designed for all UU women and men, both UUWF members and nonmembers. To be placed on the mailing list to receive more information, write UUWF, 25 Beacon St., Boston, MA 02108.

Human Rights Program

Dr. Loretta Williams, Director of Social Responsibility of the Unitarian-Universalist Association, will speak on "The Post-Election Human Rights Agenda" at a special Human Rights Week program. This project is sponsored by the New England Human Rights Network of American Friends Service Committee, at the International Institute, 287 Commonwealth Avenue, Boston, from 7-10 p.m., Thursday, Dec. 13.

Dr. Williams is on the Greensboro Justice Committee, the National Council of Churches Racial Justice Working Group, the editorial board of Christianity and Crisis, and served as a panelist at the International Association for Religious Freedom in Japan in August.

Once upon a time, not so far away,

a brave Copper King built an enchanted kingdom in a land by the sea.

There in Scituate, he surrounded his mansion with idyllic pastures and formal gardens. Then built a fairy tale tower to watch over his dream.

Some said he was eccentric. Others said he was vain. But in truth, the legendary millionaire, Thomas Lawson, was building a beautiful haven as a gift for his beloved family. And in 1903, Dreamwold came true.

Now it's coming true again.

All the majesty, privacy and splendor that was Dreamwold. In twenty-six unique Victorian condominium residences encircling a spectacular rose garden and beautiful swimming pool.

Dreamwold. A magnificent blend of historic restoration and new construction as only Boston's premier developer, Parencorp, could do.

This fall, Dreamwold is available at pre-completion prices, starting in the mid-100's. Visit Dreamwold between 11:00 AM and 6:00 PM daily for a personal presentation. Or call 545-0222 or 731-5570 for more information. It's coming true again. The new Dreamwold. Soon to be a legend of its own.

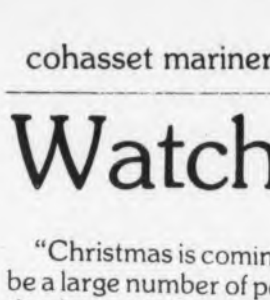
Watch out for Santa in business suit!

"Christmas is coming soon, and that means there will be a large number of people trying to convince you that they're really Santa Claus in a business suit."

With those words, Secretary of State Michael J. Connolly warned potential investors about abusive and fraudulent tax shelter schemes which are marketed aggressively during this season, as the tax year comes to its conclusion.

"What appears to be a lucrative Christmas present often leaves the investor with an empty stocking," Connolly said. "This is the time of year many tax-conscious investors are searching for tax shelters, and the careless ones can lose a lot of money, as abusive deductions become disallowed by the Internal Revenue Service."

Connolly added that some investment programs claim tax savings as high as eight times the original investment. "My Securities Division and the IRS watch these shelters very closely," he said. "When the shelters are disallowed, investors can expect to lose their cash investment and the promised tax deduction, as well as to pay IRS interest and penalty charges and even be liable to make payments on loans that were part of the scheme. Massachusetts investors are bilked out of $10 million a year through such fraudulent tax shelters."



This year, Connolly noted, his office has seen an increase in the number of abusive oil and gas offerings, as well as real estate deals with heavy amounts of accrued interest. However, he said the so-called "hot item" for 1984 is investment in syndicated films and television programs. In that scheme, Connolly said investors actually buy into the production and are promised as much as a 5-to-1 write-off. However, he added the benefit to the consumer is nebulous at best, and there is no way to determine what the return on the investment will be.

Typically, the promoters of fraudulent tax shelters advertise in local and national newspapers or send ads through the mail. Another very common scenario is the "cold call' in which dealers make unsolicited calls to potential investors about a supposedly lucrative deal. Connolly warned the consumers to consult only with reputable business persons and securities dealers and never to purchase anything over the phone.

"Last December, the Securities Division handed down seven orders banning illegal offerings," Connolly said. "The month of December is by far the worst in terms of questionable deals designed to cater to the consumer's desire to find an easy write-off on his taxes."

Connolly added, "We would strongly caution anyone trying to save on taxes through investments in tax shelters to look closely at the underlying economics of the deal. If it does not seem likely that you could make money, regardless of the tax write-off possibilities, this should be a warning sign to avoid the deal. And, if you are promised that the IRS will send you back more money than you initially invest in the tax shelter, chances are you're buying trouble. The rule of thumb is not to invest in any tax shelter if the write-off ratio is larger than 2.2 to 1."

If potential investors have any questions or concerns about tax shelter deals, Connolly advised them to call the Securities Division of the Office of the Secretary of State at (617)727-3548.

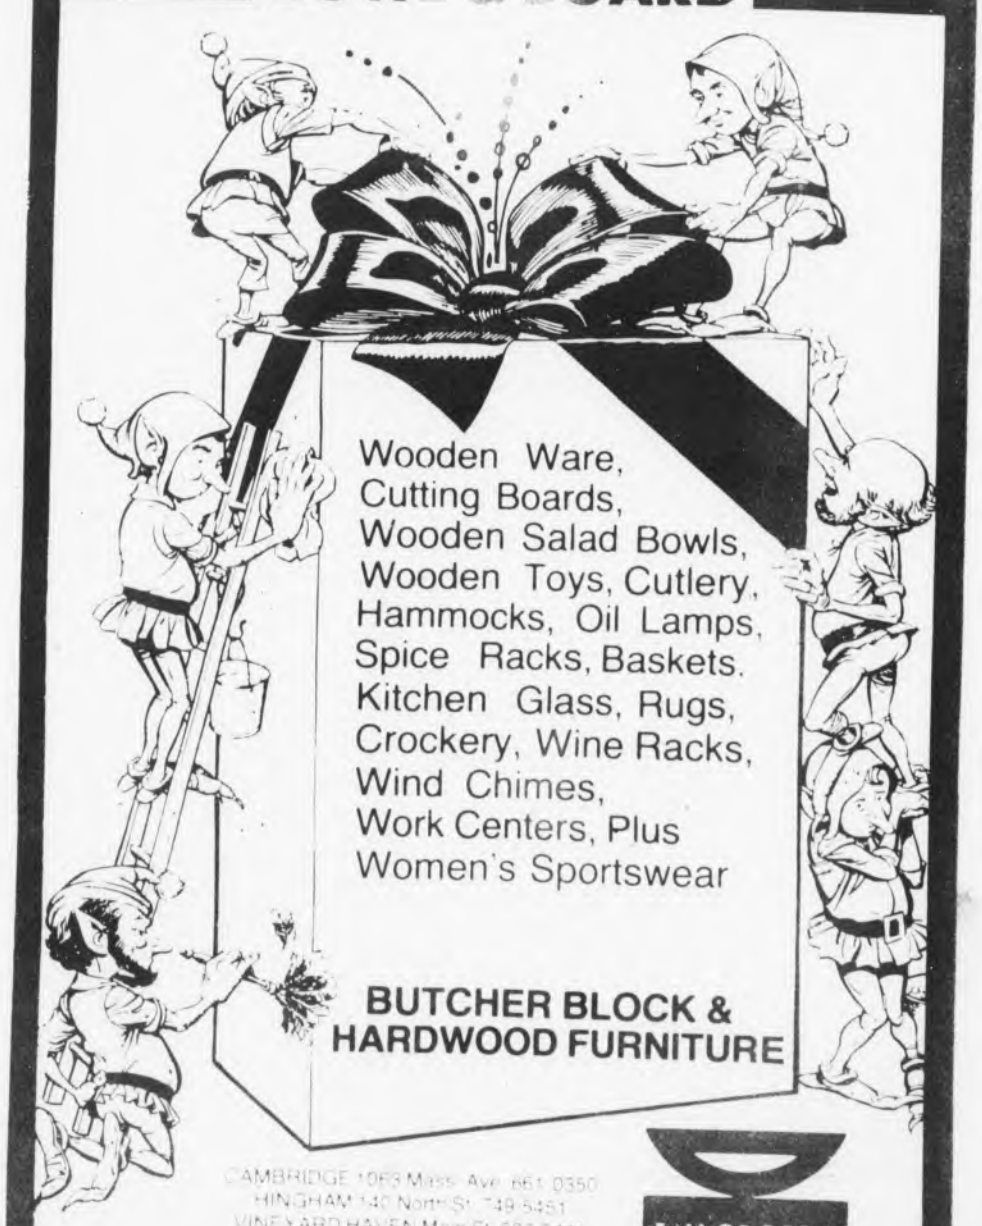
You've built equity in your home . . .

The equity in your home (the difference between the amount you owe on your first mortgage and what your home is really worth) is an asset often overlooked.

You worked for your home...now let your home work for you. Our loan officers will be pleased to talk with you about taking advantage of this ideal money source.



A loan on this equity can pay the tuition for your children's education, buy or build a recreational home, allow you to take advantage of investment opportunities, and even help you assume an existing mortgage on a new home. We can assist with any worthwhile financial need.

You have built equity in your home — why not use it???

Like none you've seen

By Corinne A. Kutish

The story of Cinderella is well-known but Cohasset Drama Club's version is like none you've ever seen — it's a joy for both children and the children in us all.

Debuting last weekend at the Cohasset Town Hall, "Cinderella" will continue Friday, Dec. 14 at 8 p.m. and Saturday, Dec. 15 at 2 p.m.

Written by Rushworth Kidder and the show's director Judy Holmes, this "Cinderella" appeals to children, who will enjoy the traditional story line and the slapstick comedy of seeing male actors play the parts of the two ugly step-sisters. Meanwhile, the adults will be laughing at the clever puns incorporating the names of towns and events familiar to us on the South Shore.

This "Cinderella" takes place in the mythical kingdom of Gopastit on the coast of Lesserchewsets. Geographically speaking, it's located north of Rushwell and Waxbury.

The characters are a little topsy-turvy as well. First, there's Baron Stoneybroke, an impoverished inventer, played impeccably by Derek Holmes. The inventor of such greats as the knitted salad bowl, he has the good fortune of having a beautiful daughter, Cinders, played elegantly by Jan Higbee.

But he has the misfortune of having two ugly step-daughters, Nausea and Nostalgia, played hysterically by Bob Julian and James McLeod-Warrick.

Nausea has the humorous habit of transposing the first letters of words, while Nostalgia plays nasty little tricks on her unsuspecting sister.

Of course, since boys play the parts of women, women play the parts of men. As Prince Charming, Sally Rossi-Langer is an extremely attractive prince with an enviable pair of legs. Sarah deLima plays her (or is it his?) steadfast friend.

A real switch from other plays where the audience sits passively, this "Cinderella" asks the audience to participate. When the actors shout out, the audience is expected to answer.

Now that's an Ugly Sister! It's actually Jim McLeao-Warrick in 'Cinderella.' (Jack Foley)

Cinderella (Jan Higbee) listens to a serenade performed by Scott Ketcham (Jack Foley)

"Those ugly step-sisters are so mean," says the young inventor Popandorus Buttons, played by Scott Ketcham.

In return, the audience shouts back, "How mean are they?"

"They're so mean they beat eggs with a baseball bat," Buttons answers. (Well, not all the jokes are great, but they certainly keep your interest.")

Scene after scene of this "Cinderella" is wonderful silliness. Case in point was the arrival of Cinderella's fairy godmother, played by a droll Alice Duffy. She arrives in Cinders' kitchen wearing a daffy blue hat, cape, flowered dress and sneakers.

"Oh, I know," she says knowingly, "you want to know where's my wand and sprinkledust. Now, where would I get sprinkledust on the Southeast Expressway?"

Bob Julian and James McLeod-Warrick are at their funniest as they dress for the big ball in anticipation of meeting Prince Charming. To the music of a slow bump and grind, the two slowly strip off leg warmers and skirt. In last Friday night's performance, McLeod-Warrick also lost his wig, a mishap that even got Jan Higbee as Cinderella to start giggling.

Special mention must also be given to Tamsyn Elliott and Leslie McLeod-Warrick as the splendid singing duo known as "The Cook's Night Out." Never could you imagine that a recipe could be set to music so cleverly.

Sally Rossi-Langer and Sarah deLima do admirably in their male roles, their innate femininity adding a amusing touch. Their duette "What's a Friend For?" gets your toes tapping.

There are also a slew of very talented children in this production, including Stephanie Holmes as Kitty, Cinderella's remarkable cat, and Caroline deLima, Hope Gaston, Lindsey Tibbetts and Kaelin Wilson-Goldie as four equally remarkable mice.

Other cast members include Jane deLima as a royal bodyguard, Laura Doherty as a court attendant, Sydney Browne as Mrs. Toadcruncher, John Kuhn as a preacher, Gerald McNabb as a schoolteacher, Beth Perry as a young woman of doubtful reputation, and George Ela as Murk, the water seller, put out of business by the opening of the new Gopastit well.

Rushworth Kidder and Judy Holmes have done an outstanding job with their version of "Cinderella." If you can take time from shopping, you should give yourself a Christmas treat and go.

Tickets are just $4 for adults and $2 for children 12 and under, a real bargain. "Cinderella" continues this Friday at 8 p.m. and Saturday at a 2 p.m. matinee.

Book Open House

An Open House will be held at the Village Book Shop for Children, 763 Country Way, North Scituate, Saturday Dec. 15 from 3 to 7 p.m.

Marc Brown, author and illustrator of many popular children's books, will be at the shop from 3 to 4 p.m., and will autograph copies of his books.

A Hingham resident, Marc Brown's books include "Arthur's Eyes" and other books about Arthur, "Dinosaurs Beware", and "The Bionic Bunny Show" which he wrote with his wife, Laurene Krasny Brown.

The Open House will be hosted by friends of the owner, Joey Von Iderstein. These friends are members of the staff of the Hingham Public Library where Von Iderstein was assistant librarian in the Children's Room for the past four years.

A lifetime resident of Scituate, she has left the library in order to give full time to the book store. Refreshments will be served.

Appropriate steps to avoid risks of flu

With the approach of winter and the beginning of the cold-weather season, the Massachusetts Medical Society (MMS) today advised residents of Massachusetts to take appropriate steps to avoid the risk and effects of influenza (flu), which is expected to be more widespread in the Commonwealth this season than last.

Based on the most recent epidemiological and laboratory data, state public health officials and the medical community anticipate that influenza will be more prevalent during the upcoming winter season because the antigenic nature of two influenza virus strains frequently observed last year has undergone the usual drift toward new strains. The A/Brazil strain is now a new strain called A/Chile. The B/Singapore virus has drifted to a new form called B/USSR. The A/Phillipines type virus appeared in scattered cases last season, and is expected to occur again this year. Public health officials have warned that the appearance of these new viral strains raises the possibility of greater numbers of Massachusetts residents being affected by influenza during the 1984-1985 winter season. As a result, the state department of public health and the medical community at large suggests annual immunization (vaccination) against influenza, especially for those in "high- risk" groups.

In a report issued jointly by its public health and occupational/environmental health committees, the MMS advises its member physicians to make their patients fully aware of the risks associated with influenza and to encourage proper precautions well in advance of the influenza season which peaks in midwinter. Underscoring the importance and effectiveness of immunization against influenza, MMS President Frederick J. Duncan, Jr., M.D. said that "all Massachusetts residents, especially those in high-risk groups, should consider being vaccinated, because the vaccine is readily available, quite safe and painless to receive, and highly effective in providing protection against the flu." "The best approach is to consult one's personal physician and to discuss the appropriateness of flu vaccination on an individual basis," Dr. Duncan added.

Influenza illness is characterized by an abrupt onset of fever, sore throat and nonproductive coughing. Unlike many other common respiratory infections, influenza can cause extreme, general physical discomfort lasting for several days. It also can lead to more severe disease if there is any viral invasion of the lungs. During the peak influenza period in midwinter, high rates of acute influenza illness and lower respiratory tract infection usually result in dramatic increases in visits to physician offices and hospital emergency rooms.

Certain individuals are more at risk medically during influenza outbreaks. Those who, because of their age or underlying health status, are poorly able to cope with viral infection are more likely to contract influenza and often require medical attention, including hospitalization. These "high-risk" group persons should take special precautions to avoid infection by influenza virus, and should consult their personal physicians about the value of vaccination against influenza. For those individuals in the designated high-risk groups, annual influenza vaccination is the most effective means of preventing or weakening the infection.

In addition to high-risk groups, high priority should be given to immunization of those who provide medical care and essential community services, as well as to pregnant women and others in the community who should reduce their chances of acquiring influenza infection.

Because of its lower potential for causing fever reactions, only split (subviron) influenza vaccine should be administered to children under 13 years of age.

Nostalgia

These were special days of Christmas past

In the Dickensian glow of our warm kitchen we listened to the screech and crunch of wagon wheels on the hard-packed snow outside.

"Oh, why do you groan, said the wagon to the wheel we whilst I bear all the burden?"

This was Mama. She had a quotation or saying for stood every occasion that caught your fancy and made you think. You know there'd be a moral in it.

The erratic flare of a tall candle threw dancing shadows on our calcimined kitchen walls. The candle was the traditional gift from our butcher and was lighted after supper on Christmas Eve. Observing the Fast Day of our Church Calendar, Mama had served her customary main course of oyster stew — a rare treat to me.

After the dishes were done Mama said, "Bundle up now and we'll go out to see the lights."

On went six pairs of leggings, coats and hats. We crossed the street and skirted the edge of the woods, where we stood admiring Professor Norton's great white house. I guess you'd call it a mansion. All the draperies had been tied back and in every window from cellar to attic twinkled a flaming wax candle. Against its background of firs and spruces, the glowing home was a hosannah of welcome to the Christ Child.

We strolled around the hill down the road, and back home admiring and praising each house for their wreaths and bows and candles — but the most unforgettable was Professor Norton's.

Our own windows revealed the lamplight within and each was adorned with a laurel wreath and a red bow. As we reached home, our neighbor Mrs. Kelly stopped Mama. Her husband, P. Kelly, who drove a beer delivery wagon, was working late and she hadn't yet bought a Christmas tree. Whatever would she do at this hour?

As usual, the great problem-solver came up with the answer.

"Dorothy, keep your coat on," Mama said. "I'll watch her children while you go up to Harvard Square with Mrs. Kelly. I'm sure you'll find a tree.

We started out and combed every market and stand, meeting the same, "Sorry, sold out," place after place. The stores were closing as we left the Square. Almost ready to give up, I suddenly recalled the little florist shop. It was our last hope.

Yes, he had one! One forlorn little tree out in his greenhouse. We followed him. It wasn't any winner but to us it was beautiful. Well, it would be when we finished trimming it, we told each other. Then she asked how much. I shuddered. That Scrooge wanted a whole dollar for it! Oh my, I thought, how terribly cruel to poor Mrs. Kelly on Christmas Eve. I was near tears, but all the while she was rummaging in her purse and brought out a folded, wilted bill.

We carried the tree home triumphant and Mama let me stay up and help her trim it.

CHRISTMAS MORNING

"From Santa Closs to May-ree!"

Most families have a few funny little sayings or phrases that bring chuckles and smiles to their own. In our family the above remark is still used to this day on our gift cards.

It was Christmas morning and the McKillops, who lived upstairs, asked Mama to send all six girls up to watch their adopted daughter, Mary, receive her gifts. We climbed the stairs and sat in a circle around the tree.

Mrs. McKillop played her part with sweeping gestures. She had but one line. Reaching up, she'd lift a package off the tree, take a deep bow and exclaim, "From Santy Closs to May-ree!" Over and over came the words as the packages were opened and we all admired, until the last candy cane was in Mary's sticky hands and we were dismissed.

Mama met us at our door. We cried out, "We didn't get anything!"

"Shush!" There's plenty under your own tree. And don't you forget that Mary is an only child, poor thing. Now come and tell me all about it."

As we mimicked the performance, Mama started to laugh and we joined in and it has been a family joke ever since.

On our own tree were little twisted colored wax candles held by metal clips. Papa lighted them for a short while on Christmas morning as we sat on the floor and watched, admonished not to move an inch as they burned. Most of the trimmings were fragile German imports, shiny angels, trumpets and drums, a horn that blew and even a blue tinsel parasol with a real silk tassel. And of course the colored paper chains that we made in school.

One year Papa's friend, Frank Porter, sent Liz a set of books bound in soft leather with gilt edges. They were Dicken's "Christmas Carol" and Robert Louis Stevenson's "A Child's Garden of Verse." We weren't permitted to handle them. Mama or Papa read them aloud to us. Remember "I have a little shadow that goes in and out with me?" And the "friendly cow all red and white" and "The world is so full of a number of things"? I'm afraid we didn't appreciate fully the tongue-in-cheek endings to many of these.

CHRISTMAS DAY

We went as a family to the children's Mass in the small wooden church. Papa gave us pennies for the poor box and after Mass we stood and gazed with love and wonder at the creche wherein the Christ Child now lay.

A brisk walk home and the day was ours to play with our new toys. One year Esther got a small mission table (mission furniture was then in vogue) and two chairs and we each got a set of doll's dishes. We gave delightful tea parties. Mama made "cambric" tea and tiny squares of buttered bread. As the saying goes, we entertained lavishly — or thought we did.

The older girls helped Mama with the turkey, the fixings and the steamed plum pudding (of course, we had all taken a stir at the pudding in the making). Then with dignified ceremony Papa would open a bottle of port wine.

After dinner we could go out on our new sleds while Mama had a nap. Then at sunset we came in to turkey sandwiches and mince pie with hard sauce. Mama had a light hand with pastry. Liz was great at making coffee (she used egg shells to clear the brew) and the whole house was permeated with the most heavenly smells!

CHRISTMAS NIGHT

The house glowed with light and rang with carols while Liz's beau played our Baldwin piano. Frans could play anything you named, classical or modern, and we all sang. Then we heard voices from outside. The whole Francis family had arrived from down the street, wrapped in furs and carrying English lanterns. They were a portly people — Lilly and Missy, Carrie and Edie, Georgie and Billy. They stood caroling until we flung open the door and ushered them in. More wine was poured, more sweets nibbled, and more songs were sung.

They had bought gifts, one of which their own "family joke": a box of "scratch" wrapped in a gorgeous package. One of the boys in the family worked at the Necco plant in Cambridge and he could buy "seconds" at a very low price. These were chocolates which had been scratched or marred. When the recipient opened the box there was rollicking laughter and remarks. "He could surely have given her something better than a box of scratch!"

Those treasured evenings usually ended with "Silent Night" ringing out on the clear cold air.

Uncles and aunts, cousins, friends and neighbors coming and going — gifts and hugs and greetings — you'd wonder how the tiny house held them all. But Papa found chairs and Mama made places for everyone.

Those were very special days! Good night!

Merry Christmas to all!

Old fashion Christmas in Hingham Square

It will be a warm and wonderful old fashioned holiday celebration this Friday, Dec. 14, for the annual Christmas in Hingham Square observance. Bells will ring, brasses will sound, and everyone will have a chance to join in a traditional community caroling.

Susan and Carl Achille, managers of the Bowl and Board, are heading the committee in charge of the festivities, and they've put together a busy two hours of music and holiday spirit for this Friday evening.

South Street between Main and Central Street will, as usual, be blocked off from 5:30 to 8:30 p.m. that night. And passersby will be tipped off that something is about to happen when they hear the bells of the nearby Memorial Bell Tower begin to ring at 5 p.m.

The focus of the evening will be the community Christmas tree in the center of South Street provided, at cost, by Reed's Country Nursery. Putting it up and stringing the lights will be the task of the highway department, under the direction of superintendent Brian Sullivan.

The evening will begin promptly at 6 p.m. when the Christmas tree is lit in a brief ceremony led by the selectmen, in which they will announce 1985 as the town's 350th anniversary year. Residents may bring weatherproof ornaments for the tree and visit with Saint Nicholas.

Music has always been a big part of the Christmas in the Square celebration, and this year is no exception. The children's Kinderchor, under the direction of Margo Euler, will sing, and a brass choir, directed by Douglas Wauchope of the South Shore Conservatory of Music, will fill the night with music, both at the Christmas tree center of activity. And music will follow the shoppers everywhere, with a recorder group, a string trio and a flute ensemble at various stores. All shops in the Square will be holding their own festive open houses to celebrate the season.

New this year, a woodwind quartet from the Hingham Civic Orchestra will be playing at Old Derby, the home of the Hingham Historical Society. That august group will be holding an open house and welcome all to come and admire one of the town's best-known landmarks. And have a cup of cider while you stop.

If all this music makes you want to burst into song, you're in luck, for at 7:30 p.m. Euler will conduct a community carol sing. For those who have participated before, please bring with you the carol books that have been handed out in previous years.

The music continues Saturday, Dec. 15, as well, as Ted Haines brings his South Junior High band to perform on the lawn of the school administration building at 14 Main St.

S. S. Chamber creates business education group

A Business and Education committee was recently formed by the South Shore Chamber of Commerce. It is the intent of this group to see how business and education can work together to make sure that graduating high school seniors have the skills now and in the future to find a job they want.

Several proposals were presented from other parts of the state as to how partnerships could be created and maintained. In July, 1984, the South Shore Chamber of Commerce Board of Directors endorsed a plan presented by the Business-Education Committee to create an educational foundation. Those efforts were climaxed this month with the signing of the Articles of Organization and the adoption of By-laws which will allow the creation of the South Shore Regional Education Foundation. It will be a nonprofit, charitable, and educational organization under the General Laws of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, Chapter 180, which is filing for tax-exempt status under Section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code.

The foundation's charter states, "It shall enhance the educational and vocational services being provided in the geographical service area represented by the South Shore Chamber of Commerce. The foundation will operate programs designed to accumulate and disburse resources for the benefit of eligible educational and vocational institutions on the South Shore."

Mark Cullings, a member of the Hingham School Committee and the new president of the organization says, "The foundation's operations will be divided into two divisions, a funding division, and a business resource division. Each division will operate two separate programs."

The funding division, according to Warren Noble, vice president of Community Affairs at the chamber and a member of the board of directors for the foundation, "will operate a Mini-Grant Program providing cash grants to teachers. It will also operate an Organizational Grant Program that will provide operational grants to certain accredited organizations serving South Shore youth."

Cullings continues, "The Business Resource division will operate two programs that are non-cash in nature. 'BE FIRST' (Business-Education for Investing Resources in Scholarship and Training) is an adaptation of the adopt-a-school movement. The Career Awareness program is a comprehensive effort to promote greater understanding among youth of various careers, the worlds of work, and specific opportunities within the region."

The incorporators of the foundation include: Mark Cullings of the Hingham School Committee; South Shore Chamber of Commerce President John Doody; Dr. Eleanore Gowan, principal at Scituate High School; Lawrence Fitch, president of Jobs For Bay State Graduates; Terry Fancher, manager of Business & Transportation at the Chamber of Commerce; Warren Noble, vice-president of Community Development at the chamber; Peter Mollo, faculty coordinator, Dept. of Cooperative Education at Northeastern University; Amy Geogan, vice-president, Bank of Boston; and Ronald Zooleck, executive vice-president, South Shore Chamber of Commerce. General counsel for the foundation is Ron Cheney of Harrison and Maguire, P.C.

The foundation is now searching for its first business commitment. Interested parties should contact Terry Fancher at 479-1111.

Golden for enforcement commission

Senator-Elect William Golden filed today his first legislative initiative on behalf of the Norfolk-Plymouth District which stretches from Weymouth to Duxbury. Golden's initiatives dove-tailed with major campaign commitments to grapple with South Shore transportation issues and to insure environmental protection for the district.

Citing his concern that existing environmental laws designed to protect South Shore waters are going unenforced, the Senator-Elect has called for the establishment of a commission to review and improve legal procedures and enforcement resources which are presently available to enforce environmental laws but which go untapped. "At present, the law books are filled with lofty goals and objectives for environmental protection, but the paper has not sufficiently transferred into action or authority at the state, regional or local level to insure a substantial quality of life. Rather than write more rules, it is time that we get tough and enforce the many good environmental laws and policies presently available to us."

Golden also sponsored legislation for the creation of a special commission to investigate and to study acid rain and to adopt and implement a plan to reduce acid rain.

The Senator-Elect's transportation initiative includes provisions which would enable communities to withdraw from the MBTA under circumstances which constitute the collective wish of the community and which would permit the community to seek alternative transportation resources. The proposed legislation would also permit Massachusetts communities to establish a regional transportation authority similar to the authority established for the City of Brockton. Golden termed this bill "a drastic remedy for an extreme condition," citing continued problems plaguing the Red Line and the limited alternative bus or rail services for the residents of southeastern Massachusetts.

Senator-Elect Golden's rules reform initiative includes a call for a constitution amendment limiting the legislative session to six months. The proposal is designed to fuel the legislative process in an efficient manner and to avoid the lame duck sessions, the all night marathons and "feeding frenzy" atmosphere which traditionally occur at the end of the legislative year. Golden has also suggested that the legislature examine commensurate reductions in salary and other cost savings associated with such a move.

The Senator-Elect also co-sponsored a variety of bills with State Representatives for the communities in the district.

Appeal for Science Center contributions

As the year 1984 fades into the past, the South Shore Natural Science Center is making an appeal for contributions to continue operations and growth during the approaching New Year of 1985 and beyond.

Although the Science Center was fortunate to receive three grants this year, these monies are available for specific periods and some are restricted to specific program

There has been growth the last few years: the North River Cultural Resource program, a new bridge, a computer, changing exhibits, development of a Master Land Plan and an award-winning volunteer program. There is still so much to do: new guide books, new animal collections, construction of a new wing to house the library and nature shop and the implementation of bird blinds, bird gardens, peripheral trails and photography blinds.

The South Shore Natural Science Center is a non-profit organization, contributions to keep it strong and healthy can be mailed to the South Shore Natural Science Center, Box 429, Jacobs Lane, Norwell, 02061. For information, call 659-2559.

Shopping by mail

The Federal Trade Commission has established the following protections for consumers who order by mail:

- The item must be shipped within the time stated in the advertisement or, if no shipping date is specified: within 30 days of receiving the order.
- The seller must notify the purchaser if the seller cannot meet the deadline and must permit the purchaser the choice of a prompt refund or delayed shipment.
- If the purchaser chooses a refund, the refund must be made within seven days of receiving the request.
- If a second shipping deadline is agreed upon and cannot be met by the seller, the company must send a second notice. Unless the buyer signs and returns that notice, the seller must automatically cancel the order and issue a refund.

As deadlines for Christmas delivery approach, many consumers may want to order by phone to save time.

Massachusetts Senior Citizens should take particular care when ordering by phone because it is difficult for consumers to guarantee their rights in a phone transaction. Consumers should:

- Ask for a written confirmation of the phone order.
- Keep all receipts and a record of the order; the name and address of the company; item(s) ordered; date order was placed and the name of the publication where the ad appeared.

In the event that a consumer cannot resolve a complaint in this manner, the State Attorney General's Office of Consumer Protection can offer some assistance. Call (617) 727-8400 for more information.

ALA Tips

Car door lock frozen? Hold your key over a cigarette lighter or lighted match for a moment, then insert and open.

Don't jump-start your car on a cold morning unless you know how. An improperly attached jumper cable could cause serious harm to your car's electrical system.

Snowed in? If you run your engine while digging out your car, clear the exhaust pipe first.

The efficiency of every car battery, no matter how good, is reduced somewhat in cold weather. Help it out by shutting off lights, radio, heater fan, and windshield wipers before turning on the ignition.

In the push to get your car out and on the road as soon as possible, don't forget to turn on the heater and defroster once the motor is going, so they can be doing their jobs inside while you do the brushing and scraping outside.

PASSPORTS

When planning to travel to a country that does not require that you have a passport, it may be a good idea to take one anyway. For example, after a week of touring the ruins in Guatemala (a country that does not require a passport), you might decide to move on to Honduras (which does require one). Also, in case you ever find yourself in a situation where it is important that your American citizenship be established, the passport does so better than any other document. It is proof of our identity and nationality, whereas a driver's license may be proof of your identity but no proof at all of your nationality.

Here at COLPITTS TRAVEL CENTER in Scituate, many people have come and do come to us for various travel destination. So when we book a tour for you to almost anywhere, we know what you can expect. That's important to us. Feel free to come in to discuss your travel plans. You will find us conveniently located at 3 Brook St. We are open to serve you 9-5 Mon. to Fri.; Sat. 10-4 and by appointment. We can be reached at 545-4500 and 383-1717.

them, creating a sense of pressure on the other side to justify its contract offers.

According to Mitman, this is the first time, in recent years, that the police contract negotiations have been prolonged into a fact-finding stage. He emphasized that the decision made by the labor representative is not binding.

Police union members have argued for months that town officials have been attempting to weaken their contract benefits from previous years. They have also emphasized the fact that this was the first time a labor counsel has represented the town.

In addition, the firefighters have yet to settle a contract this year. Union members had complained that no meetings between the town and the association had occurred in several weeks.

Firefighters did not join police officers during last week's vigil at the selectmen's meeting. A spokesman for the department said the union members are working "in a decisive manner to come to a contract agreement with the town."

The fire department contract is separate, and is negotiated separately from the police.

How to reduce the heating bills

As winter approaches and temperatures go down, most of us see our energy bills rise. While there are dozens of effective, low-cost methods of cutting fuel bills (such a caulking, weatherstripping, and insulating) there also exist lots of simple, common sense solutions that won't cost you a cent.

1) Keeping the thermostat low keeps your fuel bills low. The best place to start saving money is your thermostat. Unless there are sick or elderly people in your home, keeping the temperature at 65-68 degrees during the day and 55-60 at night is quite adequate once you get used to it. If you are accustomed to higher settings, lower the dial a little each day to get used to the new temperatures gradually.

To better deal with the lower temperatures, move your bed against the inside wall, and move any chairs or couches 6-12 inches away from outside walls. If you are able to spend most of your time in the warmest room of the house, (usually the kitchen), you can set your thermostat by what is comfortable for that room. But never use your oven to heat your kitchen. That's like running your car to listen to the radio.

2) Cost free insulation. Open shades and drapes during the day only when and where your house is sunny. Make sure they are closed at night to keep in the warmth. Shut off heat to rooms (like bedrooms!) that aren't used during the day, and keep the door closed. Turn heat off permanently in rooms that aren't used at all.

Close up gaps that leak cold air — stuff a towel under your door, cover your mail slot, and keep your fireplace flue shut. Close doors to basements as well as to all closets and cupboards against outside walls.

Bank snow around the base of your house to provide insulation from the outside.

3) Make the heat you have more efficient. Make sure none of your heating vents are blocked by furniture or carpeting. If you have a vent directly beneath a window, make a diverter out of a shoebox and send warm air towards the center of the room. If you have a radiator, put some aluminum foil on the back of it to deflect heat away from the wall into the room.

Put pans of water near heat sources. If the room is more humid, you'll find you can do with lower temperatures. Keep vents and radiators clean (dust absorbs heat), and clean your furnace's air filters regularly.

4) Save money by saving hot water. Use less water — you'll use less energy. This means shutting off the faucet when brushing your teeth, shaving or washing dishes. It means taking a quick shower instead of a bath. Use hot water only when necessary. When washing clothes, warm or cold washes and cold rinses are generally sufficient.

Keep your water temperature down. Unless you have a dishwasher, keep your water heater set at 110 degrees. Heating water to 140 degrees and then having to mix it with cold water is like turning up your furnace and then opening a window.

Drain your water heater at least twice a year. The sediment that collects in it lowers its efficiency.

These small self-help steps can add up to savings but, of course, they can't change the fact that utility rates are simply too high. The ordinary people who pay utility bills have no say in setting utility rates. MASSPIRG and a number of other organizations are trying to establish a Consumer Utility Board (CUB) to give consumers a voice in setting utility rates. For more information on CUB, call Lynn Nesselbush at MASSPIRG, 423-1796.

Caucus seeks Salvucci's support on transportation

The South Shore Legislative Caucus will meet with state Secretary of Transportation Frederick Salvucci in an effort to seek his support on various transportation projects that will help make life easier for the South Shore commuter.

The group, composed of state senators and representatives from the South Shore, met Monday and agreed to invite Salvucci to Beacon Hill for a meeting by the end of 1984 to discuss transportation initiatives during the 1985 legislative session.

"The South Shore has been ignored too long on transportation issues," said State Rep. Frank Hynes, D-Marshfield, chairman of the caucus. Restoration of commuter rail, widening of highways, and the construction of a third harbor tunnel were among issues discussed.

The caucus also discussed several bills which are being filed and co-signed by caucus members. Senator Edward P. Kirby R-Whitman, explained his bill creating a transit authority which would be under the control of the Plymouth County Commissioners.

Kirby told the group that an authority is the standard way to deal with the state on commuter rail. The authority would handle the details with the M.B.T.A which serves as the state's commuter rail agency.

"The individual towns being served by commuter rail would not have to pay for an operating deficit," said Kirby. "The figures would be worked out in negotiations between the regional authority and the state, which has absorbed rail deficits since the implementation of Proposition 2 1/2," he said.

Kirby received support on his regional transit authority proposal from Representative Robert Emmet Hayes, D-Whitman, a member of the House Committee on Transportation. "The cost of reactivating railroad on the South Shore is only a fraction of the cost of most M.B.T.A. projects," noted Hayes.

Caucus members hope to proceed with commuter rail restoration on the South Shore following a special M.B.T.A. study on the subject. Rail service has been proposed on three different lines that formerly served commuters south of Boston.

"This matter has been studied, now it's time for implementation," said Hayes. Rep. Hynes noted that an administration decision on commuter rail is slated for January, and the meeting with Salvucci should come before that decision.

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, R-Cohasset, announced her intention to refile legislation calling for study of a monorail system that would extend to Hingham in her district.

Storm numbers

Five Massachusetts State Transportation agencies have announced public information telephone numbers for transportation conditions during winter storm situations.

These agencies include the Massachusetts Department of Public Works, the Metropolitan District Commission, Massachusetts Turnpike Authority, the Massachusetts Bay Transit Authority and Massport. All numbers are within the 617 area code.

MDPW: 973-7500 - For driving conditions on state roads and bridges; MDC: 727-7240 - For driving conditions on MDC-controlled parkways and boulevards; Mass. Turnpike: 973-7300 - Driving conditions on the Mass. Turnpike (Rte. 90); and MBTA: 722-5050 - (recorded announcements), 722-3200 (operator assisted), Status of service on Red, Blue, Green and Orange Lines; Bus and Commuter Rail operations.

Commissioner Robert T. Tierney of the Mass. DPW, the coordinating agency for the storm public information program, has requested that individuals rely on radio and television broadcasts as much as possible for storm information, calling the agencies directly only if the specific information needed is not being broadcast.

Tierney said that the DPW, MBTA, MTA, MDC, and Massport storm information lines are staffed either around the clock or for extended hours during serious weather conditions.

Santa helps open renovated surgical center

Santa Claus assisted South Shore Hospital officials at a 1 p.m. ribbon-cutting ceremony Dec. 11, to mark the opening of its newly renovated Ambulatory Surgical Unit. The unit has been specially designed to permit South Shore area residents to have minor surgery performed in the safety of a hospital setting and yet be home with family that evening.

In 1968, South Shore Hospital became the first community hospital in the Boston area to offer an ambulatory surgery program.

The Ambulatory Surgical Unit will use a new technique in these recovery rooms. As patients improve sufficiently, they will be moved from a regular hospital bed into a recliner lounger. They will then be reunited with a family member or friend, who will stay with them until the patient feels well enough to be discharged. Most ambulatory surgery patients are ready to leave the hospital within four hours of their scheduled surgery time.

While ambulatory surgery has proven to be a cost savings to both the patient and the hospital, not everyone can take advantage of its benefits. Patients who have diseases of the heart, lung, liver or kidney must usually be admitted overnight before undergoing minor surgery.

A designated free parking area off Fogg Road has been set aside for Ambulatory Surgical Center patients.

The new center is open six days a week, Monday through Saturday from 6:30 a.m. to 6:30 p.m.

measure which ensures that taxpayers don't get socked harder and harder as they move up in income. "So deferring income from '84 to '85 might be the

Harry Carey, chairman of the Massachusetts Bankers Association, has outlined these steps which thousands of taxpayers take late every calendar year to reduce their tax burden:

Charitable gifts, most prevalent during this time of year anyway, "must be made by year end to qualify for a 1984 deduction." Carey noted that contributions to charity are deductible dollar-for-dollar in the case of a monetary donation. And inkind contributions, items such as clothing and food. can be deducted according to their fair market value—even if they cost you less.

Paying on bills that are not due until next year may save you money in the long run if you pay them in 1984. This runs counter to traditional wisdom, which says that the longer you wait—short of incurring a late fee—the better off you are. "That remains true in most cases," Carey noted. "But some unique situations can come into play late in the year. Taxpayers who play their cards right can time their bill paying to take maximum advantage of what is called the 'zero bracket amount.' It warrants looking into."

No one likes to be reminded of it, but there are capital losses as well as capital gains. And if you have any such losses to claim, remember that they can be helpful in offsetting capital gains taxes. But again, it all has to be done by year end in order to benefit you as you grapple with tax forms during the first three and a half months of 1985.

The example of legally manuevering a capital loss is the stock market. "If you've lost money on a stock in 1984," Carey noted, "remember that you have to sell it this year to get the tax benefit for the loss. I'm not saying long-term 'buy/sell' stock strategy should be predicted on tax implications, but it's one factor to consider."

Deferring income, if that's possible, is an especially attractive alternative this year because next year marks the start of tax indexing. That, Carey pointed out, is the IRS way to go. for those in a position to do that."

Carey concluded that shoppers who take advantage of these and other year end tax manuevers "will be glad they did when next year's shopping season rolls around. It could mean a little more money in the pocket."

He also noted that many of the tax shelters now available may not be around much longer. "With all the talk in Washington about tax simplification, there's no guarantee on anything."

'Snoopy' is entertainment for whole family

By Lisa J. Messersmith

The Cohasset High School's premiere production of "Snoopy" last Saturday night proved to be a source of entertainment for the entire family.

Based on the comic strip "Peanuts" by Charles M. Schultz, "Snoopy" nevertheless takes its own course. The play consists of several short scenarios, each devoted to a particular idea or comic dilemma. At the end of each skit one or more characters sings a song directly related to the skit.

The experience for the audience is like viewing a live comic strip musical all in one.

The production reflects the unique personalities of Schultz's characters Charlie Brown, Snoopy, Linus, Lucy, Peppermint Patty, Sally Brown and Woodstock. The costumes are creative replicas of the clothes the comic strip characters wear in newsprint.

The characters in "Snoopy" also appear to be exact copies of their comic strip counterparts. The facial expressions which these actors and actresses are able to imprint on the audience are finely matched to the characters' true personalities. Charlie Brown's lost expression, Lucy's defiant brattiness, Linus' wonderment, and Snoopy's nonchalant attitude are clearly conveyed.

The music for the production is as much a character as the players. A piano on the set behind Snoopy's doghouse sets the mood at the beginning of the production even before the characters come out on stage. The unique, sophisticated music characteristic of the "Peanuts" cartoons, sets the scene in a more powerful way than the simple, colorful props themselves.

Several of the songs are exceptionally well performed. "Edgar Allan Poe," "Clouds," and "Where Did That Little Dog Go?" in the first act and "Great Writer," "The Big Bow Wow," and "Just One Person" in the second act, are accompanied by facial expressions and choreography which captured the audience, young and old alike.

'Snoopy' is for the whole family

All of the characters excluding Snoopy, played by John Kuntz, and Linus, played by Glen Hochkeppel, are played by two different actors or actresses who take turns for the three different productions of "Snoopy".

At one point in the production, Snoopy jumps offstage and runs over to a member of the audience to ask her if she is Snoopy's mother.

His performance, as well as all of the other actors and actresses, is vibrant and effective. They can reflect an entire host of emotions from childlike wonderment, to defiance, to the joy of being alive.

All that is missing from this production appears to be two integral characters in the "Peanuts" comic strip, Pig Pen and Schroeder. Who else should be playing the piano but Schroeder? Who else can make more of a comic mess than Pig Pen?

Yet, the characters who are a part of this production certainly excite the audience which consists mostly of children eager to see another "Peanuts" creation. Adults, too, were fascinated by the acting ability portrayed in "Snoopy", and by their children's reaction to the characters.

The last chance to see the Cohasset High School's production of "Snoopy" is this weekend. Both the Friday and Saturday night performances begin at 8 p.m.

Cocaine abuse a major hazard

The National Institute of Drug Abuse announced this week that cocaine abuse has become a major health hazard. Cocaine, according to Dr. Jack Durell, associate director for science of NIDA, contrary to previous beliefs, is extremely addicting and perhaps one of the most dangerous of the illicit drugs.

Illicit drugs

The incidence of cocaine abuse is growing at an alarming rate nationally as well as in Massachusetts. "We are receiving calls day and night, seven days per week," said James Murray, coordinator of Addictions Services for Comprehensive Mental Health Services, the exclusive referral agency in Massachusetts for the National Cocaine Hotline (1-800-Cocaine).

C.M.N.S., founded in 1980 by Dr. Norman Zinberg, former psychiatrist in chief at the Washingtonian Center for the Addictions and nationally recognized expert in the field of the treatment of addictions, has seen a major change in the types of problems being brought to its staff's attention.

"In the early 80's, the majority of abusers were primarily still misusing alcohol, marijuana or opiates," said Zinberg. "The past two years have seen a dramatic increase in calls for help from men and women who recognize they have gotten into terrible trouble while using cocaine, either alone or in combination with other intoxicants."

"We also find many families calling who are deeply concerned about members who they fear are abusing and don't know what to do," said Murray, former assistant clinical chief, Department of Narcotic Addiction, at Boston City Hospital. "As a result, we have developed a Family Consultation Service, particularly aimed at helping family members identify potential abuse, deal with the abusing family member's resistance to treatment and learn how to handle the difficult period of change and recovery.

"Cocaine abuse can have a devastating effect on a family's functioning. We hope this service will help a family identify its troubled member earlier, cope with the problem more effectively and permit the family to again function comfortably together."

As a result of this demand for services, C.M.H.S. has established services at offices in Newton, Framingham, Acton, Arlington and the North Shore. James Murray (617-969-8870) will provide information about these offices or respond to any questions from people concerned about their own or a family member's exposure to cocaine.

A day Bernard Salvador will not forget

Meanwhile, Kenneth, an exceptionally strong swimmer, had managed at last to reach the boat and had somehow dragged himself aboard. He broke off the cabin locks and entered the wheelhouse but was unable to start the motors due to his unfamiliarity with the complex safety interlock controls. Still struggling with the controls, he was therefore unable to help when my son became totally exhausted and helpless against the massive seas.

Ralph Wilkins saw my son's difficulty and at great risk to his own life turned back to help him. He pulled him down beneath the wave level and began to swim with him towards the Audrey PII.

My son afterwards told me that he would certainly have drowned that day had not Ralph turned back and saved his life, risking his own in the process.

Meanwhile, Kenneth, now seeing their difficulty, had found a heaving line and quickly threw it with great accuracy toward the struggling swimmers. Ralph passed the line to Glenn and Kenneth was able to pull him towards the boat, literally plucking my now totally exhausted son from the water by sheer brute strength.

On reaching the boat, Ralph took off his flippers and threw them into the boat in order to climb aboard more easily. One of them bounced back into the water but was retrieved by Ralph who then managed to seize hold of the boat's boarding ladder.

The boat was by now within 10 feet of smashing into the concrete side of the jetty. Unaware that Ralph was not safely aboard, my son cut the safety inter-locks and started the motor. Kenneth threw the boat into gear at full speed and - by a tremendous feat of seamanship managed to swing her clear and start to speed for the safety of the open sea.

Watching from the dock, I thought that Ralph would surely drown as he had only a tenuous grip on the boarding ladder as the boat began to move at high speed. Fortunately he had let go at the crucial moment and was then carried by the seas to a point about a thousand yards down the beach where, despite being battered by the thunderous surf, he managed to land safely.

Before she could reach the fuller safety of the open seas a mile or so offshore, the propellor of the Audrey PII was fouled by the trailing line Kenneth had used to rescue my son. In the rush to get the boat started they had assumed that Ralph was at that very moment climbing aboard using the same rope, which he would then naturally haul in and secure.

The engine suddenly stalled. It refused to re-start, so Kenneth and Glenn quickly threw out an anchor. The seas were so strong that the heavy line parted instantly and the boat again began to drift back towards the dangerous shore.

Hurriedly they threw out two more anchors and the combined weight of these slowed the boat enough to enable them to bite and the anchor cables to be made fast. They were now marooned on the Audrey PII with no chance of getting back to the shore should the two anchors break and cast the boat adrift again in the storm.

Three times Kenneth Samuel dived into the raging seas in a brave attempt to cut free the rope which had wound itself around the propellor. And three times he was beaten back by the sea, being thrown against the underside of the steel hull with great force.

The two men stayed aboard the vessel all that day and right through the night until Thursday morning dawned. They had no food, no water and no means of getting off the boat in the event of an emergency so they both stood watch the whole day and night without sleep and with very little rest.

At about 8 a.m. on Thursday morning, young Gary Pereira and Andy Silvester from the Ocean Terrace Inn, risked their own lives in a small boat amid the raging seas - and carried out a brave and dramatic dash across the bay. They succeeded in setting a further anchor and passing the line aboard the fishing boat. Then they snatched my son Glenn and Kenneth Samuel from the heaving decks of the storm-tossed Audrey PII and carried them safely ashore.

As far as I am concerned, I owe my boat - and more importantly - the life of my son Glenn to two exceptionally courageous local Kittitians. And I am proud today, to call Ralph Wilkins and Kenneth Samuel, two of my dearest and bravest friends.

Ralph Wilkins is indeed a credit to his profession as the St. Kitts Fisheries Officer - and Kenneth Samuel equally so to his profession as a Kittitian Master Fisherman.

Mr. Prime Minister - and peoples of St. Kitts, I am a stranger in your midst. An American investor who has chosen to live and work among you. I have met courtesy and helpfulness at all levels of your society -from the highest Government officials to the poorest local fisherman.

Now I have also met sheer bravery - and I personally salute it. Two men, strangers to me a year ago, risked their own precious lives to help me and to save the life of my son. I thank you!

Mr. Prime Minister - I would like to suggest that the sovereign and proud State of St. Kitts & Nevis also records its own tribute to these two exceptionally brave and self-sacrificing local men.

With my warmest regards and heartfelt thanks - to all of you.

Bernard Salvador, President, Caribbean Sea Investments, Box 123, Basseterre, St. Kitts. 14 November, 1984.

Insurance Companies Compete to Win Homeowners with Lower Rates.

"Now, homeowners can generally get increased coverage and pay less for it," according to Mary Porter of Whitman's Doran & Mason Insurance Agency.

Interviewed at her Bridgewater home, Ms. Porter said, "My job is to see that my clients have all the facts they need to buy insurance wisely. Right now, the fact is that you can probably duplicate your present homeowner's coverage at a lower cost — or — increase your coverage without increasing your cost."

"You can still get good, personal service with your low rates, too," Ms. Porter added. Doran & Mason has a team system. "Each of my clients can phone my office teammate any time a question arises or a problem occurs. We have enough people for that, and our size makes us important to the companies we represent. Even difficult claims can be handled more easily."

"I'll take the time to explain the details to you and I'll get to know you well enough to understand what insurance you need. I don't press;" she concluded, "if you have all the information you need, you'll make the right decisions." As an insurance professional in the Doran & Mason Agency, Mary Porter writes automobile, life, medical, business, boat and other forms of insurance as well as homeowner's.

Budget proposal includes elementary counselor them. This counselor would work directly with the student, while keeping in touch with parents and teachers."

In his proposal to the school committee to fund the $18,000 fulltime position, Gill wrote, "problems the kids are dealing with at the junior/senior high school are: anorexia and bulemia, sexually transmitted diseases, drug and alcohol dependency problems, despair over broken relationships or family crisis, and many other problems. Kids in the elementary schools desperately need someone in their respective school buildings, who they can go to for comfort, advice or referral. Many of these kids are suffering emotionally. We need to have someone in the building when these kids are going through tough times."

As he has repeatedly stated, kids at the elementary grades have as many problems as the older kids. But it's a great obstacle for them to verbalize their frustrations.

A crisis intervention counselor would concentrate on prevention, but would also be able to begin treatment. Helping a child deal with divorce, an alcoholic parent, or a death in the family, would be a sampling of the dilemmas the counselor would tackle.

Kathy Arnold is a clinical social worker assigned to the Scituate public schools. One portion of her responsibility is crisis intervention work. As a licensed independent social worker, Arnold is involved in one-to-one counseling with students who have been referred by parents, teachers and school administrators. She also refers students to outside counseling agencies for extended help.

For the past five years, Arnold has worked in conjunction with school psychologist Peter Entwhistle with all students within the system. Scituate initiated the program for a number of reasons, including the rising number of child abuse and neglect, the number of children from single-family homes, and the need for an "on-the-spot" health professional to work immediately with a student who has become withdrawn, or disruptive.

"I feel this person can often be a very helpful addition to the school system," she stated. "We can attend to the problems immediately, or refer them to an outside agency. We provide the professionai consultation on the spot. This type of immediate crisis intervention is very important, very helpful in any school system now."

The social worker added that she often works with parents of students within the homes. "Parents call for help and very often we have gone to the home to talk with them," Arnold added.

Both Gill and Arnold agree the need for such a position at the schools is not a problem specific to their communities. "The position was created because of the need. There are a number of problems students have to deal with, and we have seen a lot of them crop up here in Scituate," according to Arnold.

For Gill, it will now be a matter of justifying this request to the budget-approvers. "As far as I'm concerned," he stated," everyone is in agreement about our obligation to the health of our youngsters in this community. This is the way to go about ensuring their emotional and physical well-being. To me, the kids here, and their parents, there is no greater priority than to enhance the quality of their lives."

Strays need warm shelter

By Suellen Conlon
Standish Humane Society

She looked out her kitchen window to see a scrawny, orange cat on the back porch. Just skin and bones, the sorry looking cat, shivered in the chill wind. Her son's allergies prevented the woman from letting the cat into her warm kitchen.

She put out bowls of food and "Morris" devoured them. She fixed a box with wool blanket and the cat crept inside and curled into a ball.

Her telephone calls to find help for "Morris", led her to the Standish Humane Society. One of the three Standish Humane minishelters had room for "Morris" and he was sheltered there until he was adopted. But that shelter, "The Last Resort", is now closing for the winter because it is not heated.

Standish Humane Society, an all volunteer, non profit organization, would like to winterize the shelter, insulating it and installing a heating unit, so the many stray cats still outside in the cold will have a warm place to stay while waiting for new homes.

Contributions may be sent to Standish Humane Society in care of the treasurer, Suellen Conlon, 98 Old Forge Road, Scituate, 02066.

Your contributions will be used to buy insulation, install storm windows and doors and heat the shelter. Names of all donors will be enrolled in a permanent record book, kept in the shelter. A plaque will also be displayed, honoring contributors ($25 donations), sponsors ($50), patrons ($100) and friends ($500). Homeless cats and kittens thank you.

On the South Shore there is a very great need for a shelter for cats; dog officers do not have the facilities or finances to care for stray cats.

Standish Humane Society Inc. has for 15 years operated a dog and cat placement program, placing 600 cats and 300 dogs last year.

However, there are many stray and abandoned cats and kittens that need a place to stay while Standish works on their adoptions.

The "Last Resort" will offer sanctuary to some of these cats. The Last Resort is a spacious room on the first floor of a carriage house overlooking the North River. The sunny, pleasant room is very homelike with chairs for the cats to sleep on and windows for them to sit in and look out.

All the cats that are taken into the shelter are taken to the veterinarian for shots and examination; if they are old enough they are spayed and neutered. Standish Humane Society offers neutering assistance for persons adopting kittens through the shelter.

Standish Humane Society is totally dependent on private donations. Your help is desperately needed. If you would like more information on the Standish Humane Society you may telephone the main line at 545-3671.

A New England tradition continues

'Sam' & 'JoJo' have horse power

By Milly Potter

A common, garden-variety riding horse just isn't an unusual sight in most upscale South Shore communities.

But it's a different story with Sam and JoJo, two gentle giants now residing is a long, low, pale green barn on Main Street, Norwell. The very first glimpse of them summons up a bygone age, when our farmer ancestors worked the stony New England soil without benefit of gasoline-powered machinery.

And that's an idea that shouldn't be allowed to die, believes their owner, Jon Haskins of Hingham.

Haskins, farm manager of Plimoth Plantation, has worked most of his life with farm animals, but never owned horses. "I always wanted to, though," he said, and earlier this year began looking for some draft animals.

By word of mouth, he heard Sam and JoJo were available; a pair with a picturesque past drawing Adolph Scott's famous haywagon in Hanson. By July, they were his.

Also his was an immediate housing problem. There was no room for the pair at his small Prospect Street home not far from the Norwell line. Haskins was getting frantic.

One day he simply stopped at the Eugene Mullen house, having noticed the barn behind, to see if space was available. It was; they struck a deal, and the Mullens have been "super" ever since, Haskins reports.

He's spent the summer and fall months learning to work "the boys," as he calls them. "They're old enough so they can teach me," he says. "They're a nice, older dependable team.

Meet Sam and Jo Jo, a couple of powerfully-built New England work horses that recall an old, old New England Tradition.

"Now that I've got used to them—and they to me—I'm prepared to introduce horsepower to the South Shore," Haskins continues.

What he proposes doing is hiring out himself and the boys for agricultural work. "I believe in horse power—keeping a tradition going that needs to be preserved," he says.

Selective cutting and hauling of trees is typical of the kind of work he and the team can do this time of year.

"Say you have a pine tree, or a tree or two you want taken down for firewood," Haskins said. The advantage of using draft horses in such an operation is "they won't tear up the land. No tire tracks or trees skun up" in hard-to-get-at places, he says.

And then there's just the sheer beauty of watching an old-time scenario begin

Cabbage Patch shortage

...but parents will do most anything

By Kathleen Kroll

Is there a Cabbage Patch Kid on your Christmas List? If so, you may be out of luck for the second year in a row, according to local merchants.

Most stores have been sold out of the dolls for months. Some chain stores opted last spring to start taking names for a "Cabbage Patch List." Such stores may take months or even years to satisfy the lists already in existence.

Bradlees, Child World, Caldor and Toys R Us have lists, but only the latter two are still adding names. The others were closed when the names soared into the thousands. Toys R Us in Dedham is now filling orders placed last June. Names added now can expect to wait until next summer to be called. But they still might be better off than those whose names are on the halted Child World at Hanover Mall list.

Since April fewer than 1500 of the list's 5000 names have been crossed off. Customer number 3,312 was recently advised it might take a year and a half for her name to reach the top "because you have to double it. You're really number 6,624; everyone wants two dolls."

Few stores allow the purchase of two Cabbage Patch Kids at a time. Some, like King's Castle Land in Whitman, try to limit it to one per family.

No matter what measures are taken, the shortage of dolls persists. Most merchants attribute the doll's success to its unique marketing approach.

No one faults the manufacturer who is shipping 8 to 9 million pieces, more than six times that of the previous record-holder, Mattel's Baby Thataway.

No two Cabbage Patch dolls are exactly alike and seldom do the lucky "parents" have a choice as to which "baby" they adopt. Thus there's always that yearning for the blonde boy or the redhaired girl. Add the ones with pacifiers and the various sizes (age newborn through toddler) and Coleco has created a desire that never seems to stop.

In fact, just when you think things are calming down Coleco introduces a new, ever-more-fetching line. First they added Koosas, those cuddly Cabbage Patch Pets. Then came the tiny "Preemies." Colleen Diggett, assistant manager of Caldor in Pembroke, says, "I heard rumors of an Oriental doll and I said 'wow,' everyone will want that."

According to Ms. Diggett the deviousness of adults in pursuit of the coveted dolls is legendary. "They'll do anything. They'll say they didn't get called, that their name was erased from the list, that they've been called to come down (when they haven't been)."

"We require them to sign when they receive their doll. Sometimes they'll come back and say it's not their signature," says Diggett.

And what will a grown man do for a Cabbage Patch Kid? Tom Carroll, owner of Good N Cheap in Marshfield, remembers the last time he put a sign on Rte. 139 announcing the Kids' arrival.

"A man was first in line; he arrived around 3:30-4:00 a.m. Our doors don't open until 9:30," says Carroll. That was the day in October when Channel 5 came down to cover the event.

Carroll's distribution technique is unusual. He passes out numbered tickets that match up to prenumbered dolls. "People don't get upset this way. If they get the wrong doll, say a bald boy instead of a pigtailed girl, they wind up going out into the parking lot and swapping."

Kings Castle Land used a similar method last Friday when their shipment of Koosas went on sale. But instead of prenumbering the boxes they allowed "pass holders" to select for themselves. It took the overflow crowd more than a half hour just to file into the store when it opened at 9 a.m., according to manager Larry Whitney.

None of the stores expect to perform miracles for their customers. The most they hope for is "one more shipment

Education needs state money without state control

(Third of three parts)

Last week I tried to show that the comprehensive proposal to reform public schools in Massachusetts has two major faults. First, it would transfer much of the control of schools away from locally elected officials to the large bureaucracy in the Department of Education. Secondly, it would cost $1.2 billion or more by 1990, which without prodigious growth in the state's economy, would most likely lead to a major tax increase.

Since that piece was written the Massachusetts House has been working on the bill and two of its worst features as reported last week have been removed:

(1) A provision entitling the State Board of Education to direct how your local school committee may spend state aid to education has been eliminated. (2) Early retirement incentives for teachers have been eliminated pending further legislative study . . . with a projected savings of $70 million per year.

This is good news, for this legislation is probably destined to be enacted in some form, and the more ridiculousness that is taken out of it beforehand the better. There remains plenty of work for the legislature to do, but rather than enumerate every last error contained in this lengthy bill, I would rather suggest a few broad principles on which liberals, conservatives, moderates, parents and taxpayers might possibly unite around in support of better education.

The first is local control. Neither black parents from Roxbury, white anti-busers from South Boston, liberal Democrats from Marshfield, nor conservative Republicans from Duxbury want the control of their childrens' school handed over to a state bureaucracy . . . and with good reason. The record simply shows that schools get the best results where the school committee is strong and parents are involved.

Decentralization implies some trust and some risk. Just as children allowed to stand on their own two feet will stumble before they learn to run, local school committees will sometimes blunder in carrying out their heavy responsibility. But so too will any state level entity monitoring education, and no amorphous bureaucracy can be answerable for its actions in the way a local school committee can.

Therefore, if the state is presently able and willing to further help finance the cost of education, that is a fine and generous thing. But new state aid should not come with a new set of restraints, constraints, and threats of distraints. The state must have enough confidence in its own citizens and in its own communities to believe that new disbursements will be conscientiously used by school boards in the best interest of their students.

If the state is unable to believe that, and feels that only with a massive new structure of "accountability" can state money safely be disbursed to communities, it merely reveals its arrogance, its ignorance, and its own inability to deal with the education issue.

The central falsehood implied in the doctrine of centralization is the assumption that a local school board will not work energetically for better schools without a state mandate or a state threat to withhold funds. A school board so motivated would not be worth the name, and such a school board would quickly find ways around the most confounding systems of accountability any state bureaucracy could devise.

The correct assumption is that school committees are competent and motivated out of devotion to children and to education. The correct legislation will seek to raise state aid as a percentage of public school funding, and do so without in any way further tying the hands of local officials.

The state should probably finance 50% of the cost of public schools. Such a commitment would answer once and for all the Conservative's plea for permanent property tax relief. It would go a long way toward answering as well as the Liberal's plea for public schools that do not discriminate against the innocent child who happens to live in a low-income community.

Such a commitment today would be irresponsible, for it would necessitate major new state taxes at a time when Massachusetts is reaping a tremendous economic reward for shedding its old "Taxachusetts" reputation. But the state could conceivably make such a commitment if over a ten-year period it curtailed its massively wasteful and unproductive spending in other areas. In the meantime, any increase whatever in the support the state can give to education will be helpful.

In a way, House 5704 has had the cart before the horse from the beginning. First, a great, awful, complex new set of regulations and mandates were written. Then, someone asked how much the cost of these would be. Now the legislature is fighting with itself and the Governor in an attempt to cut the cost.

What ought to have happened, and what still ought to happen is this: The state should make a good, conservative, "low-ball" estimate of what moneys may be available for increased aid to education in the next two or three fiscal years. Then the state should pledge to disburse this money directly to the communities to use for education as they see fit. No new mandates should be written . . . none whatever.

These new disbursements should be set at a fixed percentage of a town's spending of its own funds for education. This would discourage a town's using of state education money to lower its own commitment to education, for the less it spent of its own treasure the less a town would receive from the state. But the more it spent on education, the more it would receive.

Such a formula does not take into account those communities whose limited tax bases keep down their support of education. These mostly urban communities need to be provided for. Those among us (and there are many) who would oppose this should recall the Boston

Education needs state money without state control

Desegregation Case. If what is offered to poor children in poor communities is not somehow raised, those communities may go to court, they may win, and if they do all the state's schools could be operating under court order. So much then for local control!

What poor, urban school districts need is a little extra finanical help . . . again without a tedious, insulting set of state mandates and controls. Just for example, if all schools received say 10¢ new state aid on the local dollar invested in education, then schools whose spending is below 85% of the statewide average should, say, get 11¢. Not enought to create a strong incentive to cut local education spending, but enough to help poorer communities out.

Conclusion to Series

Corruption aside, nothing bad in government happens through bad intentions. Everything bad comes out of someone's effort to make things better. The over-regulation of both industry by government and government by government came about because, at one time or another, both industry and government got out of line.

The problem is that in attempting to solve problems, government tends to monopolize power, to centralize power, to complicate process, and ultimately to constrict initiative. More rules, more requirements, more sanctions lead to less efficiency and . . . more rules, more requirements, more sanctions.

If you're sitting on the fence about education reform as it stands you might ask yourself this: (1) In what way will this legislation increase the relative authority of your local school committee? Answer: None. (2) What input did local school committee members have in the preparation of this legislation? Answer: None.

Then think of those school committee members that you actually know. Are they beyond error, beyond politics, beyond pettiness? Of course they are not. But then think of the State House gang that sooner or later is going to call the shots at the new and expanded State Department of Education.

Who would you rather have running your school?

A family wanted ... for Jennifer

(With the assistance of the state Department of Social Services, the Mariner will publish a weekly column, entitled "Family Wanted." This, ideally, would result in the placement of young people in sound foster homes. Ed.)

My name is Jennifer; I am 15 years old and need a family. Right now, I live in a shelter for teenagers, but I can't stay here much longer because they only keep us for 30 days.

It's hard for me to talk about myself. Sometimes, like when I get angry, I keep everything inside me, and I don't talk at all for a while.

I like being with people my age. I like to talk about clothes and make-up and the latest rock groups. At school, I like art and music classes best. I follow direction pretty well, and I've never been in any kind of trouble outside my house.

Most of my problems are at home. There's always been lots of fighting in my house, especially with my brother who gets into lots of trouble. Maybe my parents don't have the energy left for me.

My social worker says I need a family for a few months until my parents and I can work through our problems. We're in family counselling, and the social worker meets with my family and me to help us sort out why things don't always go the way they should. We're just not ready to be together right now.

I'd like to be in a family with somebody my age or maybe a little older. I'm pretty good about rules as long as I know what they are.

If you think you might be the family for me, or someone like me, please call Judy Barry at the Coastal Office of the Department of Social Services, 331-6600. They will give you comprehensive training and support as well as financial re-imbursement and medical coverage for me.

☐ It is always open season on lawmakers. When the legislature of Massachusetts convened at Concord in the 1700's, a noted philosopher of the community warned his neighbors to "close your door tightly; the legislature is convening."

☐ When a politician says a bill is unconstitutional you can be pretty sure he hasn't read the Constitution.

☐ I didn't say he was a worrier. I merely said that every time the tide goes out, he thinks it won't come in again.

PATCHES — by Lois Martin

On money matters: 'Liquidity needs investment'

"Remember," he said, "there is only so much juice in that orange."

Right, got it, you better believe it, I thought. And that opening remark was the beginning and end of my finite understanding of the man's talk.

The occasion was a seminar of sorts about investment, real estate, for one, though he touched on other facets and could have handled all of them. He went on a lot about "CD's", with different numbers attached, like levels of reading workbooks, I gathered. Mention was made of the IRA's and other letters combined.

The thing is, I was out of my element. That recognition could give rise to the question about what my 'element' really is. I haven't tailed that down. But I become keenly aware of my ignorance when it is brought home to me in investment talks.

PATCHES

One could counter that reasons existed for my not being there. But it was a heady experience, the dinner was magnificent, and a friend invited me to be one of the listeners.

I was the only one in the room who didn't get to nod knowingly throughout the man's talk. If he'd made that juice remark once more I'd have been ready to sigh in agreement simply to be part of the group.

I know people who invest, even those who handle that kind of thing for a living. But it is apparent I don't do money. I like it real well. I'd love more of it. But I share none of the impetus for needing to learn about savvy investments.

For me, money matters are simple. I can either buy or I can't. Piece of cake, decision done, out of my hands really. And my major investment decision this month is whether or not to invest in macadamia nuts, the big jar or little one, for an outrageous Christmas treat. I can handle that.

The young man who spoke had far more on his mind. He was 29 or 30 at the outside, that's adding on years because of his expertise. In truth he should have still been getting the devil for leaving his sneakers in the locker. Or at least he should have been working the campus dust out of his blue jeans, if appearances count.

With him they didn't, except to note he was attractive, nattily turned and filled with words that captured attentive response from others and a furrowed brow from me.

He had a prospectus. He talked about relative stability of principle. I'm certain he didn't mean "principal," that would have been too personal. He was from California and was tabbed in my meandering mind as the Lee Iacoca of his field.

I thought computers were tough. Investments are terrifying, especially after discovering that my "liquidity needs investment." A friend should have told me that sooner.

And I've given little regard to my portfolio. Everyone else seemed to know where theirs was.

In my purse at my feet as I toyed with the ice cream

FROM THE KITCHEN

by JOAN PINKHAM

All the hustle and bustle of preparing for the Christmas season intensifies as the 25th draws even closer. When we were children it seemed an eternity before we could expect Santa and now that we're adults, the days don't seem long enough as we clutch our bright packages, battle the shoppers at the mall and scurry home to the kitchen. Ever on the lookout for ways to save time, I've jotted down these few suggestions for preparing festive foods: to keep the flavor of your punch from becoming diluted by watery ice cubes, freeze "punch cubes" for your punch bowl, add red rose petals or colorful fresh fruit to your ice cubes before you freeze them and whatever you do, don't pour hot punch into a glass bowl without first putting in a silver spoon to prevent cracking. (I say this as I recall Thanksgiving Day as we all watched in horror as the bottom fell out of our bowl and the kitchen floor was soon awash in glorious cranberry punch) . . . To garnish a turkey platter, make baskets from orange halves and fill with cranberry sauce . . . to keep dates, dried fruit and marshmallows from sticking while you're cutting them, dip the scissors into hot water when needed . . . to stuff dates, slit open and insert a quarter walnut, then put in a plastic bag containing granulated sugar, roll until coated and serve on your prettiest party platter. Now we have another of Joanne Cure's recipes for a delicious spicy spread which may be made and refrigerated several days ahead. Joanne writes that this costs less than half of the price of real

Boursin Cheese

2 8 oz. pkg. softened cream cheese
¼ c. mayonnaise
2 tsp. Dijon-style mustard
2 T each of finely chopped fresh chives & dill (or dill-weed spice)
1 clove garlic, minced

Beat ingredients with electric mixer until thoroughly blended. Spoon into small serving bowl, or line a 2-cup mold with aluminum foil and spoon in mixture. Cover, refrigerate overnight. Turn out on party plate and peel off foil. Serve with crax.

Being with friends and family is always special, but at Christmas there's the added pleasure of seeing those whose paths have veered from ours and that's when the holiday parties bring us all together. Though some homes have been decorated and trees twinkling in the window since Thanksgiving, those of us who are not quite as organized should surely have everything in place by the weekend before Christmas. Always welcome is an invitation to brunch and Sheri Smith suggests this casserole using your favorite crepe recipe. Here is Sheri's

Scrambled-Egg Brunch Crepes

8 beaten eggs
¼ c. milk
1 T snipped chives
½ tsp. salt
2 T butter or margarine
8 6" crepes

Combine first four ingredients in bowl. In 10" skillet, scramble egg mixture in butter or margarine till just set. Place approx. ¼ c. cooked egg in center of each crepe; fold ends over. Place, seam side down, in 12x7x2" baking dish. In saucepan, melt 2T butter or margarine. Blend in 2T flour, ¼ tsp. salt and dash of pepper. Add ¾ c. milk all at once. Cook and stir till thickened. Stir in ¼ c. shredded monterey jack cheese, 2T grated parmesan cheese and ¼ c. dry sherry. Pour over crepes. Bake, covered, in 375 oven for 20 to 25 minutes. Serves 4.

In order to be meaningful, a Christmas gift doesn't have to come from Tiffany's, or cost $3500 as does the Home Robot featured in one of a multitude of mail-order catalogues with which we've been flooded this season. With its built-in computer the four-foot tall computer can even greet your guests at the door. Giving of yourself at Christmas is the best gift you can offer and when you take a hostess, neighbor or shut-in something "from the kitchen", it can be special indeed. For all those chocolate freaks on your list, a gaily decorated jar of these snacks might be welcome.

Chocolate Brittle

1 can (6-¾ oz.) salted peanuts
2 c. sugar-honey-coated rice cereal
1 pkg. (8 oz.) dates, chopped
6 T butter or margarine
1 pkg. (6 oz.) semisweet chocolate pieces

Mix first three ingredients. Melt butter and chocolate and pour over cereal mixture, stirring to coat each piece. Spread in buttered 13x9x2" pan. Chill until firm. Cut in 2" squares, makes 24.

on my apple brown betty square was a check book boasting $12.97. I needed to invest more than that to pay the plumber.

Buying and selling is everything. Value strategy, he said, and capital appreciation. I interpreted that as a suggestion to sell my home and live in the car.

What did his mother feed him, I wondered. I'll lay you big money (liquidity only) that he never bit the heads off animal cookie giraffes or hippopotamuses. No way.

When he started on deficit I was certain I'd been found out. Fortunately judgment was not part of his program. He merged to limited partnerships and participating mortgages, real rates of return and net worth growth (about 10 pounds a year if I'm not careful).

This kid did his homework, presented it forthrightly and swayed the minds of his audience. I could have as easily absorbed an astute synopsis of the architectural drawings of the space shuttle.

Last year a recorded clone telephoned me at home about my investments. I was flattered though I knew he had the wrong number. And recently a palmreader I interviewed told me all kinds of things about my life. It was only when she talked to someone else about big money coming in January that I interrupted to ask how come she'd never mentioned money to me.

"You are not a person who needs money," she said, "You want other things." I asked her to give me another shot at it.

That should have been a clue.

Though I speculate a lot, it's never about money. For me a capital gain was when this fall was so warm I didn't have to pay a much higher gas bill.

It is clear that wise people learn more about what that young man knows . . . a lot. No need to feel left out as I did when one woman referred to a Wall Street Journal story in that day's paper.

My conclusion is this base for your investment portfolio; there is only so much juice in that orange.

Or try this tip that I understand; in old Bohemia people sprinkled fern seed on their savings to keep them from diminishing.

CREATURE COMFORTS by Liz Gorfinkle

Meet 'Halston'...the friendly python

Last Friday my friend Jeffrey Corwin handed me a curious brown box and said, "Open it!"

I asked him if he were mistaken, for the box's label indicated that inside I would find Halston's soap-on-a-roap.

"Halston is inside. Open it!" Jeff insisted.

I opened the box to find a baby (four-to-six-week-old) Burmese python named Halston. He was about two and a half feet long, and his olive-toned skin was wonderfully soft.

While others in my office cringed at us, my editor Judy Gilman and I cuddled Halston. We thought the python was simply adorable. The fact that Halston made a lunge at our photographer Bill Quigley didn't daunt our affection.

Jeff told Bill that snakes can discern between "comfortable" and "uncomfortable" situations. For some reason, Halston didn't like having his picture taken.

Yes, Jeff Corwin is an unusual friend. He is an 18-year-old naturalist and wildlife educator from Norwell, who specializes in herpetology, the study of reptiles and amphibians.

Recently he became the curator for the herpetology department at the South Shore Wildlife Medical Center's wildlife classroom located in the Hingham Ammunition Depot's Building 47.

The department will eventually exhibit about 300 animals. Jeff said he plans to breed the endangered species. He also hopes to study his wards' behavior and diseases.

"The object is to educate the public about the reptiles and amphibians in Massachusetts and in the world," he said. "Our hope (his and the center's staff's) is that we will create a better understanding of how truly valuable these animals are to the world's fragile ecosystems."

In the wild Burmese pythons are found throughout India and Burma in habitats ranging from tropical and savanna into rainforest. They are ground-dwelling snakes, which kill their normal prey of mammals and birds by constriction. As the prey exhales, the snakes constrict.

This species of python is threatened by extinction, because too many of them have been taken from the wild to appease collectors and the pet industry.

To own a Burmese python you need special permits, according to the Fisheries and Wildlife Division. A Class Seven permit allows you to own one snake. And a Class Four or propogator's permit allows you to have a bunch of them. Of course, you also need another special permit to keep a python, which grows to lengths well beyond nine feet. Halston has the potential to grow up to 12 feet in one year.

Can you imagine what a 12-foot Burmese python on the loose would find to eat in your home? That's why exotic animals are better off left in the wild or to expert handlers like Jeff Corwin.

If you would like further information about Halston and/or the herpetology department at the wildlife center's classroom, call Jeff at 659-2027.

Bernard By Ellen Dargin-Knapp

"Bernard, what a wonderful party. You have the most extraordinary friends!"

'Sam' and 'JoJo' have horse power

being recreated before your very eyes. It's this passion that inflames Haskins; that causes him to admit with a grin that the boys "are kind of a neat toy."

He finds it very relaxing "after working all day with the oxen (Plimoth Plantation's Turk and Swan) to come home to these guys. They're much more intelligent."

Sam and JoJo are turned out every day, and worked three or four times a week to keep them in shape. Haskins enjoys "line driving" them—just walking along behind the massive beasts, and has taken them on Sunday excursions up to Assinippi, or over to his house for lunch.

Last weekend Haskins turned out Sam and JoJo to show off their paces for the Mariner.

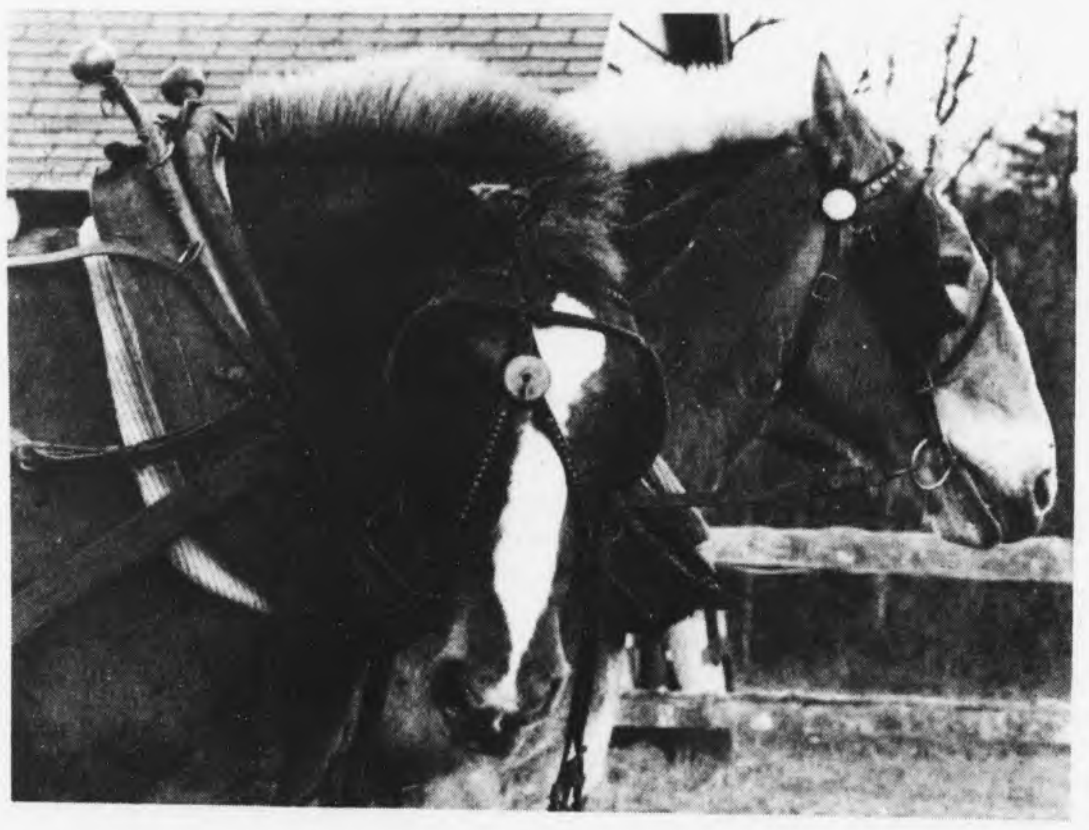
Darker Sam and lighter JoJo are 18-year old "grade" Belgian geldings, just shy of a ton apiece. "Grade" Belgian means they are mostly Belgian, a popular breed of draft horse. Vast, benign and aristocratic-looking with their Roman noses and cropped manes, they stand obediently still on command while Haskins hitches them to a stone boat.

Talking about draft horses involves the use of a highly technical vocabulary, some of which rings a faint bell, like "evener" and "whiffle-tree," (metal plates that form part of the hauling assemblage), and the above-mentioned stone boat.

Stone boats, Haskins explains, were used in the old days to haul away rocks farmers turned up in the course of plowing. They are simply cast iron slabs, onto which the stones were rolled. The horses could then pull them away to a corner of the field, where they could be off-loaded and formed into a stone wall.

With the aid of a couple of tires and a length of two-by-four, acting as a built-up seat, Haskins has turned his own stone boat into an improvised conveyance. At his word the boys break into a ponderous trot and begin circling the paddock, casting marvelous shadows in the slanting winter sunlight.

Along with Sam and JoJo came an array of equipment including well-worn harnesses custom-tailored to each animal, a road grader, sled, a truck to haul the team in, and Scott's famous yellow haywagon he built himself in 1957.



Unfortunately, Haskins has ruled out offering hayrides, at least for the present. The cost of insurance is just too much, he says. He'll only do them, as he did at a recent festival at Audubon's Dwyer Farm in Marshfield, when a sponsoring organization has blanket insurance coverage.

Haskins hopes to involve Sam and JoJo in parades and other special events in the area to promote the philosophy of draft animals.

If things go as planned, the boys will be among the stars of Hingham's 350 anniversary Fourth of July Parade. He promises "a spectacular float" but won't say what it is for the record, as he wants it to be a surprise. (He told the Mariner, though, and the Mariner agrees it will be outstanding, and historically appropriate).

You don't have to go far away to go far.

Our off-campus and Saturday programs make it convenient for you to start or continue taking courses toward your college degree. With evening classes in Braintree, Hingham, Lexington, Medford, and West Roxbury, and Saturday classes at our Downtown Center in Park Square, chances are you won't have to go far to find the course you need. And the University's commitment to the part-time adult student means that in our off-campus and Saturday courses, just as in all others, you'll work with an exceptional faculty and receive the instruction of high quality that has earned UMass/Boston its reputation for excellence.

You should know that you can take our off-campus and Saturday courses both before and after being formally admitted to the University. Through our extended day schedule at the Harbor Campus, you can complete many of our most popular degree programs—among them management and computer science—entirely through evening study. And at UMass/Boston, quality is affordable. Our undergraduate tuition is $50.50 per credit.

So why not start with a course or two this spring? Send for our free bulletin listing off-campus and Saturday courses. Call us at 956-1000 or use the coupon below.

Classes begin January 26. The registration deadline is January 18. Mail, telephone, and walk-in registration are available. MasterCard, VISA, and your personal check are welcome.

SEMI-IMPOVERISHED newspaper person is looking for furniture to redo a postage stamp size living room. The old couch has just become the latest casualty between myself, my wife and Graything (my neurotic couch killing cat). I'm looking for a reasonably priced bit of furniture that will not clash with our early American Orange Crate decor. Money is tight, so be gentle, Folks. Here is your chance to get rid of that unwanted couch while making my wife happy and, perhaps, even saving the life of my cat. Call in the evenings after 6 p.m., 585-5427. (TFN)

Leading the list of Santa's grab bag

- ☐ Transformers
- ☐ Trivia
- ☐ Walkabouts
- ☐ Gobots
- ☐ Cliffhangers

The day after Thanksgiving is a day to sleep late. Unless you happen to be a Santa in search of a much-wanted toy. In that case you may have found yourself waiting in line at 9 a.m. outside Marshfield's Good 'N Cheap, a full half hour before the store opened.

You would be there because a newspaper ad said the toy at the top of your child's Christmas list would be there. Not on sale, just for sale.

Tom Carroll's little store on Rte. 139 is reknown for its Cabbage Patch waiting lines. But this day was not a doll day. This was a day and a line devoted to the acquisition of Gobots, little robots that metamorphasize into assorted vehicles.

In a way it was like the Cabbage Patch frenzy because it didn't matter which one you got, as long as you got one.

Trouble is, if you weren't there during that first half hour you didn't get one of the 350 robots at all.

The rush is on all over the South Shore and beyond. Right up there on every little girl's list and every little boy's list are either Gobots or TransFormers (another version of the same toy).

And it has to be the real McCoy. Imitations sit collecting dust, languishing forever in the forgotten world of toy limbo.

Gobots and TransFormers disappear just as fast as the clerks can collect the $3 (or up to three times as much). Caldor in Pembroke's toy manager Bill Canada said it's "because the kids want to see the name "Gobots" or "TransFormers" on the box. It doesn't matter that the others do the same thing."

At Bradlees in Kingston, toy clerk Lisa Randall agreed. Randall was amazed when customers, afraid of being shut out, began ticketing their own purchases. Twenty cartons of TransFormers were gone before they even hit the shelves, according to Randall.

At Caldor's a kindly clerk named Joe nearly caused a scene when he found a stray Gobot in the back room and presented it to an elderly woman and her middle aged daughter.

At first they were grateful, then dubious about the $10 price. By the time they realized there were people waiting to pick it up when they put it down, they became paranoid.

"We'd better take it, Mother, or somebody else will," warned the daughter.

All the way to the register the two women kept both pairs of hands tightly around the small box lest they be mugged or "knocked down and kicked" by the mothers and children who eyed them enviously. First they didn't think it was worth the money, but after the laws of supply and demand jostled them they were ready to risk their lives (so they imagined) to pruchase the coveted robot/car.

According to area merchants the robots at first didn't sell. Then televison cartoons propelled them into superstardom and supersaleability from unwanted to unattainable.

The same phenomena occurred with Master of the Universe and its assorted He-Man accessories. Caldor in Pembroke has a waiting list of rainchecks still to be honored for He-Man figures from a sale 10 months ago.

Bernie Sabina, a sales manager at Bradless, sees a trend of parents opting for more expensive items in the line. "People are going for the higher priced item. They'll buy Castle Grey Skull for $40-$50 instead of four or five smaller items."

Race car sets like Super Cliffhangers are big sellers too. When Zayre at Hanover Mall inadvertently put their stock of going-on-sale Cliffhangers out at 10:30 the night before the sale, they found they sold out at the regular price in the half hour before closing. This left the earlybirds at Sunday noon emptyhanded.

Dolls are doing well across the board this year, in part due to the Cabbage Patch craze.

Rainbow Brite (and her friends), Barbie, My Little Pony, GI Joe are all available but going fast.

Care Bears haven't been readily available since before last Christmas, prompting some customers to call for a "Care Bears List" like the one for Cabbage Patch dolls. Thus far no store wants to take on such a project.

Board games like Upwords are popular but Trivial Pursuit still dominates the market. This year two new supplementary decks are being sold: Young Players Edition and Genius II ($29.99 each at Kings Castle Land in Whitman, unavailable most everywhere else).

Trivia spinoffs are mindboggling. Child World in Hanover has more than two dozen titles. There's everything from the pricey Super Quiz Omnibus Edition ($42.97) to the littlest pocket edition of Trivia Trivia ($1.97).

Beatlemania, Elvis, Music, Time, MASH, Disney, Dictionary, Travel, are all substantial trivia offerings. There's even Bible Trivia which is selling well in some stores. Many of these are color-coded for use with the original trivial pursuit.

Video games and computers are not as big this year as in years past, although prices have dropped sharply. Instead, VCR's are hot this year, with most stores selling out of the sale models quickly.

Color TV's, microwave ovens and home gyms are selling well too. But unlike the children's market, there is no anticipated shortage in any of those areas.

Walkabout radios in the lower price ranges were sold out at Caldor but department manager Jay Deeley does not forsee a problem. Stereos are "always in demand."

Hoem gym equipment is moving fast. "Rowing machines, at-home exercisers, all fitness equipment is selling," said Bernie Sabina of Bradlees. "Instead of going to a gym they're buying these units."

In this era of escalated military spending by the government there is no real increase in the sale of war toys, with the exception of GI Joe. Larry Whitney, manager of King's Castle Land, says, "GI Joe is more seen as an adventure toy today, an imagination toy like Masters of the Universe or Star Wars, but toy guns are always a staple."

Surprisingly enough our area defies national trends in the hiring market too. Not one store interviewed had a problem filling its quota of Christmas help. Good 'N Cheap said it took a little longer but each of the others said it was a good year for hiring seasonal employees.

On the downside, few stores report great selling trends in the old standbys like bicycles and sleds.

As one merchant said, "Bikes are a year round item. And sleds? Kids know you'll buy them one anyway."

Cabbage Patch...

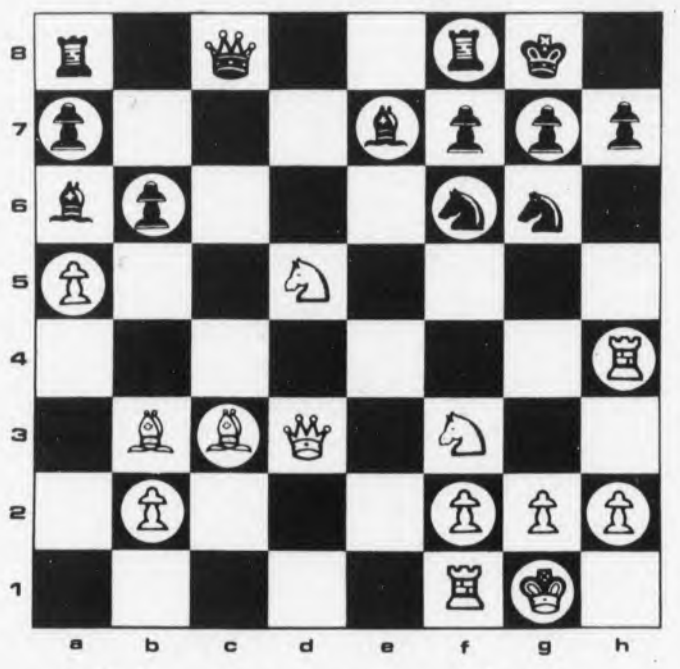
before Christmas.'

Frustration is running high among consumers and merchants alike. Store phones are tied up with queries from anxious customers. And even when handed the precious doll, many customers are dissatisfied, unappreciative and demanding.

Lisa Randall, toy clerk at Bradlee's in Kingston, is annoyed with customers who already have several but "need a Preemie and a boy now."

Even among coworkers patience is growing thin. On Bradlee's special "Employees' List" there are those who "keep putting their names on over and over again. It's not fair," said a disgruntled clerk.



When asked to comment on the Cabbage Patch Kids employees of several stores responded the same way, "I hate them." Abuse from customers is their main complaint.

The American love affair with the Cabbage Patch may be in full bloom, but at the retail level the honeymoon is definitely over.

The winter moon is the night's only light in Cohasset (Bill Quigley)

Cohasset Mariner

vol. VII, no. 12 | 383-6731 | thursday, december 20, 1984 | 30 cents

1984— It's been quite a year in Cohasset

(This is the first of a two-part update on some of the most important issues in Cohasset during the past year. Ed)

This year has been an active one for Cohasset. This was the year in which three town meetings resolved many timely and expensive issues.

Here's a brief look at how some of the most important issues of 1984 are progressing.

Sewer plan

The Ward Engineering plan, which the town adopted resoundingly last summer, is in midst of a long appeal process now.

The state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering did not approve funding of the innovative wastewater disposal plan. The town has appealed that denial to the Region 1 office of the Environmental Protection Agency in Boston.

Tuesday was the last day for all material by the town to be submitted to the EPA, and according to Sewer Commission Chairman Charles DeSantis, a final decision should be prepared by the end of January. If, according to DeSantis, there is the unlikely occurence of the EPA denying funding of the plan, the town will then appeal it to the Washington headquarters. DeSantis is optmistic this appeal will be successful, the plan will be funded and the project will get rolling.

Watershed protection study

The Water Commission and the Watershed Protection District Committee have been a busy group of people this year. Most recently, the Water Commissioners voted to hire Camp, Dresser and McKee to conduct

A Merry Christmas for merchants

by Lisa J. Messersmith

For several businessmen in the town of Cohasset, this year's Christmas shopping season has been prosperous.

Bob Fesler, manager of Kit and Kaboodle gift shop, described this year's business as going "very well". This specialty shop offers a varied inventory of gift items from jewelry to children's toys to pottery. Over 100 artisans in the South Shore contribute their work to the shop.

Most of the gifts sold at Kit and Kaboodle are selling well. "Jewelry is an excellent thing," Fesler said, during this time of year. He also carries a series of sculptured animals which are handcast in stoneware. These sculptures range from several types of birds to animals such as polar bears.

People who shop at Kit and Kaboodle are for the most part using cash, Fesler said, and only twelve to fifteen percent are using credit to purchase their Christmas gifts.

Fesler believes as we approach Christmas Day more people will shop in Cohasset for gifts. Christmas Eve Day, he said, is the biggest shopping day of the year. People begin to move away from the malls to their towns. "My opinion is there are some people who are bound to the town area who do not have the time to shop at the malls. People get tired of fighting crowds and trying to find parking spaces," he added.

Austin Lyne whose sporting goods shop, Good Sport, has been in existence for seven years, "anticipates business will really pick up in the week before Christmas." His business got off to a "slow start after Thanksgiving," he said. because of the mild weather.

The business is divided into thirds — sporting goods, athletic footware, and clothing. Winter clothing such as hats, gloves, and mittens have not been selling as well, due to the unseasonable weather.

Nevertheless, Lyne has noticed in the "last week business has really picked up with the sale of cross country skiis, hockey, and basketball equipment as well as winter clothing. He anticipates a good season overall "with a major push at the end of the season.

"We have had a better season than last year," Lyne said. He attributes this upswing to a "continual growth

No progress in police talks

"Selectmen spent over 25,000, 1 yr. labor troubles", "One year, all talk no progress" were the protest messages on just two of the many posters carried by nine members of the Cohasset Police Association at Monday night's meeting of the Board of Selectmen.

According to the officers, contract negotiations have made no progress, despite last week's "fact-finding" meeting between members of the Police Association and the Cohasset Personnel Committee, which was arbitrated by a representative of the State Management Board. "We aren't getting anywhere" said union president Cliff Jones "we're going backwards."

Selectmen Chairman Cliff Mitman said no determination was rendered at last week's fact finding meeting. A second round has been scheduled for today.

The primary concern of union members is the discrepancy between their pay and that of officers in surrounding towns. A Hingham policeman makes $21,131 a year, a Scituate policeman makes $21,962. Cohasset officers receive $18,826, and in the opinion of officer Dick Abbadessa "it costs a lot more money to live in Cohasset than in Hingham or Scituate."

Contract offers previously made to the officers include 2 percent pay increases. Officers declined that, considering it an insult not a raise. A second offer was a

Renew Permits

The Cohasset Board of Health wishes to remind local businesses that it is time to renew their annual Dump Permits for deposition in the Cedar Street Landfill.

The fee is $50.00 and the permit may be obtained at the Board of Health office, 43 Elm Street, during normal business hours of Monday through Thursday 8:30 a.m. - 12:30 p.m., 1:30 p.m. - 4:30 p.m.

The Board of Health will be reviewing the current permit and license fees under its jurisdiction at its next regularly scheduled meeting of Dec. 20, 1984.

The last time these fees were updated was 1981. Licenses and permit renewals will be issued commencing Dec. 26, 1984 at the Board of Health office. Please call 383-1664 and make the necessary arrangements for obtaining your renewals.

Mariner Holiday closing

The Mariner office in Marshfield will close Wednesday, Dec. 19 at 5 p.m. and will reopen Wednesday, Dec. 26 at 8 a.m.

There will be no edition for Wednesday Dec. 26

Display, classified and community news deadlines for the Jan. 2 and Jan. 3 issue is Friday, Dec. 28 at 5 p.m.

Mariner Print Shop will close Thursday Dec. 20 and reopen for business Wednesday, Jan. 2.

Litchfield letter

Highway Surveyor Harold Litchfield scolded 100 Pond Street developer Frederick Thayer last week for misquoting him.

In a letter sent to Thayer, the highway surveyor said he never refused to sand and snowplow the road leading into the private condominium development. Rather, he said, there was a question as to the town's reponsibility to maintain the private road, and he wanted to check first with the planning board. "I was simply awaiting clarification of the matter," Litchfield stated.

Thayer had indicated to the Board of Selectmen last week that the highway department refused to maintain the private road to 100 Pond Street, although all other private roads in town have traditionally been sanded and plowed by the department.

Selectmen decided last week that because there was no legal document between Thayer and the planning board, stating who should maintain the private way, the town should be responsible. Selectmen encouraged the planners to include provisions for private street maintenance in condominium developments in the future.

Litchfield warned Thayer that because of limited supplies and personnel, "all private ways are sanded only after all the main roads have been taken care of. I will put a large barrel of sand and a shovel at the hill. Depending on the circumstances, the tenants will have utilize this sand until such time as the spreader can get there."

Bidding farewell

Mom and daughter cast food to the remaining ducks at the Common pond. Soon frozen water will send the creatures to warmer shelter.

Advisory board begins reviews

Many of the town's budgets are in and the advisory committee is awaiting its review.

Tuesday and Thursday nights in January will be occupied with various budget reviews as the committee scrutinizes each account and expense request.

Among the items which may be a priority item for review is the Fire Department's request for a $41,000 budget transfer.

Acccording to Chief Martin Dooley, there has been an extraordinary amount of overtime in the past few months, depleting the $35,000 fiscal year 1985 overtime account. To meet the budget for the remainder of the year, he told selectmen last week he will need an additional $41,000.

Selectmen Chairman Clifford Mitman said the board has not made a determination whether to forward the transfer request to the advisory committee. After the holidays, the board will consider the budget item.

When asked what accounted for the inordinate amount of overtime in the department, Mitman said a firefighter vacancy necessitated overtime expenses for several months, and an unusually large amount of firefighter sick days has added to the increase.

There was a firefighter vacancy in the department for about 20 weeks this year until Firefighter Peter Trask was appointed earlier this month.

According to the Town Accountant's office, in the month of November, $1566 was spent the first week in overtime payments; $1868 the second week; $1646 the third week and $1616 the week of November 28.

Since Trask has been appointed, the overtime in December has averaged $200 per week.

Selectman Mitman said there has been a greater-than-usual amount of sick leave within the department. This is a cause of concern for selectmen, he added, "to the point we'd like to see it lowered."

At the advisory committee meeting Monday night, Chairman Jacqueline Dormitzer said she was aware of the Fire Department budget transfer request. Researching into previous year's request, Dormitzer said in fiscal year 1979 the Fire Department spent $33,000 in overtime; in fiscal year 1980, $35,000; in fiscal year 1981, $38,000; in fiscal year 1982, $38,000; in fiscal year 1983, $50,000 and in fiscal year 1984, $73,000. And, if this budget transfer request is granted, the Fire Department will have expended $76,000 in overtime.

Among the other items discussed during the advisory committee's meeting, was the need for the town to deal with the increasing problem of unpaid fees and permits. According to the advisory committee's statistics, the town is owed about $70,000 in unpaid Water Department bills and $$27,000 in ambulance service fees.

The problem of how to collect the unpaid bills was discussed at the meeting. An increasing number of residents are unwilling or unable to pay these service bills, and the amount could add substantially to the town's coffers, the members said.

The advisors also discussed the budget review schedule they will follow during the month of January.

Thursday, January 3 the board will review the Building Inspector, Sewer Department, Police and Dog Control budgets; Tuesday, Jan. 8, Board of Health, Landfill, Social Service League, and Library; Thursday, Jan. 10, Fire Department, Water Department, and Weights and Measures; Tuesday, Jan. 15, Personnel, Civil Defense, Historical Commission, Veteran's Services, Moderator, Advisory Board, Reserve Fund, Harbor and the Wire Department.

Tuesday, Jan. 22, the committee will review the Town Clerk department, elections and town meetings, planning board and zoning board. Thursday, Jan. 24, the committee will review Highway Department, Regional school system, Recreation, Law, Parking Clerk, Shellfish Constable, Town Buildings, Town Hall and Assessors. The committee will review the school budget Tuesday, Jan. 29, and the remaining budgets Thursday, Jan. 31.

A Team of Professionals to Serve You

The Open "Gates" of Christmas

Dear Folks,

Times surely have changed since Sidney Gates abandoned his horse-cart and opened his "Dry Goods" store sixty five years ago. This town and its neighbors have grown from tiny seashore villages to vibrant sub-urban communities.

Just last week I was questioned as to how a family clothing store like ours has survived and prospered in the changed retail world of today. I replied, with hardly a moment of thought, that mutual respect was the foundation of our business.

Our store respects you as a customer. You are aware that the best bargain may not always be the lowest price; your appreciation for a con-venient, pleasant shopping experience.

We know, too, that you respect our stores by your friendly attitude in the store; your general compliments on our merchandising; the delight that shows on your face when you're able to find what you like so easily; and most importantly, your recommendations to new neighbors, friends, and relatives that continue to bring new customers to our stores.

In an age where society's great advancements in technology have been matched by a decrease in the value of human contact we welcome this contact and are thrilled that personal relations are alive and well and continue to thrive at Gates.

Best wishes for a Happy Holiday Season and a Joyous New Year.

Community TV thriving in Cohasset cable

Several of Cohassets residents become involved in the cable television production business under the watchful eye of John Ronan, program coordinator for Cohasset Cable Television.

Since the outset of the program in May, the production staff including, Ronan, the community producers, and seven interns, have completed 168 hours of programming, and aired over 500 hours. Shoots have been produced in conjunction with the Historical Society, Recreation Department, Dramatic Club, Art Center, Board of Selectmen, School Department, Athletic Department, Red Crosss, town churches, Seahawks youth hockey, and the Cohasset swim center.

Four regional series are available at present through Cohasset Cable Television: These include Regional Requests, Rock After Dark, Rock Talk, and You Are the Light of the World. A live call-in show entitled Cohasset Alive is planned for production in January, and a sixth show, Religious Roundtable is being considered.

Programming for late December and January will include Christmas in Cohasset, Lobster Pot Hockey and several sports films featuring hockey, and boys and girls basketball.

According to Ronan, the success of his program is due to the commitment of his seven interns. All but one of whom are high school students, who volunteer up to twenty and thirty hours a week to producing various shows.

Ronan's interns were introduced to cable production through workshops held at Cohasset Cable Television (168 people have entered the workshop programs and 112 people have completed them). They took the skills acquired at the workshops, strengthened them through hands-on experience, and are currently producing their own shows.

Ronan takes both pride and pleasure in working with his interns, and watching their progress. "The program," said Ronan "gives them the tools of production. One month after they get involved they're starting production."

At a meeting of the Cohasset Cable advisory committee on Tuesday night, general manager Stephen Farquhar discussed recent power outages to boxes in Scituate and Cohasset. On the whole, he said, both subscribers and personnel handled the situations very well.

He also noted the financial success of American Cablesystems of Massachusetts, the company which operates Cohasset Cable Television, along with 15 other systems in Massachusetts, New York, Virginia, West Virginia, Tennessee, and Florida.

Commuters support Goodell

By Judy Gilman

"If it wasn't for Dana, we'd all be back in our cars driving to work."

That was the unqualified consensus among passengers riding home on the 5:15 p.m. run of the Chimera Tuesday night. Their comments, and a flood of letters and phone calls to state officials, have come in the wake of an announced move by William Spence and Charles English to revamp the Gracious Lady and put her back in service.

The commuter boat wars have a remote and arcane flavor for those who don't follow the on-the-water doings on a day-to-day basis. But for a brief history:

Charles English of Hingham started the Gracious Lady about 18 months ago, with backing from the South Shore Chamber of Commerce for a high-speed commuter boat from the South Shore. This spring, with the impending reconstruction of the Southeast Expressway looming, the state, in the form of the DPW, the office of transportation and planning, and the MBTA, announced plans to subsidize commuter boats from the South Shore. Dana Goodell of Nahant, who had pioneered the Boston Harbor islands water taxi service, began offering service, first on the New Englander II, then on the Dragonfish. Later in the summer, he added another boat to his fleet as the backup commuter boat. That was the Chimera.

'One Christmas' by The O'Learys

(This Christmas story was written by John and Erin O'Leary of Jerusalem Road. They are studying creative writing at the Community Center. Ed.)

Joseph slammed the backdoor to his Grandmother's house. It was cold and the wind bit his hands. In the playground by the school, he watched the kids throw snowballs at each other. Joseph didn't have any friends. It was two days before Christmas and already he knew Santa wouldn't leave him anything; Santa hadn't left anything last year.

He walked by the Jensens and looked closely at the snowman they had made. It was at least six feet tall and wore a green scarf around its neck. Joseph kicked the bottom of the snowman until it fell apart and then grabbed the scarf and headed down the street. John and Erin watched from their livingroom window and ran to the front door yelling "He took our scarf, He took our scarf." Erin began to cry because it was her favorite scarf and Santa had left it for her last year. John told Erin he would get her scarf back for her.

When Joseph was out of sight, he wrapped the scarf around his neck and ran to the playground, but John and Erin had taken the shortcut and beat him there. They waited for him by the swings and grabbed him when he walked by. "Why did you steal my scarf?" Erin said. "Because I'm cold and I don't have a scarf at home," Joseph replied.

John and Erin told Joseph he could keep the scarf and invited him back to their house for dinner. At dinner, John and Erin's father dressed up as Santa and Joseph loved this. After dinner, John and Erin asked their Mom if she had anything they could give Joseph. She said she didn't, but she was sure that they would have things in their closet. The three of them went upstairs. Both Erin and John found toys to give to Joseph and Erin found the green mittens to match the scarf. "Take these, you'll need them," she said to Joseph.

When Joseph left, Erin and John watched him walk across the yard. He stopped at the snowman and rolled him back together, then walked toward his grandmother's house.

"He's a nice guy," John said and turned out the lights.

Lifeline Units

As a community service, South Shore Hospital is now offering additional Lifeline communication units to arearesidents. Lifeline is a telephone response system for frail elderly and handicapped persons, who are able to care for themselves and stay in their own homes, but who may need assistance in an emergency situation.

Key to the Lifeline system is a special electronic unit and portable beeper, which, when connected to a regular home telephone, will enable the user to automatically transmit a call for medical help in an emergency to South Shore Hospital.

Ruth LeBlanc, director of social service and head of the hospital's Lifeline program, says the 50 units were first placed into service in early 1983. These units are now being used by residents of Abington, Braintree, Cohasset, Hanover, Hanson, Hingham, Holbrook, Hull, Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke, Rockland, Scituate, Whitman and Weymouth.

Due to strong demand, the hospital has acquired 31 additional Lifeline units which are now available to South Shore residents.

"Lifeline would be a perfect gift for a son or daughter to give their parents this Christmas. It's certainly one gift that can provide peace of mind during the coming year," says LeBlanc.

No doubt you have noticed several plywood patches on the south side of the Meeting House. The siding was removed in order to allow an engineer to inspect the interior of the wall and provide us with more accurate cost estimates of any work needing to be done. The plywood patches are a temporary measure to seal the wall until spring when it is anticipated that a restoration will be commenced. The patches are not pretty, but it did not seem to make sense to replace the siding at this time only to remove it again in a few months.

Ministerial Relations Committee

The Ministerial Relations Committee selected Sine Pounder to serve as chairperson. The committee has planned meetings for late January, mid March, and late April and wishes to encourage members to share concerns or suggestions they may have with regard to the Minister with them. Their purpose is to facilitate communications between the congregation and the minister and thereby to strengthen the quality of the ministry. The members of the committee are: Sine Pounder 383-6869, Lincoln Bloomfield 383-1360 and Dorothy Booth 383-0824.

From the Minister's Study

Two marvels of modern medical technology have been featured in the news in recent weeks, an animal to human heart transplantation and the implantation of a mechanical heart. Both operations raise serious ethical concerns.

The underlying assumption in these cases seems to be that we should preserve life at all costs. That is an assumption which ought to be challenged. Life, as mere existence is not for most of us the ultimate value or good. We live for purposes of service or pleasure which go beyond the preservation of self. Patrick Henry's immortal cry " . . . give me liberty or give me death!" or Jesus' statement that, "Greater love has no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends," are but two of the better known proclamations of allegiance to a value beyond self preservation.

Baby Fae was too young to have a say in whether or not she wished to donate her body to a rather dubious medical experiment. The parents and the surgeon made their choices under the noble banner of preserving life, but one cannot escape the observations that both stood to profit from their decision, the doctor through national notice and the mother through selling her story to a magazine, while, it was the baby who suffered the consequences. William Schroder, on the other hand, was able to make his own choice and is the primary person to experience the consequences. To the extent that his willingness to undergo an experimental procedure advances the possibility for others to enjoy extended useful life, his choice may be described as heroic.

I would hope, however, that the news media might give equal time to those who under similar circumstances and with no less heroism accept death as a welcome friend when it has become clear that there is no further purposeful life to be lived.

Second Congregational Church

Welcome new members! By vote of the Church Committee and affirmation of the congregation, seventeen new members were received last Sunday morning. As we welcome them, let us all remember our covenant of church membership: to support and participate in the church's life of worship, fellowship and benevolence, and to support one another in the pilgrimage of faith. A warm welcome to each of the following: Jane Bishop, Arlene Claiborne, Dane & Sandra Hahn, Charles & Francine Lindgren, Robert & Louise Littlehale, Ann Mitchell, David & Nadine Ronan, Doris Swain, Raymond & Gail Whitehouse, Robert & Lynn Zelms, Bruce Doten.

Famine Relief

Since long before the famine in Ethiopia became headline news, our denomination has cooperated with Church World Service and other public and private agencies to deal with the long-term food crisis in Africa. It is a complicated crisis, and will not be solved by money alone; some have even called it a "political famine" because it can be traced more to human policies than to "acts of God." Members of our church, responding to a special appeal for help, have contributed $1200 to support the church's work in famine-threatened countries. If you want to help, perhaps with a special holiday gift, label the check (payable to our church) with the words "Famine Relief." Thank you.

Christmas Services

We will observe the fourth Sunday in Advent, December 23, as a Family Service. The final chapter of the Advent story, "The Creatures' Gifts," will be told; we will also have a Christmas story in place of the sermon. Christmas Eve services are at 7 (especially for families with young children) and 11 (the Christmas Eve Communion Service.) Both are candlelight services.

Gifts for Children

Some gifts for needy children — gloves, hats, toys and games — have already appeared under the Christmas tree near our door to the sanctuary. Plan to bring your gifts this week, if possible, so that they can be distributed. If you wrap the gift, please label it (e.g. "girl pre-school").

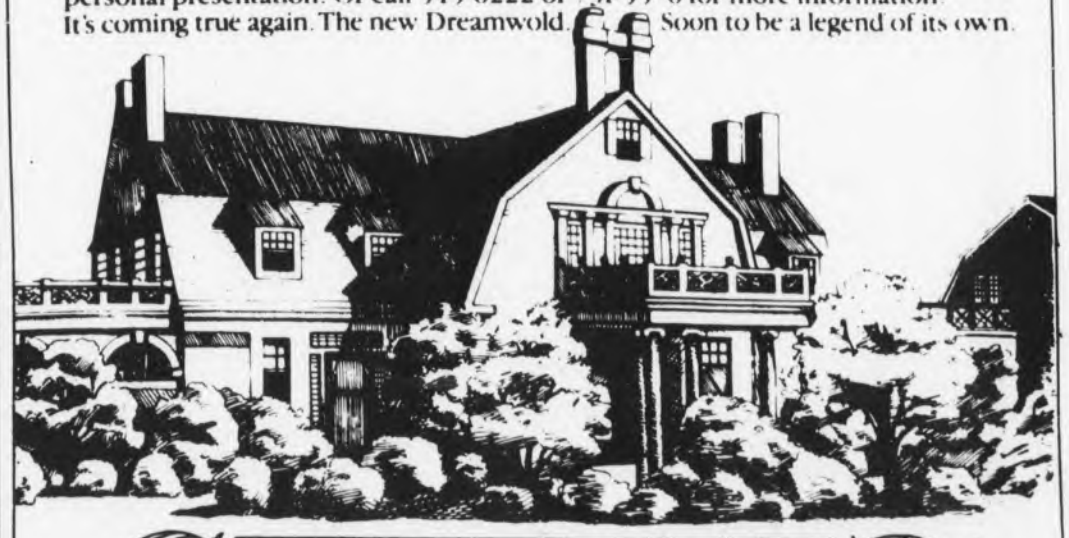
Once upon a time, not so far away, a brave Copper King built an enchanted kingdom in a land by the sea.



There in Scituate, he surrounded his mansion with idyllic pastures and formal gardens. Then built a fairy tale tower to watch over his dream.

Some said he was eccentric. Others said he was vain. But in truth, the legendary millionaire, Thomas Lawson, was building a beautiful haven as a gift for his beloved family. And in 1903, Dreamwold came true.

Now it's coming true again. All the majesty, privacy and splendor that was Dreamwold. In twenty-six unique Victorian condominium residences encircling a spectacular rose garden and beautiful swimming pool.

Dreamwold. A magnificent blend of historic restoration and new construction as only Boston's premier developer, Parencorp, could do.

This fall, Dreamwold is available at pre-completion prices, starting in the mid-100's. Visit Dreamwold between 11:00 AM and 6:00 PM daily for a personal presentation. Or call 545-0222 or 731-5570 for more information. It's coming true again. The new Dreamwold. Soon to be a legend of its own.

These great faces belong to Rebecca Jenkins and Kate Corrigan at the Osgood Elementary School. (Carol McCann)

☐ Brenda Birmann of Cohasset, a member of the Middlebury College choir, recently participated in the nationally televised performance of "Christmas in Vermont . . . A Celebration of Lessons and Carols".

Ms. Birmann was the solo soprano in the carol, "In Freezing Winter Night". The Christmas service was based upon the traditional Advent service presented in King's Chapel at Cambridge University, England. The choir, which toured extensively in this country, was featured in the hour-long holiday special. The program included the works of several well-known composers as well as traditional Christmas music. Interspersing the musical works were several Christmas readings performed by members of the College community.

Ms. Birmann is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gerhard Birmann of Cohasset, Massachusetts.

☐ Happy December birthdays to Marjorie Cox, Marion Mulcahy, Madeline Kunstler, Sarah Banziger and Edith Ward. All are residents at Cohasset Knoll. New patients there are Maida Shaffer, Hazel Dyment, and Madeline Freel.

☐ Congratulations go to James M. Driscoll for making the Headmasters List at Derby Academy; and to John Manning, Anthony Morgan, and Kristine Pozatek who made Second Honors (students who have at least a B average).

☐ Another reminder that the Boosters Club still has all of the CHS items on sale, in time for Christmas gifts. They will make great ideas, and can double as a school spirit gesture when the fans wear them to their favorite basketball or hockey game.

☐ Congratulations to Mrs. Thomas Doggett of Hugh Strain Road, who received recognition for her essay on "What My Family Means to Me."

☐ "Cinderella" was talked about all week last week, ask anyone who went to the production. It was marvelous, and even the "out of towners" heard enough "rave reviews" to be sure to go to the performance. Hats off to all of the cast and crew for a good job well done.

☐ Its easy for one to see how she got her name as we take time to wish Holly Pompeo a happy birthday.

☐ Chris Laugelle is hard at work at Stop and Shop these days . . . good to see him back!

☐ Dick Ainslie and his family all went to Edaville Railroad last week, and reported that it is truly a sight to see. They claim that this is the last year they will be open, so be sure to take the little ones (and especially the big ones) so that they won't miss the sight.

☐ Kevin Quilty, a student at Lawrence Academy, and Jeff O'Neill, a student at Belmont Hill, played hockey against one another a few weeks ago. They were both members of the CHS hockey team, it must have seemed strange to play opposite teams!

☐ The next few weeks are certainly "newsy" ones, be sure to let me know what's going on so that everyone can share in your news.

☐ Happy Holidays!

Obituary

William E. Poland

A funeral Mass was held this morning in St. Anthony's Church for William Edward Poland, 68, a former Cohasset School Committee member and Water Commissioner, who died unexpectedly Monday morning at home.

Burial was in Woodside Cemetery.

Born in Cohasset, Poland was a prominent South Shore businessman and sporting enthusiast.

For several years, he operated automotive service stations in Cohasset Village and along Chief Justice Cushing Highway. He was also involved in local real estate developments.

Poland was a Vice President of Cohasset Savings Bank, of which he was a trustee and a member of the Board of Investment. He was also associated with Jack Conway Realtors.

Educated in Cohasset schools, Poland was active in town government. From 1952 - 1963 he served on the Cohasset School Committee. He was on the Water Commission from 1965 until 1968.

School committee member Richard Conley took time out of Monday night's committee meeting to pay respect to Poland. "Bill was active in the high school building committee and when the Deer Hill School was built. He was a very dedicated person to this town. He was a big, big booster of the youth of this town. There wasn't a boy in the 50's and 60's who Bill could not find a job for," Conley said. He then requested that selectmen order all town flags flown at half mast until the completion of the funeral services.

During World War II, he was a member of the U.S. Air Corps, as a flight crew member, principally in the European Theatre. He took part on the ferrying of paratroopers during the D-Day invasion of Normandy.

Poland was an enthusiastic golfer, and was a member of the Hatherly Country Club.

He leaves his wife, Helen Elizabeth (Lamb); a son, William E. Poland Jr. of Dennis; a daughter, Mrs. Ann Corkery of Cohasset; four grandchildren; and two sisters, Kathleen Murphy of Arizona and Abigail Corkery of Cohasset.

In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to the American Cancer Society, 47 West Elm Street, Brockton, Mass. 02401.

Christmas wishes

We hope everyone has a beautiful and memorable holiday season. Tis the season for good cheer and good will toward others.

In that vain, we are publishing our own wish list for the coming new year.

- to School Committee member Jack Langmaid, good health and the continued strength to voice his independent convictions.

- to Charlie DeSantis, a close relative who becomes regional administrator of the EPA.

- to Recreation Director Jack Worley, continuation of a great imagination which creates and adminsters the best recreation program on the South Shore.

- to Town Clerk Frances Marks, a promise of all landslide election contests.

- to Water Commissioner Peter Pratt, a pulpit.

- to Fire Chief Martin Dooley, a live-in attorney.

- to the police union, a quick contract settlement, or a year's free supply of posterboards and snappy sayings.

- to Supt. Eugene Crowell, a town meeting audience which nods their heads in unison saying, "sure, sure whatever you want."

- to the Historic Common District Commission, a graffiti-crazed spray painter.

- to Donald Staszko, enough money and patience to last the several more years it will take to see his shopping plaza project amended again and reviewed.

- to Town Counsel Richard Henderson, a choice selection of young attorneys, eager to accept the minimal salary offered by the town.

- to the ducks at the Common pond, clean, Blue water next spring.

- to the Barron Salvadors, approval by the town to convert their parking lot into an airfield to begin a Federal Express franchise.

- to the Mariner, the hope that all will accept this in the spirit it was intended.

Cohasset is a great town, and has experienced a year full with triumphs and disappointments. May we all enjoy a better year in 1985.

A new look

Just a comment on the newly-refurbished interior of Town Hall. The painting of the auditorium and the corridors has been completed, and it looks like a totally different place.

The auditorium sparkles with clean white walls and ceilings. It looks like the perfect New England Town Hall it was intended to be.

Painter John Sadler and crew are to be complimented for a fine job. For a building that was ignored for too long, the new coat of paint has made a world of difference.

The Great Cabbage Patch caper

By Claire McDonough

Flora and I were trying out some new herbal tea when Fauna burst into my kitchen, eyes wild, hair unkempt, and looked at us pleadingly.

"You have to help me," she begged.

"Calm down," I soothed. "Nothing's so bad a nice cup of camomile tea won't help."

Fauna shook her head. "The only cup that might help wold be a cup of hemlock. It's Robin."

Flora put her arm around Fauna's shoulder. "Your granddaughter? Is she ill? Is it something she ate?"

Fauna shook her head. "It's something she said. I never thought I'd hear those words from sweet little Robin.

"She must get it from her father's side of the family. Certainly Bambi never said anything like that when she was little."

Flora patted her hand. "You can tell us. What did she say?"

Fauna closed her eyes and gritted her teeth. "She said the nine words calculated to strike terror into a grandmother's heart."

Realization dawned. "You mean . . . ?" I gasped.

Fauna nodded, "She said, 'Grandma, I want a Cabbage Patch doll for Christmas.' "

We looked at her in stunned sympathy. According to all accounts, people react more calmly to news of an impending mud slide than they do to a rumor their local store has a shipment of Cabbage Patchers.

"Maybe there's hope," I said lamely. "Someone told me Caldor's was expecting a fresh supply."

"Forget it," Fauna replied bitterly. "I offered them my savings account and Bill's mother's silver. They laughed."

"Weird sense of humor," Flora commented. "Maybe you could run an ad in the Mariner."

"It's too near Christmas for that," Fauna replied. "And anyway, no one gives up a Cabbage Patch doll. No, I found another way to solve the problem.

"You know those Cabbage Patch type dolls on the market?"

"Fauna, you didn't!" I groaned. "Didn't you read that those may be unsafe? You don't know what's inside those dolls."

"Oh," she replied, "the one I bought was safe enough. I got it at a church fair. It looks just like the genuine article, it's soft and cuddly, and I know Robin will love it."

"Great," Flora smiled. "So what's the problem?"

Fauna blushed. "Well, I understand there's a way to tell a real Cabbage Patch doll from a counterfeit. Robin's a bright little thing, and I was afraid she'd notice the difference."

"You mean . . . " we chorused.

Fauna nodded. "I took a magic marker and wrote 'Xavier' on the left derriere. I know it was wrong, but I was desperate.

"Do you know what the penalty for forgery is?"

Flora shook her head. "I don't know, but it probably depends on whether there was intent to defraud Fern's husband is a lawyer. I'll see if she can find out."

While we waited for Flora to complete her call, I patted Fauna's hand.

"If worse comes to worse," I assured her, "I'll bake you a cake with a file in it."

When Flora came back into the room she was smiling.

"Bill said not to worry," she told us. "So far there's no felony on the books called 'Impersonating a Cabbage Patch doll.' "

To the Editor:

I have read the article and seen the artwork the Mariner did on us concerning Christmas in Cohasset sponsored by the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce. You did an outstanding job in covering the event and we appreciate all you and your staff did on our behalf. We are indeed fortunate to have such a great hometown newspaper.

I will be talking to you again soon to give you an update on what we are doing.

Season's Greetings

This youth sings traditional Chanukah songs such as "Rock of Ages," signifying the re-dedication of the Temple from Syrian domination.

Freedom to light and observe marks Hanukkah family celebration

Photos by Bill Quigley

By Mike Berger

Beginning Tuesday night Dec. 18 and for the next eight nights, Jews around the world will be commemorating the Festival of Lights, also known as Hanukkah, Hanukah or Chanukah.

This holiday is one of the most joyous celebrations of the Jewish year. In a sense it is comparable to the American celebration of July 4 or Independence Day.

Historically it reminds the world of the ancient tribe of the Maccabees and their fight for religious and national survival against Syrian domination.

This event was climaxed by recapturing the Temple of Jerusalem from the Syrians. When it was recaptured and the temple re-dedicated, it was first-thought there would only be enough oil for the eternal flame to burn for one night.

Miraculously, it burned for eight days.

To commemorate this holiday, Jews will light the candles, give gifts and eat special foods for eight days.

Thjere are special songs and foods to highlight the holiday such as potato latkes pancakes, roast goose, and kugel or pudding.

Hanukkah, in 1984, is a message to all nations that religious freedom is sacred and yet often takes a hard fought struggle.

The Festival of Lights, celebrated around the winter solstice, also symbolizes togetherness and the freedom to observe and worship as a family.

Members of Congregation Sha'aray Shalom in Hingham met last Sunday to discuss the meaning of Hanukkah in 1984.

Rabbi Stephen Karol of Congregation Sha'-aray Shalom displays the various Hanukkah literature and also explains the meaning of the holiday menorah or candelabrum.

Children raise their hands to respond to questions from the rabbi concerning the historical and cultural signifcance of the holiday.

School committee attempts some budget trimming

School Supt. Eugene Crowell proposed a list of reductions throughout the proposed 1985-1986 budget, creating a school budget $100,000 thinner, and much closer to the recommendations of the advisory committee.

Without the elimination of any teaching positions, Supt. Crowell has reduced his previously-recommended fiscal 1985 budget to $4,291,335, about $30,000 off the mark recommended by the advisory committee. The school committee screened these recommended changes Monday night as they reviewed the proposed budget line by line.

Although the superintendent has made substantial suggested reductions, the proposed budget does not include any provisions for negotiated salary increases for next year.

The majority of the budget items axed from the proposed budget were $100 to $500 cuts. A few, including a proposed estimated $28,000 appropriation for an electrical lighting board for the high school auditorium, might possibly be included as special warrant articles at the annual town meeting.

School committee members said that the tradition has been for the committee to include large capital expenditures in its requested budget. All other town departments request large expenditures from the free cash reserve through town meeting approval.

Supt. Crowell said at the committee's next budget meeting Jan. 7, he will draw up a list of recommended capital expense requests so spaces may be reserved for the annual town meeting warrant.

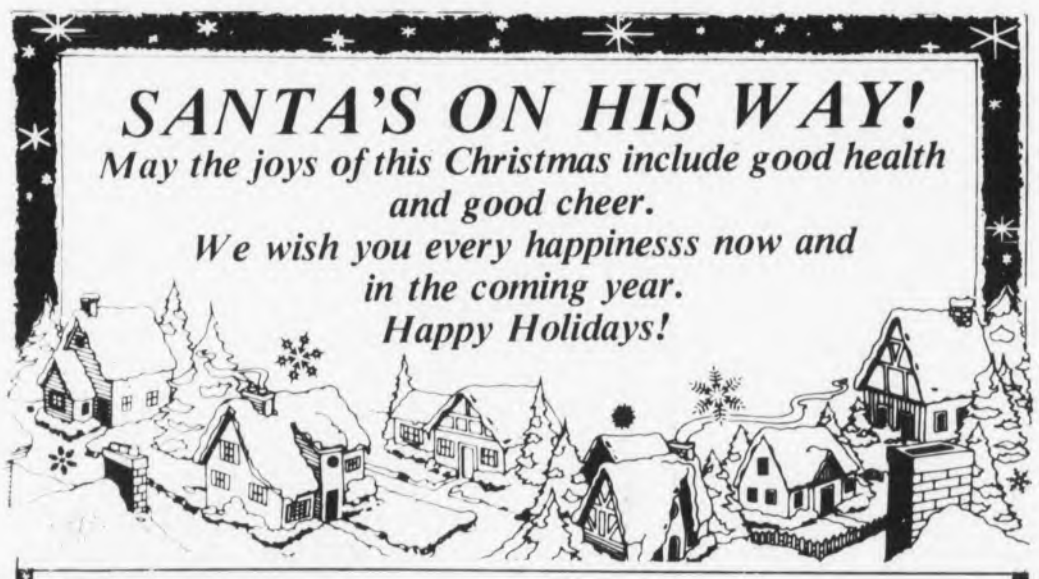
Another large area that may be removed from the projected budget is about $13,000 in unemployment insurance. As Supt. Crowell explained, because no teachers were scheduled for lay offs, there would be no need for this account next year.

The list of items included in the superintendent's reductions were: $2000 from the administration's advertising budget to a total of $300; $1000 from a $6000 administration tutoring account; half of a $3500 group testing account; a possible salary rollover of $13,000 in the Osgood School physical education budget, where a less experienced instructor would possibly be hired to replace a retired, experienced teacher.

Also, $500 reduced from a $975 Osgood School teacher workshop account; $1000 from the previously proposed health education account; $1000 from a $5000 high school library supplies account; $500 from a library periodical supplies account; $1000 from the $1796 high school science audio-visual budget; $500 from the $2500 high school Xerox budget; and $305 from the $2000 high school supplies and materials account.

Milliken Field renovations

A group of residents requested Monday night that the school committee support their plans to renovate Milliken Field.



The field, located directly behind the high school, is used primarily by the school football, soccer and track teams. The land is not owned by the school department however, and is adjacent to property owned and maintained by the town's Water Department.

A number of residents, lead by Gridiron Club President Kenneth Ekberg, outlined the proposed renovations. It is their intention to seek an estimate of the cost to provide architectural renderings of the renovations, and to request the appropriation from the advisory committee. Once that money for the study is in hand, the ad hoc group would attempt to develop a warrant article for town meeting review, requesting additional monies to complete the project.

Although Ekberg said the estimations are "very, very rough," it could cost about $200,000 or $300,000 for all renovations. The cost of constructing a new track field is the most expensive component in the field renovation, he added.

If the project cost $1/4 million to complete, it would mean about $27,000 for the town, or about $12 or $13 a year per household.

The renovation plans were first discussed about 10 years ago, Supt. Crowell noted, but everything was scrapped about four years ago with Prop. 2 1/2. Prompted by the Booster Clubs, the idea was brought

EVIE YOUNG

BARBADOS

The small pear-shaped island of Barbados, at the extreme eastern edge of the West Indies archipelago, is a friendly place. It is noticably British, with a long history of social and political stability. Of course, it also has the pink and white beaches, year-round 80-degree weather, warm, aquamarine waters and duty-free shopping that are the staples of a Caribbean holiday. However, Barbados is more than that. Anyone who ventures off to explore discovers fine Jacobean mansions, a pirate's castle, hilltop parish churches, limestone caves, botanical gardens and some of the most stunning coastal scenery anywhere in the West Indies. Ultimately, however, what impresses one most about Barbados is its friendly people.

TRAVEL TIP:
For natural beauty, nothing compares to Barbados' eastern coast.

With winter approaching we should be preparing for the first snowfall. I receive many calls from homeowners with ice damns in their gutters and leaks along their outside walls.

Because of improved product development and application, these problems are now preventable. By applying a synthetic ice and water shield membrane under a shingled roof, we make the first three feet of your roof completely waterproof. It is a simple and efficient remedy that can be done any time.

In the meantime, if ice back-up occurs your only recourse is to chop away the ice and shovel the snow from the roof edge. Do this very carefully to avoid any damage to the roof or gutters.

Finally, whenever you have roofing or siding done on your home, ask for a Massachusetts Builder's License and insurance. Both are required by law.

Plans begin for field renovations to life again a few months ago.

Ekberg noted that the group would like the support of the school committee. But it is the selectmen's authority which they must seek to begin the project.

Among the items listed for renovation are: repositioning the playing fields so there is more playing surface; repositioning and repairing the existing track; refencing the total field area and construction of a cable television and reporting booth; construction of a vandal-proof equipment storage facility; a lighting system for nigh games; and regrassing the needed areas.

Although school committee member Jack Langmaid said he would not be in favor of installing a lighting system on the field "until the town can afford to light the streets these kids will be walking on," Forest Avenue resident Charles DeSantis said he recently discovered the night games were the trend in most school sports programs, attracting more parents to games, and more revenue to the school systems.

The committee voted unanimously to support the plans of the community ad hoc group.

Free coffee over Christmas & New Years

The Massachusetts Turnpike Authority today announced to motorists that free coffee will be served at restaurants on the turnpike over Christmas and New Year holiday weekends.

The gesture is intended to remind motorists that rest stops and coffee stops can help keep drivers alert, thereby improving driving performance. All too often motorists in a rush to arrive at their destination become fatigued and a pause along the turnpike will enhance safe travel.

Certificates will be distributed at the toll plazas, which allow motorists to be served coffee without charge from 10 p.m. Tuesday, Dec. 25, through 7 a.m. on Wednesday, Dec. 26, and 10 p.m. Monday, Dec. 31, through 7 a.m. Tuesday, Jan. 1, 1985.

The Turnpike Authority thanks the Howard Johnson Company for their generous contribution toward highway safety.

Merchants merry this Christmas of the shop over the last seven years, more merchandise, and a better selection," Lyne also believes much of the shop's growth is due to the fact that the "business is still maturing."

Lyne feels people shop in his sporting goods store rather than in a mall or large retail store because of the "crowds and the lack of personel service at the malls." "We know most of our customers," he said, "we know they'll be in at Christmas. Our customers get the personal service they don't get in the malls."

King Jewelers, established in 1921, is the oldest jewler in the South Shore, and according to owner, Forrest King, the store is having a good Christmas season.

"Most people are using cash" King said to purchase "diamonds, pearls, and gold. Bigger ticket items are selling more than smaller ticket items," he said. "People are buying quality merchandise, because the economy is better and spirits are up."

People shop at King Jewelers rather than shopping at a mall for their jewelry and gifts, King said, "because I am extremely well established. People know I sell quality. Everybody gets the same service whether they are a $10 customer or at $10,000 customer. The $10 customer today could be the $10,000 customer in the future."

King anticipates that the Saturday before Christmas will be the busiest day dollarwise for the store.

"We will bring in more money on Saturday," King said. However, Christmas Eve Day will be the busiest in terms of the amount of items sold. Many people, King said, purchase "last minute stocking gifts" on Christmas Eve Day.

Will and June Stonier, managers of the Red Balloon children's shop, said business started out slow this year compared to last year. June Stonier believes the warm weather has something to do with this slow start. "Business had picked up in the last week or so," she added, and will probably reach its peak on the Saturday before Christmas.

The Red Balloon sells a variety of children's gifts including toys, books, and clothing. Some of their biggest selling items this Christmas season are construction toys such as marble runs for children three to seven years old, and Legos and Capsella for children seven years and older.

"Creative things are also selling well," she said. Everything from puppets, marionettes, and easels for drawing and paintings have painting have picked up in sales over the past week.

Although the Red Balloon does not carry Cabbage Patch Dolls, June Stonier said the craze for these dolls has created a new interest in other kinds of dolls which seem to be selling well this year.

Both Will and June Stonier feel people shop at their children's shop rather than at a large toy store because they offer "good quality toys at reasonable prices." "We present personal service," Mr. Stonier said. "We try and help our customers select the right toy for the right age," June Stonier added. "We tailor the toys to the children's needs," he said. "I want to be of service to my customers," he added.

Cohasset Colonial Furniture store has already had its Christmas rush for this season. "The busiest days are over," owner John Hagerty said, because he does 95% of his business through mail orders. Nevertheless Hagerty is still selling retail at his store in Cohasset Plaza up until Christmas Eve Day.

Cohasset Colonials has been in the mail order business for 35 years selling museum reproduction furnitre kits, paints, wallpaper borders, brass lamps, pewter, and rag rugs. "Through our catalogue you can buy a complete colonial environment for your home," Hagerty said.

"We will help you coordinate rooms," Hagerty said, adding, "you can work with us through the mail to devise your own formula and help you make decisions." Cohasset Colonials also make quilts and coordinating fabrics for already existing pieces of furniture purchased at the store.

Hagerty said business this year has made for their best Christmas. "The economy is stronger," he said, "retail sales are up 1.8% over last month. It hasn't been a lack-luster Christmas."

Although Hagerty believes the economy's rate of growth has been positive for businesses, he does not believe it will last long.

"In the next six months it's going to catch up with us," he said. Yet, Hagerty anticipates next Christmas will be as good as this one. "We anticipated this Christmas would be good; and he said, "and we sold more aggressively."

Hagerty believes people shop at Cohasset Colonials because of the service his store can provide during the holiday season.

Several of Hagerty's employees are from Cohasset. "The people who serve you," Hagerty said, "want to please you. The traffic problems and the crowds, are also deterents from shopping at the malls. Large department store sales people are usually hired two weeks before the Christmas rush." The sales personnel are not qualified to assist customers in decisions about what is best for them and their home, he added.

"There are many incentives for citizens to shop in Cohasset," Hagerty said. "Our identity with our town is critical to us. Cohasset Colonials does more to promote the name of our town than any national organization," he said.

"Customers can buy items at Cohasset Colonials for the same price or less than at Jordan Marsh. The idea that merchants charge more for their products just because their businesses are in Cohasset is a fallacy," Hagerty said.

Another incentive to shop at Cohasset Colonials is that this store is the only one in the South Shore which sells museum reproduct five percent pay raise, but the loss of one week vacation and a drop to 65 percent rather than 100 percent buy back days.

The union members feel that the pay discrepancy tempts officers to move elsewhere for more money after being trained in Cohasset on town money.

When asked what the officers would do if contract negotiations remained at a standstill despite their protests, officer Jones proclaimed, "every officer in town who's not working is right here and we're going to be back, and back, and back. There's no way they're going to break our backs."

Buy back days are given to retiring officers who have not used up their allotted sick days. The buy back plan has been in effect in Cohasset for seven years. The police officers declined the redirection in buy back days, feeling they shouldn't lose benefits to equal pay

Tis the season to be lucky

By Jane Lane

While Christmas shopping in New York this weekend, I noticed a phenomenon not unique to that state. I call it the Easy Money Syndrome. That's where thousands of people are duped into believing they will become millionaires through the generosity of organizations that don't give a damn.

Commentary

As I traveled past news stores and convenience shops, I had to make frequent stops. The lines of human beings waiting to play the weekly Lotto game, the New York equivalent to Megabucks, made it impossible to pass. As drizzle fell from the dark, thick clouds shrouded over this grey city, hundreds of cheerless people stood frozen in a chain that wound around street corners and parking lots.

The jackpot last weekend was $20 million. A grand sum that could go far this Christmas, and into the unending future.

With dollar bills clutched firmly in gloveless hands, people waited hours to get up to the clerk, and place their bet against the state. As if they had a chance. All the while, televisions were bellowing in their homes "Have you played your number today?"

What's wrong with you, are you nuts? You mean you didn't play your lucky number? How will you ever get the extra cash you need for Christmas shopping if you don't play Lotto?

Cars registered in New Jersey, monuments of junk on wheels, were jammed into parking lots, which left little space for Christmas shoppers. Tis the season to get lucky.

It's the same in this state, as in all others. People who have never worshipped in church, attend Bingo faithfully each Monday or Wednesday night. Gals with inspirational plastic Madonnas at their side, play 20 cards and make b i g bucks. But not before they spend their hard-earned cash to place those bets. Need some extra dough? Get to the nearest K of C Bingo game and it will pay off big.

It's a social event. It's a social disease. People use every excuse not to attend exercise class that night, or visit Aunt Milly in the hospital, or go to work. You can bet your last buck they'll be at Bingo.

What is it? Is life so bad, so dismal, that our only chance for happiness rides on a dollar bet? It's depressing to think so. But remembering the faces of the potential millionaires in New York this weekend has brought forth a new dimension of desperation. The odds are against us. Our chances of achieving happiness seem slim.

"The thing of it is that I've proved myself. I've provided good service. The boats are well maintained to keep running. We have spare engines, spare parts, so we can make repairs as soon as needed. I have one of the finest General Motors diesel mechanics around (recently, he has joined business forces with Worldwide Diesel, a marine servicing company who wanted to expand north from Texas, where they were located—they have taken over Building 47 at the shipyard, where the parts for the two boats are stored). We have well-trained crews. And the commuters are satisfied. You just go and talk to them.

"What I don't understand," he continued, "is why the state would want to put in an entirely new company for the runs I've been servicing very well."

Passengers on the boat were even blunter. "Without Dana, the business would have gone nowhere. We wouldn't have had anything the last four months and the six to eight weeks in the past when the Gracious Lady had broken down," said Steven Woodman of Cohasset.

Others were eager to chime in. "We're writing to (Transportation Secretary Fred) Salvucci to get him to at least listen. Here we have a comfortable and convenient service that could be turned into a nightmare. We're perfectly happy with the job Dana's doing. Why change anything?"

At least 30 letters were dispatched to various state officials, including Salvucci, by Tuesday.

"I would look for a job south of Boston if Dana's service were stopped," said Mary Kay Walsh of Weymouth vehemently. "How can the state do this after Dana came in, when the other boat broke down, and did a great job? I have never been late for work and I've never been unreasonably late (more than 15 or 20 minutes) getting home at night. What you can say is that one third of the fleet has been out of service, but no one was late."

Goodell distributed a letter to his passengers Monday morning saying he would discontinue service if the Gracious Lady deal went through. But in an interview Tuesday afternoon, he said he had no intention of going ahead with that plan.

Cohasset kids eagerly anticipate Santa's arrival

It's the little things that mean so much to Christopher Vezing as he shows his mom, Margaret, a just-acquired candy cane.

Santa gets the high five as he arrives for breakfast at the Community Center.

The anticipation is almost too much to bear for the children eagerly awaiting Santa's arrival for breakfast.

A spellbound audience encircles Santa and Mrs. Claus at Saturday's breakfast at the Cohasset Community Center.

a thorough hydrogeological study of the watershed area. Selectmen concurred with their choice.

The next step is for the Watershed Protection District Committee to define a scope of study for the engineers. Hopefully, according to Water Commissioner Peter Pratt, the engineers will begin an intensive, one-year study early next month.

The reason for conducting such a comprehensive test is to provide data for future zoning bylaws which will restrict development along the town's water supply. The testing material is necessary in order to provide the town with a legally-defensible bylaw.

Another issue which the Water Commission is currently investigating is the potentially hazardous situation at Cohasset Heights Landfill. Camp, Dresser and McKee has been conducting that test since the beginning of the summer. A final draft report should be readied by the first of the new year, according to Pratt.

Assistant Town Counsel John Slater has been working along with special Town Counsel Bud Corkin on both issues. Pratt indicated that there will be a series of meeting between the selectmen, water commissioners and town counsel on the Cohasset Heights matter, "defining strategy and negotiating the town's options" regarding the possiblity of future litigation against the landfill owners.

In a related issue, water commissioners and selectmen are keeping a close watch on the recently-discovered toxic wastes found at Wompatuck State Park. Pratt said through the efforts of retiring Senator Allan McKinnon, the state Department of Environmental Management and the DEQE have completed a site inspection at the hazardous waste dump area.

Supposedly, Pratt added, DEM will be hiring a hazardous waste disposal firm to clean the contaminated bunkers in the park. A report to be issued by the state agencies regarding the extent of contamination, is being anxiously awaited by the town, Pratt added.

Police and fire departments

There has not been a derth of news from these departments during 1984. Although the police department is usually the quieter of the two, tradition was broken a few weeks ago when union members staged a quiet but defiant protest at a selectmen's meeting.

A "fact-finding" session last week between the police union and the town, negotiated by a representative of the state management board, was not successful. A second round was scheduled this week. The police association has been without a contract since July 1.

The firefighters struggle with their chief endured another long year. According to Chief Martin Dooley, the selectmen have not been willing to sit down and negotiate his contract which expires next January.

Although he has recently requested that selectmen sit down to discuss contract terms, he has not received a reply.

The firefighters association, like the police, continue to work without a contract. A spokesman for the union said they will continue to negotiate with the town to resolve their differences. Both police and fire have argued that the biggest problem has been the presence of legal counsel hired by the town to negotiate the contract. This is the first time the town has decided to use an outside negotiator.

Executive secretary search

The town lost Executive Secretary Mark Lanza this fall when he accepted a higher-paying position in Westwood. Although a new administrator was hired a month ago, negotiations with the candidate were suddenly called off by the Connecticut resident.

Selectmen have been reviewing the eight top resumes they had received in their previous selection process. As of this week, two candidates have been considered for the post. Selectmen will probably make a final choice by the end of this week. Both men have indicated they are willing to accept the position at the current $25,000 salary level, and are immediately available.

Ambulance purchase

Special town meeting in June appropriated $50,000 for the purchase of a new vehicle to replace the rapidly-decaying fire department ambulance.

Although everyone's intentions were good, the purchase did not follow until late October. The department expected to see their new appropriation within 45-60 days.

In the meantime, the town spent several thousand dollars in repairs to the old vehicle. More than $2000 was spent in August alone, and the ambulance was out of service for weeks at a time.

Murray's Memos: Study needed for more jails

By Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray

Prison Overcrowding Need for New Jails

The nation's prison population has skyrocketed over two-fold in the last decade. As a result prison administrators have been beset by overcrowding, violence, money shortages and lawsuits over poor living conditions. In fact, a majority of states in the U.S. are now under court order to remedy what judges have deemed cruel and unusual punishment. City officials in Boston are under court order to devise a plan to take care of overcrowding.

Despite the rising number of criminal convictions and the declining state of the incarceration facilities, prison construction is lagging far behind prison population growth. Perhaps the most disturbing result of overcrowding in prisons is the passage of new emergency release laws that simply allow a facility to turn inmates loose before their time is served. Also, courts are trying to alleviate the problem by reducing bail for some inmates. Many of the offenders who are released are added to the already overworked and increasingly unsuccessful parole system.

Private, For Profit Prisons

In the past few years a revolutionary idea for dealing with the prison system has emerged: private, for-profit prisons. Private corporations are currently under contract with public agencies such as the U.S. Bureau of Prisons, the Immigration and Naturalization Service, and several local governments.

The issue of privatization brings with it many legal and ethical barriers. These can be lessened if we concern ourselves not with prisons (state and federally run centers) or with jails (run by local government), but with small scale specialty facilities. According to the National Institute of Corrections, experts stated that the most preferable type of facility for private sector management would be a small, 200 bed or less minimum security institution with single rooms and without perimeter barriers, located in either a rural or suburban area.

Possible Use for Drunk Drivers

Perhaps the most feasible area for privatization of the penal system in Massachusetts concerns the drunk driver. Whether we decide to continue in the traditional vein of state run facilities or innovate and test the efficacy of private enterprise, something has to be done about the drunk driver in Massachusetts. As the Patriot Ledger said in an article, "The State should immediately provide more places for alcohol counseling . . . otherwise, the state is making a mockery of the drunk driving law."

Worth Looking Into:

An amendment to the Presumptive Sentencing Bill is included in the 1985 Republican Legislative Package, a bill dealing solely with prisons for profit. The amendment and the bill authorize a Commission to study the feasibility of such a system in Massachusetts. It is certainly worth at least a look, especially if the Presumptive Sentencing Bill is enacted tightening up sentencing and parole. Our prisons cannot withstand any further overcrowding at this time.

States including California, Texas, Pennsylvania, Colorado, Arizona, Florida and Tennessee currently contract out certain types of minimum security prison management to private industry.

Happy Holidays!

See you in 1985

Let's have an old fashioned Christmas

By Don Sarney

I remember promising myself while growing up that I would never become one of those "grown-ups" who say, "When I was a kid . . . "

Sound familiar? Well guess what? I grew up, and boy do I cherish all those childhood memories - especially when it comes to Christmas.

Sure, we all tend to exaggerate a little bit when reminiscing, but just think back - think back to when Christmas was truly Christmas.

Commentary

Remember the warm feeling you got listening to Bing Crosby sing "White Christmas," or Nat King Cole crooning out "Chestnuts Roasting on an Open Fire"? Even Jimmy Boyd's confession, "I Saw Mommy Kissing Santa Claus," pulled at the heartstrings. Remember those Perry Como and Andy Williams Specials when the families of all the stars and crew would gather around the Christmas tree and exchange gifts, and seemed to be sharing it all with you? Of course, my favorite was the "I Remember Mama Special," when the animals would talk on Christmas Eve.

Think back to when Santa Claus would look like Santa Claus, instead of the polyester slick version kids get today. It used to be a real treat to see Santa once before Christmas. It was common sense to see him just once - Santa was usually busy at the North Pole supervising his elves. Today, you can't go to a mall, turn on the TV, or even go to the local laundromat without bumping into jolly old St. Nick. And you certainly didn't see Santa Claus starring in a movie as a psychopathic killer.

Santa is no longer a treat, he's a nuisance! Obviously, Coleco, Mattel, and Milton Bradley are now making the toys, because Santa is too busy ho-ho-hoing on every street corner and popping into every local Christmas party in the neighborhood.

What a treat it used to be to go into Boston with your family and ogle the lavish Christmas lights on the Common, or stroll down Washington and Tremont Streets to gaze with fascination at the animated storefronts.

Now, between the traffic, parking, and two dollar pretzels, a Christmas excursion into Boston has become Excedrin Headache #1!

Yes, unfortunately, Christmas has succumbed to our plastic money society. Just turn your TV set to any channel on Saturday morning and watch the brainwashing tactics used by Madison Avenue to teach our children that "bigger is better", and "giving is measured in dollars and cents." Stop and ask a young boy how much a G.I. Joe Hovercraft is worth and he'll tell you right to the penny, but ask him to explain the meaining of Christmas and all you'll get is a blank stare.

But not me! I'm not giving in! I would still rather have Aunt Alice's peanut butter fudge than Perugina's special "hand-dipped Almond Clusters". Give me Mom's hand-made ski sweaters (which I never really appreciated), not Yves St. Laurent's overpriced version of "chic".

Maybe I am a bit cynical and old fashioned, but I'll never forget giving my parents those indistinguishable lumps of clay that I worked so hard on in grammar school, and watching the glint in their eyes when I'd say, "Mom, Dad, it's not much, but it's for you."

I don't want to hear "only 65 more shopping days until Christmas." I don't want to watch town crews erecting the Christmas decorations two weeks before Thanksgiving. Christmas used to be so unique, something you waited all year long for. It had meaning. It had substance. It had class!

But whose fault is it that we let this monster called commercialism and greed steal our memories and rob us of our "good will to men"? I think it's still there in all of us - we just have to search a little deeper.

So throw away that artificial tree and put up with those dastardly pine needles. Take the time to string some popcorn and handpaint ornaments. Take some friends carolling to a senior citizens or nursing home. Sit down with your kids and read them the story of the first Christmas without Ozzy Osborne blaring in the background. Put on that old Christmas album that's been stored away, sit back, close your eyes and say to yourself, "When I was a kid . . . "

Merry Christmas and to all a good night.

It was a gala night last Sunday at the Ripley Road Nursing Home as Santa and his elves made an appearance at the annual Christmas party.

According to Lynn Zelms, activity director at the nursing home, there were about 100 residents and family friends gathered together. Along with Santa and several elves, the residents and guests enjoyed an evening of caroling, singing and piano playing.

Zelms said this year's Yuletide event was "one of the best ever."

Chanukah explained from the 'Ch' to the H

By Elisabeth Gorfinkle

To pronounce Chanukah, the "ch" has to come out as if you are clearing your throat.

And to understand this Jewish holiday, which has come to be known as the Festival of Lights, you first need to know that it symbolizes peace and freedom, Rabbi Stephen Karol explained to a group of South Shore Jews attending a Chanukah workshop at the Hingham temple Congregation Sha' aray Shalom last Sunday morning.

Karol told the workshop of about 20 temple members and guests from seven South Shore towns that he has held the annual workshop for the last four years, to help parents make the holiday a special experience for the entire family.

After handing out packets of practical information, including a recipe for latkes (traditional potato pancakes) and directions to Chanukah's game of chance with the four-sided top known as a dreidel, Karol launched into a brief review of the history behind the holiday.

Though Chanukah falls close to Christmas on the Christian calendar, no connection between the holidays exist, Karol said.

Chanukah commemorates events recorded happening in Jerusalem between 168 and 165 B.C.E. (Before the Common Era, the non-Christian equivalent of Before Christ), a three-year period when Jews fought Syrian occupation in order to regain religious freedom.

Syrian soldiers were sent by their leader Antiochus Epiphanes into Judea, the Jewish land, to abolish Judaism. Jews were told that if they didn't convert to worshipping Greek gods, they would be killed.

According to ancient historical records the holy temple in Jerusalem was desecrated and renamed for the Greek god Zeus on the 25th day of the Hebrew month of Kislev in 168 B.C.E. Thousands of Jews became martyrs because they would not commit idolatry.

In the meantime, a resistance movement headed by the family Hasmoneans, better known as Maccabees, was gaining strength. Mattathias Maccabee and his five sons led guerilla raids on Syrian forces from strongholds in the Judean hills. The famous strategist behind the raids was Judah Maccabee, who was referred to as "The Hammer."

Though Antiochus tried to retaliate by sending a large army to destroy the Jewish nation, Judah and his outnumbered guerillas miraculously defeated the Syrians. On the 25th of Kislev in 165 B.C.E. the temple in Jerusalem was reconsecrated, and the liberated Jews lit bright lights in front of their homes in celebration.

They created the eight-day feast of lights called Chanukah, which means dedication.

Centuries later the legend surrounding the Chanukah story emerged, that a day's worth of oil lasted the eight days it took for the Maccabees' messenger to return with enough oil to replenish the reconsecrated temple's eternal light.

The eternal light or Ner Tamid burns continuously in all temples to symbolize that the sacred rules which govern Judaism are from God and thus eternal.

"Today the holiday commemorates freedom and the right to be different," Karol said. "We add a candle to the menorah (the nine-branched candelabrum) each night because with more light comes more holiness."

Traditionally, the candles are placed in the menorah from right to left and are lit from left to right with the shamas (helper candle), so that each consecutive night's commemorative candle will be lit first, he said. The candles are blessed each night, and family members customarily exchange presents.

"The Christmas message 'Peace on Earth, good will toward men' is not much different from the Chanukah message of peace and freedom. But Chanukah is not the Jewish Christmas," he said.

"Sharing the holidays to promote understanding is fine, but the lighting of the candles and the blessings I feel should be left out of the schools. It's okay to emphasize the symbols and the history, though.

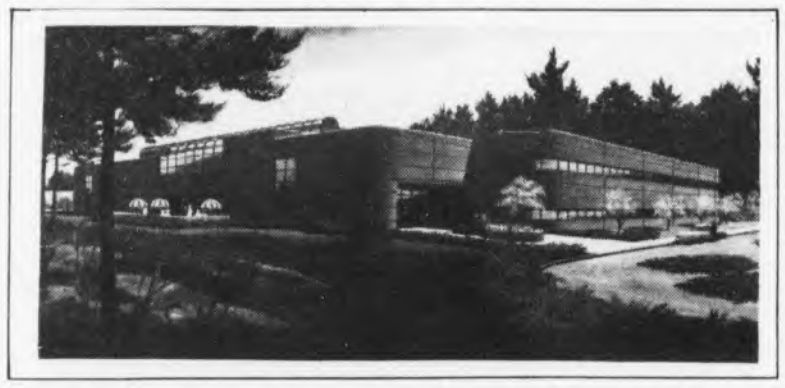
"Kids raised as Jews should be taught a healthy respect and understanding for Chanukah and for the Christian beliefs. But adopting Christmas is definitely the wrong idea. Don't impose, educate."

Dramatic Club tryouts Jan. 6

The Cohasset Dramatic Club will hold tryouts for its second production of the 1984-85 community theater season Sunday, January 6 from 2 p.m. to 6 p.m. at the Cohasset Town Hall.

Director Denise Ripley has given the following brief description of the play titled "Morning's At Seven" by American playwright Paul Osborn and of the nine characters to be cast: "Morning's At Seven" deals with a couple of days in the lives of two families. It contains a bit of nostalgia, and a wealth of human comedy. It is a warm and sensitive look at family relationships. The scene for "Morning's At Seven" is on the back porches and back yards of two typical houses in a small mid-western town.

The play's characters are: Theodore Swanson, 70 years of age, a pleasant and enthusiastic man with a good sense of humor; his wife Cora Swanson, also age 70, a warm, dependable woman who would like to have her home and husband to herself; Aaronetta Gibbs, age 65, Cora's "old maid" sister, a woman who can be a bit sharp, but still sprightly and good hearted and capable of running a gamut of emotions; Ida Bolton, age 66, a homey, dependant woman devoted to her son; Carl Bolton, age 68, a thinker, dis-satisfied with what he has done with his life and has spells of depression (this is a good character part); Homer Bolton, age 40, a bachelor son, mama's boy, awkward, but with ideas of marriage (this is a good comedy role); Myrtle Brown, age 39, overanxious to please and eager to get married (a potential for comedy); Esther Crampton, age 72, the wise, charming and sensible elder sister who keeps the peace within the family; David Crampton, also age 72 and Esther's husband, a man with strange ideas but charming and bright and a help to Carl.



For the Cohasset production, it is not necessary that those filling the roles be the ages given by the playwright.

All interested in "Morning's At Seven" are invited to the tryouts. Playbooks are available at the Paul Pratt Library, Cohasset. Performance dates will be March 1, 2 and 3.

Boys basketball zooms ahead

Coach Eddie Minelli's boys basketball team is off to a fast start with two wins over Jamaica Plain and Hull.

In the opening game, the Skippers beat Jamaica Plain 73-67 as Tony Bogarty, James Creed and Brian Edwards combined for 54 points.

Jamaica Plain trimmed a 38-39 Cohasset halftime lead to one point with five minutes left but the Skipper's Bobby Schultz hit a pair of three throws and Creed converted a three point play to seal the win.

Schultz scored nine points, Creed hit for 17 points and nine rebounds, Bogarty scored 19 points and stole the ball three times and Edwards had 18 points and 10 rebounds playing at the forward position.

The Hull landslide victory, 64-25 was over early, leading Hull 22-4 at halftime as the Pirates tried stall tactics.

Bogarty led Cohasset with 16 points and eight assists and Creed added 11 points, three block shots and 12 rebounds.

Phil Bernstein made an important contribution off the bench in the center position with a career high 10 points.

Tryouts for "Morning's At Seven"

The Cohasset Dramatic Club will continue its 64th season on Cohasset's historic Town Hall stage with a production next March of the Broadway hit "Morning's At Seven". Written by playwright Paul Osborn, the Cohasset presentation of "Morning's At Seven" will be directed by Denise Ripley.

Tryouts for the play will be held at the Cohasset Town Hall on Sunday Jan. 6 at 2 p.m. Playbooks will be available at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, Cohasset.

Performance dates for "Morning's At Seven" are Friday March 1, Saturday March 2 and Sunday March 3.

The Cohasset Dramatic Club invites all interested in reading for roles in this forthcoming production to attend the Jan. 6 tryouts.

Fair Raffles Winners

Winners in several of the raffles held in connection with the Cohasset Village Fair Dec. 1, have been announced by chairmen of the committees organizing the raffles.

Ruth Wilcox, who solicited the 27 donated prizes offered in the largest of the raffles and directed the sale of almost 1,200 tickets, announced that the two top prizes went as follows: a portable Panasonic TV set to Dot Murphy of Rockland, and a Commodore 54 personal computer, to Deborah Cook of Cohasset.

Other winners of principal prizes in this raffle were: Cohasset tile tables to Jack Scarry of Hull and Martin Corry of Cohasset; solid brass lamp, Mike Mulvaney of North Weymouth; bedspread, Olive Mullen of Cohasset; copper base lamp, M.S. Ransom of North Scituate; Salton hot basket, Peter Tolman of Cohasset; stained glass unicorn, Tina Barber of Cohasset. A gingerbread house created by Kiki Booras of Hull went to Christopher Golden of Cohasset.

Claudia Story who headed the energetic committee handling the Children's Table, anounced that the two Cabbage Patch dolls were won by Patty Scally of Hingham and Dick Karoff of Cohasset.

Sandra Theriault, whose boys in Den 3 of the Cub Scouts, fashioned a Heritage Wreath and donated the proceeds of the raffle to the Fair, announced that the wreath was won by Paul Kalita of Cohasset.

Devon Noonan, in the comfort of Dad's arms, thanks Santa for an early Christmas present at the American Legion Hall.

Burke exhibition

The Quincy Co-Operative Bank Galleria, Rte. 3A in Cohasset, together with the South Shore Art Center, is showing paintings by Elizabeth Burke of Hingham during the months of December and January.

Burke is a widely known painter of landscapes and still lifes as well as a painter of portraits. She studied with South Shore artists Priscilla Sibley, Mary Reardon and Joseph Burbank and presently with Roz Farbush and Clement Micarelli.

She has been represented in many juried shows and one-artist shows on the South Shore where she received numerous prizes. She paints on location in the United States, Europe and the Islands and most recently in Mexico.

Her paintings are handled by The South Shore Art Center Gallery, the Scituate Front Street Gallery and the Copley Society of Boston. She is an active volunteer worker of these associations as well as serving on the Board of Directors of The Scituate Art Association as secretary and treasurer.

Ripley awarded fellowship

William Ripley Jr., former Cohasset Superintendent of Schools, and a Rotary Club member in Cohasset since 1945, has been awarded a Paul Harris Fellowship by the club.

The award was announced recently by District Governor V. James DiNardo, and was formalized at a club Christmas Party held Monday evening, at which time he was presented with the certificate medal, and lapel pin signifying the highest award which can be bestowed on an individual Rotarian.

Ripley served 43 years in the Cohasset School Department, starting as a teacher, and advancing to principal, and in 1942 to Superintendent. He retired in 1969.

During his tenure he saw the growth of the local school system from one building housing all grades, to the three schools now in existence. During his teaching years he taught math and sciences and was also a popular athletic coach for many years.

The fellowship, started in 1947, to honor Rotary founder Paul Harris, with a donation of $1.3 million dollars from Rotary Clubs worldwide, has since grown to a multi-million dollar endowment used for philanthropic, charitable, and educational projects.

Burt Pratt, chairman of the Cohasset Club's Rotary Information Committee acted as master of ceremonies for the award ceremony, and the certificate, medal and pin were presented by Club President Dr. John Burns.

Ripley becomes the first Paul Harris Fellow in the Cohasset Club. In acknowledging the award he said that he had enjoyed the fellowship of Rotary during his 39 years in the club, and was happy that he was still able to be of service. He is active in the selection of scholarship recipients each year which is the club's most important community service project.

TIC Holiday programming

Thousands of visually handicapped residents of Marshfield depend on radio station TIC, originating in Marshfield, to provide in-depth news coverage, consumer information and reading of printed material ranging from novels to newspapers seven days a week.

But Thanksgiving and Christmas have always been two days of the year that programming was not available. Because TIC relies on 100 volunteers and only two full time paid staff members to provide over 5,000 hours of programming a year, resources were not available to cover holidays too.

TIC appealed to the Junior League of Boston for assistance and the South Shore Chapter took on the project. Chaired by Woody Lawson and Debby Brittan, both of Hingham, South Shore Junior League members produced holiday programming for an eight-hour Christmas broadcast, as well as full day broadcasts for Thanksgiving and Easter.

Drawing on resources all over the South Shore the programming includes holiday recipes, readings, poetry, history — including segments taped at Plimouth Plantation and Cranberry World, music, brief holiday messages from area clergy, and refreshing "theater" taped at local elementary school Thanksgiving and Christmas plays.

"The product was very professional," said assistant director Karen Prendergast of Duxbury. "I was impressed by the commitment and enthusiasm of this group. It not only fulfilled the immediate need for holiday programming, but gave us a base to work from in the future."

The South Shore group of the Junior League has also designed and produced a Braille brochure describing TIC and its programming for potential listeners requesting information. This year the group is taping recipes to be used in conjunction with the weekly feature, "Supermarket Guide." "Supermarket Guide" is underwritten by the Stop & Shop Companies. It is a half hour summary each week of all the best buys at the supermarkets, taken from weekly printed circulars.

A volunteer collects all of the circulars and reads them aloud to help listeners with shopping decisions and menu planning. The Junior League will broadcast recipes featuring the foods on special for that week.

"One of the regular TIC volunteers has authored a number of cook books and does a weekly show called 'Cook Book Nook.' We learned that is was a very popular feature. So we are simply taking the two concepts and providing one more service to TIC listeners."

If you would like more information about TIC call Ron Bersani, TIC's director, at 834-4400.

For your holiday shopping we will be open evenings until 9:00, Sat. until 6:00, Sunday 12-6 & Christmas Eve til 5.

Cohasset school sports report

By Lisa Shumaker

Varsity Girls' Basketball

The girls started off their season with two victories over Holbrook and Hull. Tuesday, Cohasset crushed a weak Holbrook team, 83 - 30.

The key to the victory, according to Coach Bill Fallon, was the Skipper's outstanding full court pressure which Holbrook couldn't handle. Cohasset's overwhelming defense had many steals which produced many easy baskets for the Skippers.

Cohasset's overall high scorer was Tracy Fitzpatrick with 21 points. Tracy played exceptionally well both offensively and defensively and led the team on both ends of the court.

Other high scorers were Carla Lucas with 15 points, Janet DiGorolamo with 10, and Anne O'Leary with 13. Anne also turned in a good effort for Cohasset.

Thursday, the girls traveled to Hull and blew out the Pirates, 51 to 26. Fallon feels when his team went to straight man-to-man defense and dug in defensively, the game was opened up, and Hull was never close again. Cohasset held Hull to only eight points in two periods and this was the key to their victory.

Tracy Fitzpatrick was once again Cohasset's high scorer with 18 points followed by Sarah Seavey who had 11. Tracy had another great game for the Skippers, and both Sarah Seavey and Vicki Spooner had strong defensive games.

This week Cohasset will take on Middleboro on Tuesday at 7 p.m. Fallon feels if his team plays well this game will not be much of a problem. Friday, the Skippers will have their first big test against the Green Wave in Abington at 6 p.m.

Varsity Ice Hockey

The boys had a tough opening week, losing both of their games last week. Wednesday, Sandwich beat Cohasset, 5 to 2. The Skipper's coach, Richard Izzo, feels that his team might have been in the game if it were not for the many penalties they received.

Despite the loss, Izzo was pleased with his team's performance considering they are very young and this was their first game.

Troy Chatterton scored both of Cohasset's goals and had a good game along with Chris Ridge who also played well. Danny Curran also played well defensively for Cohasset.

Saturday, the Skippers lost to Abington 7 to 3. Unfortunately, nothing clicked for Cohasset, and the team came out very flat. Therefore, the Skippers were unable to generate any offense which put all of the pressure on the defense.

Troy Chatterton, Todd Fitzpatrick and Jeff Hartwell all scored for Cohasset. Danny Curran had a solid game on defense, along with goalie Peter Sandbloom who, under tremendous pressure, did a good job in net.

This week, Cohasset will take on one of their toughest competitions, Bishop-Fenwick. The game will be played Tuesday in Peabody at 6 p.m. Saturday, the Skippers will travel to Rockland, and Sunday, Cohasset will take on Hull at Winter Gardens for the Lobster Pot Tournament. Both of these games will be held at 6 p.m.

Weddings & Engagements

Mr. and Mrs. William P. Malley

Malley/Cronin

Deirdre Cronin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Cronin, Jr. of Scituate, and William P. Malley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward P. Malley of Cohasset, were married Sept. 1 at St. Francis Xavier Cabrini Church. A reception followed at the South Shore Country Club and the couple honeymooned in Hawaii.

The bride was attended by Elizabeth Sabin, her sister, as maid of honor. Her bridesmaids included Connie Callahan, sister of the groom, Tara Doonan-Miller, Cindy Mehl and Linda Carlson.

John Morgan served as best man. Ushers were Daniel Cronin and Mark Cronin, brothers of the bride, Charles Callahan and Gregory Byrnes.

The bride is a graduate of Scituate High School and Burdett College. She is currently employed as an account representative at Alexander and Alexander. The groom graduated from Cohasset High School, South Shore Vo-tech, and Massasoit Community College. He is employed as a communications technician at New England Telephone.

The couple now live in Cohasset.

Kristen Cahill

Cahill/Murphy

Mr. and Mrs. James Cahill of Cohasset announce the engagement of their daughter, Kristin, to Bret Murphy the son of Ellen Murphy of Hingham and Richard Murphy of Winchester.

Miss Cahill is a Licensed Practical Nurse at the Massachusetts Hospital School. Mr. Murphy is a graduate of Curry College and is employed at Control Logic, Inc. in Natick.

An October wedding is planned.

Murray opposed to Massbank

An alternative bill to the governor's Massbank proposal for consideration during the next session of the Legislature. Representative Mary Jeanette Murray (3rd Plymouth District) said, "this plan would use existing state revenue to repair and maintain the state's roads and bridges without raising taxes. The governor's Massbank plan would create a new state bureaucracy and raise additional taxes to pay for the reconstruction, repair and maintenance of roads and bridges."

Rep. Murray opposes Massbank on grounds the state does not need to impose new taxes and create another bureaucracy to handle upkeep and repair of roads and bridges. She said this alternative, which has bi-partison support in both the House and Senate, has also received support from the Massachusetts Hi-Tech Council and the Greater Boston Chamber of Commerce and many business leaders throughout the state. Representative Murray said better management of existing revenue would pay for repair and maintenance while maintaining current levels of spending on education and local aid. She added, "it would slow growth of government spending."

The governor's proposal, Rep. Murray said, would create an expensive bureaucracy that would be difficult to dismantle if it were found not to be needed to do the job. This proposal, F.A.I.R. which stands for Financing Alternative for Infrastructure Repair would establish a Massachusetts Office of Reconstruction within the state Treasurer's Office. That office would manage money taken from existing taxes. The money would be earmarked for repair and maintenance of roads and bridges. Now, the money goes into the general fund, according to Rep. Murray and with some exceptions, is not earmarked for specific state government programs.

Troop 38 Cub Scout activities

By Marie Buckley

Christmas carols filled the air as the Cub Scouts of Troop 38 held their annual Christmas Party. A big thank you to all the parents who provided the yummy goodies.

The cubs brought their own handmade Christmas ornaments and decorated a Christmas tree which was donated to the Ripley Road Nursing Home. They also filled a basket with canned goods which will be given to the needy.

News from the Dens:

Den 1: The cubs were busy this month. They made chocolate marshmallow fudge which they donated to the Village Fair. Each boy also made two ornaments for Christmas - one for the donation tree and one for their own home tree. Christmas is so much fun! Douglas Schultz has earned his Bear Badge. Congratulations Doug!

Den 2: The Cub Scouts made napkin holders to contribute to the Secret Room at the Village Fair. The holders were cut from felt and formed colorful poinsettias when put together.

At another meeting, our Den Chief David Farrag brought his scout patrol to teach First Aid. The Boy Scouts gave excellent talks and demonstrations which were not only informative for the cubs, but also earned the Boy Scouts merit badges.

For the Pack Meeting, the boys made "Cane Deer" ornaments.

Den 3: The boys made Christmas ornaments which contained square knot tying. This activity helped them earn one of their achievements on the way to earning their Wolf. The pinecone wreath the boys made in November and raffled off at the Village Fair earned a total of $50. Proceeds went to the churches. Paul Kalita, a former Cub Scout and Boy Scout, was thrilled to discover that he was the winner of the wreath.

The dads of our den took us to General Dynamics in Quincy for a tour which lasted four hours! We visited all the buildings and the new ship being built for the Marines. General Dynamics is celebrating its 100th anniversary and the boys went home with bags filled with information, balloons, frisbees and pins.

On another day, the dads took us to the Blue Hills for hiking and a visit to the Trailside Museum.

Scott Theriault has earned one bead. This means he has completed one fourth of his achievements on the way to becoming a Wolf.

Den 4: The Cub Scouts made beautiful macaroni wreaths and trees to adorn the donation tree. The macaroni ornaments were spray painted with colorful sequins.

The cubs were also busy making and packaging peanut brittle which they donated to the Village Fair.

A trip to Edaville Railroad to see the Christmas lights followed by a dinner at McDonald's, was a big hit with the boys. It rained, but it didn't dampen our spirits!

Nicholas Lelecas, our den chief, had been helping us with our Bobcat requirements. We're almost ready. He also helped us with a flag folding session which helped us complete one of our achievements. Bobby Gentile and Jonathan Ford are denner and assistant denner for December and January.

Den 5: Our den is off to a late but great start! New cubs, John MacDonald, Brian Duffy, Earle Bestick Jr., Christopher Goodman and Charles Endris spent their meeting getting acquainted. We learned all about the Cub Scout uniform and the Bobcat Trail from our den chief, Billy Anstead. The meeting ended with soap carving and snacks.

Christopher Goodman received his Bobcat Badge. Congratulations Chris! Another meeting was spent working on our Bobcat requirements, playing a rousing game of "Up Murphy," and making Christmas ornaments for the Nursing Home Christmas Tree. We're on our way to becoming Wolves!

Webelos: The Webelos are finally organized. The boys are excited because they are anxious to begin their last year of being Cub Scouts. Right now they are eagerly working on their most difficult badge required for the arrow of light - the citizenship badge. Good luck to all! We'll be hearing more from the Webelos in the following months.

All the Cub Scouts of Troop 38 of Cohasset want to wish everyone a very Happy Hanukkah, a very Merry Christmas, and a Happy and Healthy New Year, too!

PSO communications on school issues

(The following letters were sent last month to the Cohasset Schools administration by the PSO. Ed.)

Pay Phones

The Parent School Organization requests the Cohasset School Committee to have New England Telephone install pay phones on the outside of the school (Cohasset High School) for the protection and safety of the students.

These phones are necessary for the students who are at the school late for sports, drama, music, video, etc. and need to call home. Without accessible phones students are unable to call home for rides, to change a pick up time or location, to say they are staying late at school. The safety of the students is at stake without the phones on the outside of the high school.

These phones should be located in well lit areas of the high school for the protection of the students and to deter vandalism.

Scheduling conflicts

The Parent School Organization requests the Cohasset School Committee to put back on its agenda the band scheduling conflicts at the Cohasset High School. The current situation prevents many students from being able to participate in band.

The PSO encourages the School Committee to develop a policy for the implementation of an elective period during the academic day to encourage participation in the arts, band, chorus, music, drama. This period would allow students to pursue these interests without having to jeopardize their other major courses.

Smoking ban

At our November 8 meeting of the Parent School Organization we discussed the proposed smoking ban at the Cohasset High School. While we don't condone smoking, we feel an outright ban is an unforceable policy and may in effect create safety problems for all students.

The Board unanimously passed the following motion: "While the Parent School Organization does not condone smoking by students, we would like to see elimination through the teaching process. We recommend keeping the existing policy with increased monitoring in the building and stricter enforcement of the policy."

Smoking by students must be confined to the designated area. Monitoring of the bathrooms needs to be increased to prevent smoking in these areas and for the protection and safety of the students using the facilities.

Detentions

At the November 8 meeting of the Parent School Organization, the board discussed detention during the academic day for a missed after school detention. We fully realize the need for detention to enforce the school policies and to encourage acceptable student behavior.

The Board encourages the elimination of detention during the academic day and recommends double time

A mother's gift: the important things in life

By Judy Foley

Every year my mother had a family Christmas party in her little apartment at Tea Rock Gardens, the elderly housing complex in Marshfield.

The Sunday before Christmas. Always the Sunday before Christmas. After the first couple of years she stopped reminding us: she would prepare for weeks before, and my sisters and I would all be frantically searching for last minute gifts that Saturday, because we were all supposed to know that the Sunday before Christmas was Mama's party. After a few years none of us forgot.

She always insisted that it would be in her place. Twelve adults and eleven kids squeezed into her two-room apartment for the afternoon, fighting for space with a Christmas tree, TV tables set up for the hors d'oeurves, and each other. My sister Madeline's husband, Bob came from Hingham and mused that it was like 21 people cramming themselves into a closet with the heat turned up to 90. The kids would be delegated to the bedroom, the men would take up station around the kitchen table, and the six "Murphy girls" would sit in the tiny living room with Mama. She always spent Christmas Eve with one of us, and Christmas dinner with another, but this was her real Christmas — this was where she reigned over her brood and handed out the presents she chose so carefully with the meager checks she got from Social Security.

Last year my sister Brenda from Braintree taped the party for Mary, separated by space but not by time or thoughts with her kids in Maryland. Although Mama was sick, she insisted that the party would still be held in her house. She issued shopping lists to everyone, and managed to sneak around when nobody was looking to clean the floors and windows and prepare all the appetizers. That way she could sit on the sofa during the whole party and issue the cooking directions from her seat — nobody noticed that she was having trouble standing or walking.

She went to the hospital the next day, and never returned to her little apartment at Tea Rock. She spent months at the New England Medical Center Hospital and when she came home, it was either to my sister Jeanne's house in Marshfield or Brenda's in Braintree. After a while she was admitted to the New England Sinai Hospital in Stoughton. She died in July. They never did find out what was wrong.

After the funeral my sisters and I returned to the apartment. The Christmas boxes were still piled in the bedroom and the wreath was still on the door. We were too tired and emotionally drained to do any house-cleaning that night but for some reason — I'll never know why — Jeanne and Mary and I stayed behind, the three daughters who had, for one reason or another, experienced sorrow in our own, new families.

After the others had left Mary halfheartedly began to sort through the things in the front closet — who could use her electric broom, should we send the books down to Uncle Gordon's cottage, could she have the crucifix that always hung on the stairway at home. She opened a box at the bottom of the closet and found, carefully wrapped in newspaper, the framed pictures of the grandchildren that would not fit on the walls at Tea Rock. We all smiled and agreed that each mother would get those pictures. Mary continued through the box, as we commented on the growth of our children, until she reached the bottom, where a small, unusually shaped item was wrapped in yellow tissue paper. She pulled the package out and felt an odd, circular edge, and knew immediately what it was.

It was a slice of timber, still lined with the rough pine bark around the edges, with the Madonna and Child stamped on the shellack-covered front. It had been a Christmas present from Mary when she was a child. The price was still on the back — 89¢ at the Five & Dime.

And in that moment Mama was there, with her hand on each of our shoulders, letting us know that this — this little gift from a child -- was what life was all about, and that if we could hang onto these things, like she did, then we could fine the peace and happiness that governed her life.

Prompted by our discovery we searched a little more, and we found in Mama's house a treasury of inheritance that no money could buy, pieces of our lives that were long forgotten but meant so much to her: a birthday card from the first grade, a Valentine's poem, report cards (even the time when one of us flunked religion at St. Gregory's — oh, what a time that was!), a pressed rose from her own mother's funeral, a McDonald's french fries bag with 26 cents and the inscription: "25¢ from Karyn, 1¢ from Sarah (granddaughters); 26¢ equals love."

She knew that the time was coming when we would have to sort through her possessions, and she left behind a house in order, so that we could all share her real treasures. It was the best inheritance anyone could receive.

We're having our Christmas party this year at Ann's house in Weymouth. We've decided to take turns each year, starting with the oldest sister. My turn in Hanover will be in six years. Ann's husband Chuck jokes that we're all going to have to sit in the den and he'll turn the heat up to 90, for old times sake.

Mary can't come this year, but she made copies of the tape from last year's party and sent us each a copy for Christmas. It's a jumbled mass of confusion, just like Mama's parties were. But you can hear her voice now and then giving instructions to turn the oven on ("Alice it must be 95 in here already!") and handing out her presents ("Don't you just love it, Roberta?").

We'll listen to it Sunday, I'm sure, and laugh and cry. And Mama will be there, still with her hand on our shoulders, letting us know that everything will be okay as long as we remember the important things in life.

Hope for lower bills

Commonwealth Electric Company has filed a request with the Department of Public Utilities (DPU) seeking a lower power cost charge (PCC) for the first quarter of 1985. If the request is approved by the DPU, Commonwealth Electric customers should see slightly lower electric bills during January, February and March.

According to R.F. MacDonald, Com/Electric vice president of customer services, the decrease would mean that non-heating customers using 469 kilowatt hours a month would save $1.09. Heating customers using 2,196 kilowatt hours would save $5.12 a month during the quarter.

MacDonald explained that the reason for the lower rate was an expected increase in available power from more efficient and economic electric generating plants during the next three months. He also noted that the price of oil used to generate electricity continued to be relatively stable.

If approved, the lower charge will take effect with January billings.

Selecting a good tree

It's the start of the Christmas season and time to search for the perfect tree. The Massachusetts Department of Food and Agriculture suggests to shop early for the best selection.

There are a number of tree farms in Massachusetts where you can cut down your own tree or purchase one freshly cut. For a list of these tree farms, write to the Massachusetts Department of Food and Agriculture, 100 Cambridge St., Boston 02202 or call 727-3018.

When selecting your tree, keep in mind these suggestions. Hold the tree and bounce lightly against the ground, the needles should not fall out easily.

PSO communications . . .

for missed after school detention, to be used at the discretion of the teacher.

This means if the student misses an after school detention, he/she must make up double time, staying after two days in a row. If either of these days is missed then two more days would be added. Taking students out of classes for detention takes away from the academic teaching time which can never be completely made up.

Deficiency report forms

At the request of several parents the Parent School Organization has discussed the current deficiency report forms now in use at the Cohasset High School.

The following motion was made and unanimously passed:

"The Parent School Organization strongly recommends use of the progress report form for all academic reports and to delete the use of the deficiency report form. We encourage teachers to use the progress forms across the board in communicating with parents. We recommend a provision for teacher followup if the form is not returned within one week."

Much of our discussion revolved around the deficiency report form and its negative effects on students. The present deficiency form is demoralizing and can leave a student feeling he is a total failure in a class. Many of these forms are never reaching the parents and are not accomplishing the desired effect of helping the student improve his academic work.

The PSO Board believes the progress report form can state the same academic problems but in a more positive way. These forms also have a place for parent signatures as opposed to the deficiency reports which do not call for a parent signature. Apparently the matter of a parent signature was to have been changed on the deficiency reports.

To let the student know he/she must return the progress report promptly, the teacher should contact the parents if the forms are not returned within a week.

Please contact us as to how this change might be put into practice. Should this be taken up by the Faculty Review Senate or go through the Guidance Department.

Politicus — by David A. Mittell, Jr.

Charged with double murder and bail set at $25,000

By David A. Mittell, Jr.

It happens nearly every year that my last attempt before Christmas to acquaint you with the ways and means of political life in Massachusetts turns into a bitter diatribe rather out of keeping with the forgiving spirit of the season.

There is a reason for this beyond sheer perversity, and if you understand that reason you begin to understand the dark side of our politics. It is simply that it is precisely while the good Christians and Jews among you are absorbed in what is sacred to you that dark business gets done.

A couple of years ago it was the "Great Feeding Frenzy" during the waning days of the 1981-82 legislature. So lewdly was the patronage game played on that occasion that Sen. Allan McKinnon and other reasonable men on Beacon Hill howled out loud, and the event's cover . . . Christmas . . . was blown.

That was the patronage game — unpleasant, unfair, and costly — but unfortunately not the darkest form of political behavior in this state. To understand an outrage that may be in progress this Christmas season you need to understand the meaning of a 7-paragraph story on page 19 of the December 14 Boston Herald (I didn't see it at all in the Globe or the Ledger) entitled "Connor let off the hook."

That refers to Myles J. Connor, about 41, rock and roll singer, alleged drug dealer, alleged armed robber, alleged cop killer, alleged assassin of two witnesses to that killing, now free on bail . . . now in parts unknown.

According to the allegations against him, in 1975 Connor and some associates planned an armed robbery at a Roslindale supermarket. A police officer was shot and killed during the robbery, and two 20-year-old Jamaica Plain girls, out for the evening with one of the participants, were witness to the crime.

According to the allegation, Connor ordered that the girls be killed. They were taken to a Quincy apartment, stabbed, and when one of them did not die promptly, a screw driver was stuck in her ear and driven into her brain. She died.

The man who wielded the screw driver turned government witness, Connor was convicted and sent to the then Walpole Prison. (The legislature recently renamed it "Cedar Junction.") In prison Connor continued to assert his innocence and to fight his conviction. In 1984 the Supreme Judicial Court overturned the conviction and ordered that he stand trial again. Based on the standing charge of murdering witnesses, law enforcement officials vehemently opposed Connor's release on bail. Nevertheless, he was released on $25 thousand.

To appreciate the minuscule proportion of that figure, compare it with a recent case you probably read about. When Boston Police discovered a body in a van while giving the driver a routine traffic citation, the three live occupants of the van were sent to Charles Street Jail where they remain . . . on $1 million bond.

So it is that for the last few months, while police have had to increase protection for witnesses in Connor's second trial on the 1975 murders, Connor has been a free man. And according to Hull police, he has not been an idle man. They recently accused him of attempted murder in connection with the beating of a man at the La Mar Inn in Hull. "A drug deal gone bad," they said.

By the time Connor was charged (along with his former brother-in-law and another man) with attempted murder, he had vanished. A warrant was issued for his arrest. Then, last week — before Connor could be located — a Plymouth County grand jury refused to indict him and reduced the charges against the other men from attempted murder to assault and battery.

It was thus that the Herald reported "Connor let off the hook." Indeed! And without so much as being required to put in a personal appearance. At this writing Connor has not yet turned up despite the warrant for his arrest and despite his obligation while free on bail to keep authorities apprised of his whereabouts.The arrest warrant is apparently quashed, and there will apparently be no special effort to locate him.

Under the circumstances it will be a merry Christmas for Myles J. Connor. The question is: who's his Santa? Why was his bail set so low? Why was there so little apparent concern on the part of prosecutors with producing him in person after his latest brush with the law? Why was he not indicted? (Grand juries nearly always do what they are told.)

We are talking here about a man accused of the cold-blooded murder of witnesses to a cold-blooded murder. The fact that he was released on low bail prior to trial would appear to be terrible judgment. His non-supervision while on bail would appear to be terrible judgment. His non-indictment on the latest charge is mighty interesting.

But the pattern of treatment Myles J. Connor has received may be more than terrible judgment. All reporters have sources, and one of my best believes that Myles Connor is in a position to compromise a number of people in the political and legal professions, some prominent, and some in a position to influence those in a position to decide whether he spends a few decades at Cedar Junction Prison . . . or where he pleases.

According to this source, Connor has made it his business to be on good terms with some prominent political/legal people, to do some business with them that didn't involve singing rock and roll, and that he is aware of the use by these officials of cocaine and prostitutes, among other idiosyncratic habits.

One of these people in particular is in a position to influence those in a position to make decisions about Connor's case — cases I should say. If that is so, we have on our hands a scenario in which members of the political/legal establishment have been seeking to keep an accused multiple murderer on the street because they are aware that he is aware of their own illegal behavior. In short, an obstruction of justice that would make Watergate seem pallid.

The handling of Myles J. Connor's cases needs to be investigated in every detail.

FROM THE KITCHEN

by JOAN PINKHAM

(Joan Pinkham is taking a well deserved vacation. Rochelle Flynn is filling in. Ed.)

By Rochelle M. Flynn

The wind is howling outside, and you're shivering, regardless of your fluffy robe and slippers. If you can't shake that chill, or just want something hearty that tastes as good reheated as it did when first served, cook up some soup.

Making soup from scratch is not much more difficult than opening a can, but the results are far more rewarding. Also, a steaming tureen of soup, chowder or stew, served with warm bread or rolls is a delicious meal, and perfectly acceptable for company.

Cabbage soup has a delicate sweet/sour taste to it, and is a markedly different way to prepare cabbage. If you have a crock pot, start on the lowest possible heat before you go to work, and you'll have a cooked meal when you walk in the door.

Combine six cups water with one pound cubed stew beef, one 16-ounce can of crushed tomatoes, one small head of green cabbage, chopped and cored, a handful of raisins, and two medium, chopped onions.

Cook slowly for two hours and add juice of 1/2 a lemon and two tablespoons sugar. Cook five minutes longer. Serve with a blob of sour cream, or yogurt for the calorie conscious.

New England is famous for its clam and fish chowder, but when was the last time you had a decent corn chowder? You probably can't remember, which is unfortunate, as this is a meal that can be whipped up after a long day at the office in less time than it takes to have a pizza delivered. Serve with a crisp salad and brown bread.

Brown 1/2 pound chopped bacon or salt pork in a large saucepan or Dutch oven until almost browned. Add three large, diced onions and continue cooking until onions are tender. Add six large potatoes, peeled and diced, two large cans of corn, salt and pepper to taste and barely enough water to cover.

Cook over moderate heat until potatoes are tender, about 15 minutes. Remove from heat and add one pint light cream. Stir and return to heat just long enough to warm. If the chowder boils at this point, the cream will curdle. Garnish each serving with a dash of cayenne pepper if desired.

When making stew, don't limit yourself to beef. Try lamb, pork or a combination of two or three meats at once. Never try to rush the cooking time by dumping in all the vegetables at once, or the vegetables which require a shorter cooking time will turn out mushy. And always cook stew at a gentle simmer, or the meat may fall apart.

Braise 1½ pounds stew meat in a Dutch oven with two cloves crushed garlic. Add one cup red wine and barely enough water to cover the meat. Add two large chopped onions, two bay leaves, 1/2 teaspoon basil, a pinch of both thyme and tarragon. Salt and pepper to taste. Simmer for two hours and add chopped turnips and carrots in whatever proportions you desire. Cook for 20 minutes before adding diced, peeled potatoes. Cook for 30 more minutes, and if the potatoes are ready, start ladling it up.

For something completely different, or if you want a thick, hearty soup but don't eat meat, try this lentil soup. The given proportions are for a large batch, but cut the proportions in half for a smaller amount. Also, this is the type of recipe that can, and should, be adapted for personal taste. If you really like onions and black pepper, add a lot, if not, put in the minimal amount needed to flavor the soup.

Heat 1/3 cup vegetable oil on a very low flame in a Dutch oven. Add 2-3 medium onions which have been chopped into 1/2 inch pieces and at least 1/2 teaspoon pepper. Turn heat up to medium and let onions cook uncovered. Do not stir for 10 minutes, stir and let onions cook for five more minutes. About 1/2 of the onions should be slightly burned.

Pour in one pound of lentils, 1/3 cup fine or very fine cracked wheat, 2-3 teaspoons salt, two teaspoons celery seed and three quarts water. Cover, boil and reduce to a simmer for 1½ hours, and serve immediately.

Lentil soup is very thick by nature, and after it sits in the refrigerator it will be as thick as pudding. It can be eaten as is, or thinned by gradually adding more water as it is reheated. Also, you can add whatever you like to this for a different flavor. Try sauteing chopped spinach for a few minutes with the onions. Or toss in leftover, cooked vegetables, such as carrots, when you are reheating the soup the next day.

PATCHES by Lois MARTIN

Burden is on cashiers during the Christmas rush

By Lois Martin

It is the season when our responsibilities outweigh the time, money, energy with which to accomplish them.

But uppermost in those obligations is one that could be the most frequent, challenging, and yea, satisfying when met.

I pause here, if not in requiem, in response to the pre-Christmas burden placed on the women and men, and they're mostly women, who attend to our purchases and needs in stores, banks, wherever we do business.

Life is not easy for them in this shopping rush. Called upon to be pleasant throughout the year, they are doubly challenged in December for several reasons: the customers are more harried , demanding and readily ticked; the salespeople meanwhile, are more tired, more pressured and they haven't got their shopping, cooking, decorating, cleaning done either.

This combination of buyer and seller can be explosive at its worst. In the finest of circumstances when the breadth of human compassion sweeps over the cashier and the customer at the same time, the two merely fall into each other's arms sobbing.

Between these extremes is the day-to-day December encounter, a potentially upset shopper and store personnel with the same precarious emotion.

Perhaps I bring this forward with the realization that within 24 hours I have witnessed or been party to aggravation of the people in stores who are paid to take money for goods or services their company renders.

First I checked out with a foundation of Christmas food provisions. In so doing I marveled at the cashier who, sporting a Santa hat, kept pulling packages over that electronic price thing, only to have it fail to beep with the green light, showing only a red one instead.

She showed the patience of a seasoned saint. I told her if I were obliged to check out goods with that computer thing, I'd have smashed it after it failed three times on the spinach. She smiled pleasantly, saying it was really faster than the finger punching machine. And she earned at least 17 points in my book.

A few years ago I worked, for the fun and the story of it, on seven different jobs. I learned, in case I hadn't known, that each job requires certain skills. And one of those skills is clearly being patient with impatient people. In truth, all of us know that. What I don't know along with about 95 percent of the population, is how those supermarket cashiers run those fancy registers. And they should be reminded as should we, that the best educated, brightest among us would not be able to fill their shoes without finite training.

From that store I went to one where I bought countless goods, a lot of stocking stuff, a few things on sale I wouldn't have bought otherwise and a couple authentic Christmas requests.

However, having reached the check out spot, I was suddenly flooded with indecision. "I don't know," I said to the cashier, "whether I really want these . . . What do you think . . . " She strained to feign interest in lieu of giving vent to fury. The least a dolt could do, she must have thought, would be to make up her bloomin' (I'm sure it was an innocuous word like that) mind before creating a need to subtract from a tape or start again. But I'm quick to catch on. I bought everything to make up for my pace-slowing changes of mind.

That inconsiderate blunder on my part was nothing compared to my gaff at the next store.

There I was blessed with a credit, written clearly on a yellow slip. So I took my stash of purchases in the line with the slip in hand.

It was a store with a sales ringer-upper and a bag-filler. The cashier was into the fourth item when she spotted my credit slip. There was a brief moment when I feared her breakdown. It did not come. Instead, she said, "You're supposed to give that to me first."

She sighed, rolled up the tape, asked the woman at the next register about the procedure to be followed when one's efforts are aborted by a dunce (though she didn't use that word).

As the line behind me grew longer a congregation of store personnel gathered at the register. To each of them on their arrival, the cashier said, "She didn't give me the slip unti I started ringing it up . . . "

My silence grew lengthier. The line grew longer. My guilt was obvious. My case, indefensible.

Several separate pieces of paper were written upon by different representatives of the company. The line behind me twirled around to the candle section.

Everyone in the building knew I didn't give her the slip until she'd started ringing up the sale. Had there been a vote of that jury, I'd have been hung. And I'd have probably voted with them.

Finally, the manager appeared because someone needed to authorize a new slip being started and the reason the old one wasn't any good . . . We all knew why. For the cashier I hadn't existed for about 10 minutes other than being "she..." From the bag-filler I got a merciful glance, covertly, so as not to alienate the cashier.

But from the manager, I got a new slip because there's still a balance owed me, though I'll wait until March to use it and I'll go in disguise.

From me they get my warm understanding, my appreciation for difficult, tedious or annoying transactions, and my wishes for a "Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year."

That, I extend to each of you with my absolute regard and the words from my favorite wrapping paper: "May God Bless You Real Good."

Musings

By John H. Cutler

☐ In defending the Constitution against those who would riddle and destroy it, Daniel Webster once said in the Senate: "The Constitution is like a garment which long has been worn. It never sits uncomfortable."

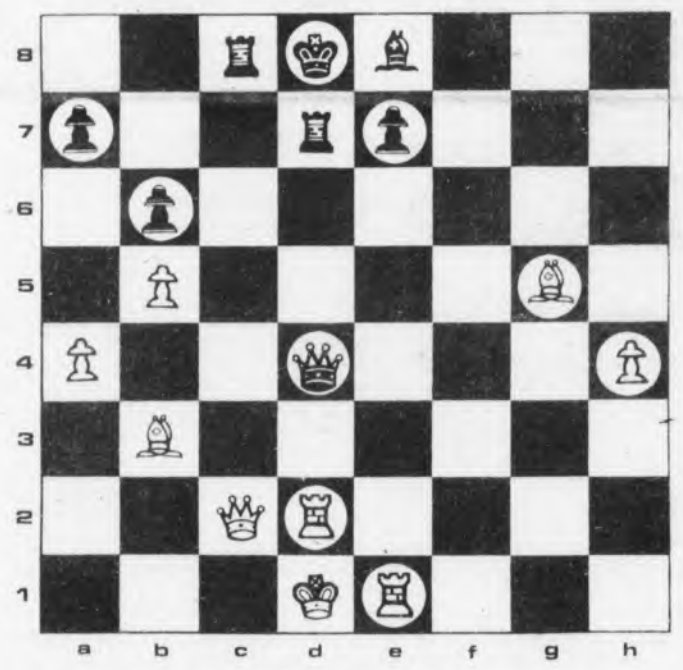
☐ One of my favorite Celtic proverbs: "May you get to Heaven half an hour before the devil knows you're dead."

☐ A husband may have a good reason for not telling his wife everything. He may feel that what she doesn't know won't hurt him.

☐ The most popular Pope in the entire history of the Papacy must have been John XXIII. He once said, "Anybody can be Pope. The proof of this is that I have become one."

☐ Humility is the embarassment you feel when you tell people how wonderful you are.

☐ An ignorant person is one who doesn't know what you just found out.



☐ There is one possible solution for a man married to a woman who enjoys spending money, and that is to enjoy earning it.

☐ John Buchan reminds me of the Reagan deficit when he said: "We can pay our debt to the past by putting the future in debt to ourselves." In other words, let our grandchildren pay for it.

☐ The tuxedo got its name from the Tuxedo Park (NY) Country Club, were it was first worn by Griswold Lorillard in 1886.

WHITE CHRISTMAS IN COHASSET

The Chamber of Commerce of Cohasset sponsors a day of Christmas cheer Sunday, December 9, noon - 6:30 P.M.

a prelude to Holiday Shopping in Cohasset

12:00 noon a helicopter lands at Cushing Plaza signaling the arrival of Santa in Cohasset. Lollipops, balloons, and pictures for the young shoppers.

refreshments - hot drinks, finger foods — served by Cohasset merchants.

after greeting visitors at the Plaza, he will make a brief visit to the Tedeschi shopping center.

then he's off on camel back to Cohasset Center; his twinkle awakens the town with the Holiday Spirit. Pictures with Santa on the Common and camel rides, too!

Christmas lights and a blizzard of white balloons turn the town into a "White Christmas."

Carolling on the Common — scout troops, high school chorus, and Carillon concert from St. Stephen's Episcopal Church.

Apple's solution to the Christmas present. $300 off the future.

When you buy an Apple™ IIc Personal Computer this holiday season, we'll give you 20 certificates that can save you over $300 when enhancing your Apple computer system. Save money on things like a printer, modem, software - even an AppleMouse.

And to make the Christmas present even more fun, we'll give you an Apple Credit Card - upon approval, you can get up to $2500 of credit instantly, so you can take your IIc home right then and there with no money down and no payments till February 1985.

So stop by soon - our sales staff can help you choose a system especially tailored to suit your needs. Makes the future look pretty rosy, doesn't it?
